ASBESTOS MINING IN QUEBEC.

Mr. Reginald E. Hore, editor of the Canadian Mining Journal, in an illustrated article on Asbestos Mining in Quebec, in this week's issue of the Journal of Comerce, Montreal, says in part: "Quebec is the world's chief source of asbestos, producing last year over $3,000,000 worth of which $2,800,000 was exported. Since 1900 the value of asbestos produced in Quebec increased from $719,000 to over $3,000,000."
The writer traces the history of asbestos mining in this province in an interesting manner, dealing with early failures, new discoveries, the lack of markets, the improvements in method of mining, the reorganisation and consolidation of companies, their present standing and their future prospects. He is optimistic regarding the future of the industry largely as a result of the new uses to which asbestos is applied.

MEETING OF THE WATER COMMISSIONERS

Is Called For This Afternoon—The Power Question

A number of power companies along the Otonabee river are complaining of the meagreness of the water supply. In some cases it is hardly sufficient to operate the turbines. It is stated on good authority that some of the companies are using more than the natural flow of the river, which has the effect of reducing the available head. The matter will in all probability be threshed out at a meeting of the Peterborough Water Commissioners that is called for this afternoon at 4.30 o'clock.

Then a lunch was served by the ladies of the Institute, after which they auctioned off the cakes which remained. A successful as well as an enjoyable evening was drawn to a close with the singing of "God Save the King." The programme was as follows:

SAY THE POLICE WERE JUSTIFIED

The Board of Police Commissioners have little sympathy for the boys who were incarcerated in the Police Station on Hallowe'en. His Honour Judge Huycke, chairman of the Board, introduced the matter at Monday's meeting.
Chief of Police Thompson's report concerning the boys' behaviour, while in the cells, was anything but favourable, and it was the consensus of opinion, that the police were justified in taking the action they did.

Stock Markets

A. H. Stratton & Co., Brokers, report the following:

To-morrow will probably find unsettlement again unless a sudden change for the better takes place in the Mexican situation, which is the dominant factor in the speculative mind at this moment. With the currency reform agitation at Washington a strong second, liquidation is being allowed to run its course, for the large interests see no reason why they should become philanthropic and step in and check the decline.
Would buy the standard issues on all recessions for turns.
We continue to find scale absorption, for this will always attract the flow of money which goes to the place it gets the best returns, even in times of uncertainty. In some quarters it is believed sharp recovery is pending.

INTEREST GROWING

Editor, Examiner:
Sir,—I would like to know by what psychological process did five persons guess the same weight of coal in a recent guessing contest, and within two pounds of a ponderous bulk of coal weighing 2848 lbs. In these days of the abnormal price of coal, and the complaints we sometimes hear about the weight, it might be well for the City to engage their services so as to avoid suspicion. The coal in question was weighed by the market clerk. Is all coal weighed by him as it used to be, or does each dealer weigh his own coal?—I am, etc.,

BUCKMASTER WINS

British Liberal Increases His Majority in Keighley Riding

PARTY TAKES NEW HEART

LONDON, Nov. 12.—(C. A. P. Cable.)—Keighley bye-election vote resulted as follows: Sir Stanley Buckmaster, Liberal, 4,730; Lord Lascelles, Unionist, 3,852; Wm. Bland, Labor, 3,646.

Fresh spirit has been put into the Liberal party by the return of Sir Stanley Buckmaster, who had to seek re-election in consequence of his elevation to the Solicitor-Generalship of England. He has retained the seat, and not only so, but has increased his majority to the extent of 59 over the Unionist and Labor candidates. The excitement in the division was unprecedented, and the poll, which exceeds that of 1911 by 267 votes, constitutes a record.

The Irish vote was heavy, and is said to have been anything between 600 and 900 strong, as Linlithgow and Reading electors had been urged throughout the campaign by Liberal-Unionist candidates to concentrate their minds mainly upon the home rule question. The Labor candidate confined his propaganda to purely labor issues, incidentally claiming credit for the passage of the trades' dispute bill, old-age pensions and kindred measures.

Sir Stanley claims the lesson of the victory to be only too obvious, which is to free the British Parliament from preoccupation with Irish problems, and to open the way for the great changes Lloyd George has foreshadowed in his land campaign.

An Idea of the Interest Taken in Rural School Fairs May Be Gained from this Illustration.

Fully 450 people turned out to the Rural School Fair in Cavan Township, Durham Co., Ont. When the photo was taken the crowd was just beginning to assemble. In the big tent are over 700 exhibits all made by school children. In the small tent to the right were the exhibits of cookery and needle work. A more interested lot of people never turned out to the best county fair under "grown up auspices." This one was run entirely by the children.

SEVEN BODIES FOUND.

Northern Queen of Buffalo Is Stranded at Kettle Point.

HOUGHTON, Mich., Nov. 12.—According to messages received yesterday in a roundabout way from the Canadian shore of Lake Huron seven bodies had been washed ashore at Kettle Point, and a ship, grounded far out from the point, was being pounded to pieces by the waves.

Seven other bodies, it was declared, could be seen rolling about the decks of the stranded vessel. Only a part of the boat's name could be made out, that being the word "Queen." The Northern Queen, a steel freighter, 300 feet long, owned by the Mutual Transit Co. of Buffalo, has not been accounted for since she passed this port Sunday morning, heading into Lake Huron.

The owners of the Northern Queen last night telegraphed reports at Port Huron that if any "Queen" is ashore they believe it must be the Northern Queen.

How long the ship has been on the rocks no one on shore knows. She was first sighted late yesterday. The message telling of her plight came from a railroad station agent several miles inland from Kettle Point.

No help can be sent to the "Queen," as the nearest life-saving station is located here, and the seas are still too heavy to permit sending small boats so great a distance.

There is no wire communication with Kettle Point.

A mile beyond the Northern Queen is another freighter, partly turned over on her side. The members of the crew can be distinguished on several parts of the boat. There is no possible means of absolutely identifying the boat or the line that she belongs to. Sturdy fishermen made several valiant attempts to launch their boats yesterday to go to the rescue, but were driven back on the shore by the tremendous waves which are breaking on the rocks.

Robbed Chicago Mails.

CHICAGO, Nov. 12.—The theft of money and jewelry valued at $10,000 was disclosed yesterday by Col. James Stuart, postoffice inspector here. The crime is alleged to have been committed by a mail wagon driver, who told his wife Monday night he would write her as soon as he escaped across the border. Col. Stuart says the man is an ex-convict. The contractor for the mail collection is under bond to make good losses suffered through employes.

DEATH TOLL SIXTY

Further Details Arrive Concerning Devastation of Gale

LOSS IS IN THE MILLIONS

CHICAGO, Nov. 12.—The shores of Lake Superior, Lake Huron and Lake Erie were strewn last night with the wreckage of a three-days' gale and snowstorm, which cost the lives of probably three-score persons, turned bottom up in mid-lake a three-hundred-foot vessel with its crew, wrecked or grounded numerous other craft and caused a property loss as yet unknown, but which will run into the millions.

The details of the storm, which literally swept from the western end of Lake Superior to the eastern shore of Lake Erie, became known only yesterday when survivors began arriving in various ports with tales of hardships and heroic rescues seldom equalled on the lakes.

On land the storm hit hardest at Cleveland, Ohio, where 21 inches of snow fell, five persons were killed and ten others injured, and where $2,000,000 damage was caused to property, chiefly telegraph and telephone companies, thus keeping the city out of direct communication for two days.

The escapes from death were numerous. After the storm about Friday midnight had blown away the forward part of the ship Captain J. W. Duddleson of the steamer L. C. Waldo, navigated by a small, inaccurate compass and the aid of a lantern held by a sailor. In this way he guided himself to a reef where the crew landed, suffering intense cold and hunger until their rescue yesterday.

The crew of the Turret Chief, when the ship struck the rocks in Lake Superior, were forced to go ashore scantily clad. They built a hut to protect them from the blizzard.

It was impossible even to estimate the loss to vessels wrecked or damaged by grounding. Shippers in Detroit estimated the loss in Lake Huron and the Detroit and St. Clair rivers alone to be several hundred thousand dollars. Three of the wrecked steamers increase the loss by $500,000, while the scores of small craft drive ashore in Lake Superior and Lake Erie will send the total much higher.

The more important mishaps to ships were:

Unidentified 300 foot steel freighter, floating bottom up in Lake Huron, a few miles south of Port Huron. Built in Canada, cargo probably flax; U. S. life-saving crew found vessel in such a position as to have made it impossible for any of the crew of 25 to 40 to have escaped.

Lightship No. 82, in Lake Erie, off Port Albino, 15 miles west of Buffalo, with a crew of six, believed lost; lifeboat found floating bottom up, with wreckage of ship floated into Buffalo harbor.

Steamer L. C. Waldo of Bay Transportation Co., Detroit, torn to pieces by storm Friday night and pounded against rocks on Gull Rock, Manitou Island. Captain and crew of 25 men and women rescued after having been without food for 90 hours; terribly frozen; taken last night to Houghton, Mich.; vessel, which is a loss of $200,000, was of 4,466 gross tonnage, with a 452 foot keel and was built in 1896.

Steamer Turret Chief of the Canadian Lake & Ocean Co., went to pieces on the rocks six miles east of Keeweenah Point in Lake Superior before daylight Sunday. Crew rescued after having lived for three days in a hut on a reef; loss $100,000.

Unidentified vessel wrecked on rocks at Angus Point, Isle Royale, Lake Superior.

Lost His Compasses.

CALUMET, Mich., Nov. 12.—Captain J. W. Duddleson of the steamer L. C. Waldo of the Bay Transportation Co. of Detroit, which was broken in two at Gull Rock, Manitou Island, told of the wreck upon his arrival with his crew of 25 men and two women aboard the tug Hebard at Houghton last night.

The storm struck her at 11.45 o'clock Friday night. The mountainous waves tore off the forward house and pilot house and all structures to the forward part of the ship. The compasses were lost and connections with the electric lighting system were broken. Captain Duddleson's only resort was a small inaccurate compass, which he was enabled to follow with the aid of a lantern held by a member of the crew.

After being tossed about for about eighteen hours, the boat finally struck the reef. Until the arrival of the tug yesterday the crew was without food.

Lightship Goes Down.

BUFFALO, Nov. 12. — Fragments of wreckage, tossed ashore along many miles of lake front, yesterday confirmed the fear that the storm which lashed Lake Erie on Sunday and Monday had claimed its toll of death. Six men perished when Lightship No. 82 was torn from her anchorage 15 miles up the lake and either foundered or was shattered on the break wall under cover of the blinding snowstorm of Monday.

Inspector House chartered a tug and joined Captain Herbert in the search for the boat. No trace of the lightship was found, however, and when, yesterday afternoon, one of the lifeboats was picked up, all hope was abandoned. In the lifeboat were three life-preservers and a broken oar was still fastened to one of the row locks.

TO ADJUST DISPUTE.

Chief Justice Meredith Chairman of C.P.R. Conciliation Board.

OTTAWA, Nov. 12.—Chief Justice R. M. Meredith of the Court of Common Pleas of Ontario, has been appointed chairman of an arbitration board to deal with a dispute between the Canadian Pacific Railway Co. and the maintenance of way employes on its entire system, to the number of approximately 5,000, by Hon. T. W. Crothers, yesterday morning.

The dispute in question grows out of a proposed new schedule of agreement submitted by the employes. Chief Justice Meredith is appointed by the Minister of Labor in the absence of any joint recommendation from the other two members of the board. The company's nominee on the board is Hon. Wallace Nesbitt, K.C., of Toronto, and the employes' nominee is Mr. Henry Irwin of Portage la Prairie.

Taylor Murder Trial Opens.

BRANTFORD, Nov. 12. — James Taylor, the self-confessed murderer of Charles Dawson, appeared in the dock before Mr. Justice Kelly yesterday afternoon.

Taylor had no counsel, and his lordship appointed A. M. Harley, the city's junior graduate in law.

The grand jury brought in a true bill, and the trial opens to-day. Medical evidence may be important in the case, as Taylor's mentality is held in question.

J. J. Drew of Guelph is crown prosecutor.

WEXFORD IS LOST

Most of Freighter's Crew Hail From Town of Collingwood

BODIES WASHED ASHORE

COLLINGWOOD, Nov. 12. — The news of the loss of the lake freighter Wexford, which was received here yesterday afternoon, has shrouded the town in a sadness such as has not prevailed for many years. So many wives and families have been bereaved that the whole town mourns. The crew of the steamer included six or seven from this port, all being vigorous and experienced mariners.

The bodies of five drowned men, all with lifebelts on, four of which had marked on them "Wexford," and the other "London," were found on Lake Huron beach, five miles south of St. Joseph, according to advices from that village yesterday, by Robert Turnbull, a farmer. The bodies were not far apart. All the men were young.

Captain Bruce Cameron, who was master of the ill-fated steamer, belonged to a family of mariners. He was the second son of the late Captain Alex. C. Cameron, and was born in Collingwood about twenty-six years ago. He had sailed on the lakes during the past ten years, and had successfully filled various positions on different steamers sailing out of this port. He was married last spring.

Archibald Brooks, second officer of the Wexford, was a young man and had sailed for several seasons. Last year he occupied the same position on this boat.

James Scott, chief engineer, had been on the lake steamers for several season. Scott was married and leaves a family of three children in Collingwood.

Richard Lougheed, assistant engineer, had also had some years' experience and had occupied positions on different boats on the lakes. He was married to Miss Dickenson of Collingwood.

Allan Dodson, watchman.

Orrin Gordon, watchmen, was a young unmarried man, a son of Charles Gordon of this town. He was on the Wexford last year in the same position.

George Willmott, an Englishman, who had been in Collingwood but a short time, was another member of the crew. He had charge of the steward's department. Mrs. Willmott was with him on the vessel. He, with his wife, contemplated returning to Bristol at the close of the season.

Huronic Safely Released.

PORT ARTHUR, Nov. 12. — The Huronic got off the bar at Whitefish at three o'clock yesterday afternoon without damage. The Alberta left Whitefish to cross Lake Superior westbound at nine a.m. The local wireless station at 3.30 p.m. received a report that wreckage of the steamer Waldo had been picked up at Keeweenah Point on the south shore of Lake Superior.

BUILDINGS BURNED.

Suffragette Arson Squad Puts In a Busy Night.

LONDON, Nov. 12.—Militant suffragette arson squads and bomb troops were at work in several parts of the British Isles during Monday night.

The cactus house at Alexandra Park, Manchester, containing a collection valued at $50,000, was badly wrecked by a bomb; Begbrook, a fine mansion near Bristol, was gutted by fire; and the pavilion of the Bowling and Tennis Club at Catford, in the southeast of London, also was burned down.

On the scene of all the outrages quantities of suffrage literature and petroleum cans were found.

Bridgeport Given Up.

SYDNEY, N.S., Nov. 12.—The wireless station at North Sydney picked up the Lake Champlain, bound to Montreal and the Reid steamship Lintrose yesterday morning, and enquired if they had seen anything of the missing collier Bridgeport, receiving the answer "Nothing." Hope has been abandoned that the ship is disabled and drifting at sea. In all probability she foundered in the gale which she ran into shortly after leaving this port.

BUILT HUT ON REEF.

Crew of Turret Chief Suffered Tortures From Cold.

CALUMET, Mich., Nov. 12.—Captain Paddington and crew of sixteen of the steamer Turret Chief of the Canadian Lake & Ocean Navigation Co., which foundered six miles east of Copper Harbor, Keeweenah Point at four o'clock Saturday morning, arrived in Calumet last night.

Frost bitten, thinly clad and without food since Friday night, the crew reached Copper harbor yesterday afternoon being directed there by a trapper. Yesterday they reached Mahdan, Keeweenah County, and got into communication with civilization. Food and warm clothing were provided for their comfort until they could reach Calumet.

When the Turret Chief drifted ashore. The men were thrown from their beds and had time to don but little clothing. A number of them were compelled to leave the boat barefooted and several of these suffered from frostbitten feet.

The doom of the vessel was soon sealed, and with waves washing over the hulk the crew picked their way to the mainland. A hut was hastily built and in this they found shelter from the blizzard until yesterday morning. The Turret Chief will probably be a total loss, as her position is such that she cannot be taken off before the waves pound her to pieces.

"That Affair Next Door"

By Anna Katharine Green

And they did. Mr. Gryce had evidently had enough of my interference, and was resolved to shut me out, but I heard one word and caught one glimpse of Mr. Van Burnam's face before the heavy door fell to. The word was: "Oh, so bad as that! How can any one recognize her——" And the glimpse—well, the glimpse proved to me that he was much more profoundly agitated than he wished to appear, and any extraordinary agitation on his part was certainly in direct contradiction to the very sentence he was at that moment uttering.

IV.

Silas Van Burnam.

"However much I may be needed at home, I cannot reconcile it with my sense of duty to leave just yet," I confided to the reporter, with what I meant to be a proper show of reason and self-restraint; "Mr. Van Burnam may wish to ask me some questions."

"Of course, of course," acquiesced the other. "You are very right; always are very right, I should judge."

As I did not know what he meant by this, I frowned, always a wise thing to do in uncertainty; that is—if one wishes to maintain an air of independence and aversion to flattery.

"Will you not sit down?" he suggested. "There is a chair at the end of the hall."

But I had no need to sit down. The front door bell again rang and simultaneously with its opening the parlour door unclosed and Mr. Franklin Van Burnam appeared in the hall, just as Mr. Silas Van Burnam, his father, stepped into the vestibule.

"Father!" he remonstrated, with a troubled air; "could you not wait?"

The elder gentleman, who had evidently just been driven up from the steamer, wiped his forehead with an irascible air, that I will say I had noticed in him before and on much less provocation.

"Wait, with a yelling crowd screaming murder in my ear, and Isabella on one side of me calling for salts, and Caroline on the opposite seat getting that blue look about the mouth we have learned to dread so in a hot day like this? No, sir, when there is anything wrong going on I want to know it, and evidently there is something wrong going on here. What is it? Some of Howard's—?"

But the son seizing me by the hand and drawing me forward, put a quick stop to the old gentleman's sentence. "Miss Butterworth, father! Our next door neighbour, you know."

"Ah, hum! ha! Miss Butterworth. How do you do, ma'am? What the —— is she doing here?" he grumbled, not so low but that I heard the profanity and the none too complimentary allusion to myself.

"If you will come into the parlour I will tell you," urged the son. "But what have you done with Isabella and Caroline? Left them in the carriage with that shooting mob about them?"

"I told the coachman to drive on. They are probably half way around the block by this time."

"Then come in here. But don't allow yourself to be too much affected by what you will see. A sad accident has occurred here and you must expect the sight of blood."

"Blood! Oh, I can stand that, if Howard——"

The rest was lost in the sound of closing door.

And now, you will say, I ought to have gone. And you are right, but would you have gone yourself, especially as the hall was full of people who did not belong there?

If you would, then condemn me for lingering just a few minutes longer.

The voices in the parlour were loud, but they presently subsided; and when the owner of the house came out again he had a subdued look which was as great a contrast to his angry aspect on entering as was the change I had observed in his son. He was so absorbed indeed that he did not notice me, though I stood directly in his way.

"Don't let Howard come," he was saying in a thick, low voice to his son. "Keep Howard away till we are sure——"

I am confident that his son pressed his arm at this point, for he stopped short and looked about him in a blind and dazed way.

"Oh!" he ejaculated, in a tone of great displeasure.

"This is the woman who saw——"

"Miss Butterworth, father," the anxious voice of his son broke in. "Don't try to talk; such a sight is enough to unnerve any man."

"Yes, yes," blustered the old gentleman, evidently taking some hint from the other's tone or manner. "But where are the girls? They wil be dead with terror, if we don't relieve their minds. They got the idea that it was their brother Howard who was hurt; and so did I, but it's only some wandering waif—some——"

It seemed as if he was not to be allowed to finish any of his sentences, for Franklin interrupted him at this point to ask him what he was going to do with the girls. Certainly he could not bring them in here.

"No," answered the father, but in the dreamy, inconsequential way of one whose thoughts were elsewhere. "I suppose I shall have to take them to some hotel."

Ah, an idea! I flushed as I realized the opportunity which had come to me and had to wait a moment not to speak with too much eagerness.

"Let me play the part of a neighbour," I prayed, "and accommodate the young ladies for the night. My house is near and quiet."

"But the trouble it will involve," protested Mr. Franklin.

"Is just what I need to allay my excitement," I responded. "I shall be glad to offer them rooms for the night. If they are equally glad to accept them——"

"They must be!" the old gentleman declared. "I can't go running round with them hunting up rooms tonight, Miss Butterworth is very good; go, find the girls, Franklin, let me have them off my mind at least."

The young man bowed. I bowed, and was slipping at last from my place by the stairs when, for the third time I felt my dress twitched.

"Are you going to keep to that story?" a voice whispered in my ear. "About the young man and woman coming in the night, you know."

"Keep to it!" I whispered back, recognizing the scrub woman, who had sidled up to me from some unknown quarter in the semi-darkness. "Why, it's true. Why shouldn't I keep to it."

A chuckle, difficult to describe but full of meaning, shook the arm of the woman as she pressed close to my side.

"Oh, you are a good one," she said. "I didn't know they made 'em so good!" And with another chuckle full of satisfaction and an odd sort of admiration I had certainly not earned she slid away again in the darkness.

Certainly there was something in this woman's attitude towards the affair which merited attention.

V.

"THIS IS NO ONE I KNOW."

I welcomed the Misses Van Burnam with just enough good will to show that I had not been influenced by any unworthy motives in asking them to my house.

I gave them my guest- chamber, but I invited them to sit in my front room as long as there was anything interesting going on in the street. I knew they would like to look out, and as this chamber boasts of a bay with two windows, we could all be accommodated. From where I sat I could now and then hear what they said, and I considered this but just, for if the young woman who had suffered so untimely an end was in any way connected with them, it was certainly best that the fact should not lie concealed; and one of them, that is Isabella, is such a chatterbox.

Mr. Van Burnam and his son had returned next door, and so far as we could observe from our vantage-point, preparations were being made for the body's removal. As the crowd below, driven away by the policemen one minute, only to collect again in another, swayed and grumbled in a continual expectation that was as continually disappointed, I heard Caroline's voice rise in two or three short sentences.

"They can't find Howard, or he would have been here before now. Did you see her that time when we were coming out of Clark's? Fanny Preston did, and said she was pretty."

"No. I didn't get a glimpse——". A shout from the street below.

"I can't believe it,' were the next words I heard, "but Franklin is awfully afraid——".

"Hush! or the ogress——". I am sure I heard her say ogress; but what followed was drowned in another loud murmur, and I caught nothing further till those sentences were uttered by the trembling and over-excited Caroline: "If it is she, pa will never be the same man again. To have her die in our house! O, there's Howard now!"

The interruption came quick and sharp, and it was followed by a double cry and an anxious rustle, as the two girls sprang to their feet in their anxiety to attract their brother's attention or possibly to convey him some warning.

But I did not give much heed to them. My eyes were on the carriage in which Howard had arrived, and which, owing to the ambulance in front, had stopped on the other side of the way. I was anxious to see him descend that I might judge if his figure recalled that of the man I had seen across the pavement the night before. But he did not descend. Just as his hand was on the carriage door, a half-dozen men appeared on the adjoining stoop carrying a burden which they hastened to deposit in the ambulance. He sank back when he saw it, and when his face became visible again, it was so white it seemed to be the only face in the street, though fifty people stood about staring at the house, at the ambulance, and at him.

Franklin Van Burnam had evidently come to the door with the rest; for Howard no sooner showed his face the second time than we saw the former dash down the steps and try to part the crowd in a vain attempt to reach his brother's side. Mr. Gryce was more successful. He had no difficulty in winning his way across the street, and presently I perceived him standing near the carriage exchanging a few words with its occupant. A moment later he drew back, and addressing the driver, jumped into the carriage with Howard, and was speedily driven off. The ambulance followed and some of the crowd, and as soon as a hack could be obtained, Mr. Van Burnam and his son took the same road, leaving us three women in a state of suspense, which as far as one of us was concerned, ended in a nervous attack that was not unlike heart failure, I allude, of course, to Carline, and it Isabella and myself a good half hour to bring her back to a normal condition, and when this was done, Isabella thought it incumbent upon her to go off into hysterics, which, being but a weak simulation of the other's state, I met with severity and cured with a frown. When both were in trim again I allowed myself one remark.

"One would think," said I, "that you knew the young woman who has fallen victim to her folly next door."

At which Isabella violently shook her head and Carline observed:

"It is the excitement which has been too much for me. I am never strong, and this is such a dreadful home-welcoming. When will father and Franklin come back? It was very unkind of them to go off without one word of encouragement."

"They probably did not consider the fate of this unknown woman a matter of any importance to you."

The Van Burnam girls were unlike in appearance and character, but they showed an equal embarrassment at this, casting down their eyes and behaving so strangely that I was driven to wonder, without any show of hysterics I am happy to say, what would be the upshot of this matter, and how far I would become involved in it before the truth came to light.

At dinner they displayed what I should call their best society manner. Seeing this, I assumed my society manner also. It is formed on a different pattern from theirs, but is fully as impressive, I judge.

A most formal meal was the result. My best china was in use, but I had added nothing to my usual course of viands. Indeed, I had abstracted something. An entree, upon which my cook prides herself, was omitted. Was I going to allow these proud young misses to think I had exerted myself to please them? No; rather would I have them consider me niggardly and my enemy to good living; so the entree was, as the French say, suppressed.

In the evening their father came in. He was looking very dejected, and half his bluster was gone. He held a telegram crushed in his hand and he talked very rapidly. But he confided none of his secrets to me, and I was obliged to say good-night to these young ladies without knowing much more about the matter engrossing us than when I left their house in the afternoon.

But others were not as ignorant as myself. A dramatic and highly exciting scene had taken place that evening at the undertaker's to which the unknown's body had been removed and as I have more than once heard it minutely described, I will endeavour to transcribe it here with all the impartiality of an onsider.

When Mr. Gryce entered the carriage in which Howard sat, he noted first, that the young man was frightened; and secondly, that he made no effort to hide it. He had heard almost nothing from the detective. He knew that there had been a hue and cry for him ever since noon, and that he was wanted to identify a young woman who had been found dead in his father's house, but beyond these facts he had been told little, and yet he seemed to have no curiosity nor did he venture to express any surprise. He merely accepted the situation and was troubled by it, showing no inclination to talk till very near the end of his destination, when he suddenly pulled himself together and ventured this question:

'How did she—the young woman as you call her—kill herself?"

The detective, who in his long career among criminals and suspected persons, had seen many men and encountered many conditions, roused at this query with much of his old spirit. Turning from the man rather than toward him, he allowed himself a slight shrug of the shoulders as he calmy replied:

"She was found under a heavy piece of furniture; the cabinet with the vases on it, which you must remember stood at the left of the mantel-piece. It had crushed her head and breast. Quite a remarkable means of death, don't you think? There has been but one occurrence like it in my long experience."

"I don't believe what you tell me," was the young mans astonishing reply. "You are trying to frighten me or to make game of me. No lady would make use of any such means of death as that."

"I did not say she was a lady," returned Mr. Gryce, scoring one in his mind against his unwary companion.

A quiver passed down the young man's side where he came in contact with the detective.

"No," he muttered; "but I gathered from what you said, she was no common person; or why," he flashed out in sudden heat, "do you require me to go with you to se her? Have I the name of associating with any persons of the sex who are not ladies?"

"Pardon me," said Mr. Gryce, in grim delight at the prospect he saw slowly unfolding before him of one of those complicated affairs in which minds like his unconsciously reveal. "I meant no insinuations. We have requested you, as we have requested your father and brother, to accompany us to the undertaker's, because the identification of the corpse is a most important point and every formality likely to insure it must be observed."

"And did not they—my father and brother, I mean—recognize her?"

"It would be difficult for any one to recognize her who was not well acquainted with her."

A horrified look crossed the features of Howard Van Burnam, which if a part of his acting, showed him to have genius for his role. His head sank back on the cushions of the carriage and for a moment he closed his eyes. When he opened them again, the cariage had stoped, and Mr. Gryce, who had not noticed his emotion, of course, was looking out of the window with his hand on the handle of the door.

"Are we there already?" asked the young man, with a shudder. "I wish you had not considered it necessary for me to se her. I shall detect nothing familiar in her, I know."

Mr. Gryce bowed, repeated that it was a mere formality, and followed the young gentleman into the building and afterwards into the room, where the dead body lay. A couple of doctors and one or two officials stood about, in whose faces the young man sought for something like encouragement before casting his eyes in the direction indicated by the detective. Butt here was little in any of these faces to calm him and turning hastily away, he walked manfully across the room and took his stand by the detective.

"I am positive," he began, "that it is not my wife——" At this moment the cloth that covered the body was removed and he gave a great start of relief. "I said so," he remarked coldly. "This is no one I know."

His sigh was echoed in double chorus from the doorway. Glancing that way he encountered the faces of his father and elder brother, and moved towards them with a relieved air that made quite another man of him in appearance.

"I have had my say," he remarked "Shall I wait outside till you have had yours?"

"We have already said all that we had to," Franklin returned. "We declared that we did not recognize this person."

"Of course, of course," assented the other. "I don't see why they should have expected us to know her. Some common suicide who thought the house empty— But how did she get in?"

"Don't you know?" said Mr. Gryce. "Can it be that I forgot to tell you? Why, she was let in at night by a young man of medium height'—his eye ran up and down the graceful figure of the young elegant before him as he spoke—'who left her inside and then went away. A young man who had a key—"

"A key? Franklin, I——"

Was it a look from Franklin which made him stop? It is possible, for he turned on his heel as he reached this point and, losing his head with quite a gay air, exclaimed: "But it is of no consequence! The girl is a stranger, and we have satisfied, I believe, all the requirements of the law in saying so, and may now drop the matter. Are you going to the club, Franklin?"

"Yes, but——". Here the elder brother drew nearer and whispered something into the other's ear, who at that whisper turned again towards the place where the dead woman lay. Seeing this movement, his anxious father wiped the moisture from his forehead. Silas Van Burnam had ben silent up to this moment and seemed inclined to continue so, but he watched his younger son with painful intentness.

"Nonsense!" broke from Howard's lips as his brother ceased his communication; but he took a step nearer the body, notwithsanding, and then another and another till he was at his side again.

The hands had not been injured, as we have said, and upon these his eyes now fell.

"They are like hers! O God! they are like hers!" he muttered, growing gloomy at once. "But where are the rings? There are no rings to be seen on these fingers, and she wore five, including her wedding-ring."

"Is it of your wife you are speaking," inquired Mr. Gryce, who had edged up close to his side.

The young man was caught unawares.

He flushed deeply, but answered up boldly and with great appearance of candor:

"Yes; my wife left Haddam yesterday to come to New York, and I have not seen her since. Naturally I have some doubts lest this unhappy victim should be she. But I do not recognize her clothing; I do not recognize her form; only the hands look familiar."

'And the hair?"

"Is of the same colour as hers, but it's a very ordinary colour. I do not dare to say from anything I see that this is my wife."

"We will call you again after the doctor has finished his autopsy," said Mr. Gryce. "Perhaps you will hear from Mrs. Van Burnam before then."

RHEUMATISM KEPT HIM IN BED

Suffered Tortures Until "Fruit-a-tives" Cured Him

McMILLAN'S CORNER, ONT., SEPT. 30th, 1910

"Your remedy, "Fruit-a-tives" is a perfect panacea for Rheumatism. For years, I suffered distressing pain from Sciatica or Sciatic Rheumatism, being laid up several times a year for days at a time. I went to different doctors who told me there was no use doing anything—it would pass away. They gave me mustard plasters and other remedies that did no good. Plasters took no effect on me—except to blister me and make raw spots. I took many advertised remedies without benefit, but fortunately, about two years ago, I got "Fruit-a-tives" and they cured me.

Since then, I take "Fruit-a-tives" occasionally and keep free of pain. I am satisfied "Fruit-a-tives" cured me of Rheumatism and they will cure anyone who takes them as directed. If this letter would be of value to you, publish it" JOHN B. McDONALD.

"Wherever it was applied it did its work well, and has entirely cured them of this horrible disease. They suffered so they could not sleep at nights, and I think if it had lasted much longer I would have gone crazy from the anxiety and loss of sleep. AFTER several years of experimenting on its farm at Beltsville, Md., the Department of Agriculture has a new domestic animal to sell. It rejoices in the name of Zebule, which marks its relationship to the zebra and the mule.

The experiment has been watched with great interest by all who require the services of a stanch, hardy, willing beast of burden. It is believed that one has now been found that will meet all of those requirements. Until within a few years no attempts had been made to domesticate the zebra. The wild ones are easily frightened and are difficult to capture. They are sometimes caught by digging a hole and covering it with brush, a herd then being driven over it. There is great danger of the animals being injured, however, in the use of this method.

In rare instances zebras were broken to domestic use, Mr. Walter Rothschild having a famous team of three zebras and a pony, and as far back as the days of Mr. Barnum there was a team of four zebras that used to delight the public. The attempt to breed the zebra to other animals was first made in England, the experiment including almost everything in the horse line, from a Shetland pony to a heavy draught horse. It remained for the government of the United States to get a cross that promises to be superior to the mule itself. The zebra is an animal with far more life and much greater endurance. They are astonishingly robust, and in temperate zones they can live out of doors all through the winter without suffering from the exposure. They can also go for a longer time without water. They have all the good qualities of the mule and many that it does not possess.

The sire of the first zebule bred in this country was a full blooded zebra sent to President Roosevelt by King Menelik of Abyssinia, and was turned over to the Department of Agriculture. It is not possible to get this new animal cheaply, for a good zebra landed in New York costs not less than $750, and usually more. It is said that the zebules will bring about $800 each, but that they will be well worth it. A good mule or a draught horse costs from $400 to $600.

Professor J. Cossar Ewart, of the University of Edinburgh, tells of an experiment made by Lord Morton in the early part of the nineteenth century. He secured a male quagga, but was unable to obtain a female. Therefore he bred the quagga stallion with "a young chestnut mare of seven-eighths Arabian blood which had never been bred from." The result was a female hybrid, bearing both in her form and in her color very decided indications of her mixed origin. The quagga had much the form of the ass and the color and marking of the zebra. It is now extinct.

While the Department of Agriculture, through the Bureau of Animal Industry, has been trying to breed a new animal that shall make a valuable addition to the equipment of the American farmer, the Bureau of Education has been providing a reindeer service for Alaska. Before 1890 no representative of the bureau had visited the settlements of Eskimos on the shores of the Bering Sea and the Arctic Ocean. The region north of the Aleutian Islands was terra incognita to all except a few whalers, traders and the officers and men of the revenue cutter which during the short season of open navigation in midsummer cruised along its barren coast. When Dr. Sheldon Jackson, United States general agent of education in Alaska, visited the important villages on the Alaskan and Siberian shores, he found the Alaskan Eskimos eking out a precarious existence upon the whale, seal and walrus that they could catch, while across Bering Strait, in Siberia, but a few miles away, with climate and country similar, there were tens of thousands of tame reindeer supporting thousands of natives.

A report was made to the Commissioner of Education, in Washington, and it was decided to introduce domestic reindeer into Alaska, and by establishing reindeer raising as an industry in connection with the schools maintained by the Bureau of Education afford the Alaskan Eskimos an assured means of support and in the course of time advance them from nomadic fishermen to the position of civilized, wealth producing factors in the development of Northern Alaska.

For nine seasons the revenue cutter Bear carried the representatives of the bureau back and forth between Alaska and Siberia transporting the Siberian reindeer into Alaska. It was difficult work, involving cruises along an uncharted coast, bargaining in sign language, tedious payment by bartering various kinds of goods for the reindeer and hard work of getting the animals aboard, taking care of them and landing them.

The plan of distribution adopted was that of lending small herds, usually about twenty-five males and seventy-five females, to mission stations for a specified time as an equipment for the industrial training of the Eskimo. Each mission agreed to train a corps of Eskimo apprentices in the care and management of reindeer and to support them during their term of apprenticeship. At the end of the specified period, usually about five years, the mission station repaid the loan by returning to the government an equal number of young deer in the same proportions of males and females, retaining the surplus for themselves. In three stations the Eskimo boys were supported by the government during their apprenticeship.

At each station promising and ambitious Eskimo young men are selected by the local superintendent as apprentices in the reindeer service. With the approval of the superintendent of his station an apprentice may kill his surplus reindeer for food and use the skin for clothing. He is encouraged to use his sled deer in carrying mail, passengers and freight. Upon the satisfactory termination of his apprenticeship he becomes a herder and must in turn train and reward apprentices in accordance with the rules and regulations of the service. No one is permitted to sell female reindeer except to the government and with the written approval of the superintendent to a native inhabitant of Alaska.

The last government report shows a total of 38,476 reindeer distributed among fifty-four herds.

At an average value of $25 a head the 24,008 reindeer owned by the natives represent a capital of $601,700. The total income of the natives from the reindeer industry during the same fiscal year, exclusive of the value of meat and hides used by the natives themselves, was $14,885.04.

There are 673 native owners of reindeer, whose immediate families number approximately 2,500; in addition, approximately 4,000 natives are affected by the reindeer enterprise, obtaining reindeer products in exchange for their own wares. Accordingly, the total number of natives affected by the reindeer enterprise may be estimated to be about 6,500.

There yet remain to be reached by the reindeer industry in Alaska the upper Kuskokwim and the Copper River regions and the coast east of Point Barrow; also Nunivak, Kodiak and the Aleutian Islands. The establishment of herds in these regions will complete the means for gradually stocking with reindeer all of the untimbered regions of Alaska adapted for that industry.

In Labrador Mr. W. T. Grenfell, who has done so much to improve conditions of the natives, is profiting by the experience of the United States government in Alaska and introducing the reindeer industry with success.

When we stop to think of it, most of our cattle are domesticated alien creatures. The first in America were brought in 1493 by Columbus on his second voyage. Subsequently other cattle were brought to the West Indies from Spain. Some escaped from captivity and lived in a wild state where there was rich grazing. Later these cattle of Spanish descent were carried to the mainland. Those taken to Vera Cruz rapidly multiplied and later became known as Texas cattle. French cattle were brought over to Nova Scotia at an early date, but the first cattle to reach the territory included in the United States were brought by Sir Richard Grenville to Virginia in 1585. The cattle introduced at Jamestown were from English breeds with a mixture of Spanish from the West Indies. In other parts of the country the cattle were Dutch and Swedish. Our domestic sheep are supposed to be descended from the wild sheep of Western Asia and Southern Europe.

Many of the birds that we think of as domestic were aliens not many years ago. The ostrich is a conspicuous example, and pheasant have been introduced from China and from Europe, so that they are becoming abundant in many parts of the country. The peacock came from India and the guinea fowl from Abyssinia. Even the goose is a domesticated fowl.

Not always is the introduction of a new animal into a country a blessing. The rabbits that were introduced into Australia and New Zealand became such a plague that they destroyed the grass and crops, and the weasels and stoats that were brought in to rid the country of the rabbits attacked the poultry.

The mongoose has been successfully domesticated in India, where it kills the poisonous snakes, but when introduced into Jamaica after it had killed the snakes and lizards it turned upon the poultry and then began to eat the sugar cane. The United States laws against the importation of the mongoose are very strict, but now and then a Hindoostan sneaks a "pet" into the United States. The New York Zoological Society buys all females that it can find and destroys them.

An attempt has been made to domesticate elk, but it is doubtful about there being much profit in it with hay at present prices. The white tailed, the red and fallow deer of Europe and the Indian Sambar deer, which furnishes a fine supply of venison, have all been successfully introduced into this country.

Lately the importance of black fox farming has been much emphasized. The industry has been carried on in Prince Edward's Island for ten years and a single pair of black foxes has been sold for $12,000. The value of these animals can be readily understood when it is remembered that a single black fox skin sells for from $2,000 to $3,000 in London.

There have been rumors that camels are again to be brought to this country. In 1874 General Edward Fitzgerald Beale got the support of the government in an attempt to organize a camel corps in this country. The camels were landed in Texas and taken up through Arizona, General Beale being most enthusiastic about them. There was a strong prejudice against them, however, and it was difficult to get men to tend them. They purposely let them escape and gradually the scheme was abandoned, although General Beale never lost his faith in them and bought the remnant of the corps when it was sold by the War Department, taking it to his ranch in California.

The entire subject of domesticating wild animals is closely associated with that of breeding, which is one of the problems upon which the Bureau of Animal Industry is constantly working. In a bulletin published by the bureau Professor Ewart is quoted on the effects of environment and other conditions affecting both domestic and wild animals.

"The more we study wild animals," says Professor Ewart, "the more evident it becomes that in form, color and behavior they are marvellously adapted for their surroundings. The only satisfactory way of accounting for this adaptation is the one provided by the doctrine of natural selection—the forms now living fit their respective habitats because the environment has selected the varieties best adapted for the conditions which at the moment prevail, the races which failed to vary sufficiently to provide material for a changing environment to select from having disappeared.

"It is hardly necessary to point out that some domestic animals are so well adapted for their surroundings that, if allowed to run wild, they would survive without undergoing any marked change in either form, color or behavior. But while some domestic breeds are nearly as well adapted for their surroundings as wild animals, others have been so modified by artificial selection that were they set free they would be rapidly exterminated.

"In the case of some wild animals man forms an important item in environment, but not a few still live and move and have their being without at any time coming within range of human influence. Man comes into contact with, and more or less influences, wild forms as a sportsman and as a fisherman, as a stock owner, as an agriculturist and in many other ways. His influence may be so limited that it is barely appreciable or so profound that it eventually leads to extinction. In some cases, by providing food and shelter, by eliminating weaklings and now and again introducing fresh blood, man places wild animals in nearly the same position as domestic animals."

In support of the statement that climate and food are causes for variation it is mentioned that horses taken to the Shetland Islands become gradually smaller and hardier and that those taken to the rich lowland pastures become larger.

Efforts to get new breeds by crossing such distinct types of dogs, for example as the Highland terrier and Mexican dog have been made and the results of inbreeding have been shown by experiments with goats, especially with the descendants of a pair named Darby and Joan to the eighth generation.

"When the whole subject of inbreeding is considered," says Professor Ewart, in conclusion, "it may be said (1) that in the case of wild animals living under ordinary but not too favorable conditions inbreeding, owing to the merciless elimination of the unfit, is not likely to prove injurious; (2) that in the case of domestic animals inbreeding carried too far may lead to the destruction of the race. This is not only because it must sooner or later result in diminished vigor and fertility, but especially because it intensifies the bad points as well as the good."

Twins, Aged 82, Both Telegraphers

THOSE Hall twins—G. Alfred and Albert G. Hall—possibly the two oldest telegraphers alive; and in all probability the most famous twins in the United States, have just celebrated another birthday anniversary. They are eighty-two years old and began telegraphing in 1849, just five years after the telegraph became a reality. From Chicago in 1864 G. Alfred flashed the first news to Washington of the renomination of Abraham Lincoln at the Republican National Convention. The lives of both brothers have been full of interesting experiences. G. Alfred resides in Washington, and at his residence there every year for many years back the brothers have celebrated their anniversary. Both are active, physically and mentally. Albert G. now resides at Doylestown, Pa.

They were eighteen years old when they took up telegraphing. At that time there was but a single line to Washington, made up of two wires. The secret of "grounding" the telegraph lines, so as to permit the use of but a single wire, had not been discovered.

"My knowledge of telegraphy came in for good service once," said G. Alfred Hall. "I was in Chicago as the district's representative to the republican convention. It was the first time by the way, that the district had ever been allowed a representative; one of these conventions, and this time it was allowed four. The other three delegates did not attend, so I had four votes.

"I got acquainted with the telegraph operators—there was only one at this convention—and the day a nomination was to be made I made arrangements with him to send a message for me before the nominating ballot had been completed, so when this ballot was a little more than half completed I flashed this message to my brother, who was then cashier for a gas company in Washington:—'Lincoln nominated on third ballot.'

"My brother took it to one of the newspapers, but the editor refused to print it because he was afraid it was not correct. You see, they were not used to getting those days.

"Another queer thing about that convention is the part I had to play, again in my will, in nominating a permanent chairman of the convention. I was on the Committee on Permanent Organization, a committee of thirty-one delegates. Horace Greeley was on the committee and asked me why I was taking no part in the balloting. I told him that I was a younger man than most of the others and would let the older heads settle it. Soon it was discovered that without my vote the committee was deadlocked—fifteen for Cleveland, of Connecticut, and fifteen for Ashman, of Massachusetts. I had to vote and voted for George Ashman. They made it unanimous."

During the civil war Mr. G. A. Hall was made United States prize auctioneer at New Orleans, where he sold in the twenty-seven months he was there millions of dollars' worth of property captured by the Union army. He was later an inspector in the Post Office Department.

Mr. A. G. Hall has also actively engaged in politics. In 1867 he was elected Collector of the District of Columbia, the first republican ever elected to an office in the district.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

OTHER MEN'S CLOTHES

Across the room from the Honourable Randolph Paxton, a Southern member of the Lower House, the Honourable J. Emmett Kellar, represented a district of a Western state, sat in distress. His woes were entirely of the mind.

Thora Paxton, her winsome, smiling face uplifted to Dr. Arville Cress, was walking across the room, but Kellar thought no other word than floating expressed the light grace of her movements.

For two months after Kellar first took rooms at the Lowndes, where Thora Paxton lived with her father, he had been in a dream world, with Thora its shining star. But Kellar was reserved and shy with women, and, though the worship in his heart grew stronger daily, no one realized the fact but himself.

Then Arville Cress came home from his vacation trip abroad. With his calmly appropriative manner, and immediately there came to Kellar's ears the story that the successful physician was the choice of both the Honourable Randolph and his daughter.

She had treated Kellar with a friendliness that might have put hope in another man's heart, but only added to his misery.

Cress had been home three months now, and this evening there had come to Kellar the knowledge that even hidden worship of Thora would soon be no longer permissible. Her engagement to Cress was to be announced at Mrs. Throckmorton's on the following Wednesday.

As soon as he could gracefully make his adieus Kellar took his leave. When the outer door shut behind him, the light gaiety of Thora Paxton's demeanour changed.

"I'm tired," she said to Cress as an excuse for leaving him.

When Emmett Kellar threw his dress coat on his bed that evening an envelope fell from the inner pocket. Wondering that he had put a letter in his pocket unopened, he glanced absently at the address and broke the seal.

"Oh, Nora, Nora, darling," it began, "I've got to tell somebody how utterly unhappy I am, or I shall die!"

"I'm unhappy enough to sympathize with you," though Kellar grimly, "but my name certainly isn't Nora!"

He turned the envelope over and looked again at the address. Not "J. E. Kellar, Hotel Lowndes, Washington," as his careless glance had told him, but "Mrs. J. E. Kelter, Hotel Wowndes, Washington Falls, Ore."

It was an unmailed letter, the stamp unblotted—but how could it come to be in his coat pocket? Surely it was his coat. With a vague remembrance that his clothes hadn't seemed somehow right when he hurriedly dressed, he tried on the coat. The sleeves flapped, the tails swung close to the floor. He looked down at the trousers hanging in folds, then examined the initials under the collar of the coat, "R.L.P."

"R.L.P." was no other than Randolph L. Paxton, one of the tallest and heaviest men in Congress, and Kellar was not remarkably tall nor very heavy. He had sent his evening clothes that morning to the tailor shop to be pressed, and presumably Mr. Paxton had done the same.

Then he remembered the letter, and turned to the signature. "Your miserable Thora."

The young man thrust the scented sheet back in its scented envelope, and sat down on his bed, trembling. And she was "utterly unhappy," when one would expect her to be most joyous! Well, it was a shame to read her letter, but he'd got to find out what was making her so miserable!

"I'm going to be married to one man, and I'm loving another one with all the heart of one. Could a girl be in worse straits, Nora? You know I thought when you were here last winter, that Arville Cress—that I liked him well enough to marry him!

"But last spring a 'new member' came to stay here. He isn't smooth and 'finished' like Dr. Cress, and I didn't pay much attention to him at first, but father liked him from the beginning, and when he began to talk about himself—how he is all wrapped up in 'fighting for the people'—I studied him a little, Nora.

"Then Arville Cress came back and began acting just as he'd done in the winter. And the other man—he never tried to pay me any attention—I don't suppose he ever thinks of me or sees me any more than one sees the dishes on the table.

"I tried to make him see me—to make him see I liked him, but he wouldn't. And after a while I thought it didn't matter whom I married, if the 'New Member' (I can't tell you his name, Nora) didn't want me, so I let Arville Cress propose to me.

"Mrs. Throckmorton is going to announce the engagement next week. O, Nora, you're so far away you won't get this until my doom is sealed—you can't help me out, but it helps me to tell it. If you'd been here, my dearest, all this last year instead of 'way out there, with your civil engineer, I wouldn't have been unhappy as I am now. You have helped me in some way, you darling! Nora, things would not look so terible! Maybe I could go on and marry Arville Cress tranquilly. I—I'm beginning to hate him now—and I've got to act as if I were a happy woman.

"But, if I weren't going to marry a man I don't love, I'd still be unhappy. Nora—the other man doesn't care.—Your miserable Thora."

Before the hand of his watch had counted five minutes Kellar had put on a suit, had brushed his thick fluff of black hair.

Thora Paxton still in her cream chiffon evening dress, started a little at sight of him.

"I—father is asleep," she told him, a little tremulously. "He was very tired and retired early. Perhaps early in the morning—"

But Kellar did not wait for her to finish.

"I love you," he said abruptly; "Thora, I've loved you ever since the first evening I saw you. I know you are engaged to Arville Cress, but that—that counts for nothing; if you—if you—what have you to say to me, my—my darling?"

An hour later, when Thora would have torn the tell-tale letter in strips, Kellar rescued it.

"You'll let me keep it, won't you?" he pleaded. "But for this I might never have known."

IF You had a sore place, and had to choose between two remedies, one of which went to the sore spot direct, and the other by a round-about way, and might never get there at all, which would you prefer?

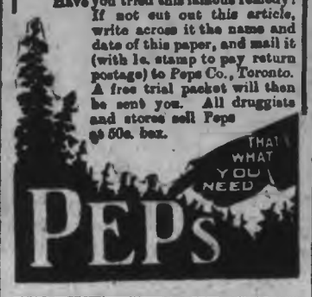
When you have a cold, asthma, a sore chest, catarrh, or any lung trouble, you can select between two remedies—Peps, which go to the sore spot direct, and an[illegible] cough [illegible] to the lungs and breathing passages, but to the stomach; which is not ailing at all.

Don't ruin your stomach in an attempt to heal your throat and lungs. Peps go direct to the throat and lungs. Peps are tiny tablets containing certain medicinal ingredients, which when placed upon the tongue immediately turn into vapour, and are breathed down the air passages to the lungs. On their journey, they soothe the inflamed and irritated membranes of the bronchial tubes, the delicate walls of the air passages, and finally enter and carry relief and healing to the capillaries and tiny air cells in the lungs, thus ending asthma, catarrh, bronchitis, colds, etc.

In a word, while no liquid or solid can get to the lungs and air passages, these Peps fumes get there direct, and at once commence their work of healing.

Once you try them you will never use any other remedy but Peps for colds, coughs, sore throat, catarrh, tightness across the chest, "that night cough," and all breathing and lung troubles.

Have you tried this famous remedy? If not cut out this article, write across it the name and date of this paper, and mail it (with 1c. stamp to pay return postage) to Peps Co., Toronto. A free trial packet will then be sent you. All druggists and stores sell Peps at 50c. box.



Was Confined To His Bed For Four Months With Rheumatism.

Mr. W. H. Riley, Ruddell, Sask., writes:—"It is with the greatest of pleasure that I can recommend Doan's Kidney Pills to all suffering with rheumatism. I was so bad with this terrible disease, I was unable to get up from my bed for four months, and nothing seemed to relieve me until a friend recommended Doan's Pills. I had my doubts about them, but was so desperate I would try anything suggested to me. After taking half a box I was able to get up, and after taking two boxes could get around quite well. After taking six boxes I was completely cured, and able to work for the first time in five months, and have not had a touch of rheumatism since. Anyone who saw me then would not know me now, as I am strong and active since taking your valuable medicine."

Doan's Kidney Pills help the kidneys to flush off the acid and poisonous impurities which have collected, and thus clean out the kidneys, and dispel the rheumatism from the system.

Doan's Kidney Pills are 50 cents per box, or 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

If ordering direct specify "Doan's."

TOO BUSY TO TALK.

SIDE by side in the moon's pale light
Two figures sat in the early night.

One was a man who was half afraid,
The other a timid, shrinking maid.

A friendly cloud came over the sky,
And the man grew bold as it caught his eye.

He reached an arm, and he turned his face
And kissed that maid in the proper place.

And all was silent except for this:
The lonely echo of that one kiss.

She may have blushed or she may have not;
She silently sat in that selfsame spot,

While the man no syllable spoke aloud,
But waited and watched for another cloud.

The cloud soon came and another, too,
And he did what any man would do.

And still that maiden, who scarcely stirred,
Just sat and uttered no single word

Until, as he gave her one on the cheek,
He cried, "Oh, tell me, why don't you speak?"

And the maiden said, with impatient sigh:
"Not now. Let's wait till the clouds roll by."

MYSTERY OF NECKLACE

MAX MAYER'S PEARLS WERE LOST AND FOUND AGAIN.

A Fascinating Problem For Police and Public Has Resulted from the Theft of Fabulously Valuable Gems Which Disappeared in the Mails—Came Back In a Parcel Like So Many Marbles.

Fascinating from its first chapter, the mystery of the stolen and recovered pearls belonging to Mr. Max Mayer of London has reached a climax, without providing an explanation of some of the extraordinary incidents connected with it. As it stands, the story has all the elements of the most thrilling detective romance, one which is bound to fill the authors of such works with professional jealousy; while as a record of plain matters of fact it will inevitably take a high place amongst the remarkable adventures of famous gems and jewels with which history abounds.

Like most effective dramas of the kind, the plot opens in quite a matter-of-fact way. Mr. Mayer was owner, last July, of a magnificent string of pearls, sixty-one in number, and valued at $585,000. They had taken many years to collect, the worth of a necklace of this kind lying in its perfect harmony of coloring, and the beautiful gradation in size of the beads composing it.

With a view to sale, the owner decided one day, two months ago, to have the string sent to him in London from the French capital. Similar things are done constantly. Between London and Holland an incessant stream of diamonds passes on the way to be cut in Amsterdam, and valuables of the highest kind constantly go to and fro across the Channel.

In general the process is so safe, the delivery of the treasure so certain, that no one thinks much of the matter. Thus Mr. Mayer, with a light heart, had his pearls registered and posted by his agent, Mr. Salomons, and awaited their arrival with the utmost confidence.

This was Scene I.; the curtain ringing up for Scene II. disclosed the priceless box, its seals untouched, its coverings apparently untampered with, being unpacked by the gentleman in question in Hatton gosden, no doubt with pleasurable anticipation of again handling such lovely plaything. Paper, string, and box were all in good order, and then—Sherlock Holmes himself would have felt a thrill of that moment when the last covering was removed—a glance as the lid opened showed that the pearls had gone!

In their place were a few lumps of white sugar, put in, probably, to make up the correct weight, and a scrap or two of soiled French newspaper. Where had the gems gone? They had certainly been posted, and as certainly never arrived. Whatever else may be said of it, their abstraction on the way was a beautiful feat of legerdemain, a striking example of expertness on the part of the thief or thieves, and, seeing how small were the clues they had left, the prospect of recovering the treasure or capturing the plunderers looked remarkably small at the outset.

Small as the clues were, the Scotland Yard detective department, to whose credit it must be said that it from or never acknowledges itself baffled, set to work with vigor to find the thieves of the pearl necklace. A reward of $50,000 was offered on behalf of Lloyd's underwriters, and elaborate "trap" negotiations, begun on August 15, were conducted until the commencement of September. The story of these negotiations is too lengthy to follow here, Russians jewelers, postmen, dupes, and dummies flitting alternately across the scene in rapid succession.

So far the police all this time knew that they were on the actual track of the criminals is not disclosed, but later developments suggest that the holders of the necklace recognized that the authorities knew more than was desirable from their point of view. All we know at the moment is that while everyone was talking, "Where is the pearl necklace?" a working man strolled into a north London police station recently, laid down a muddy paper bundle on the superintendent's table, and casually remarked, "I found that in St. Paul's road, Highbury."

The paper was unrolled, and there, unstrung but undamaged, lay fifty-eight of the sixty famous pearls. Naturally, the police were incredulous for the moment; the incident was too extraordinary to be believed off-hand, but a reference to a local jeweler and a subsequent visit from Mr. Mayer himself left no further room for doubt. The treasure for which Europe had been ransacked had been picked up in a quiet Highbury thoroughfare, and then, by an inimitable touch of fate, at once ironical and farcical, offered by the finder in exchange for a glass of beer at a public house bar—and refused.

How it came to St. Paul's road simply adds one more scene to this engrossing romance. It is almost incredible that the pearls should have been dropped accidentally, and if this were not so, then their disposal in such a manner suggests that the pursuit was becoming more dangerous than the nerves of culprits could endure, and they took an ignominious means of ridding themselves of their booty.

It need hardly be said that Mr Mayers and Lloyd's underwriters have been overjoyed at the recovery of the necklace, and there for the moment the matter rests. The public, which has watched the case with the keenest interest so far, will certainly follow it to the end with equal avidity, the final stages of the mystery promising to be as absorbing as those which have preceded them.

The Bravest Battle

The bravest battle that ever was fought,
Shall I tell you where and when?
On the maps of the world you will find it not:
It was fought by the mothers of men.

Nay, not with cannon or battle shot,
With sword or nobler pen;
Nay, not with eloquent word or thought,
From mouths of wonderful men.

But deep in a walled-up woman's heart
Of woman that would not yield;
But patiently, silently bore her part—
Lo! there in that battle field.

No marshaling troop, no blouvac song;
No banner to gleam and wave;
And, oh! these battles they last so long—
From babyhood to the grave!

Yet, faithful still as a bridge of stars,
She fights in her walled-up town—
Fights on and on in the endless wars,
Then silent, unseen—goes down.

Or shirk.
Then, 'round 'bout two, he takes "for life"

And struggles with his fellow-men,
And then
He sits around a while and thinks,
And blinks,
And when at last it's time for bed,
He's dead.

AFRAID OF CONFLICT.

Beiliss Affair Only Beginning of Grave Struggle

ST. PETERSBURG, Nov. 12.—The ending of the Kiev trial is regarded as opening a political struggle more dangerous than Russia has known for several years. The jury's finding that Beiliss was innocent, the murder was committed in the brick yard at Zaitseff, 47 wounds were inflicted and five cups of blood withdrawn, is already being used to intensify race hatred, although it is wholly consistent with the contention that thieves in the Tcheberyak's household, subsidized by the provocateurs, committed the crime in the manner most likely to arouse anti-Semitic feeling.

It is understood that Premier Kokotzoff, who has been abroad, throughout the trial, strongly warned the authorities of the disastrous effect in western Europe of the latitude allowed at Kiev to the quack theologians, such as the priest Pranaitis and that conviction following such a trial would immediately be followed by revisionist agitation shaking the very foundations of bureaucracy.

HUNTERS DROWNED.

Seven Men Believed To Have Lost Lives In Saginaw Bay.

Sebewaing, Mich., Nov. 12.—Seven hunters are believed to have perished Sunday in the hurricane which swept Saginaw Bay. The men were in duck boats on the "middle ground," a partly submerged, rush-covered spot, half a mile from the shore.

J. Ruby of this place, forced to leave the hunting grounds when his boat began to fill, saw eight men in the rushes as he passed. Of these, one is known to have escaped. Paul Emerich and Bert Cornwell of Detroit were among the seven missing, but the names of the others are not known.

Searching parties have been unable to find any trace of the men, but an empty boat was found last night in the weeds.

Family Has Narrow Escape.

BROCKVILLE, Nov. 12.—Fire destroyed the home of Arthur Smart at an early hour yesterday morning. The occupants barely had time to dress scantily and escape with their lives.

The dwelling is one of the beauty spots overlooking the River St. Lawrence, and the flames being fanned by a stiff wind in a driving snowstorm, the place was entirely consumed, together with its entire furnishings, which included much valuable personal effects.

Over and above the insurance on the building and contents, which was $7,000, there is a loss of fully $6,000. The fire is supposed to have originated in the furnace room.

Search For Missing Men.

VANCOUVER, Nov. 12.—Believing that their friends are safe, a rescue party, comprising four men, set out in a launch yesterday in search of John Marsh, manager of the Astor Hotel, C. Smith, Hugh Dillon, W. Thorpe, F. Wyckoff and Scotty Young, who left last Saturday night in a gasoline launch for a Sunday's outing at Macnab Creek and have not been heard of since.

ST. CATHARINES, Nov. 12.—Charles Coats of Toronto, who has been employed at the Lybster paper mill at Merriton for some little time, was caught in a machine that he was attending, and his arms were so badly mangled that both had to be amputated, one above the elbow.

KIDNEY AND BLADDER TROUBLES DISAPPEAR

Chronic Sufferers Find Relief After Few Doses of Croxone

If you are bothered with headache, or rheumatism, have disagreeable, annoying bladder or urinary disorders to contend with—or suffer with any other of the many miseries that come from weak kidneys, here is a guaranteed remedy you can depend upon.

It is a positive fact that Croxone promptly overcomes such diseases.

It soaks right in and cleans out the stopped up kidneys and makes them filter and sift out the poisonous waste matter from the blood. It neutralizes and dissolves the uric acid that lodges in the joints and muscles, causing rheumatism; soothes and heals the delicate lining of the bladder.

More than a few doses of Croxone are seldom required to relieve even the obstinate, long standing cases.

You will find Croxone entirely different from all other remedies. It is so prepared that it is practically impossible to take it without results. An original package costs but a trifle, and your druggist is authorized to return the purchase price if Croxone fails to give the desired results the very first time.

Hurrah! For Me, I Can Eat

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets Bring Joy to the Starving Dyspeptics Who Cannot Safely Eat

To seat one's self at a festive board or a heavily laden table and not be able to eat is positive sorrow to most dyspeptics and stomach sufferers, and likewise pain.

"I Walk to My Meals and Eat All I Want, Then a Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablet Makes Good For Me."

When your system is robbed of its natural digestive juices, in their correct proportion, a little candy-like Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablet gives to them the qualities they lack and you thereby rest the digestive apparatus and allay irritation, pain, gas and stomach trouble.

Pepsin such as used in a Stuart's tablet is one of nature's greatest aids; and when this is combined with the other ingredients you simply bring happiness to every worn-out nerve of the stomach, liver, intestines, pancreas and other organs.

Predigested foods will not aid nature if she insists on manufacturing the wrong juices. Besides this the bowels need coarse and heavy foods in order to make bowel pack which is vitally essential to health.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets mix with the food in the stomach, have a tendency to stop gas formations, sour stomach, decay, etc.; then as the food passes into the lower digestive tract (the intestines) it takes the Stuart's digestive agents with it, and there is where the real work is done.

The nutritive value of food and tablet is separated from the waste matter and is assimilated and distributed into the proper parts of the body. The blood is enriched and the liver stored with the qualities the system needs.

Go to your druggist now and buy a box of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets, price 50c. and then eat what you will; but take a tablet afterwards. Then will come to you the beginning of the end of all your stomach troubles and food fears.

CANNOT TAX ESTATE.

Privy Council's Decision Will Cost Provinces Dear.

LONDON, Nov. 12.—(C. A. P. Cable.)—An important judgment was delivered yesterday afternoon by the Privy Council as to whether the Quebec Succession Duty Act, imposing a tax in respect of property situated outside the province at the time of their death was ultra vires.

The estates in question were those of Charlotte L. Cotton and Henry H. Cotton, part of whose estates were situated in the United States.

The Quebec Government claimed the duty on the whole estate, which the executors resisted.

The Privy Council allowed the appeal of the executors and the cross appeal failed. Their lordships find that such taxation was not direct taxation and was therefore ultra vires.

Inquiry at the Parliament Buildings yesterday revealed the fact that the Privy Council's taxation decision will probably mean hundreds of thousands of dollars annually to the provinces of the Dominion.

Hon. I. B. Lucas, Provincial Treasurer, seen yesterday, was not inclined to think that the decision could be retroactive, and although there will be an appreciable effect on the provincial exchequer, he could not say just what course would now be pursued.

A lawyer residing in Washington, and noted for his laconic style of expression, sent the following terse and witty note to a refractory client who would not comply with his reiterated demands for the payment of his bill: "Sir,—If you pay the enclosed, you will oblige me. If you do not, I shall oblige you."

BOTH EYES DESTROYED.

Belleville Workman May Not Survive Explosion.

BELLEVILLE, Nov. 12.—Thomas Cooper, an employe of the rolling mills here, was yesterday the victim of an accident which in all probability will prove fatal. He was assisting in breaking up some large plates, using dynamite. He had placed two charges which did not go off as quickly as he expected, and as he went to the plates the caps exploded. Pieces of the plate struck him in the face, lacerating it in a terrible manner, and both eyes were destroyed. In addition, the right arm was broken, the hand torn and other injuries inflicted. He was removed to the hospital. Cooper has a wife and grown up family of nine children in Montreal.

THE PASSPORT AND TRAVEL.

Official Credentials Necessary To Cross Frontiers.

The passport will disappear as a condition of international travel only with the coming of the millennium. It would be easier to drive a camel through the eye of a needle than to smuggle a foreigner into Russia without a passport. Whether he cross the Czar's frontier from the sea, by the gateway of Batoum, or by land, where the Nord Express runs through Wirballen, the traveler will be called upon to stand and deliver his passport almost before he has filled his lungs with Russian air. It is a case of passport first and customs after, for if the traveler's credentials are not in order his luggage need not be opened. It might be thought that inspection at the former would suffice; but there is another examination to undergo at Tiflis or St. Petersburg, as the case may be; and, indeed, during a stay of some weeks in the capital the document is usually retained by the manager of the hotel, and must be endorsed again by the police before the holder leaves the country. The one redeeming feature of this otherwise irritating surveillance is that it costs nothing, since the Russian authorities undertake all the necessary formalities without exacting so much as a rouble for their trouble.

It is the fashion to resent, as well as ridicule, this attitude of the Russian police; but tourists who are impatient of such scrutiny are free to stay away, and the methods of Muscovy are, after all, not more prying or impertinent than those of Montreal. The Canadian immigration bureau demands from each arrival an assurance that he is not an Anarchist a polygamist, cripple, or hereditary imbecile. It insists on knowing whether he has paid his own passage. It asks questions about his parents and grandparents, and in fact displays an inquisitiveness of which Russian officials would never dream.

The trouble in Turkey, where the ordinary passport of other countries is replaced by the tashkere, is, on the other hand, that of continual petty exactions of a few piasters here and a few piasters there, not only (in the days of Abd-ul-Hamid) on entering, but actually on leaving the country as well. Nowadays, however, this rule of inspecting the teskere of anyone quitting Ottoman territory, which were merely an excuse for a last backsheesh, has wisely been done away with.

The object of the passport has altered during the past two centuries. The "license to travel" of Elizabeth an times represented in effect an export duty on tourists, and was insisted on in the hope of discouraging foreign travel, which the authorities regarded, in post-reformation days, as subversive of Protestantism and likely also to undermine the patriotic sentiment of English youth. Edward VI. and Elizabeth both gave letters, which may virtually be regarded as passports, to commercial adventurers trading in Russia and Persia. Nowadays, on the other hand, a passport is simply a certificate of citizenship, in which the foreign secretary for the time being calls upon all those "whom it may concern" to pass the bearer "freely, without let or hindrance," and to afford all necessary assistance and protection.

The modern passport is a coldly impersonal and official document, without one of the glamor of these old letters from princes; but something analogous to them survived until recently in Morocco, where the grand vizier used to give his sign manual to favored travelers in the atlas or other wild regions of the Shereefian empire, whereby they were sure of the assistance of country raids and of immunity from attack or imposition. The priceless letter used to cost nothing beyond thanks at an audience and the only obligations which it entailed on the holder was that he should at his own expense include a couple of Moorish soldiers in his retinue. The armory of these warriors was somewhat obsolete, but they were handy men in pitching a tent or lighting a camp fire and were generally worth more than their very modest keep and wage.

THE MARKETS

LIVERPOOL, Nov. 12.—The easier American wheat cables yesterday and the lower tendency in Winnipeg were offset here by unfavorable crop advices from Argentina, and as a result shorts covered and opening values were unchanged to ¼d higher. Bullish advices from India, firmer spot market and an improved demand for cargoes and generally unfavorable weather for the new crop mostly thruout Europe, helped the advance. Following the opening there was a decline of ¼d in the distant months, on a report of rain in Bahia Blanca, and expectations of a liberal increase in the visible here. Later, support developed and most of the decline was recovered on dryness reported in many provinces of Argentina. Argentine estimates being reduced. At 1.30 p.m. the market was steady, unchanged to ¼d higher.

Corn opened ¼d lower and further declined 3/4d to ¼d with liquidation induced by the American Government and talk of larger arrivals. The pressure was in December. At 1.30 p.m. prices were ¼d to ¾d under yesterday.

CHICAGO, Nov. 12.—Widening of the damaged area in Argentina turned the wheat market up grade today after there had been a material setback. The close was nervous, varying from last night's figures to 3-8 to 1-2c advance. Other leading staples all showed a net loss—corn 1-4 to 5-8c, oats 1-8 to 1-4c, and provisions 2 1-2 to 10c.

AN OPTICAL ILLUSION.

The moon's larger appearance when near the horizon as compared with its size at the zenith is really an optical illusion, and accurate angular measurements have shown that it is actually a trifle smaller when low down, as it should be on account of being a little more distant.

Adding a new attempt at explanation, Dr. M. Ponzo, an Italian physchologist, compares this with an illusion already represented by E. T. Sanford, another physcologist. Two straight lines are brought together at an acute angle a one end, two exactly equal circles being drawn between the lines, when the circle nearer the apex appears decidedly the larger, but the illusion lessens as the angle is made less acute.

As the celestial bodies near the horizon, they appear in the angle formed by the earth and the declining arc of the sky. The conditions are just those of the artificial lines and circles and its enlargement in the narrowing angle is a contrast the moon conspicuously brings out as compared with the spectacle it presents in the free sky.

The fact that the apparent enlargement is not always the same may be due to changes in the angle by clouds or vapours.

"These are not the latest style, are they?" she asked, when the gloves were produced.

"Yes, madam," replied the shopman, "we've had them in stock only two days."

"I didn't think they were, because the fashion paper says black kids have tan stitches and vice versa. I see the tan stitches but not the vice versa!"

The shopman explained that vice versa was French for seven buttons, so she bought three pairs.

PETERBOROUGH, WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 12, 1913

THE CITY'S AGREEMENT

With the Street Railway Has Been Submitted for Approval—Progress of the Hydro-Electric System

A WIRING INSPECTOR

It will be some months yet before the City's streets will be illuminated by means of the Hydro-Electric system. Ald Johnston, Chairman of the Power Committee of the City Council stated this morning that a building had been secured for storing the transformers, and that arrangements were being made to have them placed in position. An agreement between the City and the Peterborough Radial Railway Company, respecting the changing of the suspension wires from the wooden trolley poles to the ornamental Hydro-Electric poles, has been drafted. The indenture has been forwarded to the Company's directors, whose approval is anticipated by the Power Committee.

In Brantford, where a similar system is being installed, delays have been occasional through belated delivery of the necessary materials. The same condition has prevailed in Peterborough to some extent. The construction foreman is at present awaiting the arrival of a certain brand of wire, to be used in connection with the magnetite arc lights. Brantford has been promised Hydro-Electric street lighting by the 1st of January, and the remainder of the system will be completed by the fifteenth.

The Wiring Inspector.

The Council has yet to decide upon the appointment of a qualified wiring inspector. A number of applicants for the position have already been received and given preliminary consideration. It will probably take another session of the Power and Property Committees to decide the issue. It is proposed to combine the offices of plumbing, building and wiring inspectors. One man will be selected to fill one or more of the positions. Th building inspectorate justifies the Property Committee's interest in the matter.

The appointment of a wiring inspector is in accordance with the instructions issued by the Hydro-Electric Commissioners, to establish a municipal inspection bureau for the inspection of electrical work. Failure to carry out these instructions within a specified time will expose the City to a penalty of $100 a day.

Statutory Enactment.

It may be pointed out that the power behind the Hydro, in this particular case, is nothing short of a bill introduced before the Provincial Legislature in 1912 by Mr. W. K. McNaught. That bill in time became law, and it vested in the Hydro-Electric Commission the power to make regulations as to "the construction, operation, and inspection of the works, plant, machinery, apparatus, appliances, land equipment for the transmission, distribution, etc., of electrical power or energy by municipal corporations, railway, lighting or power plants, or any other company or individual transmitting such electrical power or energy."

Search as the city officials may, the authority is there, and though such other cities as London, Hamilton, Ottawa, Woodstock, etc., experienced the the skepticism regarding its enforcement as Toronto is now under going, they have all submitted in the end. Some of the above-mentioned cities took weeks before they finally admitted that the Hydro had the power, as well as the disposition, to enforce that enactment of 1912.

Consumer Will Pay.

The proposal for the establishment of such a bureau includes a plan which will make it at the same time self-supporting. The Hydro's outline proposes a schedule of graded charges, according to the size of the building and the amount of electrical work involved, and if this suggestion is followed out, it will again be a case of "it is the consumer who pays." In other words, the City will be able to maintain the bureau and engage all the necessary inspectors without expense to themselves. The public, whose buildings are inspected, will hand over sufficient in fees to float the department financially.

Perspiration Not Inspiration

The bishop was attending services at a small country church, and the young Vicar, being very anxious to show the Bishop how well he could preach, let himself out, so to speak. His gestures were frequent and his voice rose to a high pitch. At the close of the service the young theologian went forward to welcome the Bishop, and incidentally to ask how he liked the sermon. The Bishop's reply was: "My dear young friend, do not make the mistake of confusing perspiration with inspiration.

EVERYTHING READY FOR CONFERENCE

Laymen's Missionary Gathering Tomorrow Promises to be Biggest Affair of Its Kind Ever Held Here

850 AT THE BANQUET

The final meeting of the Executive committee which has charge of the arrangements for to-morrow's big Laymen's Missionary Conference, which is to be held in Peterborough, took place last evening in the Y.M.C.A. to complete all the details for the three sessions. To-morrow's conference in Peterborough is one of 38 similar gatherings being held throughout the Province. Reports from headquarters in Toronto state that while exceptionally large conferences have been held at a number of points, such as Berlin, Orangeville and others, it is expected that to-morrow's conference in Peterborough will surpass all the others. The first session will open at 10.30 a.m. in the Murary Street Baptist Church under the chairmanship of Mr. J. A. Aylmer. The principal speakers at this meeting will be Mr. J. Cuthbertson, of Japan, and Rev. Walter Daniel of Toronto.

The afternoon session will be under the chairmanship of Ald. G. A. Gillespie, and will open at 2 o'clock. The speakers wil be Mr. J. H. Arnup, Assistant Secretary of Foregn Missions for the Methodist Church, H. C. Priest, General Secretary for Canada of the Missionary Educational Movement, Dr. J. R. Ferguson, of Formosa, Robt. Lair, Secretary Finance Board o fthe Presbyterian Church in Canada, D. M. Rose, Secretary Anglican Church Laymen's Missionary Movement, and Rev. Walter Daniel.

Between the afternoon and evening sessions a new feature will be introduced which has not been tried in connection with any of the conferences held elsewhere. The delegates representing the different denominations will meet in separate rooms according to their denominations, and hold denominational conferences. These will be under the chairmanship of Rev. J. C. Davidson, Rev. J. Rollins, Rev. J. R. Webb, and Rev. R. G. Peever. These conferences will last until a quarter to seven, when the delgates will unite and march in a body to the Market Hall, where the big banquet is to be held.

The Banquet.

The banquet committee, under the chairmanship of Mr. R. F. Downey, is making arrangements to seat 850 at the tables, as it now seems likely that the original estimate of 800 will be exceeded. The chairman at the banquet will be Judge Huycke. Young ladies from the different churches of the City, under the direction of Mr. C. S. Thompson, will assist in waiting on the tables. The committee is anxious that any people who have any tickets unsold shall report them to their pastors as quickly as possible, so that they may be placed in the hands of other parties who otherwise may not be able to attend. Mr. Wm. Madill, druggist, has a few tickets which may be obtained until noon Thursday, provided the supply lasts.

The devotional services at the banquet will be under the direction of Rev. R. B. Grobb. The speakers will be Rev. J. Y. Ferguson, of Formosa, Rev. J. A. Arnup, of Toronto, Hon. Justice Hodgins, Judge of the Court of Appeals, Toronto. The Salvation Army Band will be in attendance in uniform and assist in the musical features of the programme. The speaking will commence about eight o'clock. Any men who have been unsuccessful in obtaining tickets and who would like to hear the speeches may do so free of cost up to the limit of the accommodation of the hall, if willing to stand around the walls. It is claimed that the Missionary Movement is doing more good than armies and navies to extend peace throughout the world, and that its world-wide importance therefore cannot be over-estimated.

CABINET DISCUSSES SITUATION

Special Cable to The Examiner:

LONDON, Eng., Nov. 12.—(Special Cable—To-day's papers are making wild guesses as to the outcome of yesterday's cabinet meeting when Jno. Redmond was conferred with and Lord Stamfordham, the King's emissary, was also called in for consultation. The Daily Mail declares the government has decided to mark time for the present on the Ulster situation, while the Morning Post says the leaders will resolve immediately to proceed on the basis of excluding Ulster. John Redmond is again quoted as saying such a partitioning of Ireland would make the Irish Parliament unworkable and lead to endless troubles.

Another cabinet meeting will be held to-morrow, and probably two more this week.

ICE CREAM TRADE GREATER THAN CHEESE

Home Consumption of Milk in Canada Reaches Big Total

"The ice cream trade in Canada and the home consumption of milk is valued at over $30,000,000 a year, making it rank next in importance to butter-making and greatly surpasses in value the output of cheese. The Dairying output in Canada represents over $109,000,000 each year," writes Mr. J. A. Ruddick, Canada's Dairy Commissioner.

"There are now 3,760 cheese factories and creameries in the Dominion and 12 condensed milk and milk powder factories. The value of the Dairy output increased from $66,000,000 in 1900 to over $109,000,000 in 1910."

The Dairying industry is one of the most important in the Dominion and, in the words of Mr. Ruddick, "There is every inducement for the farmers of Canada to continue in the business of milk production and to increase that production very largely."

HYDRO MANAGEMENT

--IS HANDED OVER--

TO WATER COMMISSION

Power Committee Pointed Out Desirability of Their Undertaking the Work and They Agreed to Accept It--Begin Immediately to Prepare for Operation---Remuneration Increased.

The Power committee of the City Council at a meeting on Tuesday night appointed the present Water Commissioners, Messrs. T. F. Matthews (chairman), W. H. Hill and F. H. Moore, to undertake the preliminary details of organization for Peterborough's Hydro-Electric system. They will retain their duties on the Water Commission and for the additional work their present remuneration will be increased from $500, of which the chairman receives $200 and the two members $150 each, to $1400, of which $600 goes to the chairman and $400 each to the other two triumvirs. They will commence work at once.

This recommendation of the committee will be presented to the Council for ratification. Ald. Johnston presided at the meeting and the members present were Mayor Bradburn and Aldermen Buller, Duncan and Gordon, also the Water Commissioners.

According to legislation pertaining to Hydro-Electric matters, the Water Commission automatically becomes a Public Utilities Commission as soon as the City is ready to hand over the completed system for its management. It was for the purpose of conferring with the Commissioners on this point that last night's meeting was held.

After a short discussion, Mr. Matthews touched upon the main point by asking whether it was still the intention of the Council to have the public utilities under one organization as previously proposed.

Ald. Gordon—I think I can best explain the Council's opinion by stating that a motion proposing to form a separate commission received the support of only three members of th Council.

Ald. Johnston—The actual management has to be taken over now, and it is necessary that the details be gone into in preparation for it.

Mr. Matthews stated that the increased duties from the formation of a dual commission would make too great a demand on the time at the disposal of the present members. The best thing to do would be to ask the Commissioners to resign and invite citizens to offer themselves for the Utilities Commission.

Have Work Unfinished.

It was pointed out that the City would suffer by the loss of the present commissioners on account of the extensive work they have now in hand and which will not be finished until next year.

Mayor Bradburn—I don't want to see the present commissioners resign.

Ald. Gordon—We must consider the remuneration which they should receive. Their duties will be largely extended and we cannot ask them to do the work at the present amount they receive.

City Solicitor Hall—It would be most unfortunate if they do no continue the work they have undertaken.

Mr. Moore—It would be a sad mistake to lose Mr. Matthews on account of the wide experience he has had.

Mr. Matthews—I appreciate your remarks, but my business requires my close attention.

Mayor Bradburn—I would like to see you gentlemen take hold of this matter and stay with it.

Ald. Gordon stated that enquiries could be made in other cities in order to arive at an idea of the remuneration which should be given the Commissioners.

After a little further discussion in which it was urged that the Commis-

COUNTY COUNCIL WILL CONVENE NEXT WEEK

A Busy Session Is Anticipated—Will Discuss the "Good Roads Movement"

VALEDICTORY MEETING

The Peterborough County Council will convene for the fall session on Tuesday, November 18th. Mr. J. H. Garbutt, Warden of Peterborough County, anticipates a busy session lasting from four to five days. Among the more important questions to be discussed is the "Good Roads" scheme. The latter was fully explained to the Council by a representative of the "Good Roads Movement," at a previous meeting.

A number of the councillors are partial to the scheme which has for its object the improvement of the public roads throughout the province. A portion of the cost of constructing permanent highways is borne by the Government, and the remainder by the county, under whose jurisdiction the work is inaugurated. The adoption of the scheme in Peterborough County will necessitate the employment of a superintendent and a number of men capable of operating modern road machinery. A definite plan of action would also have to be provided. The scheme has been successfully worked out in a number of Western Ontario counties, including Oxford and Middlesex.

This will be the last meeting of the County Council for the year 1913.

POLICE SUED BY WALLER

EDMONTON, Nov. 12.—Lewis Waller, who was recently charged with the murder of James A. McNulty, formerly of Norwood, Ontario, is suing the city of Edmonton, David W. Simpson, captain of the city police detectives, and Silas H. Carpenter, chief of police for $5,000, claiming for injury to health and reputation, and the expenses of obtaining his freedom. The statement of claim says that on September 20, defendants, Silas H. Carpenter and David Simpson laid information before C. C. Raven, police magistrate, charging that plaintiff on September 2 wilfully murdered McNulty. A warrant was issued for the arrest of Waller on September 30, and accordingly he was arrested in Calgary and lodged in the cells at the Edmonton police station. He remained in custody until October 14, when he was discharged by J. H. Hefferman, then acting as police magistrate.

BODIES COME ASHORE

Special Wire to The Examiner.

SAULT STE. MARIE, Ont., Nov. 12.—Three lives have been reported lost from the steamer Nottingham, aground at Sandy Isle, Lake Superior. The Great Lakes dredging Company have sent a lighter and tugs to her assistance, to take off the cargo of grain. The vessel is not in immediate danger. The Hartwell is aground at Gross Cape, 14 miles west of Sault Ste. Marie, at the mouth of St. Mary's river. The vessel sank when being grounded in shoal water. A lighter has been sent to her assistance and fears are entertained for the crew. If possible the cargo will be lightered. The vessel is in bad shape.

MAKE SEASON SHORTER.

LONDON, Nov. 12.— Disasters on Canadian Great Lakes are being discussed at Lloyd's Underwriters today and the probability is that Lloyds will insist on shorter navigation season owing to the vagaries of the climate and the frequency of disasters.

FREIGHTER UNKNOWN.

TORONTO, Nov. 12. — That the identity of the great freighter lying bottom upward in Lake Huron near the St. Clair river, with her bow sticking out o fthe waves has not yet been satisfactorily settled, is one of the outstanding facts of the wreck tragedies developments this morning. From the Canadian shores of Lake Huron comes a story to-day that the bodies of sailors there had been identified as belonging to the Toronto steamer Regina and another steamer named Price. This seems to bear out yesterdays theory that they met in a collision during the storm and were both sunk with all on board. There are lake captains in this city to-day who believed there are three vessels at the bottom of the lake at that point —the Regina, the Price and the A. E. Clark, reported yesterday. Reports from various points indicate the abatement of the storm, but the hulks of the vessels are so covered with ice that identification is not yet possible.

60 TO 100 LIVES LOST.

DETROIT, Mich., Nov. 12. — Although the seas are still rolling dangerously high on the great lakes most of the vessels held at various ports prepared this morning to resume their journey. This morning's summaries indicate that the loss of life is from sixty to one hundred.

ANOTHER VESSEL LOST.

TORONTO, Nov. 12. — General Manager A. W. Wright of St. Lawrence and Chicago, Navigation Company, here, says the last word the Company received from the James Carruthers was that she left the Canadian Soo eastbound, Sunday. Mr. Wright has received official word of the finding of wreckage on Lake Huron shores, but declines to admit the loss of the vessel. Captain W.

A Real Broadway Production Coming To "The Grand"

"The Dream Maiden" en Route to New York---The Most Notable of Big Musical Productions---Here Wednesday, November 19

Music lovers of our city will be given a rare and unexpected treat in the score of "The Dream Maiden," which is said to be by far the best given to the American public in many seasons. That it obtained immediate booking on Broadway is the best proof of the legitimacy of its success, for it makes its premiere in New York at the end of November. The musical setting of Allen Lowe's rythmical lyrics is the work of the "Hungarian Waltz King," Bela Laszky, who wrote "L'Eccentrique and Sly Countess"; but the score of "The Dream Maiden" is his masterpiece.

His "Visions of Dreamland"; "Twilight Is the Time for Love"; "A Man and a Maiden"; The Springtime of Life"; "The Bells of Bellamere"; and his ensembles are said to be hauntingly melodious and have had the highest praise from press and public.

His comedy songs; "Happy Days"; "Him That Has Will Always Gets"; and "The Best Bad Actor" are gems; but the "Smith" song is said to be the sweet battle cry song since the days of Harrigan and Hart. Max Fichandler, with his ten metropolitan soloists, ably interprets the music, aided by an expert who plays the wonderful Cathedral chimes which are carried with the production.

OUR INLAND OCEAN.

We get some more intense idea of the size of Canada when in an internal lake as large as Great Britain and Ireland there is an expanse of water and spread of gale that can generate storms as fierce and fatal as the great Atlantic; storms that overturn mighty freighters and leave a record of nineteen steamers missing after the storm subsides. It is said that Lake Superior is so extensive in area that Scotland could be dropped into it without preventing navigation; and anyone who has been on Lake Superior in a severe tempest has realized that the ocean itself cannot teach it anything in the matter of manufacturing wreck-making storms.

CHRISTMAS IS COMING.

The first snow, even of nominal depth, seems to be the medium through which we see Christmas looming nearer than it did even in mid-November through rain and mud. The advent of the snow suggests thoughts of the nearness of Christmas and naturally turns our attention to Christmas shopping. In this age we have so extensively commercialized the Christmas season; so largely made the manger of Bethlehem a sentimental clearing house for the discharge of mutual, social and personal obligations, that Christmas shopping and even catering by manufacturers to the Christmas season's needs, has become an element, far more important in our commercial, than in our Christian civilization. In New York the Consumers' League, is already pushing the 'shop early" propaganda. It is not necessary to adduce proof that early shopping for Christmas needs, means better service, and better choice for the purchasers. If we are bound to commercialize Christmas, we can lessen the material aspect of our observance of it by retaining a little of the true meaning of the season; by remembering that early shopping not only gives us better value for our money, greater satisfaction, but that it gives tired, harrassed, foot-weary shop girls and salesmen an occasional breathing spell, and a better chance to enjoy their Christmas. There may be a certain proportion of the people, that want to wait till they see what Santa Claus does for them before they try to balance the account in making their purchases; but there is a large proportion o four population that has the means, if they will foster the inclination, to purchase Christmas gifts in the Christmas spirit, the spirit of divine altruism, thought for others. We all know how hard a thing it is to decide upon what we shall give. It is none too early to begin thinking; and once we begin thinking, to begin acting is easy; and "shop early" for Christmas is a good way to act.

A NEW ONTARIO CROP.

Farming for food production in Ontario is becoming more and more ineffective. We don't breed enough beef to feed our people, at least not enough remains in the country for home consumption; we are falling off in our production of cheese—fifty per cent. in five years—and even eggs figure in our imports, showing that we don't grow our own eggs. Ontario has just about finished reaping another crop and the harvest from that 'source will soon cease to be reaped. Our lumbering industry is only the reaping of a crop that divine Providence has planted for our use. But human im-providence has wasted this crop. We have not only cut down the ripe trees of the forest crop, but we have destroyed the maturing timber, that, if left standing, fostered and protected, would have yielded a perpetual crop. We have cut to the bone wide areas of forest, on soil only fit for forest growth, and have made pitiable failures of trying to grow grain on them.

It is estimated that there are in Ontario 8,500 square miles, or 5 1-2 million acres of land suitable only for growing trees. Here is a wide field for reforesting. Planted with trees at ten-feet distances, a square mile could support 290,000 trees. At that rate the 8,500 square miles of land in Ontario, suitable only for tree growth, would afford rooting for the incredible number of about 2,500 million individual trees. It would not require many years' growth—perhaps a generation—to give each tree a value of one dollar; so that in the course of a little more than a quarter of a century the tree growth, supposing all the waste land could be planted at once, would represent a money value of many hundreds of millions, not to speak of its meteorological value as implied in modifying climatic conditions and influencing regular rainfall, over areas devoted to grain production.

Are we—is our government—doing anything worth while in arousing public sentiment in favour of reforesting or in actual reforesting. The Mail and Empire points out that "in the face of discouraging conditions Ontario is making good progress," that in seven years—since 1906—"over a million and a half of trees have been sent out by the Department of Agriculture." Is that to be called good progress? At the rate of sending out each year, about enough trees to plant one square mile with trees placed at ten feet distances, it would take eight thousand, five hundred years to plant the 8,500 acres of Ontario waste land. If this is to be called "good progress," what conditions would describe bad progress?

Something must be done, if anything effective or worth while is to be done in reforesting, to multiply the centres of activity. The provincial government can't or won't anyway, do enough to meet the situation. The Mail and Empire suggests something practical when it says:

If all the County Councils were to follow the example set by the Hastings County Council in purchasing cut-over lands and restocking the areas into good timber producers, there would be a province-wide stimulation of interest in this important economic matter. The Counties Reforestration Act, passed by the Legislature in 1911, gives the local authorities ample power to procure waste lands for reforestration.

If the County Council of Peterborough were to acquire only a few hundred acres of waste land in the county and plant them to forest; before the existing bridges and public works of the county needed replacing, these lands would be capable of yielding a revenue that would suffice to rebuild all our bridges and other works, besides providing a large permanent source of income, independently of assessment taaxtion. True statesmanship is foreseeing, and our county councillors in this regard can be real statesmen.

ROWELL AND WHITNEY.

Unlike Sir James Whitney, who hugs his Castle of Indolence, Mr. Rowell goes out to meet the people. Unlike Sir James, too, he has ideas and initiative. Sir James may have the courage of his convictions, but he has no convictions outside of his life bound Toryism. True to his species he has not changed with changing conditions and needs. Mr. Rowell is a Liberal of the up-to-date British school, responsible to modern tendencies and forces seeking to adopt the social structure of the rights and claims of the less privileged classes.—London Advertiser.

EXPENDITURES CLIMBING UPWARD.

It is gleefully announced by the department of public works that under Hon. Mr. Rogers' administration during the last fiscal year no les sthan $18,844,223 of the public money has been spent on public works. During the first six months of the present year the ordinary expenditure by the department of public works was $8,057,105, and the expenditure on capital account $14,291,655, a total of $22,348,160.

In the year ending March 31, 1911, the last full year of Liberal administration, only $8,621,431 was spent on ordinary public works, or, including money spent on capital account, a gross expenditure of $12,364,048.

The expenditure during the past year was much more than twice the amount spent by the Liberals two years previously on ordinary account, and 50 per cent., greater than their total expenditure.

During the first half of the present year, the ordinary expenditures on public works were greater than during the whole of the last year of Liberal administration, while the expenditures on capital account during the same six months exceeded those of the whole of the last Liberal year by more than $2,000,000.

"Hang the expense!" seems to be the motto of the men at present in power at Ottawa, but when election day comes' round again the popular cry will be "Hang the spenders!".

GIVING THE PUBLIC WHAT IT WANTS

By RUTH CAMERON

I sometimes feel that I must take the liberty of criticising that fearful and wonderful institution, the American newspaper.

I want to protest to-day against the way many newspapers feature every act of our wealthier classes, especially every act which has the least atom of merit or virtue. One would think they were a race quite apart from common people, and moreover a race with no obligation to be just or intelligent, or even decently kind-hearted, such loud acclaim is made whenever a rich man or woman does anything useful or wise or kind.

The wealthy mother who nurses her baby and actually supervises her children's bringing up, instead of leaving it entirely to hirelings, is played up as a paragon of domesticity; and a charming picture of her, probably in a magnificent decollette gown, with her family grouped about her knees in imitation of the royal family pictures, is used full page in the Sunday section.

The wealthy man who rushes across the continent to his sick child (just as any father who could scrape together the car fare by the bitterest sacrifice would do) is represented as a model of devotion.

In the paper a few days ago, a mother and daughter of a wealthy family were lauded to the skies because they had nobly given up a social season and accompanied the father of the family in his exile in the wilderness (a magnificently appointed camp) in quest of the health he had lost—probably in making money for them.

As I read it, I thought of a mother who goes out washing and a daughter who has given up her hope of an education and gone to work in a factory, in order that the sick father may go to a fresh air camp. There are no newspaper articles written about them, nor do they think they are doing anything more than anyone would do.

Shame on us—for after all, as the newspapers are written for the public, and contain only what the public want—the blame belongs with us. Shame on us for devouring such items; shame on us for servily craning our necks to look way, way up to these bright beings as it they were the product of another and infinitely superior creation.

In spite of the fact that America is supposed to be the land of democracy and opportunity; in spite of the fact that we have no titles and fixed layers of society, they say there is no snob as bad as an American snob, and I believe it.

And do you know that the worst of these snobs are not the ones who look down, but those who look up. For it is those who look up who make possible those who look down.

Ruth Cameron

Poor Man's Stew.

Slice thin three or four pieces of salt pork, fry until brown, then quarter, several (or as few as desired) onions, place them with pork, cut up a few carrots (or one, according to size) and turnips, cover with water and boil one hour. Place potatoes in one-half hour before the other vegetables are done. This is a good economical dish.

SCOTTISH HISTORY CHAIR

Professor Rait's Inaugural Address.

Great interest was taken in the inaugural lecture by Professor Robert S. Rait, recently appointed to the new Chair of Scottish Literature and History at Glasgow University. The lecture, which was delivered the other afternoon, was largely attended, and the new Professor was given enthusiastic reception.

Professor Rait described himself as, professionally regarded, an orphan possessing neither genealogy nor tradition. Why was there a professorship of Scottish History and Literature in the University of Glasgow? he asked. It was not by the insistence of any University Commission or Government Department; nor even by the gracious wish of any munificent benefactor; but because the people of Glasgow and of the West of Scotland willed that such a Chair should be. A univeresal demand, based at once upon the love of country and upon intellectual interest, in neither of which had Scotland ever been wanting; an enthusiasm which feared no difficulties and shirked no labours; these were the founders of the Chair. He hoped to persuade someone to place on record for the enlightenment and for the imitation of future generations the story of the foundation of this Chair, a story remarkable, and significant, and worthy to be remembered.

Professor Rait, in his address, said that Scotland had its great themes of political and ecclesiastical history, its language and its literature, its foreign relations and the effect of foreign influence, its family history, its architecture, and other cognate subjects. From the point of view of the historian of institutions, Scotland had a special interest, inasmuch as it was the cockpit of rival tendencies—Celtic, English, and French. If they took the greater and wider issues of Scottish history and asked what their little country had contributed to human progress, they could answer without fear of contradiction that in the past of Scotland, when the great balance was struck, ideals would be found to have counted for more than self-aggrandisement and self-preservation. They ranged themselves with ancient Greece, with Switzerland, and with the Netherlands, with all those whose names came inevitably to the lips when they spoke of freedom and nationality. (Applause.) Nor did the record of their struggle for freedom sum up the whole of their contrbution, for when men thought of the later centuries of Scottish history, they thought first of all of a country where men died for ideas.

Referring to the above interesting event to the annals of Scottish life, the editor of the "Greenock Telegraph" sums up the occasion:

"By the inauguration of the new Chair of Scottish Language and Literature, Glasgow University has filled up a conspicuous gap in its course of studies. Too long was it a reproach that in the curriculum of what may be claimed as the most progressive of our Scottish Universities Scottish literature and history had no distinctive place. Thanks to the Exhibition of 1911 that reproach has now been taken away, and the accomplished and sympathetic scholar who is the first occupant of the new Chair showed good cause why the history of Scotland should be studied and taught within the walls of a University. Scotland's contribution to the world stock of ideas was her stout claim maintained with more than Homeric heroism for freedom and nationality. Her history teems with the sacrifices she made to honour the demand of conscience and to establish freedom, particularly in the domain of religion. It has been made radiant with the spirit of a Wallace and a Knox, and the genius of Scotland's sons has proudly and successfully scorned alike political and ecclesiastical thraldom, and in both departments the country is still eager to maintain the escutcheon without a stain. Professor Rait has struck a strongly national note, and he may be expected to make his subject increasingly attractive to undergraduates and the pubilc alike."

A YEAR INDOORS

"For thirteen months I was so bad with chronic indigestion that I could not go out of doors. Nerves were unstrung, the heart bad and smothering feelings came on till I thought I would choke. Doctors' treatment failed me, so I began the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, which I thank for my present good health. I am now doing my housework and have a family of ten."

Court Stanley 24th Anniversary

Was Fittingly Celebrated in the S. O. E. Hall on Tuesday Evening

The twenty-fourth anniversary of Court Stanley, Independent Order of Foresters, was fittingly observed last evening in the Sons of England Hall, Hunter Street. There was a large turnout of members and friends who participated in the evening's entertainment. The latter consisted of a varied programme of musical selections and recitations.

Among those who contributed to the splendid programme that was provided, were Messrs. J. J. John, W. McKinley, R. Henry, W. Eldred, A. Shilletter, W. Flyn, H. Carter and Miss F. Emmerson. Mr. and Mrs. H. Wood constituted an orchestra and in that capacity enlivened the proceedings with a number of well rendered selections. Mr. Cyril Devey acted as accompanist.

Brother T. Henry, District Chief Ranger, occupied the chair. He opened the meeting with a brief address in which he commented upon the excellent standing of the local branch of the Society.

The committee who was responsible for the successful consummation of the arrangements, was composed of the following members: Messrs. F. Pratt, C. Jayes, A. Duthie, W. Flynn, G. Dayton and A. Lowes.

The evening was brought to a fitting conclusion with the rendition of the National Anthem.

INDIGESTION, GAS OR SICK, SOUR STOMACH

Time It! — "Pape's Diapepsin" makes your upset, bloated stomach feel fine in five minutes

"Really does" put bad stomachs in order—"really does" overcome indigestion, dyspepsia, gas heartburn and sourness in five minutes—that—just that—makes Pape's Diapepsin the largest selling stomach regulator in the world. If what you eat ferments into stubborn lumps, you belch gas and eructate sour, undigested food and acid; head is dizzy and aches; breath foul; tongue coated; your insides filled with bile and indigestible waste, remember the moment "Pape's Diapepsin" comes in contact with the stomach all such distress vanishes. It's truly astonishing—almost marvelous, and the joy is its harmlessness.

A large fifty-cent case of Pape's Diapepsin will give you a hundred dollars' worth of satisfaction or your druggist hands you your money back.

It's worth its weight in gold to men and women who can't get their stomachs regulated. It belongs in your home—should always be kept handy in case of a sick, sour, upset stomach during the day or at night. It's the quickest, surest and most harmless stomach doctor in the world.

NEARLY CAUSED DISASTER

MONTREAL, Nov. 10.— Musicians, Indians and "Fire Water." The latter combination was nearly the cause of a fatal disaster Sunday morning.

Edward Lankow and Robert Pollak, the two musicians who are to give a concert in the Windsor Hall Tuesday evening, and a small party motored to the Caughnawaga Reserve Sunday morning and engaged a motor boat with a crew of three Indians to take them for a trip on the Lachine Rapids.

The party had reached the middle of the river when it was noticed that the Indians were drunk and were surreptitiously taking additional doses of "Fire Water" from bottles concealed beneath the seats. The engines suddenly stopped and the small craft was carried, left to the mercy of the current, rapidly in the direction of the rapids.

The Indians were admonished and commanded to see to the engines. They strongly resented the remarks and commenced to make trouble. Mr. Pollak's 10,000 franc Guarnari violin was seized, but luckily was prevented from being thrown overboard.

Matters were becoming dangerous. The engine had stopped, the Indians refused to set it going, and the beginning of the rapids had been reached, and the boat was being tossed from one side to the other.

Mr. Cowan, one of the party, realizing that something had to be done, sprang to the engine. He knew little about the mechanism, but was successful in starting it.

The Indians were held down by Mr. Lankow and Mr. Pollak, and the boat was able to shape its course again, needless to say, making for the shore.

The party were landed safely and, save for a severe wetting and the shock, were none the worse for the adventure.

There Was a Reason.

Somebody remarked that many an innocent act hid an ulterior motive, whereat Senator William P. Jackson of Maryland smiled.

Recently, according to the Senator, a sturdy citizen was sitting on the front porch trying to talk to a friend. Within the parlour the piano was going at full speed.

"Say, Jim," said the caller, bending in order to make himself heard, "is that your daughter playing that piano?"

"Yes," replied the sturdy citizen, with a covert smile. "Some music, ain't it?"

"It certainly is," admitted the caller. "Does she always play as strenuously as that?"

"Oh, no," replied the parent. "You see, she has got a young man in the parlour, and she is pounding out that music so as to drown the sound of her mother washin' the dishes."

OLD COUNTRY NEWS

IRELAND.

At Boyle Quarter Sessions District Inspector Beirne, in objecting to the granting of an additional license in Elphin, a town of 550 inhabitants, with twenty-six public houses, said it was the "most drunken hole in Roscommon."

"Out of the fifty jurors summoned, forty-three are Dunnes," said the Clerk of the Crown at Maryborough Quarter Sessions. In each of the two juries subsequently sworn ten out of the twelve were Dunnes. At a previous sessions eight members of a jury bore the name of Dooley.

A painful discovery was made at Kilbeg, a village outside Claremorris, when the dead body of an old man named Anthony Smith was found in a bog hole. He left his home to cut rushes, and as he failed to return to breakfast, a search was made. He suffered from dizziness, and it is thought he must have fallen in and was unable to extricate himself.

The death of County Court Judge Anderson recalls the fact that since the Liberals came into office they have had to fill nine Irish County Court judgeships out of the total of twenty-one. In the same period Ministers have had the giving away in Ireland of two Lord Chancellorships, one Lord Justiceship of Appeal, and two King's Bench appointments.

It was announced by the Lord Mayor of Dublin that the Chief Secretary intended immediately to appoint a departmental commission to inquire into the housing of workers in Irish cities and towns.

A large quantity of modern machinery has been installed for the development of the Queen's County coal mines, and with a view to providing immediate accommodation for Welsh and Scottish miners, a large number of dwellings have been erected convenient to the workings.

A motor bicycle, with side car attached, got set in motion in King Street, Belfast, while not under control, and, running off at great speed, collided with a young man named Patrick Dwyer, 21, College Square N., who was knocked down and sustained a compound fracture of the right leg. He was removed to the Mater Infirmorum Hospitals. The bicycle was considerably damaged.

Judge Johnston, K. C., at Monaghan Quarter Sessions, awarded Owen McKenna, a farmer of Mullinrocken, £25 damages in an action against Sergeant Graham and Constable M. Meehan, for injuries received through assault and negligence. The plaintiff alleged that he was violently pulled off his cart on a charge of drunkenness, and that his leg was broken. He was afterwards placed in the black hole in the barracks, and then taken home. The police denied that the plaintiff fell on the road.

The interment took place of Mrs. Boyce, wife of Mr. Richard Boyce, Ballinastan, Monamolin, County Wexford, who died very suddenly. A farm belonging to Mr. Boyce had just been sold to Mr. J. Kinsella, Mountlomond, for £460, and it is thought that the place passing from the Boyce family after one hundred years' possession hastened the lady's death, which was the result of seizure as she was talking with her husband and others connected with the sale. Mrs. Boyce had reached her seventieth year.

Mr. McMordie, M.P., who has been Lord Mayor of Belfast for four years, has consented to be nominated for the office for the coming year.

When County Court Judge Brereton Bary at Naas Quarter Sessions was about to give Mr. K. Roycroft a decree against Patrick Connor for £6 3s for goods sold and delivered, the defendant, an old man, appeared, and said his horse and car accidentally hit Plaintiff's window. The plaintiff then said the claim was for the breaking of a plate-glass window. His Honour angrily asked what he meant by swearing it was for goods sold and delivered, and the plaintiff said the insurance company made him bring the case.

Much amusement was caused at Navan District Council meeting by a letter from a tenant of one of their cottages, who complained that though he had applied to have the cottage painted, whitewashed, and disinfected, this had not been done. Declaring that his wedding was approaching, but that the prospective bride had refused to marry him until the cottage was put in repair, he broke into verse as follows:

Inside its walls she won't enter,
She told me that once and for all,
Till its paintings are all put in order
And the microbes removed from the wall.

The rent collector explained that the tenant owed him £1, and the council ordered that the poet be brought before the magistrates.

HAD INDIGESTION.

Almost Despaired of Ever Getting Well.

When your food has not been properly digested, your body has not received the benefit it should. The exertions of the gastric juice have been confined entirely to removing the unmasticated, undigested portions of food, which they cannot properly digest as speedily as possible from the body, therefore only giving the blood a small percentage of nourishment with which to feed the tissues. No wonder then that Indigestion and Dyspepsia attack the stomach. No medicine can surpass Burdock Blood Bitters as a cure for this particular disease. It regulates the bowels, promotes perfect digestion, makes pure blood, tones the stomach, and thus restores perfect health to the debilitated system.

Mrs. Mary MacKay, Hunter's Mountain, N.S., writes:—"I was troubled with Indigestion for more than ten years. I tried several Doctor's medicines claiming the power to cure, but all without success. Having heard of the many cures effected by Burdock Blood Bitters, I decided to give it a trial. After taking two bottles I was completely cured. My appetite which was very poor, is now good, and I can eat most everything without any disagreeable feelings. I can strongly recommend B.B.B. to anyone suffering from Indigestion."

WHOLE BODY A SOLID RASH

Thick, Fine and Red. Agony of Itching and Burning Frightful. One Cake of Cuticura Soap and Box of Cuticura Ointment Cured.

Lower Onslow, N. S.—"At first we thought my child's trouble was his teeth. The whole body was a solid rash and as the arm pits and elbows and thighs the skin came off as if he had been scalded. It was a very thick fine rash, red in color and intensely itchy and burning. The skin just wiped off leaving a raw sore with little specks of yellow matter in them. The skin on every finger split down on each side and looked like a ruffle. His toes broke out in little yellow pimples and the bottom of his feet did the same and he would say he could not walk, that there were pins sticking in his feet.

"The agony of itching and burning was something frightful. If he got a chance he would scratch the skin right off and make a sore, but to prevent that I made mittens for him out of cotton. Every night from twelve o'clock until three in the morning he would have to be taken up out of bed and rocked, his sufferings were so bad.

"With no permanent cure in sight I got the Cuticura Soap and Ointment. The first night the child slept the whole night through, the first night for four months. I am thankful to say the cure was complete and I just got one cake of Cuticura Soap and one box of Cuticura Ointment." (Signed) Mrs. Samuel Higgins, May 17, 1913.

Cuticura Soap and Ointment sold everywhere. For liberal free sample of each, with 32-p. book, send post-card to Potter Drug & Chem. Corp., Dept. D, Boston, U. S. A.

Three Reasons Why POSTUM

Instead of Tea or Coffee

A Food Drink Postum made of choice whole wheat, roasted, with a small portion of New Orleans molasses contains the nutritive elements of the grain, and is wholesome and nourishing. Tea and coffee have no food value whatever.

Has Fine Flavour Postum has a dark, seal brown colour, which changes to rich golden brown when cream is added. It has a delightful aroma, and a rich, snappy flavour, which many say they like as well, if not better, than that of tea or coffee.

Free From Drugs Postum is absolutely free from any drug. Tea and coffee contain caffeine, a poisonous drug—from 1½ to 3 grains to the cup. It often causes biliousness, headaches, heart agitation, nervousness, sleeplessness, and other ills. Postum being pure and free from caffeine or any other drug, may be used freely by young and old.

Postum comes in two forms:

Regular Postum must be well boiled to bring out the flavour and food value.

Instant Postum is a soluble powder. Made instantly by stirring a spoonful in a cup of hot water—with sugar and cream added

If coffee don't agree, try POSTUM.

POWER COMPANY THREATENS SUIT

Against the Water Commissioners if the Natural Flow of the Otonabee River is Interfered With

A letter threatening suit for interference in the flow of the river at the Waterworks dam was received by the Water Commissioners at a meeting which was held in Tuesday afternoon. Those present were Messrs. T. F. Matthews (chairman), W. H. Moore and W. H. Hill. The communication was signed by Mr. W. H. Denham, manager of the Peterborough Hydraulic Company.

Mr. Denham in his letter asserted that both the Waterworks Department and the Canadian General Electric Company were jointly liable for the recent closing down of the plant of the Quaker Oats Company, through lack of sufficient water with which to operate the plant. He also stated that the company's legal department in Chicago had been notified, and steps would be taken to issue a writ for heavy damages if such a condition was allowed to continue.

A portion of the Waterworks dam is under lease to the Canadian General Electric Company who use the surplus water to operate a sub-station. Under the terms of the lease, the Water Commissioners have control of the dam, and the manipulation of the stop logs.

Mr. T. F. Matthews explained that he had taken the matter up with the Waterworks Department and had arranged to have the water supply regulated so as to provide sufficient water for power companies situated along the Otonabee river. He anticipated no further difficulty from that source.

OUTSIDE AND LOCAL TALENT GAVE VERY SUCCCESSFUL CONCERT

A Very Large Audience Greeted the Five Well Known Artists, Who Were Given a Very Hearty Reception.

HIGH-CLASS ENTERTAINMENT

It is not often that a concert of a higher order is given in the city, than that held in the Sunday School room of the Knox Church last night. Mr. Geo. Kenyon and Miss Laura Logan, the two local artists who contributed to the programme, were given their usual hearty reception while those from out of town left a decidedly favourable impression with the large audience.

The concert was presided over by the Rev. H. J. Keith, pastor of Knox Church. The Sunday School room was crowded and the audience forced the artists to give encores in almost every number.

Miss Barbara Foster rendered "Angus McDonald," as the opening number. Miss Foster is a celebrated contralto soloist, and her appearance last night was not her first before a Peterborough audience. About two and a half years ago Miss Foster sang in this city, with the Glasgow Select Choir, and was given an enthusiastic reception. The qualities of her voice and the beauty of her accent in the Scotch selections she sang, made a way for her to the hearts of those in the audience. Her voice is a powerful one of wonderful expression, and the accuracy of her notes in the difficult portions of her selections was admirable. During the evening Miss Foster rendered "Angus McDonald," "Gounod Serenade," "Doon the burn Davie," and "The Old Countree."

Miss Johnson, of Dundee, supplied in a pleasing manner, the soprano selections of the entertainment. From the opening bars her personality was felt to be in the selections she was rendering, and after her first solo, she was greeted with hearty applause when she appeared to offer subsequent numbers. Miss Johnson's range, and her accuracy of note and expression in the arias of her selections, were splendid. Her voice, above the staff, was clear and full, as on her lower notes.

Last night was Miss Johnson's first appearance in this City, she having recently come to Canada from Dundee. Judging from her reception last night, and the undoubted merit of her voice, she will be warmly welcomed by a Peterborough audience should she ever sing in this City again.

During the evening Miss Laura Logan, violinist, rendered "Capriccio" and "To a Mild Rose." Her technique and skill with the violin has become a matter of such common knowledge to those in Peterborough, who love the best that the violin can produce, that a description of her playing in this report would be superfluous.

Miss Winnifred Parker, from Toronto, the well-known reader, gave a number of readings. Her manner was pleasing, and the ease with which she expressed by voice and posture, the various emotions of her selections, was marvellous. Her captivating presence, and accurate reproduction of the themes of the readings, won for her a hearty reception. She was equally effective in her humourous, pathetic, tragic or patriotic readings, and gave a remarkable display of versatility.

Mr. Geo. Kenyon, baritone soloist, and organist of the Knox Church, rendered several effective solos. He gave proof of possessing a voice that will make him a welcome addition to the better class of local musical talent. He accompanied the other soloists of the evening, in a way that augmented the effect of their renditions.

The programme was:

Solo—Miss Foster.
Reading—Miss Parker.
Violin Solo—Miss Logan.
Solo—Mr. Kenyon.
Solo—Miss Johnson.
Selection—Miss Parker.

The platform of the Sunday school room was most artistically decorated with a carpet, richly coloured, screen and hangings. These were very kindly furnished by Richard Hall & Sons.

WOMAN'S HAIR REACHES TO KNEES

A Year Ago Was Threatened With Baldness. Tells How She Made Her Hair Grow.

Mrs. Esther Emery, now visiting friends in the city, is the fortunate possessor of marvelously beautiful hair, which, when loosened from its coils, falls to her knees. Moreover it is of soft, silky and fluffy texture and in colour a glorious glossy gold. Yet just one year ago she was threatened with baldness. Urged to tell how she had obtained this wonderful growth in so short a time, she said: "Had anyone told me such marvellous results could be accomplished so quickly, I positively would not have believed it. Twelve months ago my hair, which then reached barely to my shoulders, was falling out at an alarming rate and growing very thin, actually exposing the bald scalp in several spots. It was dull and lifeless in colour, turning grey in patches, and very dry and brittle. My head was covered with dandruff and itched like mad all the time. I tried fully a dozen different hair tonics, but they were all the same and never did me a bit of good. One day I chanced to read in my home paper of a simple home prescription to make the hair grow that was recommended by a well-known physician. It said that by taking ordinary Lavona de Compossee and mixing with Bay Rum and Menthol Crystals and applying to the scalp each night with the finger tips that new hair would grow very rapidly. I decided to try it, and I had my druggist mix 2 oz. of the Lavona de Compossee with 6 oz. of Bay Rum and 1 drachm of Menthol Crystals, and started to use it. My, how quickly my hair did grow. First the hair stopped falling, the itching ceased and the dandruff disappeared. Then tiny little hairs appeared all over my scalp. These grew and grew as though nothing would ever stop them. They are growing yet, and while, course, I have used the treatment steadily and expect to continue it, at least until my hair reaches the floor. I might have stopped and been perfectly satisfied at the end of three months. I think that any woman can get long, thick, beautiful hair by using this prescription as I have recommended it to several friends and all are delighted with the result. The prescription is very inexpensive and any druggist can fill it.

The City Will Defend Action

Which Has Been Instituted by Mrs. Patrick Kane

It remains for the County Court to decide whether the City is liable for personal injuries sustained by Mrs. Patrick Kane, 160 Rubidge Street. The latter, through her solicitor, Mr. D. O'Connell, has entered an action for damages, arising out of personal injuries alleged to have been caused by the plaintiff tripping over a water service box which projected above the level of the sidewalk.

The matter was brought to the attention of the Water Commissioners by City Solicitor Hall at a meeting which was held on Tuesday afternoon. The Commissioners disclaimed responsibility for the accident. A service box constitutes an arrangement used in connection with the water service to consumers. It is usually located in the sidewalk.

Mr. A. G. Fawcett, Superintendent of the Waterworks Department, reported that the service box referred to in Mrs. Kane's claim, projected above the sidewalk from one fourth to five-sixteenth of an inch at the time of the accident. He was of the opinion that the box was raised from its original position through the action of the frost.

It is said that Mrs. Kane sustained a broken arm. The accident occurred in the early part of the year.

The continued rain of Sunday hindered many from attending church services all day. Special missionary service was being held in the Presbyterian Church, also anniversary services in the Anglican Church.

On Monday evening a fowl supper was held in the basement of the Anglican Church. Considering the weather and muddy roads the attendance was remarkable. The fowl, pastry, cakes and so forth that go to make up a good meal were delicious and there was plenty of them. The waiters were all very attentive and looked to it that everybody had their wants satisfied. After the supper a programme of Sacred music and an organ recital was given in the body of the church.

Guy Fawkes night has come and gone and long, will it be remembered by many. Strangers who were in our town would think it quite a lively spot. Small children and grown-ups appeared on the street in masquerade costume and some of them were very laughable indeed. The calathumpian parade took place on the main street after which the crowd followed to a vacant lot to the south of King street, where Guy Fawkes was once more burned to death. When the people had nearly all dispersed to their respective homes the cry of "fire" was raised and it was not long before a goodly number had gathered at the scene which was the residence belonging to Mrs. A. Toole to the west of the village, opposite the station corner. With great effort on the part of the young men, the stable was saved, but the dwelling was burned to the ground. The cause is a mystery as the house has been unoccupied for some time.

The annual Bible Society meeting of the Methodist, Presbyterian, and English churches, will be held in the Methodist Church next Sunday evening.

Police Make Important Arrest

Toronto Police Think They Have "James Ray"

The Toronto police believe that in the person of W. H. Marshall, arrested in Montreal on the request of Inspector Kennedy, they may have the man who has swindled different Ontario banks to the etxent of $15,000, and who obtained money in Guelph, Stratford, Galt, Owen Sound, London, Chatham, Lindsay Fenelon Falls and other towns by the use of fraudulent cheques which were signed with the name James Ray.

It is claimed that Marshall recently interviewed a well known billiard man in Toronto, and offered to buy the billiard room, and gave a $1,000 cheque as a deposit.

Operated in Lindsay.

In connection with this case it might be mentioned that during the early part of the past month Chief of Police J. T. B. Chilton of Lindsay, received a communication, from the Toronto police to the effect that they were shadowing Marshall, who was suspected of being Ray, and that at the time he was believed to be negotiating with a Lindsay merchant for the purchase of the business.

On inquiry Chief Chilton learned that it was so, and that several letters had been exchanged in regard to the deal. He was instructed to arrest Marshall should he put in an appearance, but evidently the wily Ray discovered that he was being watched and consequently failed to put in an appearance.

Baptist Young Men's Concert

The delightful concert given last night under the auspices of the young men of the Murray Street Baptist Church, receives an added interest from the fact that the splendid programme presented was given exclusively by "home talent," which is not, in this case a mere facon de parler, but means real artistic, musical and elocutionary talent. The concert opened to a fairly large, and as the programme proceeded, a progressively enthusiastic, audience with a finely performed organ solo by the organist of the church, Mr. Geo. Schneider, who also similarly closed the programme. The vocalist of the evening was Miss Dorothy Allen, a young singer, of great merit in both voice quality and method. One cannot particularize, but among her three song groups, especial mention is due her production of Schubert's heroic "Erl King," which developed at once the melodious robustness of her voice, and her interpretative faculty. Her singing of this number was rewarded with a thoroughly well deserved recall. Her numbers were well chosen, by their contrasting character; and perhaps her most musically pleasing work was done in the more delicate selections, where the velvetty quality of her piano notes, conjoined to a rare perfection of method, yielded positive enjoyment of really artistic musical effect. The violiniste, Miss Mignon Telgmann, more than sustained the great local reputation she has won as an artist of splendid performance, as well as large promise. Throughout all her work there is evident in her, not only the giftad with real musical talent and soul, but the artistic spirit largely developed and a technical skill to give both effect. While her three numbers were splendidly played the best evidence of her skill as an executant was given in her performance of the Tartini Sonata, written in an age before Paganini developed the pyrotechnics of the violin "key-board," so to speak—when artistic success came more from soulful tone production and musical spirit. The delicate double stopping and dainty roundness of tone in this number were a genume delight. The enthusiastic encores to which Miss Telgmann had to respond were evidences of popular approval, of which the young artist might well be proud. The reader of the evening, Mrs. L. I. Pettit, gave two readings in splendid style. She is a real elocutionist. To charming presence and poise she adds a keen sense of dramatic values, with just intonation, clear enunciation and refined and elegant employment of the English tongue. Hearty applause and a recognized encore greeted her gracefully and artistically given readings. The accompaniments for Miss Allan and Miss Telgmann, by, respectively Mr. Allan and Miss Dean, were in keeping with the artistic achievements to which they were the effective background. Altogether the concert was a great success and the artists are to be congratulated as well as the Young men, whose success as impressarii, was evidenced by the hearty vote of thanks, moved by Mr. Rambo and Mr. Shiner, tendered to the contributing artists.

A Coincidence In Fatalities

LONDON, Nov. 12.—By a grim coincidence James Kerr, G.T.R. despatcher here, was killed by a train at Hyde Park only a few hours after the collision near Wanstead in which three trainmen met a fearful death.

Kerr was the despatcher who on December 26, 1902, sent the message which resulted in the wreck of the Pacific express at Wanstead, when 28 persons were killed. When it was too late he abandoned his frantic endeavours to raise the small village operator and called out wrecking trains, physicians, nurses and the auxiliary to await the inevitable collision.

When Kerr was making his frantic efforts to raise a station there was, as a matter of fact, an amateur operator in the office at Wanstead. He heard the call, but owing to the rapidity with which it was sent by the half-crazed despatcher failed to understand its purport, and left the station shortly before the crash occurred.

Kerr was directing a gang that was trying to repair the broken telegraph service Monday when, in the storm, he was run down by a passing train.

FIGHT WITH A DEER

310 Pound Deer Killed in Peterborough County After an Exciting Struggle

Lindsay Warder: The first hunters of the season arrived home on Saturday night, bringing with them from the northern wilds a legal compliment of deer. The party comprised thirten members, made up as follows: Messrs. Henry Jackson, who acted as Captain; Neil Gray, lieutenant; and John Turner, all of Lindsay; Mr. A. Tiers, Fenelon Falls; John Armstrong, James Armstrong, George Armstrong, William Armstrong, Herb. Armstrong, Robert Wilkinson, George Sheehey, Angus Cambell, Galway Township, and Ed. Brooks, of Toronto.

The party camped at Otter Lake, in the Township of Galway, Peterborough County, where Messrs. Jackson and Gray have pursued the game for the past fifteen years.

Killed a Buck.

Mr. Jackson said the deer were fairly plentiful this year and the party got their allotted number inside of the week spent in the wilds. The largest buck killed was shot by Mr. Henry Jackson, the animal weighing 310 pounds. The killing of this deer was accompanied by a slight disaster to the huntsmen who carries a souvenir of the chase in the form of a highly discoloured optic which he received from the front foot of the wounded deer when he rushed upon him with his hunting knife to draw the animal's blood. The buck made a mad smash at Mr. Jackson and showed fight in its last struggles, but the 235 pounds of bone and muscle which the hunter carried served him in this moment of peril, and he clung to the animal's antlers until through fatigue the deer gave up the fight and Mr. Jackson with his knife quickly despatched him.

MONTREAL DETERMINED ON HAVING PURE MILK

MONTREAL, Nov. 12.— Five hundred gallons of dirty milk were turned back in four days last week by the City Food Inspector's Department, making a condemnation record.

One dealer, who has been selling eighty gallons a day in the city, was ordered not to bring any more milk into Montreal.

The array of "tests" to be seen in the office of Dr. Hood, Chief Food Inspector, would shock most of the persons who have been using the milk condemned.

AUTO AND STREET CAR ALMOST DID IT

A Jackson Park car had a narrow escape from being slightly damaged, at the corner of Aylmer and Charlotte streets, last night. It was speeding west and as it crossed Aylmer Street Mr. T. Hooper's delivery auto, going north, cut across directly in front of it. The imminency of a collision was illustrated by the fact that the auto crossed the fender of the street car and bent it slightly. Several women in the car rushed out when it stopped, expecting to see the auto badly damaged, but it was not even scratched. The motorman, Mr. Patrick McGrath, almost broke the break in an effort to avoid an accident, but he could not stop the car in time to avoid the circus stant of running across the fender with both machines travelling at a fair rate.

A Peterborough Fuel and Cartage Company's horse put a fore foot through the fender of a car, at the same corner, a few days ago and it is generally felt that this corner is a dangerous one and should be approached carefully.

Have Eliminated Mid-way Stops On George St.

According to a new regulation, street cars are not expected to stop at the half way crossings, which were removed to make way for the street paving. One of these crossings is in front of Gainey Bros., between Hunter and Brock Streets, another was Fair's crossing, and a third is half way between Charlotte and Simcoe Streets. The annoying feature of this regulation was the quietness with which it was announced the the public. You were coming down town and rang for a mid-block stop, but the car continued on to the next corner. Then when you ask one of the pilots on the car what is trump, he replies, "Them's the new rules," and there you are. That is the method that has been employed since George Street line was re-opened. No one objects to the faster service resulting from fewer stops, but why not spread the tidings.

The street cars will stop for passengers at these points. That is worth remembering, for you may imagine there are no midway stops for any purpose.

These suggestions are offered with the best of good will. To them might be added the proposal to give more attention to the condition of the street at the corner of George and Charlotte Sreets. On the Charlotte Street side cinder has been dumped to shut out the mud that awaited passengers getting on and off, but the supply might have been larger and could have been placed advantageously on George Street where the Jackson Park car stops before proceeding to Central Park. The company should impress upon the City the necessity of keeping this corner and its crossings as clean as possible during the wet, muddy weather of the fall. It is anything but agreeable to wade through mud, especially in the heart of the City where it should not be found. Street car patrons should be given a little consideration in these matters.

of the bowels is an absolute necessity for good health. Unless the waste matter from the food which collects there is got rid of at least once a day, it decays and poisons the whole body, causing biliousness, indigestion and sick headaches. LOCAL MARKET WAS DISCUSSED

The Board of Health's discussion of the local market was subjected to somewhat caustic criticism at the market this morning.

"I wonder how the people managed to live before the City had a Sanitary Inspector," one man stated, and shortly afterwards told a story of a visit he made some years ago to a slaughter house, but did not get further than the door. He was met by a cloud of big flies that literally swooped toward him, and entrails on the floor under several carcases, is still pictured in his memory. Thus while criticising the Sanitary Inspector he gave a very strong reason for the activities of the Inspector in this direction.

Another man said the Inspector was apparently trying to get even with some butchers, who, realizing that he had no authority outside the City practically turned him away from their premises .It was admitted that the latest course of the Board of Health would probably have a salutary effect.

One of the members of the "senate" has applied for the job of washing out the market and if he is reasonable in his price he may be signed up.

PRESENTATION TO MR. REG. BROWN

Mr. Reg. Brown who, for the past few years has been identified with the Men's Clothing Department of the Cressman Company's Department Store, left yesterday for London, where he has accepted a splendid position. Mr. Brown was widely known and popular in this City and his departure will be regretted by a large number of friends. The Cressman Company, too, will feel the loss of his valuable services.

Mr. Brown left to take a position with the Doller Bros. of London, one of the leading merchant firms of that City. On Saturday night last he was presented with a diamond stick pin by the staff of the Cressman Co. The presentation was made by Mr. C. Wolff of the Men's Clothing Department, and Mr. Brown made a brief reply.

MR. HARRY MANLEY DOWN TOWN TO-DAY IN WHEEL CHAIR

Mr. Harry Manley, who was injured in the collapse of the Turnbull building was driven down town this afternoon in a wheel chair by his daughter. It will be remembered that both his legs were broken, one of them in two places. Mr. Manley was looking quite well in spite of his long confinement, and it is expected that he will be able to remove the plaster cast from the right leg in a short time. The left leg will be encased for a longer period because of the double break, requiring a great period to knit. This was the second time Mr. Manley has been down town since the accident, and in his reclining chair he was greeted by many of his old friends, who were glad to see him out again. They expressed the hope that he would soon be able to relinquish the chair.

Cause of Eczema

After years of debate medical authorities are now agreed that eczema and other skin diseases are not seated in the blood, but are caused by myriads of microscopic germs, gnawing the flesh just below the epidermis. The patient is perfectly healthy, it is only the skin that is diseased.

Hence, scientists are now agreed that you must cure the skin through the skin. The medicine must be in liquid form in order to penetrate properly, and we can say with confidence that we have the true remedy in our store—D.D.D. Prescription, made by the D.D.D. Laboratories of Toronto.

If your trouble is eczema, psoriasis, salt rheum, dandruff, tetter, pimples, itch,—any form of skin or scalp disease—any form whatever, ask us more about this D.D.D. and also about D.D.D. Soap, the great skin cleanser.

I.O.O.F. LEAVES MINNESOTA

Notice of Withdrawal Came From Toronto Head.

ST. PAUL, MINN., Nov. 12.— The Independent Order of Foresters yesterday withdrew from Minnesota and returned its license to J. A. O. Preus, State Insurance Commissioner. Notice of withdrawal came from E. G. Stevenson of Toronto, Supreme Chief Ranger of the order. There were 6,267 members of the society in Minnesota.

MINISTERIAL ASSOCIATION

On Monday afternoon the Ministerial Association of this city met in the Y.M.C.A. parlours and a number of matters were discussed.

The Association heard with pleasure that the matter of a proposed transfer of license from East City, to a shop opposite the Oriental Hotel had not been granted by the Board of License Commissioners.

It would meet with the approval of the Association if the Chief of Police could in some way bring to the attention of the parents of the city, that a curfew law was in existence; and that without making public the names of the young offenders, he would let the public know that he was in active sympathy with the law and giving it the enforcement it demanded. They commended him for the quiet way he had been working. A committee was appointed to report on the matter to the next meeting of the Association.

It was agreed to give the inmates of the Protestant Home a service every Sunday that could possibly be arranged, to the convenience of the local ministers.

In the New Year the citizens of Peterborough will be given a chance to attend a meeting in the interest of the Bible Society.

A Tuberculosis Sunday will be held by the Peterborough Health Association, on Sunday, November 23. It was agreed that as many pulpits as possible would be turned over to them on this date.

A very interesting discussion followed the presenting of the introduction to Euchen's Main Currents of Modern Thought. It will be remembered that Euchen is one of the most prominent and most widely read exponents of the idealists in the realm of Philosophy. And every where he places emphasis upon an active Christianity. He believes that man's best life can only be lived when it is giving the spiritual of his nature the opportunity to develop. He believes that every man has a spiritual nature and that it must have a chance to live or man loses his chief end in existence. There must be a meaning to the life processes operating in man. Original, personally experienced, ultimate facts were distinguished from facts traditionally accepted. It is possible to proceed from appearance to fact, from mere data to fundamental truth, and to recognize inner necessities and persistent tendencies in the movement of History and wrest the meaning from the whole. There is a permanent truth. Is our present day laying hold of it? He gives as the chief aim of his book: "To discover leading tendencies, simple fundamental lines of development amidst the multiplicity and apparent confusion of the various movements affecting man's spiritual life andd evelopment." Man could not participate in the spiritual life without continual and active effort.

RETURNED FROM ABROAD

Mr. and Mrs. E. B. Fowler have returned from a six-week visit to the Old Country, where Mr. Fowler went on business. They spent part of the time in touring England and Scotland, where Mr. Fowler visited relatives—in Jedburg and Edinborough. They had a very pleasant journey and found both countries visited full of interest. In the voyage over Mr. and Mrs. Fowler's ship, the Canada, of the White Star line, was subject to part of the great storm in which the Volturno went down. The Canada, however, took what is known as the "North Channel," and got only the aftermath of the storm and was at no time in wireless communication with the Volturno. The return voyage was made on the Caronia of the Cunard line, which had six days of the worst storm on record.

Mr. Fowler's journey was very satisfactory from a business point of view. He has formed a personal business connection with R. Hood Haggie & Son, Limited, of Newcastle-on-Tyne, and also with Thomas Bonar & Co., Dundee. Both firms, the former having been established in 1789, are manufacturers of cordage, jute and wire ropes, also bags and Hessian cloths. The first mentioned firm have still in daily use the original "ropewalk" in which was "laid" the cordage used to rig Lord Nelson's "Victory," and Mr. Fowler saw in operation and still doing first-class work, a machine that was installed a hundred years ago. Mr. Fowler will shortly sever his connection with the International Harvester Company, and with Mr. Torrance Jack, of Toronto, will act as sole representatives of the above firms in Canada, with headquarters, for the present, in Peterborough.

Three Days' Sale In Full Swing

The three-days' sale conducted in the store at the corner of George and Brock Streets by the ladies of the Murray Street Church is now in full swing. The quarters are hardly large enough to accommodate the large crowds that are anxious to make purchases, and indications are that the result will exceed all anticipations.

Yesterday the receipts from sales were $100, and the large number of articles being sold to-day would indicate that the receipts for the second day of the sale will be as gratifying as those of yesterday.

In the store, which was formerly occupied by E. V. Warne, a large variety of desirable articles are displayed. Cakes, candies, fancy articles of clothing, useful articles for the home, were all eagerly taken by the purchasers.

The sale will continue all day to-[illegible] and a great depletion of [illegible] looked for before to-morrow. The beautiful articles offered [illegible]onable prices speaks well for the business side of the venture.

Rev. Mr. Yule Is Honoured

The many friends here of Rev. Mr. Yule, formerly assistant pastor of St. Paul's Church, will be interested in learning that he has been honoured by the congregation of the Oshawa Presbyterian Church, receiving from them a gown and Bible, accompanied by an eulogistic address. Mr. Yule was stationed in Peterborough some six years ago as assistant to the Rev. Dr. Torrance.

Fence Was Down Early In Evening

Witnesses For Defence in Hallowe'en Case

In Police Court this morning Percy Sheehan and Murty, the two young fellows who were arersted about 9.30 o'clock on Hallowe'en night for tearing down J. D. Tully's fence on McDonnel Street, came before Magistrate Rumble.

Mr. J. Corkery, counsel for the defendants, put three witnesses, W. Hickey, H. Flowers and W. Flowers in the witness box. The former two swore that the fence in question was torn down and lying on the sidewalk before eight oclock.

W. Flowers said he passed the fence before 7.30 o'clock. Just as he passed it he met a bunch of fellows, and he had not gone very far when he heard a crash. This might have meant that Tully's fence was being torn down by them.

The Magistrate said he was satisfied the fence was down before eight o'clock, but he reserved judgment.

A local man pleaded guilty to being drunk while on the blacklist and was fined $10. While another man, who was charged with supplying the liquor, pleaded guilty and was fined $25 and costs, $28.75 in all.

RADFORD, VA., MAN

Rundown and Nervous, Restored to Health by Vinol.

A. D. Robinson, Radford, Va., says: "I was all run down in he lth,h ad no appetite and was so nervous I could not sleep at night. Vinol was recommended to me and after using one bottle I noticed an improvement. Continuing its use I was completely restored to health. The nervousness is all gone, I can get a good night's sleep and have a hearty appetite. I can recommend Vinol to anyone who suffers as I did."

Vinol is the greatest body builder and strength creator we know of. The curative elements of the cod's liver, aided by the blood-making strengthening properties of tonic iron contained in Vinol, restore the lacking ingredients to the blood, and the result is health, strength and vigour.

If you need building up try a bottle of Vinol with the understanding that your money will be returned if it does not help you. McDermid & Jury, druggists, corner George and Charlotte Streets also ;Payne's drug store, corner George and Simcoe Streets.

TRANSFORMER ROOM FOR HYDRO SYSTEM

Temporary quarters for the Hydro-Electric transformers have been secured from Mr. Rollie Wilson, on George Street. A small, unused room has been offered to the City at a rental of $75 for six months and at the Power Committee meeting last night it was moved by Mayor Bradburn, seconded by Ald. Duncan, that this offer be accepted.

sioners undertake the work, they agreed to do so and Mr. Matthews suggested that $1400 would be an acceptable remuneration, $700 being for the Waterworks Department, and $700 for the duties connected with Light and Power matters.

Mayor Bradburn and several of the aldermen stated that this was a very fair offer, and a motion was passed stipulating this sum for the year, beginning January 1, 1914.

Mayor Bradburn said that new work would begin immediately and would require much attention at the outset, and the new salaries, if such they may be termed, should begin now.

Mr. Matthews replied that the first of January was satisfactory and the matter was not pressed.

Will Begin at Once.

It was decided that the matter of preparing office equipment should be taken up immediately and in order to consolidate the civic departments the store now occupied by Mr. D. Drummond in the City building was favoured. An office staff will be advertised for, a conference will be held with Hydro officials for advice on certain steps contemplated, and the Commissioners will immediately undertake the details of preparing for the beginning of the civic operation of the Hydro-Electric system in Peterborough.

FAMOUS OUTSIDE RIGHT IS ON OPEN TRANSFER LIST

Reason to Believe That Newcastle Will Ultimately Obtain Signature of John Rutherford---Good Man Wanted by Aston Villa--Hampton Possesses Genius.

Newcastle United have not yet resigned John Rutherford, their international outside right, nor has any other club, though the famous Tyneside is on the open transfer list. Middlesborough, Manchester City and Chelsea, in turn, have all made interesting inquiries at St. James' Park and though there is a hint that for domestic reasons Rutherford is anxious to seek a less vigorous climate than that of the northeast, there is still reason to believe that Newcastle will ultimately obtain his signature. In the meantime, with the ex-Glossop winger, Edward Cooper, rather out of form, and Scott Duncan comfortably settled in Glasgow, Newcastle have been troubled with the filling of the outside right position.

Blades Powers.

The number of people who paid for admission at Bramall Lane on the 25th of October, on the occasion of the meeting of the Sheffield rivals, was 39,931, making about 42,000 with members, so the record for an attendance at a football match in Sheffield was not broken. The Wednesday v. Manchester United match, November 30th, 1907, still figures at the highest, for 43,143 spectators paid on that day. At the Sheffield United v. Newcastle United match the number paying for admission was 41,123. But more money was taken on the 25th than at any previous match at the Lane where a six-penny gate has been charged, the receipts being £1,192 5s. 3d. The Sheffield clubs have now met 71 times, and the Wednesday have won 28 games and United 22, 21 engagements having been drawn.

A Great Player.

Mr. J. Cowan, the manager of the Queen's Park Rangers' team, has severed his connection with the West London team. Negotiations with a prominent player in the north are in progress, and it is likely that the appointment will be filled in the course of a few days. The Mr. Cowan referred to is no other than James Cowan, the famous Renton-Aston Villa and Scotch international half back.

Good Man Wanted.

Aston Villa management realize that a partner for Charlie Wallace must be found very speedily. They mean to only deal with the best men, however, and take a lot of pleasing. Leonard, the Derby County centre, is the latest man to come under their notice, and the Villa are wondering whether he would prove a success at inside right. Mr. Rinder has not altogether given up the idea of getting Sid. Bowser, the ex-Throstle and Handsworth lad, back from Belfast. Personally, I shall be surprised if Sid. is not back in Birmingham by Christmas. Bowser would make a great partner for Wallace.

An Ex-Celt.

John Mitchell, the ex-Celtic halfback, who was transferred to Cowdenbeath, just after the opening of the present season, has struck his very best form with the Fifeshire Second League Club. The result is that a Yorkshire First Division team are now anxious to secure his services. It is doubtful, however, if Cowdenbeath will part, and they have all the say in the matter, although Celts would participate in the benefit money.

Now that Aston Villa are once more being led by their incomparable little centreforward, Harry Hampton, who during the first few months of the British football season was resting, owing to a litle misunderstanding with Thomson, of Sunderland, in last April's Cup final at the Crystal Palace, it can safely be assumed that the trophy-holders are due for better luck than what they have so far experienced. That Aston can hardly get along without Hampton has been pretty conclusively proved by the poor showing the club made when he was away. With Harry missing from the Villa line-up the side has been nothing better than moderate, with never a dim suggestion of Aston magic which made them last year, on their day, an irresistible and a great team. It is Hampton who matters along the Villa forwards, in the same sense that it is he who stamps the line with a pronounced personality.

Hampton Possesses Genius.

Always he has stood out of the ruck a a forward with more than a spark of genius about his play, spectacular without being flashy, amazingly orthodox without being unsound. To-day he is surely one of the few players who focus attention upon themselves by the glamour of their individuality. For Hampton is always watched, whether he be playing badly or well. There is something in him which prevents him ever becoming negligent, always he is right in the very centre of the fothall picture, a figure of concentrated earnestness, with an eager zest in every move of the play. For Harry enjoys his football immensely, and perhaps that is the reason, above all else, why he gives enjoyment to others. The keynote of Hampton's play is its utter fearlessness. There are many risks run in football as played by the Villa's star centre forward, but Hampton takes them with the most supreme nonchalance.

A CALL TO JUNIOR HOCKEY PLAYERS OF CITY

The players who intend to try for the Junior O.H.A. team this winter are asked to call at the Examiner office to-night or to-morow night between 7.30 and 8.15 o'clock. Last year's players are not required, as the intention is only to get a line on the new material. Any boy who is an amateur, who will be under twenty years of age on January 1st of next year, and who has lived in Peterborough continuously since August 1, is eligible to play, and is asked to leave his name with F. D. Craig at the Examiner office to-night or to-morrow night.

A Silver Cup For Local Man

As an appreciation of his gameness in finishing the famous Herald race on Thanksgiving day the Herald Printing Company yesterday expressed to G. Robinson of Peterborough a beautiful silver cup, emblematic of fourth prize in the classic event. Although it was not the custom of the promoters of the race to offer more than three prizes, the fact that Robinson made such a game showing against heavy odds prompted the Herald to include him in the list of winners.—Hamilton Herald.

TORONTOS WON THIS GAME

RUGBY

Hamilton Herald: Pete Campbell, quarter-back of the Toronto University team, deserves credit for his stand taken at the banquet following the Varsity-Queen's game when, in reply to some remarks made by Coach Sliter of the Presbyterians, he said he had always found the Big Four and O.R.F.U. footballers clean players, and that 'Varsity would certainly meet the other union winners if they were fortunate enough to get the Inter-Collegiate honours. Sliter was advising the teams not to play the "so-called rough necks" of the other two unions, when Campbell came to their defence. Probably Sliter has never seen any of the other senior football teams in Canada in action, and if he hasn't we would invite him to Hamilton to see the Tigers play. A cleaner fourteen than that presenting the famous yellow and black has never played football in Canada. 'Varsity knows that, and Peter Cmbell did right when he informed Sliter of it.

Annual Meeting Of Golf Club

The annual meeting of the shareholders of the Peterborough Golf and Country Club, will be held on Saturday the 15th of November, at 7:30 p.m., at the Bank of Montreal Chambers, for the purpose of receiving reports of committees, election of directors, and considering the recommendation of the directors to declare a dividend.

Foresters Will Contest Decision

TORONTO, Nov. 12.—Members of the I. O. F. who joined prior to '99 are determined to contest the decision of the Supreme Council which recently placed an increased rate upon them. At an indignation meting held in Broadway Hall fifty of these members appointed a committee to gather funds for the beginning of the fight. A Government investigation into the state of affairs is what they are now asking.

The Chairman of the meeting, M. L. M. Cathers, created something of a sensation when he announced that the Supreme Chief Ranger had offered to give each member of the committee that waited upon him a hundred dollars for each thousand dollar policy. Others present corroborated this declaration, and when pressed by a representative of the Supreme Court to give the name of the man who made such an offer, Mr. Cathers said it was Mr. Stevenson.

INCINERATOR WILL BE COMPLETE SOON

The brick work at the incinerating plant is completed and the entire work should be finished next week. Ald. Duncan stated to the Examiner that the Property Committee would have to meet soon to appoint a caretaker for the plant.

SIX BEAUX

"Annie," said Miss Susie Mably through the telephone, "can you come over to the house about 2 o'clock?"

"Why, I was going out this afternoon."

"Then you'll have to give it up. I must see and talk with you."

"Anything happened?"

"Something dreadful, and I don't know what to do about it."

"Then I'll come and be glad to. Don't commit suicide before I get there."

Miss Susie and Miss Annie were chums, and were therefore at odds most of the time. This happened to be one of the times, when they thought the world of each other.

"Something dreadful, eh?" mused Miss Annie as she turned from the telephone. "Now, isn't that nice! I was just wishing that something dreadful would happen to somebody. I am surely a lucky girl."

"Annie will know what should be done and she will advise me," sighed Miss Susie as she hung up the receiver. "If I went to mother I she'd call me a little idiot. If something isn't done—! But something shall be done!"

Something was done. She broke a water pitcher, cuffed her brother's ears, telephoned an order to the grocery for her mother, and was gently weeping when Miss Annie arrived.

They fell into each other's arms. Their tears mingled. They wiped their eyes on the same handkerchief.

"Annie Morton," said Miss Susie at last, when they had broken away, 'you have got to give me advice or I shall die!"

"You know I will advise you"

"You know Stephen Long?"

"Yes, I know."

"We are the same as engaged. He talks about what and where we will live after marriage."

"Well?"

"Well, I was over to see Mrs. Sibly a few days ago, and after we had talked of other things she said to me: me, says she:

"'Susie, Stephen Long is a fine young man.'

"'I think so.'

"But before you marry him find out if he truly loves you. He may say he does, but not one young man in 10 knows his own mind.'

"Mrs. Sibly must have been jilted three or four times when she was a girl to know so much. I shouldn't pay the least attention to what she says."

"But—but—"

"Susie Mably, I am most 19 years old, am I not?" was softly asked.

"Y-yes."

"Haven't I had six different beaux?"

"I—I guess so."

"And don't you think I know about young men's minds?"

"You ought to."

"Well, there you are. You don't want to pay attention to a young man's words altogether. Every young man will swear he loves you beyond anything on earth. You don't want to believe but half of it. The other half should be in his attitude!"

"How attitude?" was asked.

"Does he send bouquets and candy? Does he want to hold your hand? Does he lean toward you when you walk? If a fellow winks at you does your fellow resent it? What is Stephen's attitude?"

"Why, he just goes along."

"Well, we must have a change. To-morrow you will get a box of candy, and you must pretend to Stephen that a nice fellow sent it. Friday evening you must come to Amusement Hall with him and dance with three or four fellows. We will watch Stephen's attitude. If he is made jealous he surely intends to marry you. If he doesn't show it then—"

"O' my soul!"

"Then you can commit suicide, and I will hold your head while you are doing it, and I'll write some poetry for you to leave behind and have published in the papers."

A box of candy came next day. In lead pencil, on the cover thereof, were the initials, "J. M." In the evening Stephen Long dropped in, as was his custom. He saw the box, looked at the initials, and without a word ate a good half of the candy.

Susie was in tears. Not even a sign of curiosity, not to mention jealousy! Why didn't Stephen ask who "J. M." was. But Stephen munched the candy and ignored "J. M."

"Stephen, I want to go to Amusement Hall Friday night," said Susie, shooting her second arrow.

"All right, sis."

Friday night came and the dance came. Also the giggles-giggles and the flirtations! Stephen got one single waltz with Susie. He waltzed with others, however, and bought ice cream for others, and at last Susie had to sit down with her tears. To his inquiries as to what was the matter she exclaimed:

"If you cared for me you'd knock the heads off some of these fellows!"

"O, but I've got a better thing," he smiled.

"What—what is it?"

He beckoned to an alderman who came forward and held up a hand for the music to stop and the dancing to cease. Then he took Susie's hand and walked her out and they were married.

"Just letting you have your fling a little before the knot was tied," he smilingly explained to his bride.

Miss Annie Morton stood with open mouth for a minute, and then gasped out:

"Six different beaux have I had, and yet I don't know a clam from a summer squash!"

TRAGEDIES INCREASE

H. Wright of Toronto was in command, with twenty-three men, most of the latter being from Midland and other Georgian Bay ports.

GODERICH, Nov. 12.—This morning a search commenced along the shore, here and an oar and life boat rudder, both marked "James Carruthers" were soon picked up. The tug "Horton" has been sent out and wreckage is found strewn along the shores south of this harbour. The "Carruthers" was owned by the St. Lawrence and Chicago Navigation Co., and was launched at Collingwood at the opening of this season. She was the largest Canadian freighter on the lakes and had a crew of twenty-two men. She left Fort William on the 8th, with the steamer Wexford, and it is believed that both went down together in the big storm.

A LAST MESSAGE.

BUFFALO Nov. 12.—"Good-bye Nellie, this ship is breaking up fast—William." These words, hastily scribbled on a piece of wood, were found floating in the harbour here today. It is thought they were written by Mate William Jensen, of the light ship which went down in Lake Erie on Sunday or Monday. His sister's name is Nellie.

SHILOH CURES COUGHS & COLDS

A Warning To The Parents Of This City

Henceforth Those Who Allow Children to Break the Laws Will Be Summoned to Police Court

MORE DRASTIC MEASURES

To newspaper representatives this afternoon Chief Thompson announced that from this date stringent measures were going to be employed by him to have the curfew law enforced. In the past the children who have been found out after 9 o'clock, loitering around corners and public places, have been brought to his office with their parents, to whom the Chief explained the law. But this has not had the desired effect of impressing on the parents that the law was going to be, and was being, enforced. "Apparently you must reduce the store of money in the pockets of the parents," said the Chief, "before they can be made to realise that the law is really being enforced."

Parents should remember that they are culpable in the eyes of the law if they allow their boys, under ten years of age, or girls under sixteen years of age, to ply any street trade (that includes the selling of newspapers on the street), or if they allow their children to loiter or remain, or be in a public place after 9 o'clock, in the evening, unaccompanied by parent or guardian, or some adult given their charge by the parents or guardians.

The parents who allow their children out after 9 o'clock in contravention to this law, can be fined $1 for the first offence, $2 for the second offence, and $5 for each subsequent offence.

Chief Thompson has decided that his present method of dealing with such cases is not drastic enough, and after this the parents of children found out after 9 o'clock, will be summoned to appear in Juvenile Police Court and be fined the above amounts. This is a warning which the Chief hopes the parents will heed, as henceforth every case reported will result in Police Court proceedings.

THIRTY-EIGHT BODIES HAVE BEEN PICKED UP NEAR GODERICH

Big Canadian Freight Liner Largest on Lake is Now Almost Certain to Have Been Lost---Three Bodies Tied to Life Rafts Are Washed Ashore---Bodies Line the Beach.

GODERICH, Nov. 13.—All day parties have been walking the shor to Bayfield, and from Bayfield on, looking for bodies off the different boats wrecked between here and Sarnia, and as a result thirty-eight bodies have been found south of Black's Point, a place six miles south of here. Three of those are supposed to be Goderich boys, but as ye. these have not been identified. Relatives left here yesterday afternoon to identify them.

While it has not been absolutely established that the James Carruthers, the largest freighter on the lakes, foundered in the great storm, the belief here last night is that there is practically no reason to hope that the giant vessel, heavily laden with a cargo of grain, weathered the gale which proved so disastrous to many other freighters on the great lakes. The discovery yesterday morning of an oar, life belts and life boat rudder on the shore marked "James Carruthers," seemed to indicate that the freighter had succumbed to the violence of the waves, and as no word has been received since, it is regarded as most improbable that Captain Wright of Toronto and his crew of 25 men still survive.

The James Carruthers left Fort William on Nov. 6 in company with the Wexford, which is known to have been lost with all on board.

As a result of a careful search along the shore for miles, part of an oak-finished cabin, pieces of oak chairs, part of a pilot house and other pieces of the upper works of a large steamer were found. It is believed that they belonged to the big freighter.

The James Carruthers was launched at Collingwood on May 22 last and was reputed to be the largest boat on the great lakes, as well as one of the most up-to-date. She was 530 feet long. She had a gross carrying capacity of 15,000 tons on a 19-foot draft. She was built of steel on the arch and frame web system, leaving the holds unobstructed. She has a carrying capacity of 375 carloads or 600,000 bushels of wheat.

In the afternoon three bodies tied to a life-raft came ashore at Naftel's

FIRST MATE LEDIARD.
Believed to have been lost on the "James Carruthers."

Point, five miles down the shore. Coroner Hunter was immediately notified, and upon examining the clothes they were found to be Thomas Stone an Indian from the reserve at Sarnia; George L. Smith and John Owen. The papers and their union cards were so badly damaged by water that it was impossible to get any further information from them. The raft was from the steamer McGean, likely owned by Hutchinson & Co. of Cleveland, bound up the lakes light.

A life raft was found fully equipped, bearing the name Argus. It is possible that this raft was washed away, but it was rigged as though it had been used, and it looked as though the bodies had been washed away.

The tug Logie from Saugeen was in port yesterday afternoon and reported passing six large hatches and much other wreckage.

The report that the spars of the Wexford were seen at Black's Point is unfounded. The Wexford was off this port on Sunday night about two o'clock, as she could be heard blowing, and her distress lights were plainly seen.

Among the marine men it is surmised that she might have anchored off here to wait daylight, and the anchors pulling her bow so much that she foundered. However, this will never be known. However, it is thought that she is not far from here.

The fact that the Kaministiquia escaped disaster is a miracle, as she left here light Sunday morning for the Soo, but in the afternoon was forced to turn back and run for Sarnia, where she reported Monday afternoon. The tug Horton went out twice to search, but it was too rough to get anywhere near the shore and were forced to return.

Hunters Still Missing.

DETROIT, Nov. 13.—No more wrecks or vessels in distress were reported yesterday from points on Lake St. Clair and along the Detroit river. A number of hunters, believed to have been on these waters in open boats, when the blizzard swept Michigan Sunday, are still missing.

TAYLOR MUST HANG.

Judge Gives Maximum Sentence To Boy's Slayer.

BRANTFORD, Nov. 13. — James Taylor was sentenced last night to be hanged Friday, Jan. 23, for the murder of 12-year-old Charlie Dawson. The jury was out twenty minutes before it reached a unanimous verdict.

In sentencing the prisoner, Justice Kelly displayed no little emotion. It was the most dastardly crime, his lordship said, he had ever met with in all his experience at both bench and bar. The prisoner took the sentence stolidly.

The trial lasted all day. A. M. Harley, junior member of the bar in Brantford, was called upon by the judge to defend Taylor. At the last minute a plea of intoxication was entered, when the prisoner, the only witness for the defence, was put into the box. Taylor said he was drunk when he hacked and carved the boy to death.

The confession made by Taylor to the police a few hours after he was arrested was used against him in the trial. Coroner Ashton, Constables Kerr and Chapman and others told of Taylor leading them to the knife with which the deed had been committed.

Taylor testified yesterday that he threw the knife away because it had a broken handle. He told various stories on the witness stand, all of which conflicted with his previous confession.

A guard was immediately placed over the condemned man, and he will be closely watched. It is unlikely that an appeal will be entered.

When left to itself, eczema, as a rule, runs on indefinitely. Even with careful treatment it is often obstinate in resisting curative measures.

The cause is often difficult to find, but you can readily obtain relief from the dreadful itching by the application of Dr. Chase's Ointment. This treatment cleanses the sores and soon sets up a process of healing which leads to complete cure.

Patient and persistent treatment is necessary in severe cases, but as you can readily see the improvement from day to day as Dr. Chase's Ointment is applied you will be encouraged to keep on until you have driven out the disease and restored natural, healthy skin.

Attention to the genral health is advisable in order that the cure may be lasting, but you can depend on Dr. Chase's Ointment to stop the itching and heal the skin. So well does it accomplish this that many cures it brings about are almost like miracles. Put it to the test and you will be surprised and delighted with the results.

Xmas isn't so very far away and it takes quite a little while to reach your friends in the Old Country any distance away.

TWO HUNDRED LOST

Death Toll in Great Lakes Storm Grows Steadily

TWENTY SHIPS DESTROYED

TORONTO, Nov. 13.—With the slow passing of the weary hours comes additional evidence of the awfulness of the storm which lashed Lake Huron into a three-days' fury, and carried with it a terrible toll of life and wrecked vessels.

The extent of the loss probably will not be known for days, but every hour piles up fresh debris on the shores and brings to light the fact that one of the worst disasters of the Great Lakes has occurred.

Probably 200 souls perished in the turbulent waves. Twenty boats or more went to destruction. A property loss of three and a half million dollars was caused. Marine circles received a great shock yesterday when the finding of wreckage indicated the loss of the giant steamer James Carruthers.

Along with the tales of bereavement and suffering last night came the story from Port Franks that ghouls are robbing the bodies of victims, and that morbid thieves are carrying away the wreckage, making identification more difficult. The matter will be reported to the Attorney-General.

The probable victims are as follows:—

Crew of s.s. James Carruthers	25
Crew of steamer Wexford	24
Crew of steamer Leafield	18
Crew of steamer Regina	28
Crew of steamer Angus	25
Crew of steamer C. S. Price	2-
Crew of Bridgeport	30
Crew of tug Wiarton	6
Crew of U. S. Lightship	6
Crew of steam barge Butters	20
Officers and sailors rescued	219

The list of disasters certified and still in doubt is as follows:

Unknown vessel upset off Port Huron, with loss of entire crew. Identity of steamer still in doubt, but may be the steamer Regina, the bodies of ten of whose crew were washed up along the Canadian shore, or the steamer Wexford, not reported since she passed the Soo last Saturday. Four bodies with life-preservers bearing her name were washed up at St. Joseph, Ont.

Unknown lumber carrier, seen half sunk and abandoned in Lake Huron.

Charles S. Price, steamer, seven bodies washed up near Goderich, Ont. Vessel believed to have foundered.

Two unknown vessels ashore at Sand Island.

James Carruthers, biggest Canadian freighter; wreckage washed ashore near Goderich.

Barge Plymouth, reported lost with seven men of Menominee.

Steamer Leafield, reported Monday on Angus Island in bad condition. Tugs cannot find her, and it is feared she has slid out and sunk.

Lightship No. 82, believed lost with crew of six off Point Abino, Lake Erie.

Steam barge Butters, believed lost with crew of twenty within 150 miles of Fort William.

Steamer Nottingham, on Parisian Island, near Whitefish Bay. Her bottom torn out. Three of the crew lost.

Steamer L. C. Waldo, owned in Detroit; broken in two on Gull Rock. Crew of 24 saved.

Barge Halsted, wrecked off Green Bay, Wis. Crew of eight saved.

Steamer Howard M. Hanna, Jr., breaking up at Point Aux Barques. Crew of 23 rescued after great hardships.

Steamer Turret Chief, broken up six miles east of Copper Harbor. Crew of 17 rescued.

Other ships in distress are:—

Steamer Northern Queen, ashore near Port Franks; may be saved. Crew safe.

Steamer Acadian, on reef in Thunder Bay, but may be saved. Crew safe.

Steamer J. M. Jenks, at first reported to be the vessel sunk above Port Huron, aground in Georgian Bay, according to a message from the captain.

Steamer Hutchinson, on beach above the Soo. Bottom badly torn.

Steamer Huronic, which was ashore near the Soo, released.

Steamer G. J. Grammer, ashore on beach near Lorain, Ohio.

Reported lost, but safe:—

Steamer J. E. Davidson, reported sunk off Groscap Point, passed down Detroit river yesterday.

Produce Freighter Hazel, reported lost with eleven men; tied up at Port Huron.

Writes Farewell on Wood.

BUFFALO, N.Y., Nov. 13.—A message from the missing lightship No. 82 was found by searchers among the wreckage of the craft on the south shore of Lake Erie yesterday. The message was written on a piece of wood and read:

"Good-bye, Nellie. Ship is breaking up fast. (Signed) Williams."

It is believed the message was written by Captain H. M. Williams of Manistee, Mich., who was in command of the ship. No bodies have been recovered.

J. S. CARTWRIGHT DEAD.

Cousin of the Late Sir Richard Was 72 Years Old.

TORONTO, Nov. 13. — James Strachan Cartwright, K.C., one of the strongest men in public service in Ontario, a brilliant student at Oxford, twice Liberal candidate in Frontenac for the Commons in the 70's, and of late years master-in-chambers at Osgoode Hall, died at his residence, 86 Woodlawn east, yesterday morning in his 74th year, after a short illness.

Mr. Cartwright was born in Kingston, his father being the late John Solomon Cartwright, Q.C., M.P.P. He was educated at Rugby, England, where he was an exhibitioner, and at Balliol College, Oxford. He first practiced law with Sir John A. Macdonald in Kingston.

Mr. Cartwright was a cousin of the late Sir Richard Cartwright and a brother of John H. Cartwright, the present Deputy Attorney-General of Ontario. There are two sisters, Mrs. Straubenzie of Kingston, and Mrs. Bedford Jones, widow of the late Archdeacon Jones of Brockville.

Was Lost In the Bush.

OTTAWA, Nov. 13.—Harry Watts, son of J. W. H. Watts, R.C.A., of this city, reached home yesterday after a thrilling experience in the woods north of Madawaska river, where he was lost in the dense wilderness from Friday until Sunday last, with no food save a few pieces of candy and two biscuits. He was suffering badly from exposure.

At one time on Saturday he was within half a mile of camp and failed to hear the whistles at the Booth mill, which were kept blowing at intervals to attract his attention.

8 BOXES CURED PSORIASIS

Mrs. Nettie Massey, Comeeon, Ont., writes: "Three doctors described my trouble as psoriasis and one said I could never be cured. The disease spread all over me, even on my face and head, and the itching and burning was hard to bear. I used eight boxes of Dr. Chase's Ointment and am entirely cured—not a sore to be seen. I can hardly praise this Ointment enough."

It is the Eyes that make a healthy person feel old, nothing else.

If you wear distant glasses and lower your eyes to read, the page is blurred. If you are wearing reading glasses and raise the eyes to look around, everything is blurred.

You meet a friend who tells you he is wearing bifocal glasses at that moment but to all appearance they are plain glasses. He reads through the reading part and sees his car two blocks through the distant part with equal facility. He is wearing Fowler's Kryptok Invisible Bifocal Glasses.

"That Affair Next Door"

By ANNA KATHARINE GREEN

But this intimation did not seem to bring comfort with it. Mr. Van Burnam walked away, white and sick, for which display of emotion there was certainly some cause, and rejoining his father tried to carry off the moment with the aplomb of a man of the world.

But that father's eye was fixed too steadily upon him; he faltered as he sat down, and finally spoke up, with feverish energy:

"If it is she, so help me, God, her death is a mystery to me! We have quarrelled more than once lately, and I have sometimes lost my patience with her, but she had no reason to wish for death, and I am ready to swear in defiance of those hands, which are certainly like hers, and the nameless something which Franklin calls a likeness, that it is a stranger who lies there, and that her death in our house is a coincidence."

"Well, well, we will wait," was the detective's soothing reply. 'Sit down in the room opposite there, and give me your orders for supper, and I will see that a good meal is served you."

The three gentlemen, seeing no way of refusing, followed the discreet official who preceded them, and the door of the doctor's room closed upon him and the inquiries he was about to make.

VI.
New Facts.

Mr. Van Burnam and his sons had gone through the formality of a supper and were conversing in the haphazard way natural to men filled with a subject they dare not discuss, when the door opened and Mr. Gryce came in.

Advancing very calmly, he addressed himself to the father:

"I am sorry," said he, "to be obliged to inform you that this affair is much more serious than we anticipated. This young woman was dead before the shelves laden with bric-a-brac fell upon her. It is a case of murder; obviously so, or I should not presume to forestall the Coroner's jury in their verdict."

Murder! it is a word to shake the stoutest heart!

The older gentleman reeled as he half rose, and Franklin, his son, betrayed in his own way an almost equal amount of emotion. But Howard, shrugging his shoulders as if relieved of an immense weight, looked about with a cheerful air, and briskly cried:

"Then it is not the body of my wife you have there. No one would murder Louise. I shall go away and prove the truth of my words by hunting her up at once."

The detective opened the door, beckoned in the doctor, who whispered two or three words into Howard's ear.

They failed to awake the emotion he evidently expected. Howard looked surprised, but answered without any change of voice:

"Yes, Louise had such a star; and if it is true that this woman is similarly marked, then it is a mere coincidence. Nothing will convince me that my wife has been the victim of murder."

"Had you not better take a look at the scar just mentioned?"

"No. I am so sure of what I say that I will not even consider the possibility of being mistaken. I have examined the clothing on this body you have shown me, and not one article of it came from my wife's wardrobe; nor would my wife go, as you have informed me this woman did, into a dark house at night with any other man than her husband."

"And so you absolutely refuse to acknowledge her."

"Most certainly."

The detective paused, glanced at the troubled faces of the other two gentlemen, faces that had not perceptibly altered during these declarations, and suggestively remarked:

"You have not asked by what means she was killed."

"And I don't care," shouted Howard.

"It was by very peculiar means, also new in my experience."

"It does not interest me," the other retorted.

Mr. Gryce turned to his father and brother.

"Does it interest you?" he asked.

The old gentleman, ordinarily so testy and so peremptory, silently nodded his head, while Franklin cried:

"Speak up quick. You detectives hesitate so over the disagreeables. Was she throttled or stabbed with a knife?"

"I have said the means were peculiar. She was stabbed, but not—with a knife."

I know Mr. Gryce well enough now to be sure that he did not glance towards Howard while saying this, and yet at the same time that he did not miss the quiver of a muscle on his part or the motion of an eyelash. But Howard's assumed sang froid remained undisturbed and his countenance imperturbable.

"The wound was so small," the detective went on, "that it is a miracle it did not escape notice. It was made by the thrust of some very slender instrument through——"

"The heart?" put in Franklin.

"Of course, of course," assented the detective; "what other spot is vulnerable enough to cause death?"

"Is there any reason why we should not go?" demanded Howard, ignoring the extreme interest manifested by the other two, with a determination that showed great doggedness of character.

The detective ignored him.

"A quick stroke, a sure stroke, a fatal stroke. The girl never breathed after."

"But what of those things under which she lay crushed?"

"Ah, in them lies the mystery! Her assailant must have been as subtle as he was sure."

And still Howard showed no interest.

"I wish to telegraph to Haddam," he declared, as no one answered the last remark. Haddam was the place where he and his wife had been spending the summer.

"We have already telegraphed there," observed Mr. Gryce. "Your wife has not yet returned."

"There are other places," defiantly insisted the other. "I can find her if you give me the opportunity."

Mr. Gryce bowed.

"I am to give orders, then, for this body to be removed to the Morgue."

It was an unexpected suggestion, and for an instant Howard showed that he had feelings with the best. But he quickly recovered himself, and avoiding the anxious glances of his father and brother, answered with offensive lightness:

"I have nothing to do with that You must do as you think proper."

And Mr. Gryce felt that he had received a check, and did not know whether to admire the young man for his nerve or to execrate him for his brutality. That the woman whom he had thus carelessly dismissed to the ignominy of the public gaze was his wife, the detective did not doubt.

VII.
Mr. Gryce Discovers Miss Amelia.

To return to my own observations. I was almost as ignorant of what I wanted to know at ten o'clock on that memorable night as I was at five, but I was determined not to remain so. When the two Misses Van Burnam had retired to their room, I slipped away to the neighbouring house and boldly rang the bell. I had observed Mr. Gryce enter it a few minutes before, and I was resolved to have some talk with him.

The hall lamp was lit, and we could discern each other's faces as he opened the door. Mine may have been a study, but I am sure his was. He had not expected to be confronted by an elderly lad yat that hour of night.

"Well!" he dryly ejaculated, "I am sensible of the honour, Miss Butterworth." But he did not ask me in.

"I expected no less," said I. "I saw you come in, and I followed as soon after as I could. I have something to say to you."

He admitted me then and carefully closed the door. Feeling free to be myself, I threw off the veil I had tied under my chin and confronted him with what I call the true spirit.

"Mr. Gryce," I began, "let us make an exchange of civilities. Tell me what you have done with Howard Van Burnam and I will tell you what I have observed in the course of this afternoon's investigation."

This aged detective is used to women, I have no doubt, but he is not used to me. I saw it by the way he turned over and over the spectacles he held in his hand. I made an effort to help him out.

"I have noted something to-day which I think has escaped you. It is so slight a clue that most women would not speak of it. But being interested in the case, I will mention it, if in return you will acquaint me with what will appear in the papers to-morrow."

He seemed to like it. He peered through his glasses and at them with th smile of a discoverer. "I am your very humble servant," he declared; and I felt as if my father's daughter had received her first recognition.

DODGED THE WASPS.

Simple Trick by Which the Woodsmen Escaped a Stinging.

A man on his first trip into the wilds and marshes of an unknown country with the United States drainage engineers was struck by a unique method they have to escape from the attack of wasps and hornets. The country traversed is generally covered with thick undergrowth, and a path has to be cut through this all along the line. So when a big wasp nest is reached there is very little warning, sometimes the axmen cutting into a big one with their machetes.

The person relating this experience was some sixty feet behind the axmen with the instrument when all at once the two axmen dropped in their tracks as if they had been struck by a thunderbolt. The man behind and the two chainmen did likewise. While they were lying prone on the grass and wet marsh they heard what sounded like bullets zooing over their heads. One after the other they came with angry zips. When things had quieted down a bit work was continued, and the new man found that to escape from wasps or hornets the thing to do was to drop instanter. The insects seem to be so mad that they fly in straight lines along a level and do not have time to hunt around for you.

It is said that hornets are not so prone to follow this rule as wasps, but the wasps never vary. Men have been stung to death by hornets, and horses and mules likewise.—Chicago Record-Herald.

A Record in Fletcherizing.

If they learn the art of chewing even people whose food expense is only threepence a day can make their meals last a long time. A chewer, according to dietetic experts, is one who chews all things so long as they have any taste left in them. Gladstone, we are told, used to take thirty-two bites to every mouthful of food. The modern school of chewers would regard this as dangerously rapid eating. "I have tried chewing conscientiously," writes Mr. Eustace Miles. "A banana has cost 800 bites, a small mouthful of bread and cheese 240 bites, a greedy mouthful of biscuit (while I was walking on a Yorkshire moor) over 1,000 bites. It still seemed to taste about as much as at first, but I knew that taste by then, so I swallowed."—London Chronicle.

NAMING A TOWN.

Concord Was Selected After Fifty Years of Controversy.

The name of Concord, N. H., was given to the town after a controversy which lasted fifty years. In 1725 the land now within its bounds was granted to the colonists under the name of Peacock by the colony of Massachusetts. This claim was disputed by the colony of New Hampshire, which two years later granted this same land to the township of Bow. 1733 Massachusetts incorporated Peacock into a township named Rumford, and for more than forty years a fierce legal controversy was carried on. No agreement could be reached, and the matter was taken to the authorities in England, but even then there was no satisfactory nor permanent settlement.

In the face of an evident leaning toward the claims of Bow, both in England and in America, the little band of colonists in Rumford fought on valiantly, and in 1765 an act of incorporation was granted to the inhabitants of Rumford. This was still highly unsatisfactory because it only made them a parish in the town of Bow.

The controversy continued until 1774, when it was finally settled and an independent town was formed under the name of Concord. It was due to the devotion of the little band of settlers to their cause and the unity which existed among them that the independent incorporation of the town was finally obtained, and it was eminently fitting that the concord which existed between them during the struggle of nearly fifty years should be memorialized in their town's name.—Ladies'-Home Journal.

Rocking Chair Signs.

An observant Atchison woman says she can tell from the way a woman rocks on her front porch what condition the house behind her is in. If she sways back and forth with a floppy, comfortable motion, plumping both feet down in a relaxed sort of way, then everything about the house is absolutely clean and neat. But if she rocks in little nervous jerks, tapping her feet down at short and irregular intervals, it signifies that there are unmade beds behind her and stacks of unwashed dishes and dusty floors.—Atchison Globe.

Many people have smiled over the Byron-worshipping old lady who called her dog "Perchance," after reading the line: "Perchance my dog will whine in vain," but not so many are aware of a tourist's recent experience in the southwest end of Ireland. The tourist was a sporting man. When he alighted from his train at a small country station he inquired of the solitary porter as to a suitable hotel. Getting a satisfactory reply, he said: "And now, Pat, will you take charge of my gun and my dog, etcetera?" Pat hesitated, and scratched his head in a puzzled manner. then, as the tourist was hurrying off the platform, he rushed forward and touched him on the arm. "Beg pardon, yer honour," he said, "but does Excethra bite, sur?"

Wullie Dalziel, the old shepherd, had retired at last from active service, after spending the whole of his life in a little cottage away at the back of the hills, a full three miles, as the crow flies, from the nearest road. He moved into a house near the head of the valley above Crashie Howe, situated on the side of the lonely road. But Wullie was not quite happy. He was distracted. He was worried by the traffic. He told a friend that there was no peace in this bit for an ald body. "Three bicycles and a cart in the same day! Man, it's a fair toon!"

Features of the Smart Winter Hats.

THE HALO CREATION.

Three features distinguish as many types of the smart winter hat. First comes the outing hat in white, cream or champagne soft French felt, which is garnished solely with a silk tricot scarf a trifle heavier of mesh than is the Shetland veiling. The scarf, in one tone of a bright, neutral or dark shade, is fully a yard long by a half yard wide, but is so soft that it is not cumbrous. It is wound about the crown and its knotted ends allowed to drop over the brim's edge.

Second comes the picture hat in black velvet, pasted on to a coarse muslin shape and so flexible that it is not readily bent out of shape. This hat is deceitfully inexpensive looking, because its only trimming is the wide velvet ribbon twisted loosely about its soft crown and the bretelles, which, crossing the wide brim from under the crown band, form a loose bridle under the chin.

Third, and smartest of all, is the black butterfly. This is a huge affair in chantilly lace with outstretched wings that half cover the top of the crown. Truth to tell, it looks unpleasantly like a bat, but it is considered ultra chic and an absolutely unique trimming for the all black between season chapeau without which the well dressed woman can with difficulty get along.

The hat illustrated is a lovely all black creation of velvet, with a wired halo of black chantilly lace as its only trimming.

Something Stunning in Brown.

fur. The gown is of satin in the same shade, showing a bodice of brown chiffon over a copper satin lining. The coat is a cutaway affair, the front being exceedingly short and the back falling to the hem of the shirt.

A hat of brown velvet trimmed with copper colored ostrich plumes completes the ensemble.

A Widow's Three Tests.

A smart widow at a country house was telling the other day that there are three courses through which every woman should put a man before she marries him. These are eating, laughing and kissing. "A man's laugh tells a lot," she said. "If it is hearty and merry he is good tempered; if loud and empty it means he lacks feeling. Beware of a greedy man. It will be a case of 'feed the brute' all the time." And, according to her, kissing is the most important test at all.

She is working hard on a clay sketch of the complete conception with a young Breton woman as a model. The latter is sworn to silence, and the design of the monument is kept a secret.

FIENDISH CRUELTY

MONTREAL, Nov. 11.—An extraordinary case of cruelty was heard recently in the police court, before Judge Lafontaine, when Firmin Jasmin, a farmer, of Bois Francs Road, St. Laurent, was charged at the instance of the Society of Cruelty to Animals, with illegally and unnecessarily allowing twenty-four cows to be tortured by having their tails amputated. Mr. Ogden appeared to prosecute.

Inspector William Almand said, on being informed of the occurrence he went to the field where the animals were. Here he found the beasts running around in extreme agony, their bodies were covered with blood, and blood lay in large pools about the field.

An expert veterinary surgeon who gave evidence for the prosecution, said since the City of Montreal had made stricter bye-laws regarding the cleanliness of milk, this practice had become a habit with farmers. It was a practice done out of sheer laziness, the farmers preferring to amputate the tails of the animals rather than keep their animals clean. The pain suffered by the animals would be excruciating.

The accused in the box claimed that the tails were cut in the interest of cleanliness, as the filth on the tails interfered with the purity of milk.

Counsel for the prosecution said that the defendant was an ignorant man who did not know what he was doing. He did not press for a heavy sentence. Counsel said he believed the man's story, that he had been advised to have the animals' tails cut by milk inspectors. Counsels said if such advice was given, the milk inspectors of the City of Montreal were a very ignorant class of men.

Judge Lafontaine ordered the accused to come forward on Monday next for sentence.

DAUGHTER'S SONG IS DIRGE OF FATHER

"Some day the silver chord will break
And I no more as now shall sing.
But, oh, the joy when I shall wake
Within the palace of the King.

And I shall see Him face to face
And tell the story saved by Grace."

Shortly after his daughter, Miss Margaret Finlayson, had sung this solo, known by either the title "Saved by Grace," or "Some Day the Silver Chord Will Break," in Indian Road Baptist Church yesterday morning, Mr. Donald Finlayson, father of the young woman, passed quietly away at his home, 237 Delaware Avenue.

Though knowing that her father was near death's door, Miss Finlayson sang bravely through the sweet old hymn at the morning service, before the large congregation, many of whom knew of Mr. Finlayson's serious illness.—Toronto Star.

HAS A GOOD APPETITE

LONDON, Nov. 10.—Leslie Fraser Duncan, ninety two, four times a widower, the tallest Scotchman in London—6 feet 6 inches in his socks—gets up at noon every day and his invariable diet is as follows:

1 p.m. (Breakfast)—Three boiled eggs, tea and three thin slices of bread and butter.
2 p.m.—Glass of milk.
4 p.m.—Glass of milk.
5 p.m.—Tea, one boiled egg, and thin bread and butter.
8 p.m. (Dinner)—One boiled egg and thin bread and butter.

Mr. Duncan has a flowing white beard and a face glowing with health and he expects to pass the century mark. He was born in Elgin in Scotland, and when he was five years old he began to walk six miles to school and six miles back home every day. In this way he walked 440,000 miles in his schooling. He did it all on two meals a day. His breakfast, at 8 a.m., was porridge or brose. In 1848 he settled in London, and all through a busy career of fifty years he worked twelve and fifteen hours a day, on two meals a day, with no holidays. He never smoked in his life except one year in Edinburgh.

His alcohol indulgences consist of four glasses of champagne a year — one each on his birthday, on his mother's birthday, on Christmas and on New Year. He has never used a telephone, and he retired from business with a fortune, twenty-five years ago, before the rush of modern commercial life was fairly begun.

Mr. Duncan's fourth wife, who died a month ago, was the widow of Whyte Melville, the novelist. He went to school as a boy with Lord Strathcona, now High Commissioner of Canada, in London, who is two years older and who also lives on two meals a day.

Willie's Reason.

That the average youngster is usually there with a ready reason was demonstrated the other day by a story told by Congressman John R. Walker of Idaho.

The family was gathered in the den of a happy little home in an Eastern town. Father was reading the sporting page; mother was embroidering pink sunflowers, and Willie was supposed to be getting his lessons; but Willie wasn't.

"Willie!" suddenly exclaimed his mother, looking up from her embroidery, "have you studied your geography lesson?"

"No, mamma," was the frank rejoinder of Willie, who was listening to something that sounded like great joy from the street.

"You haven't!" severely responded mother. "Well, why haven't you?"

"Because," exclaimed Willie, "papa says that the map of the world is changing every day, and I thought that I would wait until things got settled a bit."

Rheumatism

A Home Cure Given by One Who Had It

In the spring of 1902 I was attacked by Muscular and Inflammatory Rheumatism. I suffered as only those who have it know for over 3 years. I tried remedy after remedy, and doctor after doctor, but such relief as I received was only temporary. Finally, I found a remedy that cured me completely, and it has never returned. I have given it to a number who were terribly afflicted and even bed-ridden with Rheumatism, and it effected a cure in every case.

I want every sufferer from any form of rheumatic trouble to try this marvelous healing power. Don't send a cent; simply mail your name and address and I will send it free to-day. After you have used it and it has proven itself to be the long-looked-for means of curing your Rheumatism, you may send the price of it, one dollar, but, understand, I do not want your money unless you are perfectly satisfied to send it. Fair enough? Why suffer any longer when positive relief is thus offered you free? Don't delay. Write to-day.

FATHER OF PHRENOLOGY.

Dr. Gall at One Time Had the Whole of Europe In a Furore.

The first public notice of the "Father of Phrenology" appeared in Weiland's "Dutch Mercury" on Aug. 14, 1798.

Gall was a practicing physician of Vienna, and early in his career he became a firm believer in the idea that the talents and disposition of men are dependent upon the functions of the brain and, furthermore, that they may be inferred with perfect exactitude and precision from the external appearances of the skull.

Gall was an able man. He set forth his theory in a graphic, unctuous manner, and in a very brief period he had all Europe at the top notch of excitement. The idea spread like wildfire, and in all grades of society people were discussing "the greatest of all discoveries." The new theory had to meet the customary opposition from the custodians of truth and the preservers of morality, but the opposition only increased the popularity of the theory, and Gall's celebrity increased by leaps and bounds. His lectures were interdicted, and he was threatened with the direst penalties unless he ceased his "immoral and atheistical" teachings, but he kept on with his propaganda, visiting all the large towns of Germany and the continent, and by 1805 all of Europe was interested in the Vienna doctor.

In 1828, the year of Gall's death, phrenology was in vogue everywhere. But after a great and glorious flood tide of popularity it began to wane and today it is but seldom heard of.—New York American.

Heart and Nerves Were Bad.

Could Not Sleep.

To the thousands of people who toss on a sleepless pillow night after night, or who pace the bedroom floor with nerves on the jump, the heart action all wrong, and to whose eyes sleep will not come, Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills offer the blessing of sound refreshing slumber, as they restore the equilibrium of the deranged nerve centres and correct the wrong action of the heart.

Mrs. Charles Teel, Horncastle, Ont., writes:—"Just a few lines to let you know what Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills did for me. My heart and nerves were so bad I could not sleep, and the least noise or excitement would make me feel so that I used to think I was going to die, and I would tremble until I could hardly stand. I took doctor's medicine, but it did not do me much good. At last I tried Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, and can certainly say they did me a great amount of good. I can recommend them to anyone who is suffering as I was."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills have been on the market for the past twenty years, and have done more to steady shaky nerves and strengthen weak hearts, than any other known preparation.

Price, 50 cents per box, or three boxes for $1.25, at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Comforting.

"Mr. Chairman," said the orator, who had already occupied the platform for twenty minutes, amid many interjections from the audience, "Mr Chairman, may I appeal on a point of order? There is really so much desultory conversation going on in parts of the hall that it is impossible for me to hear a word I am saying."

WHOOPING COUGH

Mrs. Charles Lovell, Agassiz, B.C., writes: "Seven of our nine children had whooping cough the same winter and we attribute their cure to Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine. We always have it in the house, and recommend it as the king of all medicines. I was formerly completely cured of protruding piles by using Dr. Chase's Ointment."

FLIMSY GOLD LEAF.

It Would Take 150,000 Sheets to Make a Pile an Inch High.

Gold beating is one of the oldest trades in Birmingham. The work is done entirely by hand. The leaf is hammered out in small home workshops from twenty-four carat gold, but is first sent to the rolling mills, whence it is returned in long, thin ribbons one and a quarter inches wide and a thousandth part of an inch in thickness. Then it is ready for the beater. The ribbon is generally cut off into small 1 1-4 inch squares, weighing about six grains.

The thin square is placed in the center of a vegetable parchment pad, consisting of 100 sheets on top and the same number beneath. This is beaten with a fourteen pound hammer, and the gold when considerably reduced in thickness, is placed between leaves of goldbeater's skin—skin prepared from a thin but tough membrane found in the large intestine of the ox.

Eight hundred pieces of the hammered leaf are arranged over each other between leaves of the skin, the whole being placed between parchment bands and beaten for a couple of hours with a seven pound hammer. Then the 800 pieces are cut up into 3,200 pieces and again beaten. When the work is done the leaf is 150,000 part of an inch in thickness and almost as light as air.—London Ideas.

Sir Wilfrid's Insurance.

No one likes a good story more than does Sir Wilfrid Laurier, and none can tell it more apropos.

Recently the Liberal Chieftain addressed the Life Underwriters' Convention in Ottawa, and he talked life insurance. "I was thirty-six years of age before I was insured," he declared. "And my physician said I was good for ten years. I have the policy, and all I have to do now to get the money is to die. However, as proof of my small regard for money I have never fulfilled this requirement of the company."

WEDDING SUPERSTITIONS.

Curious Customs That Used to Be Observed In England.

Superstition never clustered round any episode of life more than that of the wedding day, especially in olden times.

Then it was customary for the bride to present her future husband with a bunch of rosemary tied up with ribbons on his first appearance on the wedding morning. This was supposed to secure his love and loyalty and to make her happy forever.

In Yorkshire the old superstition still abounds that nothing more unlucky could happen than for a newly made bride to leave the church by a different door from that by which she entered.

Another quaint custom, for which there is no known origin, is that practised in some of the midland and northern counties of England. This is to ring a merry peal of the church bells at the first reading of the banns of an intending matrimonial couple. It is called the "spur peal," which in old Anglo-Saxon means simply "ask."

Of course it is well known that it is the height of luck for a bride to be to dream of fairies the night before the actual ceremony. So much was this idea believed in that many girls would peruse fairy tales before going to sleep.—London Telegraph

IF KIDNEYS ACT BAD TAKE SALTS

Says Backache is Sign You Have Been Eating Too Much Meat

When you wake up with backache and dull misery in the kidney region it generally means you have been eating too much meat, says a well-known authority. Meat forms urio acid, which overworks the kidneys in their effort to filter it from the blood and they become sort of paralysed and loggy. When your kidneys get sluggish and clog you must relieve them, like you relieve your bowels; removing all the body's urinous waste, else you have backache, sick headache, dizzy spells; your stomach sours, tongue is coated, and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine is cloudy, full of sediment, channels often get sore, water scalds, and you are obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night.

Either consult a good, reliable physician at once or get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate sluggish kidneys, also to neutralize acids in the urine, so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is a life saver for regular meat eaters. It is inexpensive, cannot injure, and makes a delightful, effervescent lithia water drink.

HE GOT HIS PRICE.

In Fact He Had to Have It and For a Very Good Reason.

Tody Hamilton had an experience with an editor of a weekly paper in Michigan when he was general press representative with the Barnum & Bailey show that gave him a new view of finance.

The big show was billed to appear at Owosso, Mich., and the contract agent with the No. 1 advertising car had failed to come to terms with the editor of a weekly at a little junction point twenty miles distant. Hamilton went to the little town, sought out the editor and prepared copy for a double column advertisement.

"I'll give you $10 and twenty tickets for two weeks' service in your paper, two columns, mostly cuts," said Hamilton to the editor.

"Oh, no, you won't! You'll give me $63 for the advertisement won't go," replied the editor coolly.

"Sixty-three dollars! Great Scott!" roared Hamilton. "That's more than your infernal paper is worth. I never give more than $10 and twenty tickets for our stuff in any country weekly. Man, you're crazy, stark mad!"

All efforts at persuasion failed. The editor remained obdurate. It was $63 or nothing. Finally in despair Hamilton exclaimed:

"Why do you make it $63? You might as well make it $103. It's just as unreasonable."

"I'll tell you, friend," replied the editor calmly. "I have a note coming due shortly for just that amount, and you have got to pay it."

Hamilton did, for he needed the advertising in that particular weekly, and the editor knew it.—New York Sun.

Messrs. Roy Watson and Stanley Laing, of Norwood, gave us a call on Monday.

The fowl supper given in the Town Hall on Monday evening, under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid of the Methodist Church, proved to be, as usual, quite a success, despite the inclement weather. The tables, arrayed in their best, were a pleasing sight, the floral decorations being profuse, while everything to be imagined was provided to tempt the appetite. After ample justice had been done to the tasty viands, the company repaired to the Church, where Rev. H. B. Kenny of Bowmanville delivered his lecture, 'The Human Trinity' to a most appreciative audience. Music for the occasion was provided by a male choir of some 20 voices, who delighted the audience with their selections, particularly an instrumental duet by Messrs. E. Tate and W. Knight. The committee in charge have every reason to be pleased with the success of the venture.

HERE IS GOOD ADVICE TO TAKE

It will help those who have Kidney and Bladder Trouble.

There are other "old enemies" similar to the one mentioned in this testimonial. Kidney and Bladder Troubles are always enemies to good health. As soon as you start to take GIN PILLS these ailments begin to disappear. It is the same in cases of Lumbago, Sciatica and like complaints. This letter illustrates the benefit of GIN PILLS.

Winnipeg, Jan. 6th.

"I have been a sufferer from Lumbago for some years past and during Christmas week had a very acute attack which confined me to the house. About the latter part of April, I met your Mr. Hill and mentioned my complaint to him. He advised me to take GIN PILLS. I have been taking them at intervals during the early part of the present winter, and up to date have had no return of my old trouble—in fact, I feel better than I have for years and think that my old enemy has vanished for good and all." "Farm and Dairy" Live Stock, Produce and Grain Market Report

Toronto, Monday, Nov. 10.—Wholesale dealers, who spoke very optimistically of trade prospects in Canada a few weeks ago, are now beginning to speak of a more serious situation. Orders are not coming in at a normal rate, and this in itself is a sure indication of scarcity of money throughout the country. Not a few big business houses are now finding it hard enough to finance their undertakings. The big crop of wheat does not seem to encourage trade as was expected. We are beginning to pay for the folly of recent land speculation.

Produce markets in the week have been characterised by increased activities in grains and a mild slump in the cattle market. Other quotations remain about the same as in previous weeks.

WHEAT

The wheat situation has changed but little, although there has been a decline of one cent on quotations. It is generally recognised that there is a large surplus in the world's crop. Prices are going up and down according as reports from Argentine are favorable or unfavorable. Many of these cable despatches seem to be made to suit the requirements of the recipients. When we come to Ontario we find that farmers cannot get more than 80c a bushel for their wheat, and with corn at 75½c many consider it more profitable to chop up the wheat and feed it than to market it. Quotations now are: No. 1 Northern, 89c; No. 2, 86c; feed wheat, 65c to 70c; Ontario No. 2, 81c to 82c outside; 85c to 86c on track.

COARSE GRAINS

The export trade in oats, flax and barley has brightened up in the past week. Exports to date to United States points total 2,500,000 bushels of this season's crop as compared with 180,000 bushels at this time last year. Oats also are selling actively on local markets. Malting barley is crossing the line in large quantities. Quotations are: Oats, C.W. No. 2, 35c; No. 3, 33c; Ontario No. 2, 32c to 34c outside; 35c to 37c on track; corn, 75½c; rye, 65c to 66c; barley, malting, 57c to 58c; peas, 90c to $1. Montreal quotations are: Oats, C.W. No. 2, 40½c; No. 3, 38½c; local oats, 38c to 38½c; corn, 78½c to 78¾c; barley, malting, 66c to 68c; feed, 48c to 48½c; peas, $1.80 to $1.95; rye, 72c to 73c.

HAY AND STRAW

There is no change in the situation. United States buyers are operating freely, particularly in Quebec province. Only the best grades of hay are in demand for either foreign or local account. Quotations here are: No. 1 baled hay, $14.50 to $15; No. 2, $11 to $14; No. 3, $8 to $9; baled straw $8. Montreal quotations are firm at last week's level: No. 1, $15 to $15.50; No. 2, $12 to $14.50; No. 3, $10 to $10.50.

EGGS AND POULTRY

Storage eggs are being largely drawn upon for local supplies, quotations being the same as last week. At Montreal, however, storage eggs have advanced a fraction of a cent in sympathy with the decline in country receipts. Quotations here are: New laids, 35c to 36c; fresh, 30c to 32c; storage, 30c to 31c. Montreal dealers quote No. 1 stock, 28½c; selects 33c to 33½c and new laids, 42c.

Receipts of dressed poultry are large and generally the quality is anything but satisfactory. Wholesale quotations are: Dressed fowl, 12c to 14c; live, 9c to 11c; spring chickens, 17c to 20c; live, 14c to 15c; geese, 12c to 17c and 10c to 12c; ducks, 12c to 14c and 10c to 12c; turkeys, No. 1, 23c to 25c and 20c to 22c; No. 2, 15c to 20c and 13c to 16c.

POTATOES AND BEANS

Potatoes have scored another advance, due to the United States demand, and are now selling at $1.05 to $1.10 a bag to the trade. It is reported that New Brunswick potatoes, on which Toronto depends for its supplies, are being shipped freely across the line to the nearer market. At Montreal, too, the market is ruling strong, sales of Green Mountains being made at 85c to 90c a bag, track; Quebec grades, 75c.

SEEDS

Local merchants are buying from farmers at the following prices: Alsike, No. 1, $7.75 to $8.25; No. 2, $6.50 to $7.50; No. 3, $5 to $5.50; red clover, $6 to $7; timothy, No. 1, $2.50; No. 2, $2.

DAIRY PRODUCE

Reports from New Zealand speak of large quantities of butter en route to British Columbia. It is just possible, however, that owing to higher quotations in the United States these supplies may be diverted in that direction. Locally, the butter market is stronger than last week, quotations having advanced a fraction of a cent. Receipts are falling off rapidly. A feature of the trade has been the export of considerable quantities of butter to United States points. Wholesale dealers quote creamery prints at 28c to 29c; solids, 26½c to 27c; dairy prints, 23c to 24c; bakers, 20c to 21c. Cheese is firm at the old levels: New large, 14½c to 14½c; twins, 14½c to 15c; old, large, 15c to 15½c; twins, 15½c to 16½c.

LIVE STOCK

Live stock have dropped all along the line, so far as meat animals are concerned. Receipts for some weeks now have been enormous. This, combined with the inferior quality of offerings, has tended to weaken the demand and prices will be down somewhat until the present surplus is absorbed. It should not take long, however, to dispose of supplies. Another feature of the situation is the fact that the best season for the stocker trade is about over as United States farmers have purchased their supplies. Quotations now average about as follows: Export cattle, choice, $7.25 to $7.50; medium $7 to $7.25; choice butchers, $7 to $7.50; com. to good, $6.25 to $7; heifers $6.50 to $7.10; choice cows, $6.75 to $6.25; com. to good, $4 to $5.75; choice bulls, $6 to $6.75; rough to good, $4 to $5.90; feeders, $4.25 to $5.40; stockers, $4 to $5.90; canners and cutters, $3 to $4.25.

Outside buyers have been on the market this week and dairy cattle have been in strong demand, some of them going to Quebec province. Choice dairy cows bring $65 to $95; com. to med., $40 to $65; springers, $40 to $95. Calves are in great demand, good veal going at $8.50 to $10; inferior, $4 to $6.

Supplies of sheep and lambs have not been large enough to take the edge off of the market, wether lambs going readily at $7.40 to $7.50; buck lambs, $6.65 to $6.75; ewes, $4.50 to $5.40 and bucks and culls, $3 to $4.50.

Hogs have declined a trifle but are still strong at $8.65 to $8.80 f.o.b.

United States buyers still feature prominently at Montreal. The quality of cattle offering is poor but United States men are taking up poor stuff quickly, paying for common bulls $3.90 to $4.40 and canning cows, $3.15 to $3.40. A few good steers sell at $7 to $7.25 and from that down to $6; choice cows $6 to $6.25; com. to good, $4 to $5.75. Small meats were active: Western lambs $7 to $7.25; Eastern, $6.50 to $6.75; ewes, $4.50 to $5; grass fed calves, 3½c to 4½c; milk fed, 6c to 6¼c.

MONTREAL HOG MARKET

Montreal, Saturday, Nov. 8.—A steady feeling prevailed in the market for live hogs this week under a good demand from packers, and an active trade was done with sales of selected lots at $8.75 and straight lots at $8.50 a cwt., weighed off cars. In the Toronto market at the beginning of the week there was a stronger feeling and prices advanced 10c a cwt., but later in the week were 5c to 10c lower than last week. There was no change in the condition of the market for dressed hogs here to-day, prices being steady with a fair demand, and sales of abattoir fresh-killed in a jobbing way were made at $14 to $14.25.

EXPORT CHEESE TRADE

Montreal, Saturday, Nov. 8.—Market for cheese has continued strong, with prices well maintained in the country, the bulk of the cheese being bought up at 13½c to 13c, and at Picton and Napanee a fraction over 13c was paid for the colored cheese offered there. The cheese sold this week represents the last of the October make and any sales in the country after this will be Novembers, and it is not likely that the demand will be as well maintained as it has been the last two weeks. Receipts are well maintained, and the fall make is evidently a fairly large one, in spite of the increasing demand for milk and cream for local requirements and for export.

Market for butter is very firm and prices are well maintained. There is an active demand for local requirements, and receipts now are barely sufficient to supply the trade, and in a few days it will be necessary to draw goods from cold storage to meet the needs of the local trade. Finest Eastern Townships butter is quoted at 28c, and in some cases a fraction more is asked, and ordinary finest fresh-made at 27c to 27½c.

OUR DAILY SHORT STO I

THE LADY IN GREY

Kenneth Temple was peering at the great green door of the mansion, sighing as a lover ought.

"No luck to-day," he murmured. "Why doesn't the old fire-eater fall ill or—"

The door opened and a lady came out.

"The lady in grey," muttered the watching man. "Last time Ethel came out I met her."

At that moment two graceful girls burst out of the doorway and stood beside the lady in grey. The eyes of Kenneth Temple dwelt adoringly upon one. For two minutes they chatted there. Then the lady in grey leaned toward them as if to kiss them good-by, and came down the drive alone.

"Ah—er—Miss—Miss Grey," panted a gruff voice, and a short, red-faced man came hurrying toward the lady in grey. The latter stopped.

"Er—was not aware—you were here. How warm it is. Must you really go?"

The lady murmured something about an appointment.

"Tut, tut!" smiled the man, ogling her amorously. "There is a matter concerning which I wish to speak with you. You will spare a few minutes? Do!"

"Is it about Flora and Ethel, Major Scarbroke?"

"Yes—er—and about another matter, too. Will you come this way?" wheedled the Major, conducting her to a seat which stood three yards away from the spot where Kenneth Temple lay hidden.

"I am greatly worried about those girls, Miss Grey," began the Major. "Dear me, how perfectly charming it is to sit here and—"

"You were speaking of your nieces, Major."

"Yes, yes. You see, they are twin sisters of 20 summers—at the giddiest of ages. Their parents are dead. I am a bachelor—at present. I was wondering whether I ought not—to—er marry."

"Tell me first what it was you wished to say about those two dear girls," parried the lady in grey.

"Well—er—about those giddy girls. You see, the hussies are so frivolous—wilful—sly—"

"Oh, Major, for shame!" protested the lady.

"I assure you they are," insisted the Major. "They wheedle around me. Every servant I get becomes their slave. But they are attractive girls—there's the rub. First I had an actor hanging about here. Then I foxed his game and forbade him the house. That did not keep him away. You see, all the world knows that my nieces will each come into four thousand at 21—that is the bait they are after."

"An actor?" interrupted the lady. "Do I know him?"

"Not likely. He calls himself Douglas Percival."

"But now I have another worry of the same sort. No sooner had Douglas Percival left than another young man came on the scene. He was an artist, and called himself Kenneth Temple. He asked permission to sketch and got it. Then I suppose the giddy girls came across him and he was artful enough to strike up an acquaintance. I gave Mr. Temple a piece of my mind. Now you know, all this worries me greatly. I wan't a woman to see to these things. I want a nice, kind, firm, sensible wife—"

"Someone is calling you, Major Scarbroke," interrupted Miss Grey.

"What! Yes—so they are. Excuse me a moment, Miss Grey. Don't go. I won't be long."

The lady sat calmly in her seat until he was well away, then she sprang sharply to her feet and glanced round jubilantly and disappeared in a copse.

The sudden and undignified fight of the lady in grey made Kenneth Temple start up in amazement. He decided to be off before the Major returned to seek his charmer. Coming to the copse he swerved around it. The sound of crackling twigs made him drop hastily to the grass and seek cover.

The next instant the lady in grey came toward him briskly, thrusting the bushes aside vigorously as she walked. Presently she stopped in the little glade before him.

Suddenly she flung her bag on the grass, put both her hands up to the saucy grey toque and drew it from her head.

Kenneth Temple, crouching close by, had to smother a gasp of astonishment. The golden tresses that had adorned her head came away with the toque! Before th watcher had got over his bewilderment at this off came the lady's grey dustcoat and other clothing.

Where the lady in grey had stood a moment before there now stood a slim young man.

Kenneth Temple was too bewildered to utter a sound. Then a thought sent the angry blood to his cheeks.

Disguised as a woman, this man had kissed Ethel Ewing—his Ethel. In an instant the irate man was on his feet and placed himself right in the stranger's path. The two men stared at each other. Then eye read eye and the stranger knew that his metamorphosis had been observed.

"Perhaps you will explain?" said Temple.

"Hush!" besought the other. "May I ask to whom I am speaking?"

"I am Kenneth Temple—that artist fellow?" sneered Temple. "Who are you?"

"I am Douglas Percival—that actor chap," replied the other. "Shall we adjourn for an explanation"

"Do these young ladies, with whom you are so intimate—do they know of your identity?" demanded Temple, acidly.

"Perfectly."

"A fine game you have been playing," snapped the artist. "What would the Major say if he knew?"

"Don't ask me. My vocabulary is too limited," smiled the actor. "Besides, he won't know. You won't tell him."

"Oh! Why not, may I ask?"

"Because you are in love with Ethel Ewing."

"Well?"

"And I feel likewise toward her sister."

"Her sister!" cried Temple, savagely. "I saw you kiss Ethel."

"No, no. Some mistake."

"Yes. Get into the togs."

The Major came hurrying across

Temple felt distinctly mollified at this.

"Look here, Percival," he said suddenly. "I take it that you adopted this disguise to see Miss Flora, despite the Major's interdict. But if you are to have the free run of the place, so am I."

"How do you propose to manage that?"

"You must manage it for me. Next time you are the lady in grey, you must recollect that you do know Kenneth Temple, and that he is a future R.A. Here comes the Major."

"What! Scarbroke"

the lawn. The actor flung off coat, collar and tie and donned the feminine garments once again. The change was scarcely completed before the Major thrust aside the bushes and came upon them both.

"My dear Miss Grey!" exclaimed the soldier, "how I have searched and—Hallo, sir, what are you doing here?"

The last was addressed to Temple, and the Major's brow grew dark as he beheld the unwelcome artist.

"Oh, Major Scarbroke," intervened the lady in grey, hastily, "is this the artist of whom you spoke? I have only met him once before," explained the lady in a whisper. "But—have you seen his pictures?"

"No," snapped the soldier, jealous at her tone.

"Perhaps you have not been to the academy this year?"

"Not yet."

"Ah!" breathed Miss Grey. Then it dawned upon her that the Major looked furiously jealous. She drew him aside and whispered. "Quite an ordinary looking man, is he not? Strange that he should paint such beautiful pictures." Then she turned to the artist and added: "You must bring the Major some of your sketches and let him judge."

"By all means," said the mollified soldier, wishing that the artist were at Jericho. "Could you fetch them now?"

"With pleasure," responded Temple, bowing.

And he turned away, despite an appealing glance from the lady in grey, who felt savage at his desertion.

"Quick, uncle—an emperor moth!" cried the sweet voice of Ethel behind them.

"A purple emperor!" came the silvery tones of Flora.

The next moment a cloud of pink muslin flew past them on one side and a cloud of white muslin on the other.

Unfortunately the cloud of pink muslin tripped over something and went sprawling. But still more unfortunately the lady in grey sprang forward to try and save her. Worst of all, the major was standing upon the hem of the skirt worn by the lady in grey.

The back fastening of the skirt was insecurely fastened. The lady in grey fell forward headlong into the bushes.

Alas, the Major still stood on the skirt, but there was no lady in it. Peeping from under and inside the grey dustcoat were a very masculine pair of legs and they were clad in golfing breeches!

Four petrified people stared at each other in inarticulate amazement. Then, with a gesture of desperation, the lady in grey flung off the dustcloak, tore off the blouse and flung it away and stood up as—Douglas Percival.

Ten feet away a thing of loveliness in pink clung to a thing of loveliness in white, waiting for the storm.

The storm never broke. Sheer stupefaction completely paralyzed the Major's organs of speech for a time. Amazement, horror, resentment, rage—all chased each other through his brain, but one particular thought seemed to rise up and strike him a stunning blow. He had made love to, he had almost declared himself to—Douglas Percival.

Two hours later he walked into the hall and met his nieces face to face. They had just come in. Both looked flushed and happy until they saw him; then Ethel seemed to shrink back, but Flora came forward with an air of quiet dignity.

"Mr. Temple and Mr. Percival have gone, uncle," she said. "They asked me to say good-night for them as they did not wish to disturb you."

The soldier looked across at the fair face of Flora, and that young lady dropped here eyes.

"My dears," he said gravely, "I see that we shall not always be together. It is the way of the world."

The Straight Line in Creating Demand

"A Straight Line is the Shortest Distance between Two Points"

Whatever troubles old Euclid gave us in our schooldays his axioms were simple enough. In our business life to-day we show a lively appreciation of the truth of this axiom in cutting out superfluous efforts—in the saving of time and labor.

In making goods the straight line is "efficiency." It is the shortest distance between raw material and finished product.

In Selling Goods, the straight line is Newspaper Advertising.

It is the shortest distance between the seller and the buyer. Some manufacturers are applying the straight line in the making of their goods, but neglecting it in the selling of them. Some have no line of communication with the consumer at all—many let their message meander along by-paths of "chance acquaintanceship" instead of telegraphing it along the straight line of Newspaper Advertising.

Newspaper Advertising is the Shortest Distance between the two points of "Supply" and "Demand."

If you are doing a local business talk over your advertising problems with the Advertising Department of this Newspaper. If you are doing a provincial or national business it would be well for you to have the counsel and assistance of a good advertising agency. A list of these will be furnished, without cost or obligation, by the Secretary of the Canadian Press Association, Room 503, Lumsden Building, Toronto.

NOTED WOMAN DIES

Lady Strathcona Passes Away in Her 89th Year

HAD BEEN ILL ONE WEEK

LONDON, Nov. 13.—(C. A. P. Cable.)—Lady Strathcona, wife of the Canadian High Commissioner, died last night at 28 Grosvenor square, in her 89th year. Her ladyship had been ill just a week. On Thursday evening last she contracted a severe influenza, which a day or two developed into pneumonia.

The Times, referring to the death of Lady Strathcona, says: "More than sixty years of singularly happy married life are ended. She was a woman who was beloved and trusted by a wide circle of friends and was conspicuous for her charitable nature. There was only one child of the marriage, now Hon. Mrs. Robt. Howard, who married Dr. Robert Howard of Queen Anne's street, Cavindish square. By special remainder Mrs. Robert Howard is heir presumptive to a barony."

"Of retiring disposition and not often prominent before the public Lady Strathcona," says the The Daily Mail, in a lengthy memoir, "worked quietly with her husband in those great Imperial schemes which have done so much to strengthen the bonds between Canada and the mother country. Close comradeship between Lord and Lady Strathcona was demonstrated in the late summer this year when the couple undertook the journey to Canada and back. She was moved by a great spirit of charity, and in 1906 she gave ten thousand guineas to Queen Alexandra's unemployed fund, and imperial work that lay near her heart was revealed in her wish that the greater part of the money should be used to enable the unemployed and their wives and children to emigrate to the Canadian northwest."

FARMERS SAVED THEM.

Sailors of Northern Queen Owe Lives To Landsmen.

LONDON, Ont., Nov. 13.—Tales of heroism are told of the rescue of 22 men of the crew of the Northern Queen, a big lake freighter that was grounded on the beach at Port Frank on Monday morning.

While breakers rolled in a manner that appeared to render the loss of all inevitable, the members of the crew strapped on their life belts and tried to put off in boats.

Repeatedly they were thrown into the water and their rafts smashed to pieces. Farmers of the district attracted to the scene worked valorously.

Battered by the waves since Sunday, the sailors were practically helpless. Starved and frozen, soaked with each succeeding roll of the foundering ship, they were cast overboard. The boat was close into shore, but the undercurrent carried them back as they were knocked about on the storm-tossed lake. Repeatedly plunging into the water, young farm hands by heroic efforts snatched unconscious men from death. Many of them were hauled on shore apparently lifeless.

"Worst In the Dominion."

LONDON, Nov. 13. — Apropos of Premier Roblin's attack on Postmaster-General Samuel, The Yorkshire Post yesterday prints Mr. Samuel's comments as given two days ago. In an editorial footnote, The Post says: "We believe Mr. Samuel's criticism was quite justified. Elementary education in Manitoba is said by our own special correspondent in Canada to be the worst in the Dominion."

Mr. Borden In Good Health.

OTTAWA, Nov. 13. — Letters received yesterday from Premier Borden, who is in West Virginia, state that he is enjoying the best of health and makes daily visits to the golf links. He will not return to Ottawa until December.

BOAT IS UPSET.

Power Company Workmen Drowned In Lachine Canal.

MONTREAL, Nov. 13.—Seven, and perhaps nine men lost their lives in the Lachine canal at Cote St. Paul early yesterday morning when a flat-bottomed boat capsized, throwing fifteen workmen into the water. All were employed in the construction of the Montreal Heat & Light Co.'s new plant at Cote St. Paul. It is believed that all were foreigners whose names will not be known until the power company's timekeepers check up to-day.

It is understood the indirect cause of the accident was the passing of a tug and the injudicious movement of the men from one side of the boat to the other as the craft passed through the tug's swells.

The tug put back as soon as the boat capsized and rescued two of its former occupants. A boat put out from shore and rescued four others, and two reached the south shore on planks sent floating in the canal by watchers on shore. Two others were seen swimming for the north shore, but in the darkness it was not known whether they reached it. About 200 men cross the canal night and morning in the single flat-bottomed boat, as a short cut to a suburban car line and the consequent congestion has been the subject of comment frequently owing to the danger from passing craft.

It is stated that more might have been saved but for the scramble for positions of vantage on the upturned boat, which swamped from the pressure put upon it by the fighting men.

EXIT THE PARLIAMENT.

Yuan Thinks He Can Do Better With a Council.

PEKING, Nov. 13. — President Yuan Shi Kai intends to summon an "administrative council," which, in addition to transacting state affairs, will draft regulations governing the new Parliament. The council will number 71 members, consisting of the Cabinet officers and others appointed by the President and provincial governors who have already been appointed by him.

Yuan Shi Kai considers that the present House of Representatives is unwieldy and deserves its reduction to three hundred members. The original number of representatives was 596. The powers of the Parliament will also be materially curtailed, and the Senate will disappear, giving place to the administrative council, which will be a permanent body.

This program was announced yesterday, and it will probably be carried into effect if the opponents of the President are not able to bring about its modification.

In the meantime the remnant of Parliament is permitted to continue holding informal meetings, but can do no business, because of lack of a quorum.

DANDRUFF, FALLITG HAIR, ITCHY SCALP, END THIS AT ONCE—25 CENT DANDERINE

Girls! Girls! Save Your Hair! Make It Grow Luxuriant and Beautiful

If you care for heavy hair, that glistens with beauty and is radiant with life; has an incomparable softness and is fluffy and lustrous, try Danderine.

Just one application doubles the beauty of your hair, besides it immediately dissolves every article of dandruff; you cannot have nice, heavy, healthy hair if you have dandruff. This destructive scurf robs the hair of its lustre, its strength and its very life, and if not overcome it produces a feverishness and itching of the scalp, the hair roots famish, loosen and die; then the hair falls out fast.

If your hair has been neglected and is thin, faded, dry, scraggy or too oily, get a 25 cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine at any drug store or toilet counter; apply a little as directed and ten minutes after you will say this was the best investment you ever made.

We sincerely believe, regardless of everything else advertised, that if you desire soft, lustrous, beautiful hair and lots of it—no dandruff—no itching scalp and no more falling hair—you must use Knowlton's Danderine. If eventually—why not now?

UNION BANK LOOTED.

New Hazelton, B.C., Is Scene of a Daring Robbery.

SEATTLE, Wash., Nov. 13.—A despatch from Hazelton, B.C., says five masked men robbed the Union Bank of New Hazelton, four miles east of Hazelton, Tuesday night, shot the cashier and escaped with $10,000, after a rifle battle with citizens.

A special train was sent west in hope of intercepting the bandits, as it was believed they escaped down the Skeena river.

The cashier, returning from dinner, surprised the robbers at work. One robbed opened fire, the bullet striking the cashier between the eyes. The wound is not serious.

Citizens attracted by the shot, hurried to the bank just as the robbers were leaving. The fleeing men engaged in a running battle with their pursuers, until they found shelter in the timber on the edge of the town.

Six men suspected of being implicated in the robbery were arrested between Hazelton and New Hazelton.

Succumbs To His Injuries.

BELLEVILLE, Nov. 13.—Thomas Cooper, the victim of the dynamite explosion at the steel works Tuesday, died last evening without having regained consciousness. An inquest will be held. After the jury had viewed the remains they were prepared for burial and will be taken to Montreal for interment.

ZAM-BUK IN THE HOME

Read How Useful It Proved in These Widely Different Cases.

Zam-Buk's strongest point is its effectiveness in all kinds of skin diseases and injuries. Just note how excellent these persons proved it in widely different directions.

Sore Heel.—Mrs. C. A. Campbell, of Powassan, Ont., writes: "One of my heels was very badly blistered by a pair of new shoes, and the poisonous dye from my stocking got into it, and made a bad sore. For a week I could not put on a shoe, and suffered great pain. I applied Zam-Buk, and in a few days it drew the poison out and healed the wound."

Bad Cut.—Mrs. J. Virgint, of Onondaga, Ont., writes: "Zam-Buk healed a bad cut which I sustained. I was hurrying across my yard one day when I slipped and fell heavily, my knee striking a sharp stone. At the moment I did not realise how badly I was hurt, but I found I had a bad cut about two inches long, very jagged and very deep. We bathed the cut and applied Zam-Buk. This stopped the smarting very quickly, and in a few days it had healed the wound completely. For cuts and bruises Zam-Buk is a splendid remedy."

Eczema Cured.—Mrs. Antoine Arsenault of Maxiamville, P.E.I., writes: "I can highly recommend Zam-Buk to any person suffering from eczema. I had this disease and was under doctors treatment for two years, without any good result. I then tried Zam-Buk and in the end it cured me."

Zam-Buk is just as good for piles, blood-poison, festering sores, pimples, eruptions, cuts, burns, bruises, and all skin injuries and diseases. 50c. box all druggists and stores, or post free for price from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto. Try Zam-Buk Soap, 25c. tablet.

GHOULS ROB DEAD.

Desecration of Bodies Is Added To Horrors of Storm.

THEDFORD, Ont., Nov. 13.—Terrible as has been the greatest of the Great Lakes tragedies it has been left for man to make the horror more horrible. Last night steamboat officials returned from Port Franks with information that will be placed in the hands of the Attorney-General Department. Not only have they the names of men they found carting wreckage away from the death-strewn shore, but they have under surveillance one man who is alleged to have in his possession $800 taken from a foreigner's belt found on shore, and the names of other men who are believed to have robbed the dead.

The ghouls found three victims of the storm in or near a lifeboat of the Regina. Two of the men were visible, but one body lay in the bottom of the boat under water, and this fact saved his body from being desecrated. The latter was the man identified as Lawson of the Regina, and the other two are the men at Undertaker Woodhull's here, and practically identified as Gustave Olsen of Toronto and L. E. Burton of Montreal. The work of the body-looters was limited by a creek, for they could not get across this, and it was on the other side of it that the other eight bodies were found. On one of the other bodies was found $113, while all the others had money on them. The bodies which were washed up west of the creek had their pockets rifled, the perpetrators of the crime not even leaving anything by which the men might be identified.

Windfall For Institutions.

Benefactions totalling $140,000 in which nearly all the Protestant and non-sectarian hospitals and charitable institutions in Montreal will benefit, are provided in the will of the late Hugh Watson, founder of the Watson-Foster Wall Paper Mfg. Co., of Maisonneuve, who died on Sept. 20 last. Presbyterian organizations are the largest beneficiaries.

Quebec Treasury Is Nervous.

MONTREAL, Nov. 13.—By the decision of the Privy Council Tuesday that the Province of Quebec had no right to collect estate duty from securities held in Boston by the late Henry Cotton, who died in Quebec, it is stated to-day that the Government may be called upon to reimburse $2,000,000, moneys collected from the foreign or outside estates of other people who have died in this province.

Mr. Cotton left an estate valued at $350,000, from which Quebec claimed $82,000 death duties.

Here Is the Secret of Long Life

While looking forward to health and long life it is possible that you are unaware of the conditions necessary to attain healthful old age. Careful eating, and consequent preservation of the health and vitality of the digestive and excretory organs, is of the greatest importance.

Overeating is the usual cause of torpid, sluggish liver action, and when the liver fails additional work is thrown on the kidneys and they break down. Kidney disorders are the great source of suffering in old age. Rheumatism, bodily pains, aching arms and legs, backache and lumbago are the result.

By the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills to regulate the liver, kidneys and bowels, as occasion requires, you not only overcome the suffering, inconvenience and unpleasantness of attacks of biliousness, indigestion and constipation, but you actually prolong life by keeping these organs in good, healthful condition. This medicine is a wonderful source of comfort for people in old age.

PLAGIARISM.

Only a Crime When One Filches From the Commonplace.

Plagiarise all you please, provided you steal from the right sources, for the secret of individuality is familiarity with the masters. The great geniuses were meant to be objects of plagiarism. To be plain, the more you absorb of a first class mind the more your own originality is fed. Plagiarism is only a crime when it is a theft of commonplaces from mediocre sources.

Let the young musician soak full of Beethoven, Wagner, Mozart and Mendelssohn. That is the surest way for him to find himself. To absorb comic opera music is the way to smother, lose and kill himself.

Let the young preacher preach Bushnell, Robertson and Brooks. So doing, he will come to preaching himself.

As for writers, there is truth in the advice given by a great man that the best way to acquire a good style is to read Addison and exercise oneself in endeavoring to rewrite him.

You cannot plagiarize the Bible, nor Shakespeare, nor Homer, nor Dante, nor Milton. These have ceased to be men; they are humanity. You can plagiarize Shaw, or Brute Harte, or the last "best seller."

To isolate oneself from the masters is not the road to originality; it is the road to vulgarity.

"Few English authors," says Hamerton, "studied past literature more willingly than Shelley and Tennyson, and none are more original."—Frank Crane in Woman's World.

Prehistoric Man in Belgium.

Prehistoric man has been traced in several periods in Belgium, and M. Putot, a Belgian geogogist, has made a novel attempt to estimate the population at different stages. In the lower Aurignacian period five of Belgium's numerous caves seem to have been inhabited, their capacity being fifty to sixty persons. In the Magdalenean period the population was probably sixty. Retreat of the ice permitted leaving the shelters at the close of this period, and the settlers on the banks of the lakes may soon have numbered 100 or 150. The coming of the Cervidea forests perhaps developed a population of 1,000, which may have increased to 4,000 or 5,000 at the beginning of the polished stone age.—New York Press.

Whist.

Whist undoubtedly is derived from the old game of trumps, which has a purely English lineage. There is no record of the origin of this game nor of its development into ruff and honors, which was the parent of whist. The earliest reference to it is believed to be in a sermon of Latimer about the year 1529. The name probably is derived from the "hist" or "silence" which close attention to play demands of the players.

Glasgow's Pavements.

According to an excellent custom in Glasgow, before any street is paved or repaved all city departments that may be likely to open the street are communicated with so as to give them an opportunity to examine their pipes or make necessary repairs, alterations or renewals before the paving is laid.—Chicago News.

The Sheep in the Grass.

Lord Palmerston once inspected "Summer in the Lowlands," a picture by Sir John Watson Gordon. "Look here," said Lord Palmerston to the artist, "why should the grass in that field be so long when there are so many sheep in the field?"

"My lord," replied the artist, "those sheep were only turned into the field last night!"

Lord Palmerston bought the picture at a high price.

STILL UNIDENTIFIED.

Upset Freighter May Be the Regina, Say Sailors.

PORT HURON, Nov. 13.—While it is certain that the Regina went down in the storm, doubt exists as to whether she is the freighter which turned turtle in Lake Huron a few miles from here. A theory borne by many is that there was a collision between the unidentified vessel and the Regina, that the former went over immediately, while the Regina's crew abandoned her and took to life boats. Those who adhere to this belief think that the wreck of the Regina will be found in another place.

The wreck of the Regina was confirmed when ten bodies were found strewn on the beach at the little Canadian fishing village of Port Frank, thirty miles northeast of Sarnia. A short distance up shore was found a lifeboat, lying on its side, containing two dead men. The lifeboat carried the name "Regina," and scattered along the beach was other wreckage and cargo identified as that of the Regina.

REPRESENTATIVE GATHERING ATTEND LAYMEN'S MISSIONARY CONFERENCE

Conference is One of Thirty-eight Similar Gatherings Being Held Throughout the Province---Mr. J. Cuthbertson, of Japan, Advocates the Abolition of Denominational Differences--Gathering Promises to Be Biggest Affair of the Kind Ever Held in Peterborough.

THE CONFERENCE COMPRISES THREE SESSIONS

The conference to bring the aims and objects of the Laymen's Missionary Movement into more intimate contact with the public, had its inception this morning in Murray Street Baptist Church. A representative gathering of ministers and laymen participated in the session. The purpose of the conference and the need of a sincere, consistent and active missionary element in the Church was reflected in the address delivered by Mr. J. Cuthbertson of Japan and Rev. Walter Daniel of Toronto. The discussion that followed revealed the interest and enthusiasm of the delegates who were stirred to spontaneous acclamation of the missionary movement among laymen.

The Laymen's Missionary Conference that was inaugurated to-day, and which comprises morning, afternoon and evening sessions, is one of thirty-eight similar conferences that are being held at logical points throughout Ontario. Delegates representing Protestant churches were present from all parts of Peterborough County.

The Morning Session.

At the morning session devotional exercises were conducted by Mr. J. A. Aylmer and Rev. R. G. Peever, Pastor of George Street Methodist Church.

Mr. J. A. Aylmer, who occupied the chair, opened the meeting with a few remarks respecting the aims and objects of the conference. "Men," he said, "are beginning to realize that they have sadly neglected in the past the work of the Missionary Movement. The Church that neglects the missionary work is virtually asleep." In conclusion he solicited the sympathy and co-operation of the Laymen present, in an endeavour to awaken renewed interest in th work which was represented by the Laymen's Missionary Movement.

Mr. J. Cuthbertson, Superintendent of the Japan Branch of the International Police Association, in the course of an interesting address, urged the people to lay aside their denominational differecnes in the heathen land and exert a lifting-up influence on the heathen mind. The day is dawning when we shall cease to speak of denominations.

"One of the worst handicaps that confront the missionary in the foreign field," said Mr. Cuthbertson, is the knowledge that he is an alien, or stranger in a foreign land. The missionary is lonely because of the absence of congenial companions. The speaker charged Buddhism with keeping the people in a spirit of fear. It held no message of deliverance for the people whom it enslaved. In conclusion he asked the laymen to stand by the Missionary movement.

Missionary Atmosphere.

Rev. Walter Daniel of Toronto, speaking on the development of the missionary atmosphere, said that God created the earth and with it created an atmosphere. As the earth moves round its orbit, the atmosphere remains with it. We are told that as we aviate into the air the atmosphere gets colder. This applies to us in our home churches, but particularly to our workers in the mission fields. But few remember this in comparison with the enormity of our various denominations. We know about the atmosphere of indifference, and the attitude of hostility. If we want to know anything about the atmosphere we must go right back to the first century. Those men who went out had respect for the authority of the King. We hear a great deal about the Kingdom of God. In this age of democracy it is a monarchy, an absolute monarchy. Now comes the point, said the speaker, on which perhaps I ought to have spoken before: The absolute Monarchy. It sounds hard, the King of Love. Oh, brethren, there ought to be an abundance of love to Him, the God of our salvation, who loves us when we want, and receives us gladly when we turn to Him, and who wants to do for us above all we can ask Him. The great God, the God of love, so tender, so loving, so kind!

The session concluded with a general discussion.

MR. D. WALKER ADDRESSED TEACHERS

The Public and Separate School teachers of the city were given a splendid address in the Central School yesterday afternoon, by Mr. W. Walker, Principal of the Normal School.

In his address Mr. Walker made a very interesting comparison of the work as it is conducted in the local school and in some of the Western cities. During his tour this summer Mr. Walker visited the Normal schools of Chicago, St. Louis and Cincinnati, and observed the methods in each. His address was replete with splendid suggestions for the local teachers, and will undoubtedly result in a measure at least of improvement in the local educational work.

Mr. A. Mowatt, Public School Inspector, presided over the meeting, at which were nearly all the Public School teachers of the city.

HE KNEW THEIR NAMES.

They were discussing the North American Indian the other day in the primary room of a district school when the teacher asked if any one could tell what the leaders were called.

"Chiefs," announced a bright little girl at the head of the class.

"Correct," answered the teacher, "and now can any of you tell me what the women were called?"

There was a moment of silence, then a small boy's hand was seen waving aloft, eager to reply.

"Well, Johnny," asked the teacher.

"Mischief," he proudly announced.

COUNCIL IS SHORT OF CASH

Monaghan Has Reached the Limit of Borrowing Power and Taxes Have Not Yet Come In

ROADS SAID TO BE POOR

The Township Council of North Monaghan is temporarily stranded, their borrowing limit having been reached several weeks ago. A by-law states that no more than $4,800 shall be the total amount borrowed. Hence when this sum was reached, the bank had no alternative but to shut down on the Council for the time being. This is the report emanating from one of the taxpayers who stated that the Council had to give their own note for certain sums. The taxes are not in yet, and there are a number of bills that should be paid, but which will have to wait until the money begins to pour in. He said it was no reflection upon the township, but this ratepayer believed that the township affairs had apparently not been handled as judiciously as they should or such a condition would have been avoided.

He said there was considerable criticism of the increase in statute labour from 75 cents to $1.00, and he felt it need not be paid if anyone objected to it.

The taxes have been increased, but the farmers have not found a great deal to show the reason for it. Road work, it is claimed, has not received due attention, and the "gravel" road which has always been one of the best, is said to be one of the worst in the township, particularly in some stretches of it.

The Ontario Government had a man out there counting the teams, but more beneficial results would have been perceived if they had given him a horse, waggon, shovel and gravel pit. The trouble with the township's roads is that there are too many officials and not enough practical workmen.

The reporter pointed out that the Council had spent money on a new school and other new work, but the farmer replied that enough money had been spent, but it was not evenly distributed.

THE ST. JOHN'S AMBULANCE ASSOCIATION

It is officially announced that a preliminary meeting of the City of Peterborough St. John's Ambulance Corps will be held on Friday evening at 8 o'clock in the Y.M.C.A. to arrange details, enroll intending pupils who are interested in the work, and to provide for holding class meetings every Wednesday. The committee have secured the valuable services of Dr. Frederick and trust that the employers of the City will see that their employees are interested in this important work. Further particulars may be had from A. Forrest, 328 Downie Street, City.

BURNING OF LEAVES WILL BE PROHIBITED

The latest in proposed civic legislation is a by-law to prohibit bonfires on the roadside. At a Board of Works meeting, held on Wednesday evenig it was decided, on motion of Aldermen Johnston and Duffus, to prepare a by-law prohibiting the lighting of bonfires along the public highway. The outstanding feature of the meeting was its brevity. This was due in a large measure to the fact that the Board of Works' session was preceded by a special meeting of th City Council. A secondary cause was the limited amount of business that was transacted.

The proposed by-law is the outcome of a report made by City Engineer Parsons concerning the destructive properties of fire when placed close to a cement sidewalk. He submitted a section of the by-law at present enforced in the city of Toronto. It practically prohibits the burning of leaves and rubbish on the road side.

A surety bond will be accepted by the City from Foley and Gleeson, paving contractors in lieu of a check for $3,500.

The City Enginer recommended that permission be granted to J. J. Turner and Sons to place a ring and metal cover in the sidewalk adjacent to their factory on George Stret.

AGREEMENT IS ENDORSED BY THE COUNCIL

Its Adoption Will Factlitate the Removal of Forty Wooden Trolley Poles—The Hydro Street Lighting System.

NEARING COMPLETION

A by-law to authorise the execution of an agreement between the City and the Peterborough Radial Railway Company was given its third reading at a special meeting of the City Council held on Wednesday evening. Those present were His Worship Mayor Bradburn, Aldermen Duffus, Buller, Duncan, Johnston, Green, Gillespie and Anderson.

The indenture is designed to facilitate the transfer of the suspension wires supporting the street railway power wire from the wooden trolley poles to the City's ornamental iron poles. Its adoption will also facilitate the removal of about forty wooden trolley poles from off George and Charlotte Streets. The remainder of the poles will have to remain until the City acquires possession of the distribution system of the Peterborough Light and Power Company. This is due to the fact that the company carry a number of feed wires on the trolley poles in addition to the suspension wires. The trolley poles carrying feed wires will have to remain until some other arrangement can be made for their disposition. The majority of the forty poles will come off Charlotte Street and that portion of George Street situated between Charlotte Street and the C.P.R. Station.

HAS BEEN MODIFIED.

The agreement, which occasioned considerable discussion, has been modified to a considerable extent since its previous appearance before the council. The by-law received the unanimous endorsation of the council. Aldermen Johnston and Duncan fathered the resolution supporting its adoption.

As the conclusion of the meeting Alderman Johnston, chairman of the Power Committee, expressed the opinion that the street lighting system would be in operation within a few weeks. Arrangements have been made to secure a supply of power, with which to operate the magnetite are lights that are about to be attached to the Hydro-Electric poles.

NEW CHANNEL AT RICE LAKE SAID TO BE FILLING IN Material Dredged Out Was of Sawdust and Light Soil and Is Slipping Back.

SIMILAR TO CULEBRA CUT

Rice Lake Steamers Will Scarcely Use It for Present Traffc.

The dredge Auburn has been tied up for the winter near Lock Number Six after a very pleasant summer spent at Rice Lake. It was engaged in cutting a waterway through what is known as the "blind channel," someone having figured out this was practical and desirable. The Auburn has been scooping away during the summer months through the mud and marsh, and it is understood that the work has been completed and a new passage is at the disposal of the vessels plying between Peterborough and the Lake points.

The principal reason for the undertaking of the work was to secure a less angular outlet than the eastern channel for prospective navigation which the opening of the Trent Valley Canal should bring. A farmer living near the mouth of the Otonabee states that the material through which the dredge has been cutting is loose sediment and mostly sawdust, and that it has slipped back into the channel almost as quickly as it was scooped out.

Nothing definite upon this point has been learned, but the statement made by the Rice Lake man who is much on the water seems possible in view of the character of the material which as sediment had been carried down to the river's mouth.

In view of the fact that the completion of the canal is not promised for the near future admirable foresight has been displayed in preparing for it. The Rice Lake boats will scarcely use it and for these reasons. A vessel coming from the east end of the lake invariably calls at Hiawatha, and would therefore take the old east channel to get into the river instead of cutting out into the lake to strike the new opening. Again, a boat calling at points on the western end of thel ake would prefer to strike the west channel instead of looping around for the new entrance. Such is the opinion of the Rice Lake man who says that the bulk of the present traffic will continue through the old channels unless they are allowed to become clogged up and impassable.

GIRL IS LOST FOR HOURS IN SNOW STORM

Search Party Find Fifteen-Year-Old Daughter of Fred Sawyer, After a Long Hunt

IN PITIABLE CONDITION

Examiner Special:

Special to The Examiner:

MINDEN, Nov. 13.—Miss Stella Sawyer, the 15-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Sawyer, residing in Lutterworth township, about six miles from Minden village, was lost during the heavy snow storm of Monday last. She went out in the morning to hunt up some cattle and lost her bearings, as the ground was covered with snow and the storm raging. Her father hunted for her during the forenoon and failing to find her, a number of settlers and citizens organized themselves into a searching party and about 10 o'clock at night a distant cry was heard in answer to their calls, and her father reached the place and found her, near the head of Swamp Lake in Anson Township, about four miles from home. The young lady was almost exhausted and in a pitiable condition, having become excited and lost her shoes, leaving her feet exposed to the cold and wet. Her stockings had become torn and were almost gone, and her mittens lost, but she was still walking trying to find her way out of the dense forest. Other members of the party were signalled and assisted in carrying the lost girl home as her feet was much swollen and had been frost bitten.

"SHOWER" WAS GREAT SUCCESS

The directors and superintendent of the Protestant Home are happy to report a most generous response to the invitations extended to the fruit and linen shower yesterday afternoon. The Home is the richer by about one hundred and fifty jars of fruit and pickles and lavish gifts of household linen including a web of sheeting, several bed spreads, sheets, pillow cases, towels, etc. The management is deeply grateful for these proofs of interest in the Home.

Among the linen received was a splendid donation from Richard Hall and Son.

AUDREY MAPLE

Prima-donna, late with "The Arcadians," now with "The Dream Maiden," Grand next Wednesday.

"The Dream Maiden" is the biggest and most pretentious musical show of the present season and is playing a very limited road tour before it opens on Broadway in the last week of November.

It carries 71 people in the company, two sixty-foot baggage cars of scenery, ten extra musicians including a Harp Soloist to augment our local orchestra. The costumes and scenic effects are said to be of the very highest class. The book is by Allen Lowe who wrote "The Isle of Spice," the ten year success, and eighteen other big musical shows.

The score is by the Hungarian Waltz King, Bela Laszky. Charles Sinclair who staged most of the Savage successes made the production and this booking is certainly a tribute to the energy and ability of the local management. "The Dream Maiden," will be seen at the Grand, on Wednesday, Nov. 19th.

FOG INTERFERES.

BARNIA, Nov. 13—Great fog banks have settled down all over Lake Huron, this afternoon, and the work of identification of ships and the search for remains is made difficult.

ANOTHER BIG FREIGHTER REPORTED TO BE LOST

Bodies of Two of the Crew of the Steamer "John A. McGean," Are Washed Ashore Near Goderich —Inquest Has Opened.

AFTERMATH OF DISASTER

Special Wire to The Examiner.

GODERICH, Nov. 13.—That most of the Canadian mariners who met death in the raging seas of Lake Huron on Sunday or Monday did not go down with the ship, but had taken to life boats in the howling blizzard, is evidenced by the indications of the bodies and wreckage of the steamer Wexford. Night Engineer Harry Stowe of the Goderich Power Plant says he heard the Wexford's whistle towards midnight on Sunday. From the way the bodies are dressed they know their vessel was foundering and had time to prepare. Each body was wearing a lifebelt securely fastened. Chief Engineer James Scott had his overcoat on. One theory, which has gained ground is that the machinery broke down and the rudder washed away in the height of the storm. In all, fifteen bodies of the Wexford's victims have been found. At the inquest, however, Captain Bassett, Manager of the Company, stated he was convinced the life boats were never launched, but that they may have tried to get away on rafts. At any rate he said he didn't think the body of Captain Bruce Cameron of the Wexford would ever be found. He would stay with the ship until the waters rolled over him. The inquest will be resumed next Tuesday at Zurich.

SARNIA, Ont., Nov. 13.—The latest to be added to the wrecks is the steamer "John A. McGean" of Cleveland, one of the largest freighters on the lakes, which passed up bound on Sunday. The bodies of two of her men and some wreckage have been washed ashore near here.

LONDON, Nov. 13.—Discussing rapidly the accumulating disasters on the Great Lakes, the Underwriters are saying that the Great Lakes of Canada and the United States are clearly demonstrated as the graveyard of the world's navigation, and vessels traveling there must be treated as such by the imposition of much higher insurance rates.

ALL HOPE GONE.

GODERICH, ONT., Nov. 13.— The last hope for Canada's giant freighter the Carruthers was given up this morning, when hundreds of feet of fresh wreckage was washed up on the shores of Lake Huron for ten miles from Point Farm to Black Point. It all bears the name and stamp of the pride of Canada's merchant lake marine. In addition there are oars from life boats one and two of the Carruthers, which might be an indication that the crew attempted to reach the rocky shores in boats.

No Survivors.

TORONTO, NOV. 13.—"Get the stories of survivors; that's what we want" is the standing instructions to newspapermen on the great lakes' wrecks, but the appalling and outstanding fact of it all is that there are no survivors. Not one man who sailed merrily away on those many ships lost has lived to tell the tale, so far as is known to-day. While there is still a bare chance that some have been picked up by vessels that survived the storm or cast ashore on to a barren or isolated community, it looks as if the last grand fights for life by the gigantic grain carriers and their heroic crews can never be described, except by guess work.

REV. DR. MARSH IS LEAVING

Accepts Call to Holstein and Preaches Last Sermon Here on November 30

7 YEARS AT SPRINGVILLE

Rev. Dr. Marsh has accepted a call to Holstein, in Western Ontario, and terminates seven years of srevice at the Springville Presbyterian Church. A meeting of the Presbytery was held this morning with Rev. Mr. Brown of Campbellford as Moderator. Rev. George Kendell of Dromore, in the Presbytery of Saugeen, was present and prosecuted the call. Mr. John McIntosh, Mr. Alex. Lang, Mr. Jos. Sanderson and Mr. Ira Robson represented the Springville congregation and opposed the translation of Dr. Marsh. They spoke in the highest terms of him and pressed a plea that he remain with the Springville congregation. Rev. Dr. Marsh, however, considering his seven years spent with them, accepted, and will preach for the last time at Springville on Sunday, Nov. 30th; and the pulpit will be declared vacant on December 7. Rev. Mr. Pogue has been appointed Moderator of Springville until the vacancy is filled.

A PRESENTATION TO MR. JORY

On Monday evening, in spite of the snow and sleet, about seventy-five of his friends and associates, gathered at the home of Mr. T. E. Jory, of Pine Grove, to extend to him their kind wishes, prior to his leaving for his new home in the great, golden West.

During the evening which was very pleasantly spent in music and social intersourse, the following programme was creditably rendered:

Selection—By gramaphone.
Song—By Mr. Walter Carveth.
Instrumental music.
Selection — "Poor John," gramaphone.
Quartette—By Misses Crowe and Payne, Messrs Carveth and Payne.
Reading—By Mrs. Lemay.
Selection — "When Bob White Comes Whistling in the Meadow," gramaphone.
Solo—By Mrs. Hamblin.
Vocal Duet—By Miss Payne and Mr. Payne.
Selection—"My Uncle's Farm," gramaphone.
Solo—By Mr. Walter Carveth.
Selection—by gramaphone

Mr. Jory was then asked to come forward and the following address was read by Mr. H. J. Abbott, while Mr. Albert Darling made the presentation of a well-filled purse.

Pine Grove, Nov. 10th, 1913.

Mr. T. E. Jory:

Dear Friend,—We, your friends and neighbours, knowing of youri ntended departure from our midst, feel that we canot let you leave us without showing you some token of our regret at your departure.

As a neighbour we have always found you helpful and obliging. As a friend we have found you true.

Therefore we ask you to accept this purse as a mark of the high esteem in which you are held by us.

Wishing you all success and prosperity in your new home.

Signed on behalf of your friends and neighbours,

HERBERT J. ABBOTT,
ALBERT DARLING.

Mr. Jory replied in a few well chosen words—thanking his friends and extending a hearty invitation to all to visit them in their distant home, assuring the people of Pin Grove that they would always have a warm spot in his affections.

Later in the evening dainty refreshments were served and the very pleasant evening was brought to a close by all joining in singing "For He's a Jolly Good Fellow" and "God Be with You Till We Meet Again."

HINDUISM VS. BUDDHISM

An enthusiastic group of young men listened to the debate on, "Resolved, that Hinduism has done more for the world than Buddhism" in the Young Men's Christian Association last evening. Some valuable and instructive points were brought out by both sides, but the debate was decided in favour of the negative. The young men concluding that Buddhism was of more value and has done more for the world than Hinduism.

On next Wednesday evening the subject for discussion will be Taoism.

SORRY TO PART.

Not only will the congregation of the Springville Presbyterian church, but the whole community, including the city of Peterborough, be sorry to lose the presence of Rev. Dr. Marsh, who has accepted the call to the parish of Holstein, in the South Riding of Grey. Rev. Dr. Marsh has been pastor of the Springville Church for seven years, and during his ministry every interest of his charge has flourished, and increasing progress has marked every year of his pastorate. He won the affections of his flock to a very enviable degree, and the parting with him will be marked by deep regret on both sides. He has also made himself extremely popular with the public. As president of the Royal Astronomical Society and a practical astronomer of great attainments and enthusiasm, he wrought as successfully in popularising interest in, and study of, heavenly bodies as in his pastoral capacity he contributed to arousing a deeper interest in heavenly places. The public will join with the Examiner in deploring Dr. Marsh's departure, and in wishing him success and happiness in his new field of labour and usefulness.

ALIKE AND NOT ALIKE.

The First Lord of the Admiralty is becoming Sam Hughesic. Winston Churchill promises a thumping big naval budget, and has thereby called down the condemnation of the Liberal press, which supports the government of which he is a member. But we hear no Conservative journalistic condemnation of Col., the Hon. Sam's kite flying in the matter of militia expenditures which he has doubled in his short term of office. Churchill and Hughes are alike in their mad metohds, but their party defenders are not alike—the gorge of one rises, the other swallows everything.

SOMETHING PROVED.

The recent saturnalia of wreckage on the Canadian lakes, with all its sadness, gives us something to be proud of. We see in the press picture after picture of immense Canadian-built crafts, as solidly put together as if their keels had been laid by the Tyne or Tweed. We have the practical disproof of Churchill's sneer at Canada's ship-building incapacity and of Mr. Borden's unpatriotic declaration that Canada could not build a little navy in twenty-five or fifty years. We don't think much of the opinion in this regard of Little Englanders or Little Canadians.

WHY NOT?

Mr. Alex. Morrison, who was corrupted into Parliament and was welcomed to the House with the frantic cheers of his fellow Conservatives, justified the cabinet rank of Hon. Robert Rogers, the "winner of elections"—right or wrong, especially wrong. He declared in order to escape investigation of the monumental crookedness by which he was counted in, that he was illegally elected, that his majority of 700 odd was compiled by corrupt methods and was surreptituously subtracted—practically stolen—from the vote that would have otherwise, been cast for his opponent, Mr. Richardson. He also declared by withdrawing the cross petition that Mr. Richardson's election battle was fairly fought; which is to say that, as a matter of fact, Mr. Richardson had a majority of the legally deposited ballots. Why not, therefore, give Mr. Richardson the seat which he fairly won and which Mr. Morrison vacated?

TUBERCULOSIS CAMPAIGN.

The recent revival of interest in tuberculosis is encouraging, and the National Sanitarium Association and those sympathizing with its objects have reason to be heartened. The fight against the white plague, has the encouragement of more or less success. When we reflect that the death roll from tuberculosis in the province last year totalled 2,250—the population of a thriving town—we should gain new interest in the preventive and ameliorative treatment that has been attended with such striking results. Since the National Sanitarium Association was established, it has sent back to their homes greatly benefitted, 4,500 patients, "in addition to weeding out the infection from several times that number of houses where, otherwise, several deaths would have occurred." We all know of our personal knowledge, of very many local cases where improved methods of treatment of consumptives have resulted in cure or approximate cure. The work of the Sanitarium Association has, in addition to results from its specific objects, raised the general level of hygiene and thus has promoted the general welfare in a marked degree.

Interest in the campaign against tuberculosis should be as general as the manifecttions of its ravages. It is confined to no class, calling or condition. Rich and poor alike are subject to the scourge, and upon the poor especially the lash falls with painful severity, for the lingering nature of its duration not only affects the subject, but brings indirect results in the privations and poverty of homes it creates. There is hardly a home in Ontario that does not contain in its immediate or associate circle of relatives one or more victims—present or prospective, of tuberculosis.

Under such circumstances, and in view of the happy and, to a large extent, certain beneficial results coming from the adoption of preventive and palliative measures, the interest of the whole community is demanded.

It is pleasing to notice that this interest is strongly developed. On Sunday, Nov. 30, the ministers of all the churches of all the province are asked to give, and will no doubt give, addresses from the pulpit upon the subject of tuberculosis, especially in relation to its ravages and the measures adopted for dealing with it. Archbishop McNeil, of Toronto, in addition to a donation of $250 to endow a bed in one of the Free Hospitals for Consumptives, has enlisted the co-operation of the Separate School Board of Toronto in the promotion of the objects of the anti-consumption campaign and has announced his intention of urging the Catholic clergy of his diocese to join in the crusade against tuberculosis on Sunday, Nov. 30th.

While the addresses of preachers on this Sunday throughout the province are specifically directed to the work of arousing popular interest and giving specific direction to the higher activities of their flocks, yet throughout the year, Sunday after Sunday, the preachers will have spoken in favour of the fight against tuberculosis if they have preached the true spirit of the Gospel, the altruistic spirit which is its real foundation. The Gospel teaches above all things the duty of loving our neighbour, and how can that love be shown better than by aiding by word and deed, the movement for removing or abating or ameliorating the effects of a scourge which so deeply and widely touches the lives, health and happiness of our fellowmen.

HOW GOVERNMENT IS WRECKING THE HUDSON BAY ROUTE

Lengthy consultations between the Hon. Frank Cochrane and various Government officials in Ottawa, regarding the allegations of blundering and mismanagement at Hudson Bay unparalleled in British North America, have resulted in the issuing of an official statement. This official statement announces that the dredge "Port Nelson," which was said to have broken her back, is safe in winter quarters. On all the other allegations silence is maintained. Nothing, is said about the five vessels chartered at huge coast, and carrying valuable cargoes, swinging at their anchors in Hudson Bay all the season because they could not be unloaded, and then to avoid being frozen in, either dumping their cargoes overboard or bringing them back again. Nothing is said about workmen breaking their contract by the score, at ruinous cost to themselves, rather than be subject to further hardships caused by mismanagement. Nothing is said about many thousand sof dollars' worth of provisions and materials being dumped on the ground and left exposed to the elements. And nothing is said about the wreck and total loss of the steamer "Cearanse" and her valuable cargo, although the captain of that steamer is practically defying the Government to investigate that wreck and expose the real conditions at Port Nelson.

Meanwhile the whole adventure on which the Government has embarked at Hudson Bay assumes increasingly serious aspect. From Ottawa it is now announced that the feeling is growing that a colossal blunder has been made in the Government's selection of Port Nelson as the Hudson Bay terminal. Port Nelson is at the mouth of the Nelson River, and it has before it so much low-lying ground, and so much shoal water, that it is stated vessels drawing more than 14 feet of water cannot get within seven miles of the "harbour," while the silt from the river is so great that no matter how the harbour may be dredged it will constantly fill up again. Fort Churchill, the site which was turned down, is, on the other hand, reported to have deep anchorage close to shore.

The whole scheme is exciting suspicion and dissatisfaction, even within the ranks of the Conservative party. For instance, the Ottawa "Citizen," a Conservative paper, says an engineer is making superhuman efforts to establish order out of chaos at Port Nelson and continues:

> "Beach-combers, recruited in political machine fashion, are sent up as labourers, only to return by the next boat. Skiled help is appointed through political pressure. Contracts for material pass through the political machine. Over all the lack of information and system, no one is responsible for anything."

The people of Canada will not be inclined to accept the last statement. They will hold the Government and the Hon. Frank Cochrane responsible. But that is not all. What will Western Canada say to the course which has been pursued? Western Canada sets great store by this Hudson Bay route Despite the prejudice long existing against this route, it forced the scheme forward, until it appeared within measurable distance of realization. The Conservative Government seemingly endorsed the scheme. Yet if the Government had deliberately set out to blacken the Hudson Bay route in the eyes of the world, it could not have succeeded better than it has done. The events of the past season have magnified the difficulties attending this new route to the sea, and have given Hudson Bay a reputation it will take many years to live down. —Montreal Telegraph.

IN THE WORLD OF SPORT

LANDMARK OF THE ENGLISH FOOTBALL LEAGUE REMOVED

Death of Alex. Brady, Who Brought the Everton Club Into Prominence---Aston Villa's Centre Forward is a Veritable Human Dynamo.

One by one the English Football League's early landmarks are being removed, and the latest to pass hence is Alex. Brady, best known to English followers, perhaps by reason of the services he rendered to the Everton Club during the first few years of the league's existence. Born near Glasgow in 1869, Brady's first club of any note was Renton, then in the zenith of its power. But Brady in those days was quite typical of the rolling stone Scotsman, and ere going to Everton as a young man just in his twenties, he had actually sampled football life with Celtic, Gainsborough Trinity, Newcastle East End, Sunderland, and Burnley. But at Everton he evidently found a more congenial atmosphere. At any rate, he stayed with the famous "Toffees," then located at Anfield Road, for several seasons, and not only helped Everton to win their only league championship in 1890-91, but went to make up the finest attack that Everton ever possessed, not excepting such as Sharp, McDermott, Young, Little, and Hardman. The forward combination of Latta, Brady, Geary, Chadwick, and Milward was a treat to behold by all but their foes, and for all-round ability and effectiveness they were possibly even ahead of Surderland's fine line of last season. Brady was only a little 'un, but like James Little he had a headpiece He was a non-showy player, however, the feature of his work being his accurate passing and his unselfishness, whilst, unlike the majority of the present day forwards, he could shoot well from any angle. About the end of 1892 Brady left Everton for Sheffield, and continued as a regular member of the Wednesday team there until 1898-99. He had by that time crossed over to inside left as partner to the fleet-footed Spikesley, but only appeared in six league fixtures in the season named ere being succeeded by "Jocky" Wright, a craftsman and "soloist" just acquired from Bolton Wanderers. Poor Brady, after much suffering and misfortune, passed away at Renton, just where he set his first-class football rolling. Life, after all, like football, is a quick passing game.

A Human Dynamo.

See Hampton as he goes tearing through towards his opponents' goal, a human dynamo charged with electricity at a high pressure, at practically bursting point. It is not in him to take matters easily or quietly; always he must b pulling out the last ounce, and it is this factor which helped Aston to win so many games last year. Within Harry's trimly compact frame is compressed a tremendous store of latent energy, and also an appreciable amount of sheer football cleverness. For in these days Hampton would not be the great forward he certainly is if he had no other asset than his dare-devil dash and extraordinary vigour. But after all, it is his dash which counts for more than anything else.

Is Feared by Opponents.

Making a broad definition, there are two classes of centre forwards: those whose chief value is wrapped up in themselves, and those whose chief value lies in the fact that they can bring out the best from the men on either side of them. And, of course, your great centre forward is he who happily combines the two virtues. Hampton very clearly belongs to the first of the two classes. He is no dunce at distributing the play, but it is just Hampton himself who chiefly counts. To say that he is the most feared forward in England is hardly to over state the fact. His best testimonial would come from the full backs, who, Saturday by Saturday, try to stop him. They would be able to speak eloquently of Hampton's little ways, ways which keep them on a perpetual qui vive and at never-ceasing tension.

JUNIOR HOCKEY PLAYERS ARE ASKED TO REPORT

A number of new candidates for the Peterborough Junior O.H.A. team registered last night, and more are expected to-night. Any player who wishes to have a chance to try for the team this winter is asked to call at The Examiner office this evening and leave his name and particulars as to his age in order that birth certificates may be looked up as soon as possible.

BALL CLUB MEETING

Prospects for Next Season Will be Discussed

A meeting of the Peterborough Baseball Club will be held early next week for the purpose of winding up the season's affairs and discussing details in connection with next season's campaign.

SATURDAY'S GAMES ARE IMPORTANT

Chance for a Tie in All Three Senior Leagues

The Canadian Rugby Union will meet in Toronto on Saturday night to arrange dates for the semi-finals and finals for the championships in all thre series, junior, intermediate and senior. Challenges are in the hands of the secretary from four affiliated unions, viz.: the Inter-Provincial, Ontario, and Quebec.

In the junior series are all four unions will likely be represented; in the intermediate series, Ontario will not be represented; in the senior series it depends upon the outcome of the championship races in the affiliated unions, but Quebec will not be represented, not having a senior series.

Upon Saturday's senior Rugby games in all three Rugby unions depend the championships of their respective unions.

If McGill beat Varsity, the red and white will win the Intercollegiate; if Varsity win it wil be a tie, with a play-off on the 22nd—at Kingston.

If the Argos beat Ottawa at Rosedale, the Big Four title will go to Hamilton. If the combines win Ottawa will be tied with Hamilton with a play-off on the 22nd—at Toronto.

If Hamilton R. C. beat Toronto R. & A.A.A. the O.R.Y.U. title will go to Parkdale. If the T.R. & A.A. team win they will be tie with Parkdale with a play-off on the 22nd—at Rosedale.

COLLINGWOOD HOCKEYIST WAS STORM VICTIM

Reported among the victims of the great tragedies of the inland seas, due to the terrible storm of the last weekend was F. Bruce Cameron, of Collingwood, captain of the "Wexford," and one of the prominent hockey players of that town, which last winter won the intermediate championship of the O.H.A. Captain Cameron, although a young man, was one of the hockey "stand-bys" of Collingwood, and was on last season's list of players although he did not participate in the final games. The sympathy of the O.H.A. and the entire hockey world is extended to the young widow in the hour of her affliction.

BASEBALL

HAMILTON, Nov. 12.—Eddie Holly, the well-known player who will be found in charge of the Hamilton baseball club next year, is in great demand these days. Holly is wanted in Syracuse, where Fred Burchell, the former Montreal player, is part owner and eager to place Holly in charge of the Syracuse team. A Southern league club has offered the Toronto club $1,000 for the player, while the Regina club, of the Western Canada league, wanted to purchase him. President McCafferty of the Toronto club, has made up his mind to place the player in this city, especially as Holly is well satisfied to come here, and it is a policy that has always been adopted by the Toronto club to give the player concerned a chance to suit himself as much as possible.

REGINA, Nov. 12.—Eddie Holly is not available as manager of the Regian baseball team next season. His selection was endorsed at a meeting of the club directors yesterday, but, as intimated in the Daily Province yesterday morning, he was under contract for the season.

Holly has been playing shortstop on the Toronto International league club, and immediately after the meeting, Secretary Pyke sent a wire to James J. McCaffery, president of the Torontos.

An answer was received last night to the effect that it would be impossible for Regina to secure Holly, but offering the services of Catcher Graham, formerly of the Philadelphia Nationals. Mr. McCaffery considers he would make an ideal manager for Regina. Toronto's only reason for letting him go was that Toronto had four catchers under contract and one or more had to be given other jobs. However, Toronto asks $1,500 for the release of Graham.

Peaches Graham is generally admitted to be a first-class catcher; of his ability as a manager no one knows, so it is hardly likely the Regina club will be anxious to pay $1,500 on a blind chance.

Second choice at the meeting of the Regina club directors yesterday was Charley Stis, a player who had had considerable experience in high-grade baseball circles. He is recommended by Charley Barrett and other well-known baseball men. Stis played outlaw Federal league last season, but previous to that can produce an exceptional record as a minor league player and manager. He holds down the second station. Another meeting will be held next Friday to decide the management.

LONDON, Nov. 12.—One of the important matters that will be discussed by the London baseball club when it meets this week will be the location of a new ball park. The lease on Tecumseh park has expired, and other parties have secured an option on it. This probably means that the West London meadow will not be the scene of the local Canadian league contests when the season opens next May. The directors are now facing the problem of securing other grounds, and it is likely that early next spring work will be started on a brand new ball park.

Just where this work will be located is not definitely known as yet. The London street railway company has offered the local club the choice of three suitable sites, but nothing has been done in the matter so far. One of the best suggestions, and one that will probably be acted upon, is that the London ball club ask the city council for the tract of land lying east of Woodland cemetery. The city owns a large level strip of property there, and it would make an ideal baseball park. The Springbank car line runs along the side of it, and the pipe line road forms its southern boundary. The land is lying idle at present, and it is believed that the city council would grant the local club a free lease of ten years, providing it built grandstands and went to the expense of fitting it up as a baseball park. Although not so close to the heart of the city as Tecumseh park, it is only about twenty minutes' walk from the corner of Dundas and Richmond streets.

To Try the Freight Rates Case.—Seldom are the issues of any case before the Dominion Railway Commission large enough to need the services of the complete Board of Railway Commissioners. They will be gathered together at Ottawa, however, to try the big freight rates case this month. The issues include the rates charged by the companies for the transportation of freight from one Province to another throughout the whole Dominion of Canada. The above are from new photographs of the full board. Eminent counsel from all parts of Canada will be present to represent the various Provinces, from British Columbia to Prince Edward Island.

EXTENSION OF ERIE FRANCHISE IS HELD OVER

London Advertiser—By action of the National Baseball Association board of arbitration, at Columbus, Ohio, announced this morning the extension of the Canadian League to Erie, Pa., has been held in abeyance until after Jan. 1. Until that time the former holders of the baseball franchise in Erie have an opportunity to make good. Unless they do, according to President Samuel Stevely, of the London Baseball Club, Erie will revert to the Canadian League.

The aplication of the Canadian League was for territorial rights to Erie, to which it is desired to transfer the Guelph franchise. The board decided to give Erie until Jan. 1 to organize the territory.

When the news of the board's decision was given to President Stevely by The Advertiser, he expressed no surprise.

Paid for Protection.

"The Canadian League has paid for protection on the Erie franchise, and the decision handed down by the board simply means that they have given the former owners of the Erie franchise an opportunity to make good and organize another league. If they don't, then the territory naturally reverts to the Canadian League."

John H. Farrell, secretary-treasurer of the National Baseball Association, to-day announced the decision of the board, which was reached after a session which extended into the early hours of the morning.

GETTING INTO THE BIG LEAGUES

(By Christy Mathewson.)

Getting into the big league is largely a matter of luck. Nearly all the great stars have come in through a lucky break. Take the case of John Honus Wagner, for example.

Wagner played around the country from one place to another for a year or so, and nobody thought much of him because he looked clumsy when he worked. He still looks clumsy. Everybody knows, however, that he is not clumsy, but is exceedingly fast in his awkward way. Before his legs started to go back on him, he used to cover ground about as rapidly as any man in the big league.

Harry Pulliam, who was the secretary of the Louisville club years ago, and president of the National League when he killed himself, heard of Wagner on one of his trips to New York, the big Dutchman having signed up with the Passaic, N.J., team at that time. Rumour reached Pulliam that Wagner was destroying a lot of fences with his hitting, so he went over to Passaic one Sunday to take a look at Honus in action.

Pulliam knew a ball player as soon as he could lay his eyes on one, and it took only one look to make him appreciate Wagner.

"I want you to come to the big league," he told Wagner, after the game.

Honus has always been slow to make changes. He was getting a salary of about $125 per month with Passaic, I think.

"Why should I?" asked Wagner cautiously.

"You'll make more money," replied Pulliam, expecting this argument to clinch it.

"But I get here all I need," said Honus.

That was a staggering answer to come from a ball player, but Pulliam finally induced Wagner to go to Louisville and wired Barney Dreyfuss about as follows:

"Have found and signed a wonder. Am bringing him back with me."

After they got started on the journey Pulliam asked Wagner if there was anything he would like.

"Yes," replied the Dutchman. "Some bananas would go good."

Pulliam got off the train at the next stop and bought a hand of bananas for his find. Wagner rode the rest of the way to Louisville munching bananas and scattering the skins out of the window along the right of way. There is no record of any accident because some subsequent train slipped on the banana skins, but Pulliam declared afterwards that Wagner made a conscientious effort to leave a trail of banana skins all the way to the Kentucky metropolis. When they arrived there Barney Dreyfuss, anxious to get a look at the find, met his secretary.

"Where is the demon?" asked Dreyfuss, impatiently.

"There he is," answered Pulliam, pointing to the stolid Dutchman.

"Who got you to buy that big, clumsy looking piece of baseball furniture?" queried Dreyfuss, in disgust.

"Wait until you watch him in action," retorted Pulliam.

Dreyfuss needed to take only one look then. Wagner has been with him ever since and has meant a fortune to the present owner of the Pittsburg club. That is how the Dutchman came into the game. It was more or less luck.

TO INTEREST CHILDREN.

Anti-Tuberculosis Crusaders Will Enlist Rising Generation in Schools.

With a view to bringing home to the minds of the next generation in Ontario the importance of the fight for the eradication of consumption, the Ontario Department of Education has issued a general circular to trustees and principals authorizing them to give up Friday, 28th November, to special exercises, in which the pupils will learn something of the campaign which is being carried on.

It is proposed that the children shall be assembled and shall listen to brief addresses outlining the history of the movement and giving them an idea of its importance in national life. Special emphasis will be laid on the rules of health by the observance of which each child may contribute to the cause and also his duty as a citizen-to-be, to the movement at large. In many cases the services of medical men and well-known citizens will supplement those of the school boards and principals. The youngsters will also be given literature which has been specially prepared by the National Sanatorium Association, the initiators of the recent action of the Minister of Education.

DON'T FORGET

Fire Brigade For The De Laval Plant

Last evening the members of the De Laval Company's Fire Brigade, spent two and a half hours the guests of Chief Howard, in his office. During that time the Head of the local Fire Brigade, addressed them on the science of fire-fighting.

The Fire Brigade of the De Laval Co. has been organized as the result of the decision of Messrs. Breyfogle, bookkeper, and R. J. Ruiter, who are in charge of the local branch of that industry. This is the final step of the officials of the company to insure good fire protection for their plant and employees, and it has met with commendation from the civic authorities.

The members of the newly-formed brigade are:

Chief—R. E. Russell.
Captain—A. W. Spencely.
1st Lieutenant—Earl R. Farmer.
2nd Lieutenant—George Ruiter.
Firemen—E. J. Moore, Bert Lemman, Ira Huggins, C. H. Huffman, Earl Clark, W. Godfrey, W. Griggs, I. Trunler, P. J. Buck, R. Dennis, Geo. Scott, A. Huggins.
Engineer—Michael Galligan.

Last night Chief Howard gave them detailed instructions in the handling of hose, chemicals and other fire-fighting apparatus, and explained the best way to tackle fires.

The members of the new brigade have volunteered to assist the local Fire Brigade, if they are in a position to do so at any time their services should be needed.

The Fire Brigade will drill once a week, and it is expected they will become proficient enough to deal effectively with any fire that may break out in the plant.

The Property Owners' Rights To Shade Trees

Trees Planted or Standing on the Highway Become the Property of the Owner—Council Must Give Owner Three Days' Notice

BEFORE REMOVING TREES

The following bulletin is from the Forestry Branch at Ottawa showing the rights of property owners to trees on streets:

"In legislation for the protection of shade and street trees, the Province of Ontario sets a good example for the rest of the Dominion. Under the tree planting act of the Province of Ontario trees planted or left standing on the public highways (and also on the toll roads) become the property of the owner of the land adjacent to the highway and nearest to such trees. Thus any company or individual destroying or damaging in any way (even tying a horse to) such trees without the owners consent is liable to a fine not to exceed $25.00 and costs, or imprisonment for not more than thirty days, half of the fine to go to the informant. Telephone companies, who, in the stringing of wires very often seriously injure and mutilate such trees, are apt to justify themselves to the property-owners by asserting their legal right to do such "pruning" because of established precedent. In this case no such practice, however long it has been tolerated by the property holders, becomes legally justifiable, and such companies are just as liable for damages the last time they injure the trees as they are the first time. However long a wire may have been attached to a tree, the owner if he has property in the tree, can compel its removal.

While even the owner may not remove shade trees on the highways without the consent of the municipal council, yet, on the other hand, not even the municipal council may remove any live trees without the consent of the owner of the property in front of which the tree stands unless such tree is within thirty feet of other trees, and even then the owner must be given at least three days' notice, and can demand compensation if he has planted and protected such tree.

The property owner who is aware of his rights in these respects will take greater interest in and greater care of the trees bordering the highway opposite his property. He will also have more incentive to plant shade trees.

MENDELSSOHN WAS STUDIED

Interesting Meeting of the Morning Musical Society

A meeting of the Morning Musical Society was held on Thursday last, at the residence of Mrs. W. H. Hill.

A very interesting paper on Mendelssohn was read by Mrs. Duncan Walker, following which various small facts not mentioned in the paper were given by members.

The programme of his works was very ably rendered by members:

Paper—Mrs. Walker.
Solo, "Canzonetta," strong Quartette.
"Spring Song"—Mrs. G. A. Smith.
Song, "Oh, rest in the Lord" (Elijah)—Miss Quartermaine.
Solo, "Songs Without Words No. 1"—Miss Morrow.
Vocal duet, "Oh, Wert Thou in the Cauld Blast"—Mrs. Fessenden, Miss Amy Hill.
Solo, "Songs Without Words, No. 7"—Mrs. Goodwill.
Duet, "War March of the Priests" (Athalia) — Mrs. Frederick, Miss Robertson.

The next meting will be held on Thursday, Nov. 20th, at Mrs. G. A. Smith's, 734 Water Street, at 10.30, sharp.

PROCEEDING WITH THE C. P. R. BRIDGE

Workmen were engaged on the western span of the C.P.R. bridge today, apparently engaged in razing it according to the company's original plans. The construction men had been ordered by the company not to proceed with the new bridge for the western channel because of the city's demand and government order that a swing section be placed in that span. At the station to-day it was rumoured that the original plans would be carried out. The workmen were engaged in removing the upper section to-day and evidently the rumour has some foundation. Mayor Bradburn did not know the company's intention, and there is nothing definitely known as to what the intentions are.

RETURNS FROM TRIP TO ENGLAND

Mr. Dick Evans has returned to Peterborough after a short visit to his former home in Birmingham, England. He left here on Oct. 4th and returned to the City yesterday, after a very rough passage on the Steamer Royal George. Mr. Evans took advantage of the visit home to see his old football love, Aston Villa, perform, and had the dubious pleasure of seeing his favourites beaten by Chelsea.

Youthful, Beautiful Skin Easy to Have

(From The Clubwoman)

You may be as healthy as a bird in the air and still have a poor complexion. Changing seasons and temperatures, winds, dust and dirt, are apt to injure any skin, even though the general health be good. When these external influences spoil the complexion, the natural thing is to remove the spoil by external means. Ordinary mercolized wax will do this. It will actually absorb the weather-beaten film-skin a little each day, in a week or two you'll have a brand new complexion, a new skin. The exquisitely beautiful and youthful complexion thus acquired, comes so easily, without harm or discomfort, there's no reason why any woman should not adopt this simple treatment. Get an ounce of mercolized wax at any drug store, apply nightly like cold cream, washing it off mornings. This will not fail in any case.

To quickly remove wrinkles, signs of care and age, bathe the face occasionally in a solution of powdered saxolite, 1 oz., dissolved in ½ pt. witch hazel. The results will surprise you.

Death Of Rev. J. H. Robinson

Well Known Clergyman Passes Away at Hamilton

HAMILTON, Nov. 13.—A very large circle of friends in Hamilton as well as other parts of the province learned with sincere regret of the death, this morning, at the home of his daughter, in Arthur, of Rev. J. H. Robinson, D.D., former pastor of the Emerald Street and Simcoe Street Methodist churches of this city. Since the last meeting of the Hamilton conference, Rev. Dr. Robinson has been out of pastoral work, having retired then. On the completion of his pastorate at Simcoe Street Church last June, he moved to his farm at Oakville where he has since resided. A little over a week ago, he went to visit his daughter at Arthur, and while there became ill. Pneumonia developed and although he was better yesterday, he took a turn for the worst and passed away at 7 o'clock this morning.

John Howson Robinson was born in the township of Smith, near Peterborough, and was of English descent. His mother, Frances Howson, was a saintly woman, who died when he was nine years of age, but her teaching and example shaped his life. His father was a devout man, and an official in the Wesleyan Methodist Church for years. He entered the ministry when he was twenty years of age, and was ordained in Toronto by Rev. W. Morley Punshon at the conference in 1870. He received his education at the Peterborough High School and Toronto University. As a pastor he was faithful in the discharge of his duties and was an earnest evangelical preacher. He took an active part in the work of the Sunday school, the Epworth League and the temperance movement. He was a careful man of good judgment and deep sympathy and made many friends wherever he was known.

Deceased was an ex-president of the Hamilton conference and also served as chairman of district and was elected delegate to the general conference in 1903. During his pastoral work he was located at Bobcaygeon, Mindon, Oakville Streetsville, Invermay, Markdale, Scarboro, Merrittin, Grimsby, Trafalgar, Stamford and St. Davids, Tagersville, Simcoe, Tillsonburg, Emerald Street, Hamilton; Norwich and Simcoe street, Hamilton. He is survived by his wife, who was formerly Miss. Culham, of Oakville; three daughters, Mrs. Edward Brooklebank, of Arthur; Mrs. George Symons, of Oakville, and Mrs. Gilvert Dunkin, of Norwich; and one son, Culham, in the West.

The remains will be brought to Oakville for interment and the funeral will take place there at 2:30 Friday afternoon.

Mr. T. W. Robinson, of this city, is a brother of the deceased.

Great Interest In The Lecture

Mrs. Alice Stebbins Wells to Address Women's Council

The local Council of Women have completed arrangements for Mrs. Alice Stebbins Wells to lecture in the Collegiate Institute Hall, here, on Nov. 20th. This lecture will be free to the public and the local Council ask for the hearty support of all citizens. That they are bringing a person whose abilities and influence are recognized all over the continent is evident from the press reports which have appeared in the leading newspapers. The following extract is from the Ottawa Citizen:

"Mrs. Wells is no academic speaker and speaks from a fund of knowledge acquired through actual experience, and she is so earnest and of such a sweet and attractive personality as she presents her message concerning several grave problems, and why there should be police women, that sooner or later the civilized world must answer. Just hear her once and the average person will be converted to the philosophy of her arguments.

A TRIP THROUGH PALESTINE

Hallowe'en Cases Were Dismissed

Information Against Two Local Young Men Dismissed

The two young men, who have been before the court since Hallowe'en night, charged with tearing down J. D. Tully's fence on McDonnel Street, were found "not guilty" this morning, and the information against them discharged.

It will be remembered that about 9.30 o'clock Hallowe'en night, Constables John Dundas and Hayward were on duty near the corner of McDonnel and Reid Streets. They heard a crash and running across the road found a young fellow standing on a fence that had been torn down. They arrested him, and later his friend, who had run at the approach of the constables, was brought into court. The story they told was that they had merely fallen over the fence, which was lying across the sidewalk.

Yesterday, evidence was put in by Mr. J. Corkery to prove that that particular fence was down at eight o'clock Hallowe'en night.

In discharging the case this morning the Magistrate said that the evidence proved conclusively that the fence was down at 8 o'clock.

Bruce Roddie, who has been sleeping in the police station the past few nights, appeared in court this morning, charged with vagrancy. He pleaded guilty, but Magistrate Dumble refused to make him a permanent lodger. He allowed Roddie to go, but said that it meant Central Prison for him if he ever appeared in court again.

School Teachers Show Enterprise

One of the most interesting letters recently received by the Dairy Commissioner, Ottawa, is from a school teacher in Alberta, who asks for milk record forms and literature on the subject of cow testing, because—now listen: Some of the boys in the school are starting a contest in recording the production of individual cows to last one year.

This opens up a most promising field for every school teacher and for thousands of boys in our country schools. In this we would be following somewhat slowly in the wake of many schools in the United States and New Zealand, where the use of the Babcock milk tester has been taught for some time. In a dairy country like this, we should be out blazing trails for other teachers and boys to follow.

No better work could be taken up by such lads, for any record work of that kind must infallibly lead to better, vastly better, conditions on dairy farms. Probably these Alberta lads will soon be excellent dairymen obtaining seventy-five or one hundred dollars per cow.

Needless to say the Dairy Division will be only too ready to supply blank forms and instructions in all such cases.

WISHING TIME AWAY

By RUTH CAMERON

THE astonishing swiftness with which the years of our life pass is something which everyone, or at least everyone over thirty, realizes.

Birthdays fly by like the telegraph poles on a railway journey; the little pig-tailed girl down the street goes away to boarding-school for a year or two—surely it was no longer than that—and when we next see her, she has become a young lady. The pigtails are wound in a shining crown around her stately head and the thin legs which used to twinkle out from under her abbreviated skirts, are decorously hidden in a grown-up gown. We go away ourselves for a year or two — surely it was no longer than that — we come back again and lo, another miracle, the young lady of boarding school dignity is pushing a go-cart down the street. We wonder whose baby she had borrowed, and I can scarcely believe it when our family tells us that she has been a matron for two years.

And so it goes. "We come to earth to cry, we grow old and then we sigh, older still, and then we die," as the Englishman says; and all with the dazzling, breath-taking swiftness of the flash of a gull's wing, or, to be more modern, the passage of a moving picture film.

And now to the point. Since we realize that all this is so; since we perceive all too well the evanescence of life, and for the most part regret it (for while we may admit that life is all a meeting show, most of us are eager to stay and see the show a little longer), why should be be continually wishing that some period of time would pass even more swiftly?

Time, you know, it just another word for life, and yet how often one hears people wishing time away!

And for what trifling reasons!

"It doesn't seem as if I could wait for the twentieth of the month," says the young lady next door. We ask her why and she explains that the magazine containing the next installment of the most fascinating novel ever written comes out on that day.

"Oh dear! It seems as if Friday would never come!" sighs the little High School girl across the way. "What's Friday? Why, don't you know? Our big dance." Foolish little girl, to wish away even a day of the happiest time of her life!

"How I hate this autumn weather!" says a neighbour of mine, "every year it seems as if I could hardly wait for winter!"

Another neighbour, of the masculine persuasion, is always impatiently marking time from the twentieth to the twenty-eighth of each month. Why? Because the twentieth is about the date he runs out of money, and the twenty-eighth is pay-day.

Myself, I used to hate school bitterly, and if I could have wiped away the time from Monday morning to Friday afternoon of every week I would surely have done it. In my mind I divided the school work into fifths and tenths, and rejoiced at the end of each session that I was one tenth nearer Friday.

So far as we know this is the only life we shall live on this earth. Let's live it, then; let's get the best out of every moment, every hour and every day, and remember that time is just another name for life, and not be continually wishing our lives away.

SPECIAL RATES FOR BIG SHOW

TORONTO, Nov. 13.—Recognizing the importance of the National Live Stock, Horticultural and Diary Show which opens at Toronto on Nov. 17, the railways have granted special excursion rates at low fares for next week. From places where the first-class fare is less than $2.50, a return ticket will be issued for single fare, plus 25 cents, which will include admission to the show in Toronto. From other places in the Province, except the territory west of Azilda, on the C. P. R., round trip tickets will be sold for the lowest one-way fare plus 50 cents, which also includes admission to the grounds.

Mr. A. P. Westervelt, Manager of the National Live Stock, Horticultural and Dairy Show, reports the largest number of entries received for any similar exhibition ever held in Canada. Poultry entries number over 3,500, with pigeons, canaries, bantams, pheasants, guinea fowl, etc., making the feathered flock total 5800. Horses will be 350; beef cattle and dairy cattle 300 each; sheep and swine 850, while flowers, fruit and vegetables will show a development in great advance of former exhibitions.

An important feature is the number of entries that have been received from United States breeders and exhibitors. Car loads of horses, live stock and poultry are being sent forward for the opening date. The judges in all classes are men of acknowledged standing and experience. The show is bound to be a great stimulus to breeding and increased production.

Have Something Dainty Near Your Face

Did the reader ever realize how much, a dainty touch near the face adds to one's appearance?

It may be a fashionable Malines Ruffle in purple or cerise, that ties with a bow of black ribbon and costs $1.25,or it may be one of the new stock collars trimmed with satin.

These are especially dainty, because they are made of shadow lace, cream or ecru, with a double jabot, the satin trimming being in a number of bright pretty colours. Their price is only 50c.

While for those women who like the turn down collar, there is something very neat and nice in the collars of Brocaded Ratine in Nell Rose and Copenhagen Blue.

They have a smart jabot of pleated shadow lace, and sell for 50c.

One's Underclothing is The True Index of Refinement

THE FAMOUS LORD CHESTERFIELD SAID TO HIS SON: "The polish of a gentleman extends right down to his shoes," and one might well add, that the refinement of a women extends to every garment she wears.

Apart from the necessity of being warmly clothed, it is a great satisfaction to oneself, to know that one's attractive outward appearance does not cover a slipshod method of under-dress.

And combinations form the neatest, the most convenient kind of underwear that women can don for the cold weather. There is the "Klosed Krotch" brand which comes in cotton, union and wool, in sizes for children, misses and women, and also for those of large proportions. They can be obtained with long or short sleeves, the prices commencing at 75c and continuing upwards until one reaches the famous Jaeger wear of all wool, guaranteed unshrinkable.

In this make there is perfection.

Jaeger combinations of pure wool are $3.50, while those of silk and wool are $4.75

White is The Emblem of Purity

Hence its use for those things that maintain a strict degree of cleanliness such as table linens, undergarments and bed clothes.

And with regard to bed clothes there is nothing that looks more inviting or conveys such a sense of sweet cleaniness as a white bed spread.

Those of Marseilles weave are to be preferred because they are of close texture and the patterns are good.

There is one in particular that we sell at $1.49 that is really a pleasure to examine,because of its whiteness and sturdy French make.

The size is 60 by 81 inches and we believe that two dollars will not buy a better spread anywhere.

Let us show you this spread and prove our statement regarding its value. —Main Floor Right

Technical Society Drew Good Crowd To Lecture

The Magnetite Arc Lamp Explained By Mr. Burpee—Society Presented Fine Entertainment.

HAS A COURSE OF LECTURES

Mr. L. W Burpee, of Toronto, consulting engineer of the Canadian General Electric Company, introduced the Magnetite Arc Lamp to an audience of two hundred citizens in the course of a lecture under the auspices of the Technical Society at St. Andrew's School Hall on Wednesday night. The word Magnetite is surely familiar enough to Peterborough people by reason of its frequent repetition in connection with the city's proposed hydro system. Recognizing the popular interest in the lamp the society scored a point in arranging last night's lecture, and the members were rewarded by an attendance that comfortably filled St. Andrew's Hall.

Mr. N. C. Mills acted as chairman and in referring to the aims of the Technical Society stated that lectures would be held monthly during the winter and some of the best engineers in the United States and Canada would be brought to the city. The society has a membership of 75 and well equipped rooms. In the reading room there is the largest collection of engineering periodicals to be found in Canada, and a library has been instituted with 150 books on the shelves. Peterborough is an industrial city and many of the employees who have come from larger centres have had the advantages of good technical libraries and lecture courses. The society has begun to provide facilities of this nature in Peterborough and any persons interested are invited to associate themselves with it. Technical classes have been opened not in opposition to the Industrial Night School, but rather treating subjects a little more advanced, although that term need not frighten any persons interestdd in mechanical and engineering work.

Previous to Mr. Burpee's address a short musical programme was presented consisting of a violin solo by Mrs. Boyd, piano solos by Mr. H. C. Treneer, and vocal solos by Mr. G. E. Chandler. Each number was deservedly encored.

The Magnetite Lamp, Mr. Burpee stated, traced its beginning to several hundred years before Christ when the Greeks discovered a substance they called electron, now known to be amber, which when rubbed on fine cloth produced electricity. A second chapter in its history was opened when Faraday and others discovered the relations between magnetism and electricity, and magnetism and chemistry, and discovered the basic laws of electricity. In 1801 Sir Humphrey Davey discovered the arc lamp, but it did not proceed further than the laboratory until 1876 when C. F. Brush invented the automatic adjustment which was practically identical with the open arc, touch type, that has done service on the streets of Peterborough for years. In 1896 a new competitor loomed over the horizon which was the immediate forerunner of the present magnetite lamp.

The Technical Side.

So much for a brief review of the historicity of the lamp. Mr. Burpee then turned to three charts with which he presented a comparison of the illumination efficiencies of the old style carbon and several designs of the Magnetite lamps. And here he diverted to technicalities and the darkness of the hall presented an alibi for those attempting to take notes. Besides Mr. Trenger had played one of the numbers from Nevin's Venetian Suite and the haunting melody and its effects on the imagination were crowding details concerning cathodes, anodes, and the technical details required to present the operation of what is known as a "rectifier" and its relation to direct and indirect currents. In one case at any rate gondolas, gondoliers, mandolins and a haunting strain shut out technicalities which only an engineer or electrician could digest.

Mr. Burpee switched back again to a popular aspect of his subject by dealing with the Magnetite lamp and its effectiveness as an illuminant. The buildings on the main street will be illuminated not only in their lower stories but even to the roof, and business men of other cities have found the Magnetite lamp a decided advertising asset. It has no equal as a street illuminant. At 300 feet the intensity of its light will be equal to the light of the present street lamps 65 feet from the arc. Mr. Burpee illustrated its mechanism by dismantling one of the city's new standards.

After the lecture the society demonstrated its generosity and hospitality by serving refreshments, this in the fact of a silver collection.

The series of addresses to be presented should be a feature in the city this season, not only to engineers and others engaged in mechanical pursuits but to the general public. Last night's lecture was decidedly interesting to the layman except for a short divergency into the realm of technicalities, but the programme came to the rescue of the uninitiated until Mr. Burpee returned from the heights to the common clay of popular interest.

NORWOOD'S MUNICIPAL ELECTION STATE

Although the 1914 municipal elections are a month and a half distant the pot is commencing to simmer in Norwood, and already there is considerable talk of what the slate at the next election will be. It is generally conceded that there will be a hot contest for the reeveship. Councillor B. W. Squire's name is mentioned as a likely candidate, while Reeve Breault's supporters will no doubt urge him to again offer himself for the reins of power. The latter's experience in municipal matters needs no comment. Councillor Squire is also a tried officer, having served seven years, altogether, on the council board.

For councillors, Messrs. J. R. McKelvie and Wm. Portway are spoken of as contestants for a seat with the civic fathers. Both gentlemen were candidates in the big field at last year's election and secured fifth and sixth places respectively. Councillor Hendren, who headed the poll in the last two elections, it is said purposes dropping out this year, which with Councillor Squire in the running for the reeveship, will only leave two of the old members, Councillors W. E. Pakenham and Thos. W. Morrison for the contest. Councillor Pakenham, who came second at the polls last year in his first run for municipal honours, has already signified his intention of again standing. Councillor Hendren too, who put up such a game fight at the last election, will be on the warpath with a year's experience behind him. That several other citizens will come out for office during the next few weeks is quite likely, so that at this early date it looks like a big fight next January.

There has been a slight raise in the tax rate this year, but this has been due to extra money required by the school board for the installation of a new heating apparatus in the Public School. The principal achievemena of the present council has been the construction of about 3,000 feet of new cement walk, besides providing for the usual affairs of state.—Norwood Register.

ORDERED LARKIN'S RELEASE

LONDON, ENG., Nov. 13.—(Special cable). —Early this morning the Asquith Government, after a long conference, ordered the release of James Larkin, the Dublin labour leader, sentenced to imprisonment in connection with the strike riots. Thinking Liberals agree, however, that this action will not undo the results of the blunder made in sentencing him. The Unionists are making the most of the situation and are publicly stating that the government is releasing Larkin, not because he is innocent, but because his imprisonment cost Asquith votes.

Simple.

It was a cold day in December, and the superintendent of a charitable institution was examining a number of poor children as to their claims for more comfortable clothing. Margaret was under examination. She was pinned up quite securely in a thin shawl.

"Have you any clothes at home?" she was asked kindly.

"No'm."

"What have you got on?"

"Please, this is me aunt's shawl, an' me dress is next, an' then comes I"

This Will Remove Hairs From Face

(Toilet Talks)

Many beauty experts have discarded the electric needle and are now using a plain delatone paste to remove hairy growths because this method is almost instantaneous and is entirely devoid of pain. The paste is made by mixing some powdered delatone with water and this is applied to the hairy surface for about 2 or 3 minutes, then rubbed off and the skin washed. This banishes every trace of hair and leaves the skin soft and spotless. Be sure to get the delatone in an original package.

BEGAN AS A CHILD.

It was only an accident that made Sir Johnston Forbes-Robertson an actor. He had played "Macbeth" as a child with his brothers and sisters, one of whom, it is said, acted the part of the army of Macbeth, another the army of MacDuff, with instructions to create an impression of numbers by rushing wildly from wing to wing, a device that worked admirably until they collided, when the poverty of the battlefield was revealed.

His earliest performance of "Hamlet" was given in like fashion, with his sister doubling the parts of Ophelia and one of the gravediggers. "I was 14 at that time, and we produced the play in the back drawing-room. I well remember that when the curtain rose, showing Ophelia burying herself, the audience laughed, which put me into a great rage. We played it with curtains so you see we anticipated the modern idea of staging Shakespeare," said Forbes-Robertson in commenting upon his childhood.

But at Charterhouse, where Forbes-Robertson was a contemporary of Cyril Maude—now touring Canada, and who only a few weeks ago was in Peterborough with his company—his interest was not in acting, but in art, which he adopted as his career.

One day forty years ago, W. G. Wills was complaining to Forbes-Robertson's father, the art critic, of the inadequacy of one of the younger players in his "Mary Stuart."

"Why not try Johnston?" asked the elder Forbes-Robertson.

The suggestion was acted upon, and Forbes-Robertson became an actor, never, however, wholly deserting his first calling, in which he achieved considerable success, as his well-known picture of the church scene in "Much Ado About Nothing," which was painted for Irving, testifies.

In recalling the night of his debut, Forbes-Robertson said:

"How well I remember that occasion. I was very nervous about my my make-up, as the manager had insisted upon having my hair curled. Coming down the rickety staircase of the old Princess Theatre in London, I heard a stage hand cry out, 'Bill, here comes the ghost of Hamlet's father!' It was a terrible night."

Not the Boss.

"Is the master of the house in?" inquired the smooth-tongued book agent of the little boy who answered his ring.

"Nope," said the boy.

"Little boys should not tell falsehoods," said the book agent. "Isn't that your father reading the newspaper there by the window?"

"Yep," was the answer, "that's pa, all right, but ma is out."

MARRIED.

AXFORD—TARGETT — On November 12, 1913, at 554 Downie street, Peterborough, by the Rev. T. J. Mansell, Daniel Neale Axford to Bessie Florence Kate Targett, both of Brantford.

Stock Markets

A. H. Stratton & Co., Brokers, report the following:

We may see some reactionary tendencies in the stock market to-morrow, but on weak spots we think good stocks may be bought for turns. Profit taking is indulged in on the major portion of holdings during subsequent rallies. It is significant to us that the preference is being given to the long side of standards upon all declines, rather than sales on rallies that have been going on lately. There is a distinct change of sentiment in best posted circles, but they are not coming out and advising the purchase of stocks indiscriminately. That they see better things after the long period of pessimism, and we think those better things will make themselves manifest in the not distant future.

The rate situation looks more favourable according to railway experts. It being agreed that the higher railroad living costs are just as weighty as the trainmen's higher living costs, when it comes to granting higher freight rates. The railroad question will work itself out and we believe in buying the Harriman and Hill stocks, B.O., St. Paul, Reading, on all declines.

Negotiations between Huerta and Washington practically ended following Lind's sudden departure from Vera Cruz last night.

Bank of England rate unchanged at 5 per cent.

President Willard, of B. and O., says wage increase granted trainmen and conductors would mean about six hundred thousand dollars additional annual expenditure to his road.

American stocks in London heavy, 1-4 to 3-4 lower.

It has been officially announced that the President will not make any announcement to-day regarding the Mexican situation.

News From Mexico Gives New Hope at Washington

HUERTA IS IN SECLUSION?

WASHINGTON, Nov. 14.—United support from the great powers abroad over the American policy toward Mexico, shown in a variety of quiet diplomatic activities gave President Wilson and Secretary Bryan a confident feeling yesterday that the elimination of Gen. Huerta as provisional president of Mexico would seen be an accomplished fact.

That the financial blockade instituted by the United States had effectually tied the purse strings of Europe, that diplomatic pressure was being exerted incessantly on all sides at Mexico City, that close friends of Huerta were applying their influence, and persistent reports, saying that Huerta had gone into mysterious seclusion, raised the hopes of the Washington Government that at last it was making definite progress toward solving the Mexican problem.

An exchange of cablegrams with Ambassador Page, an agreement by Great Britain to leave the solution of the Mexican problem in the hands of the United States, and an announcement that no moral or financial support would be granted by England to the Huerta regime, set forth in London press despatches, created a favorable impression throughout official Washington. It was felt that Great Britain, France, Germany and other nations now stood together in acquiescence to the plan of the United States for the elimination of Huerta.

President Wilson had prepared early in the day a statement of the situation, reciting what had been attempted in the communications presented by Charge O'Shaughnessy and John Lind, but within a few hours such favorable advices were received as to cause the President to withhold the document from publication.

"There are elements in this case," said the President yesterday, "which I cannot at present discuss, but which make it look to me very much more favorable."

KAMINISTIQUIA SAFE.

Captain Stephen Tells of 96-Hour Battle With Storm.

FORT WILLIAM, Ont., Nov. 14.—After battling with the angry elements for 96 hours, the steamer Kaministiquia arrived in port yesterday morning from Goderich, from which port she cleared last Sunday morning.

Capt. D. L. Stephens stated yesterday morning that a few hours after leaving Goderich he ran into the first of the storm.

"I never experienced such a blow," said he. "The wind blew with terrific force and the snow hurled through the air and fell hissing into the lake. It cast a pall over the ship and at times I could not see the funnel from the wheelhouse.

"Every little while the wind blew a rift through the driving snow, and I could catch glimpses of the shore. The ship kept driving nearer and nearer the rocky shore, despite everything we could do, and I expected any minute to hear her crunch on to the bottom of the lake, which I knew could not be many fathoms below us. I headed her nose straight up into the storm and called for full steam ahead. It took us four hours to make half a mile."

He stated that he passed a ship floating bottom up when some distance out on the lake, but did not think it was the Regina. He also saw the Wexford and another vessel, which he took to be the Northern Star, near Kettle Point.

Suicide Imperilled Sailors.

MONTREAL, Nov. 14. — George Clapperton, Glasgow, a third-class passenger on the Donaldson liner Athenia, which has arrived in port, committed suicide by jumping from the deck of the vessel in the mid-Atlantic. A boat which was launched in a vain attempt to rescue the passenger had to be abandoned, as the stormy weather made it impossible to haul the boat on board again. The crew in it were only rescued after a desperate struggle.

Half Already Secured.

NEW YORK, Nov. 14.—The volunteer committee of one thousand engaged in a two weeks' campaign for $4,000,000 for the Y.M.C.A. and Y.W.C.A. yesterday announced contributions amounting to $94,747. The total contributed for the first four days of the campaign is $2,275,534

Collingwood Wants Search Started For Steamer Leafield

FORTY CITIZENS ARE LOST

COLLINGWOOD, Ont., Nov. 14.—Not since the calamity to the steamer Asia, in 1883, when over two hundred men were lost, all of Collingwood, has this town been thrown into such utter gloom as to-day, when the last ray of hope for the safety of the Leafield is fast falling away.

A telegram yesterday afternoon from the Algoma Steamship Co. told relatives and friends not to give up hope until the return of search tugs of the company, which have gone out along the shore. Sanford H. Lindsay, president of the Collingwood Shipbuilding Co., last Wednesday night sent the following rush appeal to Hon. J. D. Hazen, Minister of Marine and Fisheries:—

"Can the Government do anything to patrol Lake Superior to look for the crew of the steamer Leafield? Immediate action and numbers of boats are necessary. I understand American Government have taken similar action."

Over forty brave residents of this town are now known to be dead, and it is quite probable that the number will reach forty-five, or perhaps fifty.

Flags are flying at half-mast, stores and houses have drawn blinds, and everybody is talking in hushed whispers. Old sailors and captains can hardly believe it true that so many well-known faces will never turn up again. Nearly every family in town has been affected by the calamity, as the missing men are related to almost everybody through marriage or blood.

To make matters worse, the whole town has been closed up, and is in quarantine on account of an outbreak of smallpox, and even church services have been prohibited by the health authorities.

The exact number of Collingwood men who have gone down may not be known for weeks, as many of the deck hands stay for only a short time on one boat.

Strikers Abandon Train.

NEW ORLEANS, La., Nov. 14.—All the men in the Algiers shops of the Southern Pacific, and all trainmen and enginemen on the New Orleans-New Iberia division, numbering about 1,000, were called out on strike at seven o'clock last night.

A train out on the road was abandoned by the crew promptly at seven o'clock. The crew of a freight that was between Algiers and Gretna, just across the river from New Orleans, struck at the announced hour and and walked into Algiers. The men have been admonished by union officials to attempt no violence, but last night deputy sheriffs were protecting the company's property.

Gets an Additional Term.

GUELPH, Nov. 14.—Frank Fleming, serving a sentence of one year at the provincial prison farm, made his escape from that institution a few days ago, but was tracked to Sarnia and arrested. He was brought to Guelph and appeared before Magistrate Watt yesterday. He pleaded guilty to the charge of escaping, and three months was added to his present sentence and also an indeterminate sentence of two years.

THE BURDENS OF AGE
The kidneys seem to be about the first organs to wear out and fail to properly perform their work. The result is weak, lame, aching back, rheumatic pains and failing eyesight. Many people of advanced years have recovered health and comfort by using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. They ensure the healthful action of liver, kidneys and bowels.

MURDER IS CHARGED.

Harwick Township Altercation Resulted In Tragedy.

CHATHAM, Nov. 14.—W. H. Babcock, a prominent farmer of Harwick Township, near Ridgetown, is charged with the murder of Henry Allbright, his neighbor, on Nov. 5.

Allbright and Babcock got into a quarrel over a drain while they were assisting at a threshing. Babcock is said to have knocked Allbright down, and in falling he received internal injuries. An operation for peritonitis was necessary, but Allbright died on Sunday.

Babcock is now out on a bail of $10,000 and will appear on Nov. 19 for his preliminary hearing.

The inquest into the circumstances surrounding Allbright's death will be held to-day at Ridgetown.

During the course of the first of the argument, which took place the week before the threshing, Allbright is stated to have called Babcock a "liar" and Babcock vowed he would make him take it back. At the threshing Allbright refused to retract his words, and the altercation started with the above fatal result.

EAT LESS MEAT IF BACK HURTS
Take a Glass of Salts to flush kidneys if bladder bothers you
Eating meat regularly eventually produces kidney trouble in some form or other, says a well-known authority, because the uric acid in meat excites the kidneys, they become overworked; get sluggish; clog up and cause all sorts of distress, particularly, backache and misery in the kidney region; rheumatic twinges, severe headaches, acid stomach, constipation, torpid liver, sleeplessness, bladder and urinary irritation.
The moment your back hurts or kidneys aren't acting right, or if bladder bothers you, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to normal activity; also to neutralize the acids in the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder disorders.
Jad Salts cannot injure anyone; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which millions of men and women take now and then to keep the kidneys and urinary organs clean, thus avoiding serious kidney disease.

Xmas isn't so very far away and it takes quite a little while to reach your friends in the Old Country any distance away.

VESSELS COLLIDED

One Freighter Probably Under Other on St. Clair River

BODIES ASHORE TOGETHER

PORT HURON, Nov. 14.—Does another vessel lie beneath the wreck of the overturned boat in Lake Huron, thirteen miles from here?

This is the theory advanced by Milton Smith, assistant engineer of the ill-fated steamer Charles S. Price. Mr. Smith had a premonition of the approaching danger and left his ship at Cleveland the day before it rode in to the teeth of Lake Huron's gale and foundered with all hands on board.

Mr. Smith returned to Port Huron last night from Thetford, Ont., where he went to help establish the identity of the men whose bodies were in the morgue there.

The first body he identified was that of John Groundwater, chief engineer of the Price, whose home was in Cleveland.

"Are you sure?" asked the coroner.

"As sure as I know my own name is Smith," he replied.

"Well, this man had one of the Regina's life-preservers wrapped about his body," said the coroner.

Smith was dumbfounded. How the chief-engineer of the steamer Price happened to be found in one of the life-preservers of the Regina was more than he could fathom. Then it dawned upon the Port Huron man that the Regina and Price may have collided, and in the excitement, sailors of each vessel grabbed the life-preservers that happened to be nearest.

His theory is further strengthened by the fact that the bodies of the men who went down on the Regina and the Price were found in precisely the same position on the shore, some of them even clasped in each other's arms. This practically substantiates the belief that the overturned vessel on Lake Huron is either the Regina or the Price. It is also thought that the vessels collided with such force that one is under the other.

Thirteen In Regina Boat.

GODERICH, Nov. 14. — Thirteen bodies of members of the crew of the steamer Price were found in a lifeboat from the freighter Regina, which washed ashore near Bayfield yesterday. Each body had a life-preserver on and all were frozen. This seems to show that the Price and the Regina, which is thought to be the big overturned freighter at the mouth of the St. Clair river, collided and that the Price sank after the collision. A lifeboat was sent from the Regina to rescue the crew of the Price, and as the men were making their way through the storm to the Regina that vessel also sank and left the men stranded.

The loss of life in Sunday's storm is appalling and as yet no definite idea can be given as to what the number will be; but up to the present time upwards of sixty bodies have been found on the shore from Goderich to Sarnia, with only about a dozen identified. Four bodies of the Wexford were found on Tuesday near St. Joseph and were identified as Murdock McDonald, James Gleen, both Sarnia; Archibald Brook and Chief Engineer Scott of Collingwood.

Wednesday a life raft of the steamer McGean washed ashore, with three bodies lashed to it. By all appearances they had taken to the raft, but were unable to keep upright and were washed off. A watch on one of the men had stopped at 1.30 a.m. and Dr. Hunter says they probably were dead two days; it is likely that she foundered on Sunday night some distance south of here. The bodies were identified as those of Stone, an Indian from the reservation at Sarnia; Smith and Owen, from letters found on the bodies, but their addresses could not be made out.

The daily patrol of the shores is bringing news of the finding of wreckage belonging to the Argus, McGean, Mills the Crowe, Holmes, Price and the Carruthers, the latter the finest and newest boat on the lake.

McGean's Loss Confirmed.

CLEVELAND, O., Nov. 14.—The loss of the steamer John A. McGean, of 7,000 tons, one of the larger craft on the lakes, operated by the Hutchinson Steamship Co., here, was confirmed by officials of the company yesterday. The ship sunk in Lake Huron.

It is believed that Capt. C. R. Ney and all of the crew of 28 men were drowned.

The company has received despatches from Goderich, Ont., saying three bodies were washed ashore there, lashed to a raft, and have been identified.

Penetang In Mourning.

PENETANGUISHENE, Nov. 14.—The wrecks of the past few days on the great lakes have struck home to many families in Penetanguishene, and more particularly so in the case of the Toronto steamer Regina. Two Penetang boys were among her crew, Bert Dusome and Robert Stalker.

Capt. Ed. McConkey, who sailed the steamer, was a resident here for a number of years, and married a young lady from this place. Latterly he had resided in Barrie. All were highly respected.

British Companies Lose.

LONDON, Nov. 14.—(C. A. P. Cable)—The Canadian Associated Press understands that considerable misgivings have sprung up among London underwriters in connection with the recent Canadian shipwrecks. They feel that in adopting the present rates on vessels trading on Canadian lakes they have not taken into account the possibilities of such serious rates as those that have taken place. Roughly, their loss is estimated at $1,500,000. Judging by later cables, however, this figure may be considerably increased.

Low Spirits From Weak Nerves
Low spirits, depression, discouragement are a form of nervous disease. You worry over little things, and at the slightest ailment apprehend the gravest dangers and diseases. You form the habit of looking at the dark side of things.
Indigestion is a frequent accompaniment, and you probably do not sleep or rest well. The cause of the trouble is to be found in the exhausted condition of the nerves. To get well you must build up the feeble, wasted nerve cells by use of such treatment as Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.
This great food cure forms new, rich blood, and thereby nourishes the nervous system back to health and vigour. There is nothing like new nerve force to bring back hope and confidence to the weak and discouraged. This treatment works in natural ways to restore health, and, therefore, cannot fail to prove of benefit to you. Put it to the test and you will be surprised with the building-up influence that will result.

Kryptok Lenses
The man who invented Kryptok Invisible Bifocals came very near discovering an equivalent to the Fountain of Youth.
It is the Eyes that make a healthy person feel old, nothing else.
If you wear distant glasses and lower your eyes to read, the page is blurred. If you are wearing reading glasses and raise the eyes to look around, everything is blurred.
You meet a friend who tells you he is wearing bifocal glasses at that moment but to all appearance they are plain glasses. He reads through the reading part and sees his car two blocks through the distant part with equal facility. He is wearing Fowler's Kryptok Invisible Bifocal Glasses.

Seeing Things Again.

A doctor came up to a patient in an insane asylum, slapped him on the back and said: "Well, old man, you're all right; you can run along and write your folks that you'll be back home in two weeks as good as new."

The patient went off gaily to write his letter. He had it finished and sealed, but when he was licking the stamp it slipped through his fingers to the floor, lighted on the back of a cockroach that was passing and stuck.

The patient hadn't seen the cockroach—what he did see was his escaped postage stamp zigzagging aimlessly across the floor to the baseboard, wavering up and over the baseboard and following a crooked trail up the wall and across the ceiling. In depressed silence he tore up the letter and dropped the pieces on the floor. "Two weeks!" he said. "I won't be out of here in three years."

"That Affair Next Door"

But he did not overwhelm me with confidences. O, no, he is very sly, this old and well-seasoned detective, and while appearing to be very communicative, really parted with but little information. He said enough, however, for me to gather that matters looked grim for Howard, and if this was so, it must have become apparent that the death they were investigating was neither an accident nor a suicide.

I hinted as much, and he, for his own ends no doubt, admitted at last that a wound had been found on the young woman which could not have been inflicted by herself; at which I felt such increased interest in this remarkable murder that I must have made some foolish display of it, for the wary old gentleman chuckled and ogled his spectacles quite lovingly before shutting them up and putting them into his pocket.

"And now what have you to tell me?" he inquired, sliding softly between me and the parlour door.

"Nothing but this. Question that queer-acting house-cleaner closely. She has something to tell which it is your business to know."

I think he was disappointed. He looked as if he regretted the spectacles he had pocketed, and when he spoke there was an edge to his tone I had not noticed in it before.

"Do you know what that something is?" he asked.

"No, or I should tell you myself."

"And what makes you think she is hiding anything from us?"

"Her manner. Did you not notice her manner?"

He shrugged his shoulders:

"It conveyed much to me," I insisted. "If I were a detective I would have the secret out of that woman or die in the attempt."

He laughed; this sly, old, almost decrepit man laughed outright. Then he looked severely at his old friend on the newel-post, and drawing himself up with some show of dignity, made this remark:

"It is my very good fortune to have made your acquaintance, Miss Butterworth. You and I ought to be able to work out this case in a way that will be satisfactory to all parties."

He meant it for sarcasm, but I took it quite seriously, that is to all appearance. I am as sly as he, and though not quite as old—now I am sarcastic—have some of his wits, if but little of his experience.

"Then let us to work," said I. "You have your theories about this murder and I have mine; let us see how they compare."

If the image he had under his eye had not been made of bronze, I am sure it would have become petrified by the look he gave it. What to me seemed but the natural proposition of an energetic woman with a special genius for his particular calling, evidently struck him as audacity of the grossest kind. But he confined his display of astonishment to the figure he was eyeing, and returned me nothing but this most gentlemanly retort:

"I am sure I am obliged to you, madam, and possibly I may be willing to consider your very thoughtful proposition later, but now I am busy, very busy, and if you will await my presence in your house for a half hour—"

"Why not let me wait here," I interposed. "The atmosphere of the place may sharpen my faculties. I already feel that another sharp look into that parlour would lead to the forming of some valuable theory."

"You—" Well, he did not say what I was, or rather, what the image he was apostrophizing, was. But he must have meant to utter a compliment of no common order.

The prim courtesy I made in acknowledgment of his good intention satisfied him that I had understood him fully; and changing his whole manner to one more in accordance with business, he observed after a moment's reflection:

"You came to a conclusion this afternoon, Miss Butterworth, for which I should like some explanation. In investigating the hat which had been drawn from under the murdered girl's remains, you made the remark that it had been worn but once. I had already come to the same conclusion, but by other means doubtless. Will you tell me what it was that gave point to your assertion?"

"There was but one prick of a hat-pin in it," I observed. "If you have been in the habit of looking into young women's hats, you will appreciate the force of my remark."

"The deuce!" was his certainly uncalled for exclamation. "Women's eyes for women's matters! I am greatly indebted to you, ma'am. You have solved a very important problem for us. A hat-pin! humph!" he muttered to himself. "The devil in a man is not easily balked; even such an innocent article as that can be made to serve, when all other means are lacking."

It is perhaps a proof that Mr. Gryce is getting old, that he allowed these words to escape him. But having once given vent to them, he made no effort to retract them, but proceeded to take me into his confidence so far as to explain:

"The woman who was killed in that room owed her death to the stab of a thin, long pin. We had not thought of a hat-pin, but upon your mentioning it, I am ready to accept it as the instrument of death. There was no pin to be seen in the hat when you looked at it?"

"None. I examined it most carefully."

He shok his head and seemed to be meditating. As I had plenty of time I waited, expecting him to speak again. My patience seemed to impress him. Alternately raising and lowering his hands like one in the act of weighing something, he soon addressed me again ,this time in a tone of banter:

"This pin—if pin it was—was found broken in the wound. We have been searching for the end that was left in the murderer's hand, and we have not found it. It is not on the floors of the parlours nor in this hallway. What do you think the ingenious user of such an instrument would do with it?"

This was said, I am now sure, out of a spirit of sarcasm. He was amusing himself with me, but I did not realize it then. I was too full of my subject.

"He would not have carried it away," I reasoned shortly, "at least not far. He did not throw it aside on reaching the street, for I watched his movements so closely that I would have observed him had he done this. It is in the house then, and presumably in the parlour, even if you do not find it on the floor."

"Would you like to look for it?" he impressively asked. I had no means of knowing at that time that when he was impressive he was his least candid and trustworthy self.

"Would I," I repeated; and being spare in figure and much more active in my movements that one would suppose from my age and dignified department, I ducked under his arms and was in Mr. Van Burnam's parlour before he had recovered from his surprise.

That a man like him could look foolish I would not have you for a moment suppose. But he did not look very well satisfied, and I had a chance to throw more than one glance around me before he found his tongue again.

"An unfair advantage, ma'am; an unfair advantage! I am old and I am rheumatic; you are young and sound as a nut. I acknowledge my folly in endeavouring to compete with you and must make the best of the situation. And now, madam, where is that pin?"

It was lightly said, but for all that I saw that my opportunity had come. If I could find this instrument of murder what might I not expect from his gratitude! Nerving myself for the task thus set me, I peered hither and thither, taking in every article in the room before I made a step forward. There had been some attempt to rectify its disorder. The broken pieces of china had ben lifted and laid carefully away on newspapers upon the shelves from which they had fallen. The cabinet stood upright in its place, and the clock which had tumbled face upward, had been placed upon the mantel shelf in the same position. The carpet was therefore free, save for the stains which told a woeful story of past tragdy and crime.

"You have moved the tables and searched behind the sofas," I suggested.

"Not an inch of the floor has escaped our attention, madam."

My eyes fell on the register which my skirts half covered. It was closed; I stooped and opened it. A square box of tin was visible below, at the bottom of which I perceived the round head of a broken hat-pin.

Never in my life had I felt as I did at that minute. Rising up, I pointed at the register and let some of my triumph become apparent; but not all, for I was by no means sure at that moment, nor am I by any means sure now, that he had not made the discovery before I did and was simply testing my pretensions.

However that may be, he came forward quickly and after some little effort drew out the broken pin and examined it curiously.

"I should say that this is what we want," he declared, and from that moment on showed me a suitable deference.

"I account for its being there in this way," I argued. "The room was dark; for whether he lighted it or not to commit his crime, he certainly did not leave it lighted long. Coming out, his foot came in contact with the iron of the register and he was struck by a sudden thought. He had not dared to leave the head of the pin lying on the floor, for he hoped that he had covered up his crime by pulling the heavy cabinet over upon his victim; nor did he wish to carry away such a memento of his cruel deed. So he dropped it down the register, where he doubtless expected it would fall into the furnace pipes out of sight. But the tin box retained it. Is not that plausible, sir?"

"I could not have reasoned better myself, madam. We shall have you on the force, yet."

But at the familiarity shown by this suggestion, I bridled angrily. "I am Miss Butterworth" was my sharp rejoinder, "any any interest I may take in this matter is due to my sense of justice."

Seeing that he had offended me, the astute detective turned the conversation back to business.

"By the way," said he, "your woman's knowledge can help me out at another point. If you are not afraid to remain in this room alone for a moment, I will bring an article in regard to which I should like your opinion."

I assured him I was not in the least bit afraid, at which he made me another of his anomalous bows and passed into the adjoining parlour. He did not stop there. Opening the sliding-doors communicating with the dining-room beyond, he disappeared in the latter room, shutting the doors behind him. Being now alone for a moment on the scene of crime, I crossed over to the mantelshelf, and lifted the clock that lay there.

Why I did this I scarcely know. I am naturally very orderly (some people call me precise) and it probably fretted me to see so valuable an object out of its natural position. However that was, I lifted it up and set it upright, when to my amazement it began to tick. Had the hands not stood as they did when my eyes first fell on the clock lying face up on the floor at the dead girl's side, I should have thought the works had been started since that time by Mr. Gryce or some other officious person. But they pointed now as then to a few minutes before five and the only conclusion I could arrive at was, that he clock had been in running order when it fell, startling as this fact appeared in a house which had not been inhabited for months.

But if it had been in running order and was only stopped by its fall upon the floor, why did the hands point at five instead of twelve which was the hour at which the accident was supposed to have happened? Here was matter for thought, and that I might be undisturbed in my use of it, I hastened to lay the clock down again, even taking the precaution to restore the hands to the exact position they had occupied before I had started up the works. If Mr. Gryce did not know their secret, why so much the worse for Mr. Gryce.

I was back in my old place by the register before the folding-doors unclosed again. I was conscious of a slight flush on my cheek, so I took from my pocket that perplexing grocer-bill and was laboriously going down its long line of figures, when Mr. Gryce reappeared.

He had to my surprise a woman's hat in his hand.

"Well!" thought I. "what does this mean!"

It was an elegant specimen of millinery and was in the latest style. It had ribbons and flowers and bird wings upon it, and presented, as it was turned about by Mr. Gryce's deft hand, an appearance which some might have called charming, but to me was simply grotesque and absurd.

"Is that a last spring's hat?" he inquired.

"I don't know, but I should say it had come fresh from the milliner's."

"I found it lying with a pair of gloves tucked inside it on an otherwise empty shelf in the dining-room closet. It struck me as looking too new for a discarded hat of either of the Misses Van Burnam. What do you think?"

"Let me take it,' said I.

"O, it's been worn," he smiled, "several times. And the hatpin is in it, too."

"There is something else I wish to see."

He handed it over.

"I think it belongs to one of them" I declared. "It was made by La Mole of Fifth Avenue, whose prices are simply—wicked."

"But the young ladies have been gone—let me see—five months. Could this have been bought before then?"

"Possibly, for this is an imported hat. But why should it have been left lying about in that careless way? It cost twenty dollars, if not thirty, and if for any reason its owner decided not to take it with her, why didn't she pack it away properly? I have no patience with the modern girl; she is made up of recklessness and extravagance."

"I hear that the young ladies are staying with you," was his suggestive remark.

"They are."

"Then you can make some inquiries about this hat; also about the gloves, which are an ordinary street pair."

"Of what colour?"

"Grey; they are quite fresh, size six."

HURRY up with a bottle of Kuntz's Old German," said the man from New York. "It's worth a trip to Canada to get a drink of this corking brew. There's nothing like the "Old German" flavor in the United States, you know. Perhaps because the "Old German" process of brewing is so very costly. REGIMENTAL MARCHES

"The British Grenadiers" is Perhaps Most Famous of These Tunes

Each regiment of the British Army claims one particular refrain as its "regimental march." Most of these tunes are linked up in some way with the history of the regiments to which they belong.

For instance, the renowned "Ca ira" of the West Yorkshire Regiment was adopted during a campaign in France, when the regiment was known as the 14th Foot. During the siege of Tournay the defenders frequently played the "Ca ira." Later, with a touch of dramatic irony, the besiegers marched to possess the city to the strains of the same tune.

These regimental marches are used especially on review days, and on several other occasions, such as leaving or entering camp or barracks. When most regimental bands give concerts the "regimental march" and the National Anthem close the programme.

Perhaps one of the most famous of all "regimental marches" is "The British Grenadiers." This belongs to the Grenadier Guards, Royal Engineers, and the Royal Artillery. "Hearts of Oak" is the property of the Royal Marine Light Infantry, while "A Life on the Ocean Wave" belongs to the Naval Brigade.

The Scots Greys march to the strains of "The Garb of Old Gaul," the Scots Guards and many other kilted regiments to "Highland Laddie," the Royal Scots to the famous "Dumbarton's Drums," the Scottish Border Regiment to "Blue Bonnets O'er the Border," and the Scottish Rifles to the well known air of "Within a Mile o' Edinboro' Toon." The "regimental march" of the King's Royal Rifles is "The Huntsman's Chorus," and of the East Surreys "A Southerly Wind and Cloudy Sky."

The Welsh Fusiliers and the South Wales Borderers use the spirited "Men of Harlech" as their "regimental march."

Many of the famous Irish national airs have been taken by the Irish regiments. The Connaught Rangers appropriate the music of "St. Patrick's Day," while the Royal Irish Regiment uses "Garry Owen."

"God Bless the Prince of Wales" belongs to several regiments, including the 3rd Dragoon Guards and 12th Lancers.

The Suffolks march to the music of "Speed the Plough," and the Derbyshire Regiment to the "Young May Moon."

Four-Year-Old Defendant

A case which was stated to be the result of a family feud was heard at the Claremorris Petty Sessions, when a four-year-old child, Mary Coyle, was charged with stealing a sod of turf, on which the complainant said he found her sitting. The charge was dismissed.

Terribly Afflicted With Lame Back.

Could Not Sweep The Floor.

When the back aches and pains it is almost impossible for women to do their housework, for every move and every turn means an ache or a pain.

Women are beginning to understand that weak, lame, and aching backs from which they suffer so much are due to wrong action of the kidneys, and should be attended to at once so as to avoid years of suffering from kidney trouble.

On the first sign of anything wrong with the back Doan's Kidney Pills should be taken.

They go right to the seat of the trouble.

Mrs. Wilfrid Jolicoeur, Nouvelle, Que., writes:—"I take pleasure in writing you stating the benefit I have received by using Doan's Kidney Pills. About three years ago I was terribly afflicted with lame back, and was so bad I could not sweep my own floor. I was advised to try Doan's Kidney Pills. I only used three boxes, and I am as well as ever. I highly recommend these pills to any sufferer from lame back or kidney trouble."

Price, 50 cents per box, or 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Toronto, Ont.

If ordering direct specify "Doan's."

Do you Believe

In going straight to the weak spot in treating disease? If so, you will never use anything but Peps for coughs, colds, bronchitis, and throat and lung troubles. Listen why!

Peps are tiny tablets, which contain rich medicinal ingredients, so prepared that they turn into vapour in the mouth, and are breathed down to the throat, the breathing tubes and lungs direct.

Cough mixtures go—not to the lungs and chest at all, but to the stomach. There is absolutely no direct connection between stomach and lungs.

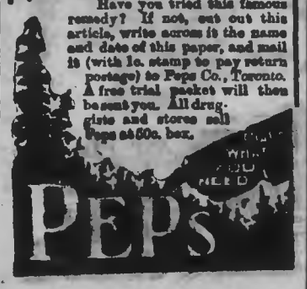
When you have a bad cold, your digestion is weakened. You lose appetite, and if a man, your usual smoke does not "taste good." In other words, your digestive system is looking tens. All cough mixtures make this condition worse.

Don't ruin your stomach to heal your lungs. Take a remedy that goes right to the spot—Peps.

Surprising how they end coughs, catarrh, bronchitis, sore-throat, "clergyman's throat," asthma, and all lung troubles. Contain no poison, and are best for children.

Dr. Gordon Stables says:—"If you wish to ease and end a cough, if you desire to loosen tickling phlegm, and clear the throat and the breathing tubes, use Peps. The pine fumes and balsamic fumes, so beneficial in throat and lung trouble, which are liberated when a Pep is put into the mouth, also serve another good purpose. They are strongly germicidal, and germs of disease in the mouth, on the palate, in the throat, and in the breathing tubes, are at once destroyed by their action."

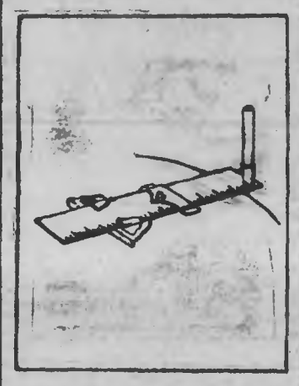
Have you tried this famous remedy? If not, cut out this article, write across it the name and date of this paper, and mail it (with 1c. stamp to pay return postage) to Peps Co., Toronto. A free trial packet will then be sent you. All druggists and stores sell Peps at 50c. box.



SQUARE MAKES CIRCLE

Seemingly Impossible Performance Accomplished by a New Tool

The seemingly impossible achievement of making a circle by means of a square is accomplished by a new device which has been lately patented. A view of this implement is given herewith and anyone who may be the least bit familiar with the construction and use of a T-square will see at once how it is done and also the advantages of the improvement.



HOW A CIRCLE MAY BE MADE WITH A SQUARE.

A flat, graduated rule has a socket at one end, designed to hold a point such as a piece of lead or lead pencil, and the length of the rule is traversed by a metal slide, designed to be secured at any point and adapted to perform the ordinary functions of a square. The slide is supplied with a projecting point which is used in making the circle in conjunction with the lead or pencil point, as shown in the illustration.

ABOUT WOOD-FILLERS

The Man Who Works About the Home Needs This Information

Open-grained woods require paste filling, being "hard woods." The varieties most in use are ash, beech, butternut, baywood, black walnut, chestnut, elm, mahogany, oak and rosewood.

Close-grained woods such as bass, cedar, redwood, gum, poplar, spruce and whitewood are filled with liquid fillers, being soft woods.

There is another group of woods that occupy an intermediate place, though they might properly be classed with the close-grained woods, namely, birch, cherry, circassian walnut and maple. They are sometimes filled with paste filler, sometimes with liquid filler.

Chestnut and some oaks are very open-pored and not only require filling but often two fillings and a stiff paste. The purpose of the paste filler is to fill up the openings in the tissue of the wood, the liquid part of the filler saturating the tissue and so to some extent preventing the wood robbing the varnish coat and occasioning pinholing, etc. For this purpose it is best to sometimes apply a coat of liquid filler over the paste filling, and in some instances another coat of paste filler over the liquid is best. In any case the idea is to form a hard and impermeable foundation for the varnish coats that are to follow.

A filler should be colored to match the wood; but should be made a shade or so darker. The following is a very good formula for making a paste filler: Mix two parts of best coach japan and three parts of raw linseed oil, both by weight. To this liquid add enough finely pulverized silica to form a stiff paste. The mass needs to be thoroughly mixed.

A white liquid filler is sometimes desirable, and the following is a good one. In one gallon of raw linseed oil put two pounds of pale powdered resin, and place in a suitable vessel on the stove until the resin has melted stirring meanwhile. Then remove from the fire and add one pint of white japan dried and two quarts of turpentine; stir well, then set aside to cool; when cold, stir in eight ounces of corn starch. After which thin with turpentine and pass it through a strainer.

Young Lady Assisted Police

A young lady, Miss Bowie, received a presentation from the officers and men of the Northern Division of the Glasgow police in recognition of services rendered to two constables. The policemen were attacked by two men, and Miss Bowie ran forward and taking the whistle from the tunic of one of the constables, summoned assistance.

WATERING THE STOCK

Four Rules That It Will Pay to Know and Observe

An unlimited supply of good pure water is essential to the health of all animals used for farm purposes. Pools formed from surface drainage where large quantities of organic matter are carried into them, and wells or pools contiguous to farmyards or manure heaps are especially to be avoided. Water from good tanks or wells, running streams, and properly-constructed pools is usually good, but too much care cannot be taken in reference to this matter. The quantity of water is also of importance. No animal will drink too much if watered sufficiently often, hence there is no necessity for limiting the supply except when the animal has been deprived of water for too long a time. Animals at rest should be given water at least three times a day in summer, and twice a day in winter, if they cannot have free access to it at all times. There is a common error that horses should not be watered when warm. An animal is never too warm to be watered if not more than two gallons be given. A large quantity of water will injure an animal at any time, but especially is this so when he is very warm or much fatigued.

The watering of animals immediately after feeding, so frequently practised, is not in harmony with the physiology of digestion. The stomach of a horse is very small in proportion to his size and the quantity of food he consumes, hence only a small amount of water can remain in the stomach, and if given immediately after feeding undigested food must of necessity be carried with it in its passage through the stomach into the intestines. Another reason why animals should not be watered immediately after feeding is that the digestion begins only when the food has been warmed to a temperature of about 90 degrees; therefore if a large quantity of cold water be mixed with the food the temperature of the contents of the stomach must be lowered, and consequently digestion must be retarded.

PARALYZED LIMBS

To-day it is sleeplessness, headaches, digestive trouble, and irritability. Next thing you know some form of paralysis has developed. Mr. Alex. Honsburger, 18 Moore Street, St. Catharines, Ont., writes: "Nervous trouble developed into paralysis of the limbs so that I became helpless. Doctors failed me, but after using ten boxes of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food I resumed work, and now feel better than I did for 10 years."

RAISING GEESE

A Profitable Side-line on the Farm—Pointers on Management

The breeding and raising of geese calls for altogether different treatment from the breeding and raising of ducks, the necessary conditions being very dissimilar. While the ducks will do very well when closely confined in yards and fed such green food as we have, geese will not thrive if kept in this manner. The breeding birds need a large, practically free, green range, and if well watered, either by pools or streams, the breeding results will be much more satisfactory than if the runs are unwatered.

Breeding geese require very little grain food. Through the winter they should be fed largely on vegetable foods. Cabbage, turnips, beets, cut clover, and other vegetable matter may be fed freely, together with a good quality of bran and oats. Corn and meal will prove rather too fattening, and should be fed sparingly even in the coldest of weather.

Very little shelter is required. A rough shed, free from extreme draughts, is all that is absolutely necessary. It should be littered with some dry material, and cleanliness will add much to the health and worth of the birds.

Old geese do not lay as many eggs as young ones, but they hatch good, vigorous birds. To the amateur it would be well to say, if your young geese (females) are but one year old, do not expect too many goslings, as you will do well to raise any from one-year-old females. Many a would-be geese raiser has given up the business because he did not know this.

The birds generally mate in February, and at this time such birds as are to be mated together should be shut apart from the others.

There is some question as to which is the best breed for general purposes. The three breeds which have the strongest following are the Toulouse, African and Embden. Each has its special virtues. The Toulouse is the largest of the three and produces a very strong and quick-growing gosling. The goslings require very little attention, except for the first day or two when they should be kept dry and warm.

A green run is really one of the necessary aids in the proper growth of young goslings. A little grain can be fed, say three times a day. This, with an abundant supply of green food, will cause them to grow and yield a profit to the producer.

Let them have free access to grit and oyster shell. They should be ready to kill when the first flight feathers are grown, and should be full fed at that time with corn, oatmeal and animal food.

Butterfly's Long Trip

Brilliantly colored butterflies or moths, three inches in length and brightly hued, are not common in Canada, and consequently some workmen in a Toronto lumber yard were surprised to see one of this kind fluttering around in a car. It was in with some ash lumber, which arrived from the Southern States, so that evidently it had traveled the distance from its native clime in a box car. It was three inches long and measured three and a half inches from tip to tip of the wings. The body was two and a half inches long and the wings were striped with grey, yellow, black and white.

Some people seem to get a lot of enjoyment in keeping others from enjoying themselves.

A certain little girl in East Cleveland has been ill for some time. Not so terribly ill, but enough so that she couldn't go to school and had to get a great deal of petting and indulgence.

The other day she said to her mother:

"Mamma, I want papa to buy me a dog. Not a little dog, but a great, big bulldog."

"Well, dearie," smiled the mother, "we'll have to see about that after a while."

"No, I want it right now."

"Don't you think you'd better wait till you're well?"

"No, mamma, I don't. The sicker I am the more likely papa will be to buy it for me."

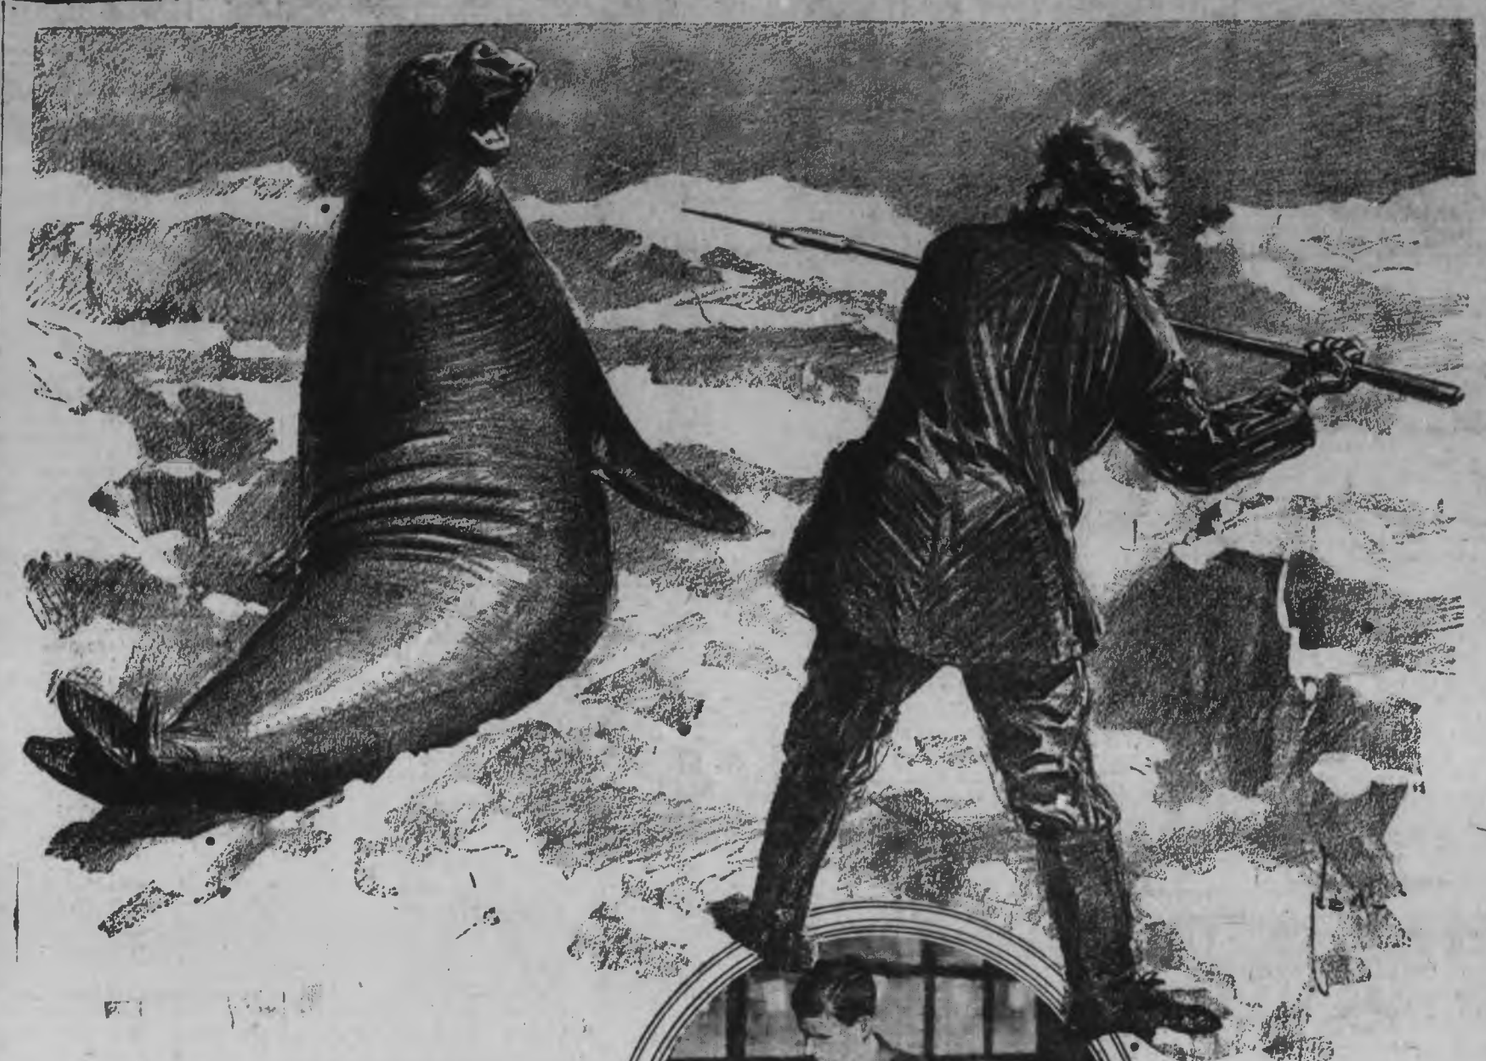
Hunting Antarctic Sea Elephants a Dangerous Sport, Declares Scientist-Explorer, Who Has Just Returned



The Spear Is Thrust at the Animal as It Rears.

R. C. Murphy Preparing Penguins for Mounting.

CAPTURING sea elephants for the big markets offers a promising new career to college athletes, according to Mr. Robert Cushman Murphy, a curator of the Brooklyn Museum, who has brought back from an expedition in South Georgia the largest cargo of these animals ever received in the United States. Until Mr. Murphy returned with twenty-five of the sea monsters there were only two skeletons of the Antarctic sea elephants in this country.

"Now you can't make a gladiator of me," declared the scientist explorer when asked by the interviewer how the great beasts are taken. "All that you do when you want to get a sea elephant and to take him without hurting his bones is to poke him a little until he becomes irritated and rears up on his tail. Some of the beasts are twenty feet long and they weigh, I should think, often close to 8,000 pounds, so that when they rear up they stand eight or ten feet tall. The spearman then rushes in with his lance and thrusts it into the beast, so that it is killed without danger to the skeleton."

"But doesn't the elephant sometimes fall on the man?" questioned the interviewer.

"Yes," admitted the modest captor of great beasts, "sometimes men are injured, but one has to step lively. It's about as fast a game as football. If you are quick enough there's nothing to fear."

Although Mr. Murphy is attached to the Brooklyn Museum, his expedition was conducted in the interest of both the American Museum of Natural History, of New York, and the Museum of the Brooklyn Institute of Arts and Sciences. The skeletons of the beasts which he brought back and the skins which are to be mounted will be divided between the two institutions. In addition to the sea elephants he brought back a large number of birds which inhabit the Antarctic wastes.

"We got 500 skins of Antarctic birds, most of which are new to the museums of America," said Mr. Murphy, who is now engaged in helping to put the bird part of his store of specimens into shape for exhibition.

One of the triumphs of the expedition was the capture on Trinidad Island, which lies in the south tropical Atlantic, of a new species of petrel hitherto unknown to the world of science.

"I got the fourth specimen known to that island," said Mr. Murphy. "It differs from any other petrel in having a white mantle with black tips; the effect is very much that of ermine. Three previous species of petrels had been discovered by exploring parties which, like ours, put into the island for only a day.

The South Atlantic Islet, which lies some twenty degrees south of the equator, afforded the party a glimpse of unparalleled scenic beauty before they went on to the never-ceasing storms and the barren coasts of South Georgia.

"Trinidad is entirely uninhabited," explained the scientist explorer. "It is one of the greatest harbors for sea birds in the world. The bird don't know what men are and we found them so tame that they willingly permitted us to stroke them. They flew around in great numbers over our heads and we could reach up and take them with our hands. We caught a good many of the fearless creatures and fastened on their legs the aluminum bands stamped with the address of the American Museum in New York and the request that when the birds are caught or shot the bands shall be returned to the museum so that we may learn more of the birds' migrations, length of life and so on.

"The island resembles Fairyland more than any place in the world that I have seen. It is a volcanic island three miles wide by one and one-half across with an altitude of 2,000 feet. Because of the peculiar rocky structure of the island it takes two days to cross it. This we did not have time to do, as we could only stop a day there.

"Formerly the rocks were covered with forests, but the trees were all destroyed by some natural agency and in their place there have sprung up forests of giant ferns, the trunks of which are as large around as a man's body, while they tower as high as thirty feet in the air. The remarkable character of the rocky formation also adds to the fairy-like beauty of the island, for the rocks overhang and tower in the strangest shapes. They are grottoed all over and covered with wonderful arabesques. Here and there are noticeably strange formations. At one end of the island rising directly from the water's edge is a tower of rock 859 feet high and a perfect cylinder which inclines as much as the leaning tower of Pisa. It rises directly from the waves. Another remarkable formation is the sugar loaf, which is almost an exact counterpart of the famous sugar loaf in the harbor of Rio de Janeiro. At a little distance the tower looks smooth, but at closer range it is seen to be covered with marvellous arabesques.

The entire coast of the island is grottoed and chiselled by the action of the rain and it is in these innumerable grottoes that the great number of sea birds nest. There is one group of petrels particularly abundant there and the new species which we got there is a member of this group. We found the man-o'-war bird and numerous gannet species also, also.

The bird life of the island, although intensely interesting, is not the only feature which makes it well worth exploration. The windward coast, which is very rugged with coral reefs, has an interest of its own in the numberless wrecks that are strewn there. These wrecks are from three hundred to four hundred years old, many of them. They are not all of them wrecks of that shore, but have drifted in from other points. In fact, it is an island of derelicts and there are all manner of tales as to the Spanish gold that lies buried there. In the old wrecks there are no doubt interesting finds to be made, for these remnants of ancient vessels have never been disturbed and they lie along the shore in a long unbroken line. Not only do the wrecks hold out hopes. It was supposed that much treasure was buried by pirates near the Sugar Loaf, and in 1845 a vessel was fitted up in London to visit the island and dig for treasure. We had no time to look for treasure, however, nor to get anything more than a glimpse of the wonderful bird life of the island.

There is one unfortunate feature to this idyllic spot and that is the ferocity of the sharks, which are worse than in any other part of the world where I have ever been. Whenever we caught fish over the side of the brig the sharks were after them, and before we could get them to the surface they had bitten them off. Even the rock garupas, which are nearly as large as a man and weigh ninety pounds, were bitten clean in two by these sharks before they could be pulled out of the water.

Otherwise the island had no drawbacks that we discovered. It has a wonderful climate, much like the Bermudas.

The sub-Antarctic islands offer quite a contrast to Trinidad. Our vessel was the brig Daisy, of New Bedford, a whaling brig which had previously been to Kerguelen Land and twice to South Georgia. We were bound especially for South Georgia, which is in the same latitude as Cape Horn and about twelve hundred miles east of it. It rises to a height of 7,000 feet and is snow covered all the year around.

South Georgia is the greatest storm centre in the world. We used to get a blizzard about three times a week, but they were not at all regular in their attendance, so that it was quite impossible to prepare for them. I had a camp on shore, with a sleeping bag, so that when the storm got so bad I couldn't get back to the brig for the night I could sleep comfortably in camp. Sometimes we were stormbound on board the Daisy and couldn't do anything for a long time. As it was impossible to tell about the approach of a storm, our whale boats were often dashed to pieces and the men saved with great difficulty. During one of the storms the men in a whale boat were only saved after a battle which lasted eighteen hours.

We went to South Georgia for sea elephants because it is one of the few remaining strongholds of sea elephants left in the world. The species never has been well known to science, but it has been known to whalers and sealers for more than 100 years. The old whalers used to go after the sea elephants for their oil, and they almost exterminated the species before scientists knew about them. The object of the expedition in part was the study of the sea elephant so that a scheme for the protection of the remaining specimens might be worked out.

I had a camp on shore right on the grounds most frequented by the animals. There were about two thousand of them on the beach that I counted. They are not afraid of human beings and will not attack any one until their anger is aroused by some previous attack upon them or something is purposely done to irritate them.

We spent most of our time at South Georgia at the Bay of Isles and at Possession Bay, at which point Captain James Cook set up his colors in 1775. Because of the violent gales we were obliged to put out four-ton anchors in order not to have our vessel blown away from its anchorage. Making a camp on shore was also an extremely difficult business because of the winds. It was impossible to have an oil stove burning in the tent, so that such preparation of the bird specimens as was necessary had often to be done in the bitter temperature of out of doors, where extreme dampness is a worse feature than the cold. The tent blew down frequently and the snow and sleet drifted victoriously over everything. At last the poor little shelter could stand out no longer against the constant onslaught of wind snow and sleet and blew away in shreds.

The sea elephant spends six months at sea and six months on land, when the mating and rearing of the young takes place. The pups are born in the spring, September or October. In the late spring or early summer, probably some time in November, the orthodox elephants put out to sea. The females, most of them stouter than the current fashions would commend, return to the beach in January, and the males come later, in March or February. All of the elephants are then very fat, as they eat well while at sea and save their dieting experiences for their land season. They then spend the rest of the Antarctic summer and autumn on land and divide the winter, which corresponds to our summer, between the land and nearby waters.

"It has been a much discussed question whether the sea elephants are highly polygamous. That they are so is apparently proved by the bellicose attitude of one bull sea elephant toward any other bull that crosses his path. There is almost always one hero of the beaches, who beats all the other bulls and plays the part of matinee idol to the antarctic.

"We stopped in Cumberland Bay for a time and made trips into the surrounding mountainous country. In travelling over the high, extinct glacier bed which leads to the west fjord of the bay we met great flocks of terns 1,700 feet up in the mountains. This pass, away up in the mountains, is, curiously enough, the route taken by sea birds from King Edward Cove to the West Fjord Lakes.

There are twenty-three species of birds which breed on South Georgia. In one section the petrel, known to the sailors as the black nighthawk, had dug nests in the ground by breaking away the frozen ground for a yard or more in depth, with their feet as well as their bills as digging instruments. Even before we saw the entrance to their nests we heard the underground singing of these birds. The eggs which were laid in December were often soaking in a pool of muddy water. We also found great colonies of sea birds on the outlying islands. It is not unusual to find four or five thousand pairs in such a colony. The great albatross, the bird of the Ancient Mariner, nests in great numbers at South Georgia.

On this island, which is a little larger than Long Island, there were during the four months that we were there about two hundred inhabitants, which does not at all interfere with the impression that it is an uninhabited island. These two hundred men are Norwegian fishermen, who are employed by several companies. They do a tremendous whaling business and in the year 1912 took twelve thousand whales, which according to current prices should have brought them in $6,000,000, not a sum to be overlooked as the return of an industry in so remote a spot.

There were long stretches of time on board the brig when we were in the tropical Atlantic when nothing happened, but then we would get a chance at sperm whaling or black fishing. The blackfish are among the wisest fish that swim the sea, and they often give even the most highly skilled whalers a hard chase before they are taken. Their method is to lie quietly on the surface of the water until the boat has almost reached them and then suddenly to sink straight down without apparently altering the inclination of their bodies. They go down into the water until nothing but shadows can be seen. Presently they come up again a little way off, and as if in derision they slap the surface of the water with their hindquarters, making a sound that is extremely annoying to the disappointed fishermen.

"Our main hope for the preservation of the greatest of seals—the sea elephant—rests with the British Colonial Office, which is now conducting an investigation of the status of whales, seals and penguins at South Georgia. The sea elephant is greatly desired by the fishermen because of its rich blubber. The blubber is seven or eight inches thick under the skin and yields a rich oil. As they are so slow and so unsuspicious they are easy victims, much more so than the whales, the difficulty of whose capture makes their extirpation unlikely. The sea elephant will be wiped out as completely as was the antarctic seal unless severe measures are taken for the protection of the species.

Lumber for the Orient.

RECENT statistics indicate a marked increase in exports of lumber from the United States to the Orient. More than a quarter of a million feet of American woods are reported as being used in Samoa, Hawaii and the Philippine Island.

Heretofore, it is said, raw materials have been made up into finished articles in the United States almost without exception, and exported as such. With the discovery by American manufacturers in the Philippines that they could import United States woods and make them up with profit there, wood using factories were built. Pacific coast woods, in consequence, are in many cases taking the place of the native woods, with such picturesque names as apitong, teak, narra and yacal.

Douglas fir, according to the information collected by the Forest Service, is the principal wood exported from this country. It is said to be the favorite wood among insular manufacturers for flooring, ceiling, siding, cornice, shelving, finish and boat work. Makers of furniture demand California redwood and sugar pine. Southern quarter sawed oak, Eastern ash, sugar maple and Western white pine.

Four woods, principally conifers and oaks, go into the construction of boats, for framing parts, masts, spars, interior trim, planking, boat hooks and tiller handles. Meat blocks are made from sugar maple, which with sycamore supplies the entire demand in the United States. Wagon felloes are made of white oak, and other parts of vehicles are manufactured from high grades of white ash and white oak.

"Honey" Manchester, Tamed Woodchuck, Chum of Dog.

Honey at "Attention."

Strange Friends.

Pet Woodchuck, Honey, at Dinner.

"HONEY" MANCHESTER, one of the extremely few woodchucks in captivity, is the property of Miss Helen Manchester, of Pleasant Valley, Conn. The avidity with which "Honey" has taken to the ways of civilized life and the ease with which she has become an entirely domesticated animal have caused much surprise to the residents of the neighborhood, with whom she has become a very popular visitor.

The woodchuck was found in the latter part of last May by an uncle of Miss Manchester, who during a ride over the Litchfield Hills noticed what he at first thought was a lady's purse lying on the roadside. As he stopped to pick it up the object moved a little and he discovered that his find was the smallest woodchuck he had ever seen. The small beast was evidently so cold that it was grateful for the warmth of his hand and settled down very comfortably in his pocket for the ride home.

An attempt to feed the baby woodchuck with a rag dipped in milk was not successful, and when a spoon was used as a feeding implement it also proved unavailing. But when a nursing bottle, just such as is used for human infants, only quite small in size, was offered to the woodchuck, she soon learned to take milk from it with perfect ease. Warm milk was used at first to feed the animal and it was necessary that the feeding operation take place often in the night. If the food was not forthcoming when the woodchuck was hungry she notified the family of her needs with a shrill whistle. She soon learned to scramble out of the basket provided for her sleeping quarters and would come to the bedside of Mrs. Manchester and awaken her out of a sound sleep by whistling in her ear as a reminder that it was feeding time.

Although she still takes milk as her principal diet, the woodchuck's bill of fare also includes cereals and roots and, so far as circumstantial evidence determines, a certain amount of wood pulp also. She has chewed up two window sashes in the barn, throwing the glass upon the ground and leaving no trace of the broken woodwork. She was discovered one morning with her legs hanging out of the furnace pipe, but the piece of pipe which had filled up the hole occupied by her body was never discovered, and "Honey" was chewing when she was pulled out, so that there is a suspicion that she has also a taste for weakened and rusty furnace pipe.

The woodchuck wanders freely over the neighboring gardens and houses and has been caught in a nearby cellar, where she had knocked a weighted plate from a butter crock and delved deeply into the yellow stove.

In addition to her human friends "Honey" has another friend in the person of "Watch," the family dog, whose feelings she has converted to friendship from a natural enmity, since he has long been noted in the neighborhood as a hunter of woodchucks. When "Honey" arrived in the Manchester family Mr. Manchester took the small woodchuck in his hand and introduced her to "Watch." He explained to the attentive dog that the little creature was helpless and homeless and that the family had promised to look after her. "Watch" cocked his head on one side, then stood upon his hind legs with his forepaws on his master's knee and looked down at "Honey" and up at Mr. Manchester. Then he licked the woodchuck's little black nose, thus cementing the friendship which has since endured.

"Watch" generally accepts the invitation to sit by when "Honey" is fed, and when she is given chocolate candy he gets his share after doing the "please" and "thank you" stunts of the well trained dog. "Honey" looks admiringly on and applauds with squeals and grunts, which demonstration is translated by persons cynically inclined as being not applause but an expression of greedy longing for more sweets.

The little animal is very affectionate to members of the family. She very much likes sitting upon Miss Manchester's shoulder, and although she will consent to stay for a few moments with a visitor she soon scrambles out of alien arms and runs to her mistress.

"Honey" weighs about ten pounds and is about a foot long. Careful brushing and abundant food have made her coat much more beautiful than that of the ordinary woodchuck. It is shining silver brown and so thick and long that when "Honey" is gathered up in a bunch she and it is probable that Sarah will [illegible] when coal much higher.

A Young Negro Heiress.

SARAH RECTOR, a ten-year-old negro girl, who lives in a humble cabin near Muskogee, Okla., is said to have the largest income of any man or woman of her race in the world. The royalties from the oil wells which the small negro girl owns are coming in at a rate which makes her annual income twice as large as that of the President of the United States. Despite the fact that she is receiving the sum of $475 every day of her life, which amounts to $14,250 a month, or $171,000 a year, Sarah lives as simply as any of the other negro boys and girls whose parents, like her own, are tenant farmers and cotton pickers. When she is old enough to be sent away from home she will be entered at some boarding school for negro girls and some of her money will be spent in making her a well educated and accomplished woman.

Sarah is the owner of 160 acres of oil land, which she has leased, through her guardian, T. J. Porter, to the Prairie Oil and Gas Company. Two wells have been sunk, one of which yields 2,000 barrels a day, while the second yields 1,800 barrels. Nine more wells will soon be in operation [illegible]

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

LYDIA'S LONG-HEADEDNESS

The years seemed to slip from David Harding as he walked down the familiar village street from the station to the lawyer's office. Could it be twenty-odd years since he daily made his discontented way over these uneven flagged walks beneath these stately old trees?

"So Aunt Lydia wanted me present at the reading of her will?" he said to the old lawyer who admitted him to the familiar shabbiness of his office. "It was the merest chance that your letter found me. I had just returned to New York for the first time in ten years. I thought Aunt Lydia had 'washed her hands of me' for good and all!"

"Your Aunt Lydia was always too lenient with you," retorted the old lawyer, reprovingly.

Harding flushed like a guilty boy. It had been long since anyone had dared—or cared—to speak reprovingly to him. "That is right," he admitted. "Aunt Lydia was always mighty kind, and I expect I must have exasperated her considerably. But she thought there was no place on earth, but Franesville."

"You've roved round considerable?" questioned the old man. "Never stayed long in one place?"

"There is always something farther on to see," smiled Harding, tolerantly.

"Your money about gone, is it?"

For an instant the younger man's eyes flashed; then the memory of the care and sound training this man had given to his parentless youth crowded out resentment. "That is why I had returned," he admitted, a bit shamefacedly.

"Hum! This 'will' business may come in handy, then? Where do you propose to go on your Aunt Lydia's money?"

"To tell the truth," laughed David, knowing the uselessness of concealment, "there are some friends planning a South American trip—they are holding off to hear from me."

"Well, you'll know your fate in an hour," observed the lawyer, exasperatingly. "There are only you, her ward, Elsie Maynard, and her Cousin Elizabeth. Remember them, do you?"

Remember them? Harding could have sworn it was but yesterday that he used to beg cookies of this gentle little Cousin Elizabeth, who stood framed in the office doorway. Tears filled his eyes as he clasped both her trembling hands, and a tenderness for his Aunt Lydia, whom he had so thoughtlessly neglected, overwhelmed him. And Elsie—didn't he remember the girl who could turn into such a little fury in spite of the gentleness of her usual demeanour?

Had he forgotten that Elsie was pretty, yes decidedly distinguished-looking, but just now there was a droop to her whole bearing that bespoke real affection for Aunt Lydia.

Harding could not take it all in at first. This reading appeared to be but a preliminary—they were to be put on "probation," as it were—the real will was to be read six months later. Cousin Elizabeth should keep the house and chaperon Elsie. David was to have his old place with them if he chose. The only stipulation placed on David was that he should work in the garden 36 hours during each consecutive week of the intervening six months!

"I underestimated Aunt Lydia's long-headedness," he said, with a smile which, somehow, held no resentment. "Do you remember, Elsie, what a bone of contention that garden always was in the old days? I only regret that Aunt Lydia will not be here to see me sweating at what she called 'honest labour,' that is all.

And so Harding, to his own amazement, occupied his old room that night in the well-remembered cottage. And next morning two messages went back to the city; one for certain necessary personal belongings, the other stating that business interests made his contemplated trip impossible.

Somehow, it never occurred to Harding that he need not follow the dictates of his aunt's will. He seemed to have taken up life where he left it as a petulant youth. He accepted admonition from the old lawyer with a meekness that would have amused his later friends. He begged cookies of Cousin Elizabeth, fished in the old brooks, resumed his work in the well-remembered garden, though without his old-time protest, and even succeeded in rousing Elsie to gratifying flashes of fury.

This all proved exceedingly pleasant. He smiled sometimes at his own expense, remembering his excitement over a row of especially early peas or the success ofs ome horticultural experiment. Perhaps Aunt Lydia had not been so far from right, after all. Considering the places where he had slept and the things he had eaten, his present cool room and the breakfast table spread on the secluded dining-room verandah seemed very enticing.

Since he had much exceeded his 36-hour stipulation for the week and the sun was beating down with unusual vehemence, he placed his floe in the tool shed one sultry Saturday morning and sought the shelter of the inviting side porch. Voices floated out to him from the kitchen where Cousin Elizabeth could be depended upon as busy preparing delicacies for the Sunday dinner.

"Where is Elsie?" demanded the voice of a neighbour of insatiable curiosity.

"She went out to Lucy Turner's for the day. Sid Brown drove her out on his way to Blockville."

"I saw them drive away. Sid doesn't seem to come here so much since David came back. Looks like he intended sticking right here the whole six months, doesn't it?"

"I should think it was the proper place for him, in his own home," was Cousin Elizabeth's gentle rejoinder.

"No more than it has been these 20 years past, and you know it, Elizabeth Harding. I should think he'd be ashamed to do now, in the hope of getting her property, what he would not do for his Aunt Lydia while she was alive. And I should have thought Lydia would have been ashamed not to leave this place to Elsie out and out. Then she and Sid could be married and take a little comfort in life. I declare, it is going too far when folks try to manage things even after they are gone."

David sat in overwhelming thought even after he heard the screen door on the opposite side of the kitchen flap shut, proclaiming the departure of the caller. And after a silent dinner, he made his way down to that dusty law office.

When Elsie Maynard came up the walk in the cool, fragrant twilight, after watching Sid Brown drive away down the quiet street, she was surprised to see David hastening to meet her.

"Come into the garden, Elsie; I want you to see a new experiment I've tried." But when they reached the garden he turned to her in stern displeasure. "If you wished to go to Lucy Turner's, why did you not say so? I would have taken you out, gladly."

"But Sid drives past there every day. I always go with him, it is very convenient."

"Is it true that you would marry Sid if Aunt Lydia had not put obstacles in the way?" he demanded.

"What an extraordinary question," smiled Elsie, with a calmness that warned him.

"Oh, of course I beg your pardon—but that was what they said, and I could not believe it. See here, Elsie; you love this place, don't you?"

"I've lived here all my remembered life," said she, softly.

"And I—I love it, too, to my own astonishment. Why can we not both stay? Will you marry me, Elsie? We cannot do that after the will has been read, but we can now and rise or fall together, however things go. We can be sure of a living at least."

"Do you think," flashed Elsie, "that I would marry you for a home or to be sure of a living?" Her voice ended with a sob.

"No, I do not, my dear girl," returned David, with sudden enlightenment, "but I do think you will marry me because you love me as I love you!"

The garden was in its winter orderliness when they went down to hear the final reading of the will. "In the event of the marriage of my nephew, David Harding, to my beloved ward, Elsie Maynard, an event which I most sincerely desire," read the old lawyer, and Harding leaned toward his wife. "Aunt Lydia was long-headed when she set me digging in that garden," he whispered.

Mark Twain's "Nannygoat."

Mark Twain, about the time that he was working hard upon one of the earlier books that brought him fame, sailed for a tour of Europe with his family.

He kept up his writing on shipboard and only left it at intervals for brief recreation.

One day an approaching storm drove him inside the cabin and he went back to work, leaving word with his daughter, then a very little girl, to explain his absence.

"If they ask for me," he said to her, "say that I won't be long—I am only going to write an anecdote."

A little later the child was accosted by a passenger.

"Where has your father gone?" inquired the seeker.

"He won't be long," lisped the child. "He said he ith only going to ride a nannygoat."

Why She Wouldn't Pay.

"You'll have to pay for that little boy," said the conductor on a Michigan Central train the other day.

"I guess not," said the lady, firmly.

"Have you ever had to buy a ticket for him?"

"No, I have not, and I will not begin now."

"You will have to pay his fare this time."

"No, I shall not pay his fare. That is settled, Mr. Conductor."

"If you don't pay his fare I cannot let him occupy a seat. I will stop the train and put him off."

"Stop the train and put him off if you like. He's not my little boy. I never saw him before."

BIG SLEEP.

A middle-aged couple were preparing to leave for a week-end with a daughter in the City, and their last instructions to their grown-up son, who was a heavy sleeper, were to be sure and wind his alarm clock, so that he would be in time for his work the next morning.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

LYDIA'S LONG-HEADEDNESS

The years seemed to slip from David Harding as he walked down the familiar village street from the station to the lawyer's office. Could it be twenty-odd years since he daily made his discontented way over these uneven flagged walks beneath these stately old trees?

"So Aunt Lydia wanted me present at the reading of her will?" he said to the old lawyer who admitted him to the familiar shabbiness of his office. "It was the merest chance that your letter found me. I had just returned to New York for the first time in ten years. I thought Aunt Lydia had 'washed her hands of me' for good and all!"

"Your Aunt Lydia was always too lenient with you," retorted the old lawyer, reprovingly.

Harding flushed like a guilty boy. It had been long since anyone had dared—or cared—to speak reprovingly to him. "That is right," he admitted. "Aunt Lydia was always mighty kind, and I expect I must have exasperated her considerably. But she thought there was no place on earth, but Franesville."

"You've roved round considerable?" questioned the old man. "Never stayed long in one place?"

"There is always something farther on to see," smiled Harding, tolerantly.

"Your money about gone, is it?"

For an instant the younger man's eyes flashed; then the memory of the care and sound training this man had given to his parentless youth crowded out resentment. "That is why I had returned," he admitted, a bit shamefacedly.

"Hum! This 'will' business may come in handy, then? Where do you propose to go on your Aunt Lydia's money?"

"To tell the truth," laughed David, knowing the uselessness of concealment, "there are some friends planning a South American trip—they are holding off to hear from me."

"Well, you'll know your fate in an hour," observed the lawyer, exasperatingly. "There are only you, her ward, Elsie Maynard, and her Cousin Elizabeth. Remember them, do you?"

Remember them? Harding could have sworn it was but yesterday that he used to beg cookies of this gentle little Cousin Elizabeth, who stood framed in the office doorway. Tears filled his eyes as he clasped both her trembling hands, and a tenderness for his Aunt Lydia, whom he had so thoughtlessly neglected, overwhelmed him. And Elsie—didn't he remember the girl who could turn into such a little fury in spite of the gentleness of her usual demeanour?

Had he forgotten that Elsie was pretty, yes decidedly distinguished-looking, but just now there was a droop to her whole bearing that bespoke real affection for Aunt Lydia.

Harding could not take it all in at first. This reading appeared to be but a preliminary—they were to be put on "probation," as it were—the real will was to be read six months later. Cousin Elizabeth should keep the house and chaperon Elsie. David was to have his old place with them if he chose. The only stipulation placed on David was that he should work in the garden 36 hours during each consecutive week of the intervening six months!

"I underestimated Aunt Lydia's long-headedness," he said, with a smile which, somehow, held no resentment. "Do you remember, Elsie, what a bone of contention that garden always was in the old days? I only regret that Aunt Lydia will not be here to see me sweating at what she called 'honest labour,' that is all.

And so Harding, to his own amazement, occupied his old room that night in the well-remembered cottage. And next morning two messages went back to the city; one for certain necessary personal belongings, the other stating that business interests made his contemplated trip impossible.

Somehow, it never occurred to Harding that he need not follow the dictates of his aunt's will. He seemed to have taken up life where he left it as a petulant youth. He accepted admonition from the old lawyer with a meekness that would have amused his later friends. He begged cookies of Cousin Elizabeth, fished in the old brooks, resumed his work in the well-remembered garden, though without his old-time protest, and even succeeded in rousing Elsie to gratifying flashes of fury.

This all proved exceedingly pleasant. He smiled sometimes at his own expense, remembering his excitement over a row of especially early peas or the success of some horticultural experiment. Perhaps Aunt Lydia had not been so far from right, after all. Considering the places where he had slept and the things he had eaten, his present cool room and the breakfast table spread on the secluded dining-room verandah seemed very enticing.

Since he had much exceeded his 36-hour stipulation for the week and the sun was beating down with unusual vehemence, he placed his hoe in the tool shed one sultry Saturday morning and sought the shelter of the inviting side porch. Voices floated out to him from the kitchen where Cousin Elizabeth could be depended upon as busy preparing delicacies for the Sunday dinner.

"Where is Elsie?" demanded the voice of a neighbour of insatiable curiosity.

"She went out to Lucy Turner's for the day. Sid Brown drove her out on his way to Blockville."

"I saw them drive away. Sid doesn't seem to come here so much since David came back. Looks like he intended sticking right here the whole six months, doesn't it?"

"I should think it was the proper place for him, in his own home," was Cousin Elizabeth's gentle rejoinder.

"No more than it has been these 20 years past, and you know it, Elizabeth Harding. I should think he'd be ashamed to do now, in the hope of getting her property, what he would not do for his Aunt Lydia while she was alive. And I should have thought Lydia would have been ashamed not to leave this place to Elsie out and out. Then she and Sid could be married and take a little comfort in life. I declare, it is going too far when folks try to manage things even after they are gone."

David sat in overwhelming thought even after he heard the screen door on the opposite side of the kitchen flap shut, proclaiming the departure of the caller. And after a silent dinner, he made his way down to that dusty law office.

When Elsie Maynard came up the walk in the cool, fragrant twilight after watching Sid Brown drive away down the quiet street, she was surprised to see David hastening to meet her.

"Come into the garden, Elsie; I want you to see a new experiment I've tried." But when they reached the garden he turned to her in stern displeasure. "If you wished to go to Lucy Turner's, why did you not say so? I would have taken you out, gladly."

"But Sid drives past there every day. I always go with him, it is very convenient."

"Is it true that you would marry Sid if Aunt Lydia had not put obstacles in the way?" he demanded.

"What an extraordinary question," smiled Elsie, with a calmness that warned him.

"Oh, of course I beg your pardon—but that was what they said, and I could not believe it. See here, Elsie; you love this place, don't you?"

"I've lived here all my remembered life," said she, softly.

"And I—I love it, too, to my own astonishment. Why can we not both stay? Will you marry me, Elsie? We cannot do that after the will has been read, but we can now and rise or fall together, however things go. We can be sure of a living at least."

"Do you think," flashed Elsie, "that I would marry you for a home or to be sure of a living?" Her voice ended with a sob.

"No, I do not, my dear girl," returned David, with sudden enlightenment, "but I do think you will marry me because you love me as I love you!"

The garden was in its winter orderliness when they went down to hear the final reading of the will. "In the event of the marriage of my nephew, David Harding, to my beloved ward, Elsie Maynard, an event which I most sincerely desire," read the old lawyer, and Harding leaned toward his wife. "Aunt Lydia was long-headed when she set me digging in that garden," he whispered.

Mark Twain's "Nannygoat."

Mark Twain, about the time that he was working hard upon one of the earlier books that brought him fame, sailed for a tour of Europe with his family.

He kept up his writing on shipboard and only left it at intervals for brief recreation.

One day an approaching storm drove him inside the cabin and he went back to work, leaving word with his daughter, then a very little girl, to explain his absence.

"If they ask for me," he said to her, "say that I won't be long—I am only going to write an anecdote."

A little later the child was accosted by a passenger.

"Where has your father gone?" inquired the seeker.

"He won't be long," lisped the child. "He said he ith only going to ride a nannygoat."

Why She Wouldn't Pay.

"You'll have to pay for that little boy," said the conductor on a Michigan Central train the other day.

"I guess not," said the lady, firmly.

"Have you ever had to buy a ticket for him?"

"No, I have not, and I will not begin now."

"You will have to pay his fare this time."

"No, I shall not pay his fare. That is settled, Mr. Conductor."

"If you don't pay his fare I cannot let him occupy a seat. I will stop the train and put him off."

"Stop the train and put him off if you like. He's not my little boy. I never saw him before."

HENRY B. SMITH SINKS,

Big Ore Steamer Reported Foundered With Thirty Hands.

MARQUETTE, Mich., Nov. 14.—The steamer Henry B. Smith, loaded with 10,000 tons of ore, which sailed from Marquette on Sunday in the teeth of a heavy storm, is lost on Lake Superior, and last night it is believed the vessel foundered off Stannard Rock with her crew of thirty men. The Hawgood Transportation Co. of Cleveland, owners of the boat, yesterday afternoon telegraphed Captain Brown here, asking for information concerning the Smith's whereabouts, and stated that although she has been on the lake five days she has not reached Sault Ste. Marie, for which port she sailed.

The sighting of a drowned sailor floating upright in Lake Superior, supported by a lifebelt, eleven miles southeast of Marquette last yesterday afternoon, and the drifting on the beach here of bits of wreckage and furnishings of a ship's cabin, confirms the belief that the Smith and her crew perished.

The Henry B. Smith, with Captain James Owen of Cleveland in command, after taking on ore and waiting two days for the storms to abate, steamed out on Sunday night. The Smith is solid steel, 565 feet long beam 55, depth 30. She was launched at Cleveland in 1906.

Four beach patrols have also been placed, and are now maintaining a watchful eye to see that nothing is being carried away by the ghouls who were at work Wednesday. The officers are making close searches about the surrounding country, as it is reported that many hiding places of stolen wreckage have already been located.

Death of Joseph Stratford.

BRANTFORD, Nov. 14.—Joseph Stratford, a pioneer resident of Brantford, passed away suddenly here early yesterday from heart failure. For twenty years he was the manager of the Brantford hospital, bequeathed to this city by his brother, John H. Stratford. He was organizer of the Farmers' Binder Twine Co. and an active leader in the interests of the Patrons of Industry. He leaves a widow and eight sons and two daughters.

NEW YORK, Nov. 14.—A miniature naval battle was fought under the shadow of Brooklyn Bridge, just after midnight yesterday morning when detectives, concealed aboard barges, and policemen in launches exchanged shots with armed river pirates. Four detectives were injured, but three pirates were captured and three motor-boats loaded with stolen coffee were recovered.

One Thousand For Alienation.

BRANTFORD, Nov. 14. — Robert Craig, a mechanic of Brantford, brought action yesterday in the High Court against Charles Wooden, contractor, of Burford, for the alienation of his wife's affections. Hurrah! For Me, I Can Eat

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets Bring Joy to the Starving Dyspeptics Who Cannot Safely Eat

To seat one's self at a festive board or a heavily laden table and not be able to eat is positive torture to most dyspeptics and stomach sufferers, and likewise pain.

"I Walk to My Meals and Eat All I Want. Then a Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablet Makes Good For Me."

When your system is robbed of its natural digestive juices, in their correct proportion, a little candy-like Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablet gives to them the qualities they lack and you thereby rest the digestive apparatus and allay irritation, pain, gas and stomach trouble.

Pepsin such as used in a Stuart's tablet is one of nature's greatest aids; and when this is combined with the other ingredients you simply bring happiness to every worn-out nerve of the stomach, liver, intestines, pancreas and other organs.

Predigested foods will not aid nature if she insists on manufacturing the wrong juices. Besides this the bowels need coarse and heavy foods in order to make bowel pack which is vitally essential to health.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets mix with the food in the stomach, have a tendency to stop gas formations, sour stomach, decay, etc., then as the food passes into the lower digestive tract (the intestines) it takes the Stuart's digestive agents with it, and there is where the real work is done.

The nutritive value of food and tablet is separated from the waste matter and is assimilated and distributed into the proper parts of the body. The blood is enriched and the liver stored with the qualities the system needs.

Go to your druggist now and buy a box of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets, price 50c, and then eat what you will, but take a tablet afterwards. Then will come to you the beginning of the end of all your stomach troubles and food fears.

Radium Too Scarce Yet.

CHICAGO, Nov. 14.—Scarcity of radium has prevented a thorough test of what its curative properties may be in cancer, according to the report made to the clinical congress of surgeons in session here by the cancer campaign committee.

"Only time will tell what percentage of cases can be cured with radium," the report states. "In the meantime the public should be informed through every possible source that early surgical treatment offers the best chance for cure."

The surgeons who have reported the best results from radium still urge early operation whenever possible.

Accused of "Quacking."

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Nov. 14.—Accused as "get-rich-quick" quacks, Dr. John F. Hackett, graduate of Yale and McGill, and Victor Broad, an Italian, are held in default of $5,000 bail here to-day, after a police raid on their elaborate offices. Their circulars advertised Hackett as a man who could cure anything, and they reaped a harvest from foreigners. Broad admits trouble of the same sort in Boston, Cleveland, Detroit and Chicago.

NEW CONVENIENT TRAIN TO WINNIPEG.

CANADIAN PACIFIC

The popularity of Canadian Pacific service, and the excellence of that road's equipment, has been so greatly appreciated by the travelling public that it has been found necessary to put into service an entirely new Through Standard Express Train between Toronto and Winnipeg.

Commencing Sunday, October 26th, the "Gate City Express" will leave Toronto at 2.30 p.m., and will run daily thereafter, arirving Winnipeg at 8.25 a.m. second morning. The train will consist of the highest-class modern equipment; Observation Compartment Car, Standard Sleeping Cars, Tourist Sleeping Car, Dining Car, First-class Coach and Colonist Car. This will be found the most convenient and best train between Toronto and Winnipeg on account of the daylight departure from Toronto at an hour when the Union Station is not badly congested, and also on account of the early hour of arrival at Winnipeg.

The present "Vancouver Express" will continue to leave Toronto at 10.20 p.m. daily and will consist of the same equipment as the "Gate City Express." This train is the best to take for points west of Winnipeg, but for Winnipeg and east the "Gate City Express" is the right train to travel by.

CONCRETE FORM BURST.

One Workman Dead and Another May Die at the Falls.

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont., Nov. 14.—Louis Gardella, 485 Second street, Niagara Falls, N.Y., was instantly killed, and Richard Misner of this city, was probably fatally injured in an accident in the generating station of the Ontario Power Co. on the lower river bank yesterday. A wooden form into which concrete was being poured gave way and fell upon Gardella and Misner. Several other workmen had narrow escapes.

Gardella and Misner were buried by a mass of concrete and timbers. The Italian's neck was broken. Misner sustained a fracture of the skull which necessitated a delicate operation at the General Hospital. But little hope is held out for his recovery.

Gardella, who was 28 years old, came here from Warren, Pa., two years ago. He was to have been married this winter.

To Have Dental Clinic.

BRANTFORD, Nov. 14. — Following a trip of inspection to Toronto on Wednesday by two representatives of the public school board, it is more than likely that a dental clinic, open to all public school children, will be established in Brantford. It is estimated that such a clinic would cost $500 for its establishment and $800 annually for up-keep, but the investment is one that would yield a great reform in the betterment of the health of the children.

The results achieved in Toronto were found by the representatives to have been remarkably successful. An inspection of the Toronto system was brought about by the large number of cases of defective teeth reported monthly by the Brantford nurse.

If Hair Is Turning Grey, Use Sage Tea

Here's Grandmother's Receipe to Darken and Beautify Faded Hair

The beautiful, even shade of dark, glossy hair can only be had by brewing a mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur. Your hair is your charm. It makes or mars the face. When it fades, turns grey, streaked and looks dry, wispy and scraggly, just an application or two of Sage and Sulphur enhances its appearance a hundredfold.

Don't bother to prepare the tonic; you can get from any drug store a 50-cent bottle of "Wyeth' Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy," ready to use. This can always be depended upon to bring back the natural colour, thickness and lustre of your hair and remove dandruff, stop itching and falling hair.

Everybody uses "Wyeth's" Sage and Sulphur because it darkens so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied. You simply dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through the hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the grey hair has disappeared, and after another application it becomes beautifully dark and appears glossy, lustrous and abundant.

NEGLIGENCE SUSPECTED.

Investigation To Be Made Into the Rumors at Goderich.

LONDON, Ont., Nov. 14.—Did the Wexford founder with her crew of 25 men off Goderich harbor because of the culpable negligence of any person ashore?

This is the question being investigated by Crown Attorney Seager of Goderich, and an attempt will be made to solve it at the inquest conducted under his directions by Coroner Campbell of Hay Township at Zurich, on Nov. 20.

"We will endeavor to learn if signals were set up at Goderich harbor and if the protection to incoming vessels was adequate," Coroner Campbell said yesterday morning.

"It has been reported here that the siren of the Wexford was heard off Goderich, where she was due to put in on Sunday afternoon. She left Fort William with 96,000 bushels of grain Thursday and should have been safely in Goderich Sunday afternoon. Had she been she would have avoided the blizzard in which she foundered Sunday night or early Monday morning.

"We will endeavor to learn if anything had been done on shore to admit of the safe entrance of a ship to the harbor."

Norton's Safety Reported.

CLEVELAND, Nov. 14.—The Norton, mentioned in a despatch from Fort William as overdue, is probably the David S. Norton, owned by W. C. Richardson, Cleveland. The owner yesterday received a message from Duluth stating that the Norton docked there Wednesday at 2.15 p.m.

AMBITION UNFULFILLED.

Young G. T. R. Fireman Went Down on Steamer Wexford.

GUELPH, Nov. 14.—The ambition of every man who ever shovelled coal into the firebox of a locomotive is one day to hold the throttle himself as engineer. This ambition was that of Donald MacDonald, who was fireman on the G.T.R. local between Guelph and Hamilton. He had obtained a week's holidays, and as he had a cousin on a lake boat he decided to sail from Goderich to Fort William. It was to be his last holiday before returning to work as a full-fledged engineer on the Grand Trunk. They reached Fort William safely, but as MacDonald had to return to work and the boat he had come with was not ready to sail, he shipped with the ill-starred Wexford, as another cousin of his was on this boat. The fate of the craft has been written and young MacDonald and his cousin went down with her. MacDonald was well known here. He was unmarried and hailed from Goderich.

Thought She Would Go Mad WITH HEADACHE.

In all cases of headache the treatment should be directed to remove the cause, for with the cause removed the headache vanishes for all time. Headache powders just relieve for the time being, but what is necessary for a permanent cure is something that will go right to the seat of the trouble. For this purpose it is impossible to find a better remedy for headaches of all descriptions than Burdock Blood Bitters, acting as it does on every organ of the body to strengthen, purify and regulate the whole system.

Mrs. Althea Bowman, Hamilton, Ont., writes:—"I have suffered terribly with my head for weeks at a time till I thought I would go mad. A friend advised me to give Burdock Blood Bitters a trial, so I got a bottle and found relief. I have used four bottles in all and I am glad to say that I have had no more headaches since. I would advise all sufferers to give it a fair trial."

TAGORE GETS PRIZE.

India's Greatest Poet Receives the Nobel Award For 1913.

STOCKHOLM, Sweden, Nov. 14.—The Nobel prize for literature was awarded yesterday to the British Indian poet Rabindranath Tagore, the first time on record that this prize has been given to anybody but a white person.

The works of Tagore were scarcely known outside of British India until recently, when some of them were translated into English.

The Tagore family is Hindu and belongs to the province of Bengal. Many of its members have devoted themselves to literature and the arts, and some of them are in the Indian civil service. Two of the most prominent are Maharajah Sir Pradyot Kumar Tagore and Rajah Sir Scurindro Mohun Tagore, the latter of whom was given the degree of doctor of music by the University of Philadelphia in 1875.

PETERBOROUGH, FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 14, 1913

LAYMEN OF PETERBORO' MANIFEST THEIR DESIRE TO SUPPORT MISSIONS THAT THE GOSPEL MAY BE GIVEN TO WHOLE WORLD

Greatest Banquet in the History of the City, a Barometer of the Christian Spirit That Imbues Hundreds of Men From all the Walks of Life.

ADDRESSES A FEATURE

Market Hall Crowded By Representative Gathering of Men from the City and County Interested in a Great Cause.

OCCASION A MEMORABLE ONE

The Laymen's Missionary banquet in the Market Hall on Thursday night proved conclusively that hundreds of men of this city and county recognize that they were not excluded from the Divine command that God's word should be given to every nation.

Over eight hundred men from all walks of life, expressing by their mere presence that the missionary movement is a matter of personal concern, was surely a striking testimonial of a pulsing faith in God's Word, a beautiful recognition of the strength of His love, and an unqualified offering of service that the sacrifice and death of His Son may not be in vain.

A Democratic Assembly.

In his opening remarks His Honour Judge Huycke, who presided over the post-prandial addresses, said: "This is the most inspiring spectacle I have even seen," and additional verbiage can add but little strength to his apt expression. Long rows of tables, extending across the width of the hall with the table of honour in the centre of the west side, and not a vacant chair established the banquet as the most elaborate in the history of Peterborough. Slightly over eight hundred and twenty-five laymen embracing labourers, mechanics, merchants, and professional men gathered together about a common board might have been claimed as an indication that Christianity after all intrinsically possesses the element of true democracy.

But in addition to those who enjoyed the banquet there were many others who could not be accommodated and therefore did not arrive until the addresses commenced. They were grouped along the east wall and it may be safely stated that there were over one thousand persons present at the function. The hall was gayly hung with flags and bunting. It was no "long-faced" affair. The tables were prettily decorated with candles and flowers, and while the banquet was in progress a large number of young ladies, wearing dresses of white, moved decorously about fulfilling a traditional duty which the suffragette would disclaim, but which, none the less is most capably performed by the sisters of men.

The band of the Salvation Army presented a fine programme during supper, and the appreciation of their music was unreserved and well deserved.

Men from All Walks.

But the music, flowers and food were simply the background for the gathering which established a new record for affairs of that kind in Peterborough. The most interesting feature, apart from the able addresses, was the presence of so many men, young and old, manifesting by their facial expression as they directed their gaze to the dias an expectancy and interest which Judge Huycke referred to in his opening remarks. Heads of manufacturing plants, so-called hard-headed business men, rubbing shoulders with some of their employees, merchants and customers chatting over their viands, and other indications of a general fraternity were little points of human interest that exist in the ideal, and were reduced to actuality at a gathering to discuss the importance of the missionary movement, and to consider means by which the present generation may shoulder a responsibility to which the Laymen's Movement has given a great impetus.

The Laymen of the city may well feel proud of the fact that they provided a means for the display of indications of active Christianity in this city. In this respect last night's assemblage is surely an answer to the statement that the Gospel has lost its power to attract men. A more representative gathering of the best manhood in Peterborough has never before been witnessed at a similar function.

Formosan Missions.

The first speaker introduced by His Honour Judge Huycke, who presided as chairman for the evening, was Dr. J. Y. Ferguson, who returned a few months ago after spending eight years in medial and missionary work on the Island of Formosa. Probably the most striking feature of his address was the description of how the medical student may assist the missionary, and the large share that the hospital has accepted in winning converts to Christianity.

Formosa is an island off the east coast of China. It has a population of 3,000,000 of whom 120,000 are the natives of the island, the famous head-hunters of Formosa, who were driven to the hill country during the occupancy of the Chinese. The result has been that the aboriginal Formosans have ever since been the enemies of all other races, and of the Chinese in particular.

In 1895 the island was ceded to Japan by treaty and the new owners are doing their best to subdue them. It is apparent that their idea is not to exterminate them. The Japanese government has not given permission to enter the Formosan hills because they considered it too dangerous, but the missionary staff has had its hands full working among the Chinese.

Have Modern Conveniences.

In the cities of Formosa the comforts of civilization are almost as numerous as they are in Canadian cities, and Dr. Ferguson pointed out that the island presented a splendid field for missionary work, for a man could soon learn the few languages spoken on the island.

The Chinese after all are fundamentally similar to Canadians. After you pierce through their outer defences of custom and character you find a human heart with a human affections and desires.

Work of Hospitals.

In 1905 Dr. Ferguson went to Formosa and shortly after his arrival began hospital work in an old building that had been erected 30 years previously. Later a splendid hospital was erected at a cost of $25,000. The average number of patients received during any year was between 5,000 and 6,000, the number of treatments 32,000, and operations 500. The Japanese have extended their advanced medical idea into Formosa, and have a medical school in Takow, a number of whose students are Christians who act as house surgeons in the missionary hospital. One of the men engaged in evangelistic work had written to Dr. Ferguson that 60 per cent. of the converts came through the hospital. During periods of convalescence they become interested in the Bible and many of them go away able to read it.

Hon. Justice Hodgins.

The next speaker was the Hon. Justice Hodgins, of Toronto. "I have been associated with the Laymen's Missionary Movement since its inception, and have watched its growth with a good deal of interest," said Mr. Justice Hodgins. "Some have said that when the first enthusiasm was over, the Laymen's Missionary Movement would die. It was never of that opinion. The movement has not spent its force, but is better prepared than ever to conform to the new order of things. It is obvious that both the spirit and outlook of Canada have changed enormously, with the opening of the Northwest territories. Immigrants are pouring into the great Canadian West at the rate of over two hundred and seventy-five a day. We are proud to think that we are assimilating this vast influx of people. The responsibility of each and every church of to-day is to supply the spiritual need, which we admit exists, and which the state will not supply."

Motor Car Service.

"I was surprised to learn from Rev. J. Y. Ferguson, that in Formosa, they have what we would like to have in Toronto—a motor car service. We are conscious of the enormity of the work that demands not only individual but national effort.

"There are two sides to the Laymen's Missionary Movement, one of which is the objective side, and the other is that in the endeavour to vivify the interest of men, it has reacted upon those who sought to put forth their influence, and has raised up in Canada a body of men who manifest a consistant and convincing interest, and are active partizans in their work."

"I have always been a firm believer," said Mr. Justice Hodgins, "in the fact that nine-tenths of the men in all the churches are willing to work if asked and given something to do. This movement provides an excellent outlet for the talents of the business man.

"I think that the movement bears considerable relation to the national life. The Laymen's Missionary Movement only asks you to realize, that in Canada, from the combined viewpoint of the eastern portion of Canada and the whole of the Dominion, that the Missionary Movement is a broad and comprehensive question, and is bound up in our national life.

"It is up to the laymen and others to see that Canada carries out her obligations as they concern the Christianizing of the nation and to uphold that true precept—Love God, honour the King, and love the brotherhood," said Mr. Justice Hodgins in conclusion.

Rev. J. H. Arnup.

"The goal of history is the redemption of the world and not to believe is infidelity," said Rev. J. H. Arnup, of Toronto, by way of introduction to a fifteen minute discourse. "The task of evangelizing the world cannot be achieved without Divine power which must be enthroned in the hearts of men. Many fail because they lack in themselves the power of fulfillment of their own ideals. Not to believe in Christian Missions, is simply not to believe in Jesus Christ. No view of this world-wide enterprise is complete to-day, unless it includes a specific well proportioned view of Canada. This country occupies an important place in God's plan of the universe. Any view of the home missionary movement that does not take in the whole world lacks vision, and any view of the foreign missionary movement that does not take in home missions lacks commonsense. Christianity that cannot safely be propagated in every part of the world is inadequate."

"Time of Times."

"We firmly believe," said the speaker, "that we have come to the time of times, when present day opportunities makes it imperative that this age be marked with characteristic emphasis, and that if the present era is wasted, havoc will be wrought, that centuries will not regain. Not only do we believe that God's purpose is to effect the evangelization of the world, but that we are the men to do it. The opportunities and obligations are ours. It is said to be the man's job but not the other man's job.

"The conference is the beginning, not the end of the campaign," concluded Rev. Mr. Arnup.

Notes of the Meeting.

Rev. Mr. Grobb, of All Saints' Church, read the concluding verses of the Gospel of St. Matthew and led in prayer prior to the addresses at the conclusion of the banquet.

His Honour Judge Huycke fulfilled the duties of chairman most capably. The best of order prevailed throughout the evening and the chairman was to a considerable extent rseponsible for that condition.

Mr. G. W. Mulligan led in the singing, in addition to a vocal solo he rendered. He possesses the happy faculty of rousing every person when a grand chorus is desired. Mr. H. C. Treneer played the accompaniments.

The Salvation Army Band provided a programme that was greatly enjoyed. Looking back over the evening it seems that the committee overlooked nothing.

THE RESULT OF THE GATHERING

The men gathered in this County Conference, representing a large number of the Churches of this County of all Communions, do hereby agree:

1st.—That the every-member canvass, helpful in many ways, offers the very best solution of the financial difficulties of our congregations, both for missions and current expenses.

2nd.—That every member and adherent of our Churches should be a regular contributor to the funds of the Church.

3rd.—That we believe every Church in this County would be strengthened and helped by joining in the simultaneous every-member canvass in December, and we pledge our efforts to secure such a canvass in our own Churches, promise our help in the canvass, and our co-operation in making such canvass as general throughout the County as may be possible.

Hour by Hour as Wreckage Comes in the Horror of the Lakes' Tragedies Continues to Increase

MORE BODIES FOUND

Examiner Special:

TORONTO, Ont., Nov. 14. — Up till noon to-day the biggest tragedy the Great Lakes has ever known has continued to grow with each succeeding hour. As reports filter in from obscure points on the shores of Lake Huron, Lake Superior and Lake Michigan, the number of victims has increased till 275 is considered a conservative estimate with between six millions and seven millions property loss. Sixteen big vessels, each carrying crews of twenty or more, are known to be lost, while the wreckage of almost as many smaller boats has been found bringing the total of wrecked vessels up to at least thirty. To-day another gale is sweeping Lake Superior and Lake Huron, making the rescue and search work more and more difficult. Wreckage and bodies from steamers Argus, Hydrus and I. M. Scott were washed ashore to-day, making it practically certain that they have gone down with about seventy men.

LOOKING FOR WRECKAGE.

GODERICH, Nov. 14.—Marine experts say that the wind is now blowing landward and Capt. Wm. Babb, receiver of wrecks from Grand Bend to Amberley, a coast line of fifty-two miles, has instructed his agents to patrol the shores continuously for bodies and wreckage.

STORY DENIED.

TORONTO, Nov. 14.—In a tlegram to Attorney General Foy, High Constable Whitesides, of Goderich, says "there is nothing in the report that ghouls robbed the dead on the shores of Lake Huron." The farmers of Huron are indignant that such reports were given credence. One man said: "It has been cabled perhaps that we are mercenary and inhuman wreckers. The men of Huron are not of that class, whether in town or country. We are civilized, not savages."

BODIES COME ASHORE.

GODERICH, Nov. 14.—The bodies of eight men and one woman from the freighter Carruthers have come ashore this morning. The woman was either a cook or a passenger.

SIGNALS OF HEAVY GALES DISREGARDED

Metereological Office Gave Warning of the Big Storm and Gale Signals Were Displayed

CAPTAINS TOOK CHANCE

That the captains of the vessels lost in Lake Huron and Lake Superior during the recent terrible gales disregarded the "heavy gale warnings given by the meteorological office in Toronto and ignored the heavy gale signals which were flying everywhere on the lakes, is shown by the weather forecasts of the days preceding the storm. As set forth in a letter to the Toronto World, R. F. Stuart, director of the weather bureau, forecasted strong winds and gales for last Friday, Saturday and Sunday, and the gale signals were flown in the harbours of all lake ports. His letter follows:

Meteorlogical Office, Toronto,
Nov. 13, 1913.

Dear Sir,—In view of the appalling disasters on the great lakes during Saturday and Sunday, it may be of interest to the public to know what warning the meteorological service gave of the storm.

At 11 a.m. of Friday, Nov. 7, heavy gale signals were hoisted at all stations on the great lakes.

The 10 p.m. forecast of that day read: "Strong winds and gales, southerly, shifting to westerly and northwesterly; rain to-day; turning colder at night (Saturday), with some local snowfalls or flurries.

Saturday, Nov. 8, 10 a.m. forecast was:

Gales, southerly to northwesterly; rain, turning in many localities to snow. Sunday, strong winds and gales, northwesterly, decreasing by night; local snowflurries, but mostly fair and cold."

How many vessels heeded the heavy gale warning and remained in port will never be ascertained, but it is certain that many of the vessels lost must have seen and ignored the heavy gale signals which were everywhere flying.

That the service does not cry "wolf" too often, is indicated by the fact that so far this year the "heavy gale signals" have only been displayed six times on Lake Superior, and but three times on Lakes Huron, Erie and Ontario, including this last great storm, and in almost every instance the display was amply warranted.

Terrific gales, such as that of Saturday last, only occur perhaps once in a long term of years, and the service has no signal to indicate that a storm is to be very exceptional, but I submit that an intelligent study of the meteorological storm warnings would show most positively that the master of a vessel who leaves port in November with the heavy gale signals displayed is running a great risk, as gales are almost certain and blinding snow not improbable. I am, dear Sir, yours truly,

R. F. STUART, Director.

The Editor The World, Toronto.

SIGNS OF POVERTY.

They were talking about poverty a few evenings ago, when Congressman Gilbert N. Haugen of Iowa, told of an impression a man from the rural wilds once got on visiting the city.

The ruralite, the congressman said, had gone to the town on a long anticipated visit, and when he returned he had much to relate of city ways and what he saw.

"They put on all kinds of fancy frills up there," he narrated to the eager crowd as the corner store, "but I don't believe they hev got half the money they pertend ter have."

"Well, do tell," wonderfully exclaimed one of the eager listeners. "Ye don't really mean it, Jake."

"Yaas," was the convincing rejoinder of Jakes. "One night I went by a house that looked purty big, but jes' ther same ther people in it was so derned poor that two wimmen was playing on one pianner."

GALLANT RESCUE MADE OF EIGHTEEN DROWNING SAILORS

NARROW ESCAPE FOR WORKMAN

Employee of Henry Hope & Son Has Close Call

TORONTO, Nov. 13.—A perilous hand over hand trip along a beam, forty feet in the air, with his legs dangling in space was successfully made this morning by Albert McClelland, a casement worker, employed by Henry Hope and Sons, of Peterborough, at the new Street Railway barns near Morley avenue, when the planking upon which he and John Meecham were working collapsed. Meecham fell and was badly injured, but McClelland had time to grasp a beam above him and was able to climb along it to safety. The distance was only about 15 or 20 feet, but nevertheless the achievement was a hazardous one.

Meecham was only partially conscious when fellow workmen hurried to his assistance, expecting to find him dead. Dr. Phipps, whose residence is close by on Queen street, was summoned and after first aid the injured man accompanied by George Humphrey was sent to the General Hospital, where it was found that his hip was fractured and he may be seriously injured internally.

Meecham is a married man residing at 12 Sackville terrace.

McClelland is an Englishman, who has only been in Toronto a short time. He lives on Carlaw avenue.

SAFETY FIRST ADVICE TO RAILWAYMEN

Here are some "Safety First" maxims given out by Mr. N. S. Dunlop to a meeting of railway men at an address in Montreal:—

"Don't throw anything out of a moving train. It's a bad thing to get a mail bag in the stomach from an express running thirty miles an hour.

"A brakeman should not sit down on the track and be run over by the train he went to flag.

"It takes less time to prevent an accident than it does to fill up Form 74 (the accident report form).

"Don't fool with machines. They can be replaced. Hands cannot.

"You can start a 'Safety First' committee right in your own home.

"Get the 'Safety First' Habit."

"Stop supporting the unertaker and the artificial limb maker.

"No man should go twenty-four hours without placing his insurance'

Mr Dunlop is an enthusiast for "Safety First," a movement which was started on the C.P.R. so long ago as 1885.

As Claims Adjuster of that Company, Mr Dunlop has had to deal with many sad experiences due to neglect of "Safety First" principles.

MAYOR BRADBURN WILL PRESIDE

Mayor Bradburn has consented to act as chairman on the evening of Nov. 20th, when Mrs. Alice Stebbins Wells of Los Angeles, California, will give an address. The Assembly Hall of the Collegiate Institute has been secured for the occasion and the City Council have been invited to attend. Great interest is being taken in the appearance here of Mrs. Wells, under the auspices of the Women's Council.

Freighter Major Goes Down Off White Fish Point But Crew Is Saved by Canadian Tugs Who Fight Their Way in Teeth of the Gale.

OTHER WRECKS SIGHTED

Special Wire to The Examiner.

CLEVELAND, OHIO, Nov. 14. — Word was received here to-day of the foundering of the wooden freighter, Major, off Whitefish Point, in Lake Superior, and the gallant rescue of its crew of 18, by tugs which weathered the storm. These tugs (the names of which are at present unknown, but they came from Fort Wiliam and Port Arthur) set out in the teeth of a fierce gale in answer to wireless for assistance. The tugs were manned by Canadians who took their lives in their hands and effected the rescue of the sinking United States sailors. From what can be learned the Major foundered last night. The gale was nearly as strong as that of Sunday last. The winds were so fierce that the rescue tugs were compelled to put into an obscure harbour on the United States shore with their crews, and the news has reached here in a short telegram sent from Calumet by a messenger who walked through ten miles of wood to fyle it.

ANOTHER FREIGHTER GONE

HARBOUR BEACH, MICH., Nov. 14. — Another big lake freighter, bottom up, was sighted in Lake Huron near Point au Barques, where the steamers H. M. Namma and Matao are now breaking up.

ASSASSINATION STORY WAS A WILD RUMOUR

Examiner Special:

WASHINGTON, Nov. 14. — Wild rumours flew around the city this morning that John Lind, President Wilson's envoy in eMxico, had been assassinated together with several other people, at Vera Cruz. This was denied by a message from Lind himself followed by the announcement by President Wilson and Mr. Bryan that conditions in Mexico were far more favourable to peace than they had been for some time.

"Peterborough Presents Possibilities Unparalleled."

FRIDAY, NOV. 14, 1913

HOW THEY STAND.

Compared with Sir Edward Carson's campaign of high treason, the sedition of the Dublin labour leader only Larkin. Yet one's in jail and the other in Parliament — one a felon confined, the other a criminal at large.

TWO OF A KIND.

An Irishman in a church, when the collection plate came to him, accidentally put on a half dollar instead of the penny he intended to contribute. Discovering his mistake, he decided to go to the priest and get his forty-eight cents change. At the door of the presbytery he hesitated, and having thought the matter over and being embarassed by the prospect of explaining matters, he developed a reckless generosity—"To h——l with the half dollar; it's for the church annyway." Hon Bob. Rogers, cogitating over his mistake in having placed too much money on the Macdonald by-election contribution plate, represented by giving a seat to a supporter of the government, was, like the Irishman, embarrassed by the prospect of explaining matters to an election court—"To h——l with the seat; It's loss, by saving explanations that involve exposure, is for the good of the party, anyway."

LOOKING AHEAD.

There seems to be some doubt as to the agreement between the City Council and the Street Railway Company in regard to the trolley poles, being altogether on the side of the city. The agreement may be a little binding, but if the agreement, being somewhat in favour of the company, was the only condition on which the trolley poles could be removed, the advantages to the public involved in their removal over-balance whatever disadvantages to the city may be created. It is certainly worth something and a great deal, too, to get rid of the nuisance of street poles. One can hardly understand why a little of the energy and spirit of surrender might not have been applied to secure the removal of the trolley poles—before the street paving was completed; so that we should not have the added expense and disturbance of sidewalk surface and interference with traffic, that will be now necessary. And is not the same inquiry pertinent to the retention of the light and power and other poles that have been solidly imbedded in the sidewalk on George and Hunter streets. Was it not possible to have hastened the negotiations, that must be completed some time, in order to secure the removal of the poles and the placing of the wires in the conduits provided for them before paving was, but for this prospective interference, permanently completed? Looking ahead a little is good practice in everything.

NOT PERFECT JUSTICE.

We in Canada are inclined, and, in general, justified, in pluming ourselves upon the fullness and swiftness of the justice administered in our courts. But a strict examination sometimes reveals conditions that do not permit our justice to measure up to the fullest requirements of, no merely legal, but moral, and perfect equitable administration. This may not be humanly possible; but ther are things that might be improved The trial of James Taylor at Brantford, charged with the murder, in most revolting manner of the lad, Charles Dawson, resulted in the verdict of "guilty," with which no one will quarrel. But there are attendant circumstances to indicate that the man on trial had not a fair chance as compared with other criminal similarly charged. He had, it seems no money to employ a lawyer, and th judge, at the last moment, designate a young lawyer to act as counsel for a man charged with a capital crime It is evident that the young lawyer lacking in experience, was handicapped by undertaking such a responsibility without opportunity for adequate preparation of his case. Though under the circumstances he may have done all that an experienced counsel could have done, it is quite assumable that in regard to defence, the man did not have a fair chance in his fight for life. The Brantford Expositor, in discussing the matter, suggests that a man on trial for his life (or exposed to a lesser penalty) and unable to employ a lawyer, should have placed at his disposal by the authorities one of the most experienced and capable lawyers, and in ample time to permit of proper preparation for the discharge of his responsibility.

The duty of the state, in this regard, seems to be more urgently indicated since, in a general way of speaking, it is the failure of duty on the part of the state that is responsible for the existence of such criminals as Taylor. He may have been of low moral responsibility. That was perhaps the fault of early environment and influences. If, when he was young, and exposed to degenerative influences, deprived of good training, he had been rescued by the Children's Aid Society, and placed in some virtuous home, he might have been today a useful citizen, a strength to the state instead of prey for the gallows. It is only when we contemplate such, and similar possibilities from the existence of this society that we can appreciate its vast importance in the civil, social and moral economy; and have excited in us a keener sense of our responsibility in relation to our duty to further the implementing of its aims and possibilities.

THE RESPONSIBILITY.

The Toronto News, commenting on the manner in which the wrong-doing in the Macdonald election was covered up, says:

Just what degree of corruption was practiced in Macdonald cannot now be determined. There will be a long wrangle between the parties over relative degrees of culpability. That there was corruption in behalf of the government candidate is proved by his resignation. We can know nothing of the methods employed by the opposition. The whole system is unsatisfactory. The courts are too ready to asquiesce in agreements between rival politicians. We need to enforce publicity for electoral subscriptions. We should stop legislating for the sources from which the heaviest contributions proceed. We require public officers to ensure that when wholesale corruption is practiced it will be exposed.

The News, itself, through support of its party, is responsible, to the extent of its individual influence, for the conditions, it condemns in the Macdonald election. The methods employed can be accurately defined as Rogerisms. The Borden Government took Hon. Robt. Rogers into the cabinet, nominally to meet the requirement of a Minister of the Interior from the West; but it is well known that the influential factor in his selection was his ability to "win elections," and we have had sorry evidence of this sinister ability. The News applauded, and defends yet, Mr. Rogers appointment. It was his influence and the influence of a similar kind with which he was associated that prostituted the law in Macdonald to party advantage. It was the same influences that were effective in delaying by every sort of legal trickery and dodgery, the trial of the election petition against the return of the personal and party beneficiary of this wrong doing. It was only when delay was no longer possible, that guilt was confessed by the surrender of the seat. Who but the News, and what it supports, is responsible for the "legislating for the sources from which the heaviest contributions proceed." The government the News supports and helped to power, gained power chiefly by the cooperation of the "big interests," whose contributions provided the sinews of war. The Borden government not only legislates for "the source of the heaviest contributions," but owes its existence, its foundation to the sources of the heaviest contributions Respect for or fear of the heaviest contributors to corruption funds restrains the government from dealing with the tariff in a way to lessen the cost of living, and thereby benefit the masses of the people, the heaviest contributors to national prosperity.

LOOKING AHEAD.

Some Premiers are careless about preparing a soft spot to fall on. But "Governor" of Ontario and twenty thousand a year—Sir James Whitney knows what he is about.—Toronto Star.

FROM POLE TO POLE.

Dreams of a Pan-American railway that will link the Hudson Bay with the Antarctic Ocean are within measurable distance of realization. Last week the rails were joined of the great longitudinal railway in Chile from Iquique to Puerto Montt. This line covers about 1,850 miles. When completed the road will extend from the frontier of Peru to the Strait of Magellan.

So far back as 1881 the idea was mooted of a railway joining the north and south continents through Central America, but practical railway men scouted the scheme, at the time, as visionary and impracticable. In 1890, however, practical steps were taken at an international conference to carry out the work, and steady progress has been made since then, with the result that the undertaking is now regarded not only as fensible, but as a financially sound proposition. During the past four years the Pan-American Railway Committee, interested in the project, has received sympathetic support from the International Bureau of American Republics as well as from the State Department at Washington, the several Governments concerned now recognizing the economic advantages that must accrue from the success of the enterprise. Some of the Latin Republics have gone so far as to offer special inducements to capitalists for the promotion of the Pan-American railway scheme One of the chief aims of the committee has been the joining of New York and Buenos Ayres, a total distance of 10,116 miles. Of this, 6,444 miles of railway have been completed.

The line just opened by Chile forges an important link in the chain that will one day unite the Hudson Bay to the most southerly point on the South American continent and bring into existence an Arctic-Antarctic railway. The romance of railway construction discloses a few more interesting chapters than those which will one day recount the achievements of the engineer in this last great struggle to annihilate space and to link the ends of the earth together.— The Globe.

WAGE EARNERS AND RENTERS
No doubt many of you work hard and earn considerable money. That is creditable, but how much have you saved? Very little. Every man married or single who bought lots from me during the past seven years have saved and made money. All are pleased, no one sorry, many have nice home, others choice lots growing in value as the City spreads out South and West. I have sketched a plan of the balance of my land to Gravel Road overlooking C. G. E. Works etc. Every lot buyer should see my plans, get my prices and terms then decide. It will mean money for you as I am closing lots wholesale or retail. Your last chance to buy from me. ROSEDALE LOTS MUST GO, as well as South End Lots.

IS STILL THE MYSTERY SHIP

No Clue to the Identity of the Over Turned Freighter

Perahps the greatest and most inexplainable feature of the terrible drama which is now being gradually unfolded in the various lake ports is the mystery surrounding the overturned boat thirteen miles from the lighthouse and seven miles from short northeast of Port Huron. This is the "mystery ship" of the big storm. Bottom side up, with only a portion of the overturned bow and hull showing above water, this boat has baffled all efforts to solve her identity. Not a scrap of wreckage has been found yet that can be traced to the ship, according to the despatches received up to midnight. The "mystery ship" will remain a mystery until a diver brings up her secret from sixty-feet of water. Marine men say there will have to be an absolutely smooth surface of water before a diver goes down. It will be the same as lowering a steel wall, for he will have to feel his way along the ship's side as he goes down, and if he is lowered at the bow of the steamer he will have to feel out with his fingers on the side of the ship the letters which go to make up her name. There may be a chance that he will be able to get under the bow of the boat and obtain some pieces of wreckage which will give a clue. There is no chance of him reaching the other end of the boat, as she lies bottom side up, without walking along on the bottom of the lake 60 feet under water.

Ever since Monday there has been hardly an hour during the day when the surface of the lake has been quiet enough to make the attempt. The water of the lake in the vicinity of the wreck is so disturbed that a diver could not see two inches in front of him, and would have to rely entirely on the sense of touch.

NEGRO IS GUILTY

William Campbell Must Hang Fo Murder at Montreal.

MONTREAL, Nov. 14. — William Campbell, the negro, who is wanted in Cincinnati, where the police claim he committed several murders, was yesterday morning in the Court o King's Bench found guilty of killing George Muir and sentenced to hang on Dec. 31.

Campbell appears to have murdered Muir on Aug. 14 by cutting his throat with a razor. The two men had been out for a walk in the country. Muir's body was found in an old disused shed.

The evidence that convicted Campbell was a straw hat spattered with blood, which had belonged to Muir and which the murderer had apparently taken in mistake for his own. He was wearing it when arrested.

Testimony was submitted by Lily Hubbard, who had jilted Campbell for Muir, showing that the negro had threatened to kill his successful rival.

SOCIAL PHENOMENON

PARIS, Nov 12.—There is an extraordinary social phenomenon at Montreaux-les-Mines, where the birth-rate has fallen lower in the last three years than in 100 years in the remainder of France.

The cause given is the democratic-socialistic trend of thought following two strikes.

The town once had a birth-rate of 37 per thousand. It has now 1 per thousand.

The first strike, against the mine owners' interference with miners' opinions in politics, lasted sixteen days and was decided in the miners' favour. Then the municipality became Socialist, and thus remains.

The second strike, for an increase of pay, was lost after a three months' fight. It ruined the workers, who were obliged to capitulate. The town then became more violently Socialist A fall in the birth-rate was noticeable at the same time.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON QUESTIONS

November 16, 1913.

(Copyright, 1912, by Rev. T. S. Linscott, D.D.)

The Death of Moses.—Deut. xxxi., 1-8; xxxii., 48-52; xxxiv., 1-12.

Golden Text—Precious in the sight of Jehovah is the death of his saints. —Ps. cxvi., 15.

1. Verses 1-2—What reason is there, if any, to think that the average length of human life may be greatly increased?

2. Was it the age of Moses or some other reason which prevented him from any longer fulfilling the functions of his office as leader of the Israelites?

3. Why is not an old man of ability, in full possession of physical health and mental strength, a better lawyer, physician, or clergyman than when he was younger?

4. Why had the Lord decreed that Moses should not go over Jordan or enter into the promised land?

5. What proportion of people die before their time on account of sins in early or later life and are not able to accomplish their full providential work?

6. Verses 2-5—Who was Joshua?

7. What right had the Lord or the people of Israel to destroy the nations who were then in possession of Canaan?

8. Verses 6-8—What would you say is the chief human quality to bring success in love, business, or war? Why?

9. When we have an unmistakable promise from God why is it wise or not to absolutely rely upon it?

10. Chap. xxxii., 48-50—What comfort or benefit was it to Moses to be able, from a high hill, to view the promised land, seeing he could not enter the land hiself? m

11. Which gives the greater satisfaction to a holy man, to see the proof of coming blessings for others or to anticipate them for himself? Why?

12. When the work of a man of God is done, why should not what we call death be anticipated by him, with even more joy than the young look forward to life?

13. Verses 51-52—Why was it apparently necessary for God to remind Moses of the sin which kept him out of the promised land?

14. What was the nature of the sin of Moses, which God here reminds him of?

15. Does God generally, at the time of death, remind his saints of their past sins? Give your reasons.

16. Chap. xxxiv., 1-4—Why to a man of imagination like Moses would not the grand sight of the promised land from the highest point of Mount Nebo be as ravishing as actually dwelling in the land?

17. If Moses, while he was getting his glorious sight of the earthly Canaan, also had as clear a vision of the heavenly Canaan for which he was heading, what would have been his feelings?

18. Verses 5-8—Seeing Moses was still hale and hearty, in possession of all his great powers, and that Israel seemed to need him as much as ever, why did God take him away?

19. Is there any reason to believe, and if so what, that God had more important work for Moses to do in another world?

20. How did Moses die, and who buried him?

21. What sense or reason is there in weeping for those who have departed to a country where they are infinitely better off than they are here?

22. Verses 9-12—Wherein did Moses excel all other Old Testament characters?

23. In what qualities did Joshua excel?

SHE MIGHT BE A SOCIALIST, BUT NOT TORY

LONDON, Nov. 13.—Miss Asquith, the Premier's daughter, opening the Liberal bazaar, at Brixton, made a speech which is attracting a good deal of attention. She said she did not think the demands for a general election would be satisfied for a good while yet. It was due not to the advance of Toryism, but to the defection of labour, that the Liberals lost Reading and had their majority reduced in Linlithgow.

"If I were a workingman with a vote, and I were intimately acquainted with the conditions under which a great many people are living in London, and if I thought, quite mistakenly no doubt, that I was expressing my sympathy with a great man who had protested against these things, I think I might have voted for the Socialist at Reading. Nothing however, would have induced me to vote for the Tory. I am sure we all rejoice that Larkin is free. We may all agree that sedition is rather a mediaeval offence, especially now that Sir Edward Carson with his law abiding demonstrations of it shorn of their last shred of glamour, has brought it down to the level of the most humdrum respectability."

COLEMAN BROS. WERE THE CATERERS FOR LAYMEN'S BANQUET

Provided Excellent Repast for Over 800 and Were Widely Complimented Upon Their Work.

NOT A SINGLE HITCH

Ten hams.
Forty-five turkeys.
Six bags of potatoes.
One hundred French loaves.
Fifty pounds of butter.
150 bricks of ice cream.
100 gallons of coffee.

The above were a few of the items with which the 'multitude" were fed at last nights banquet. Coleman Bros. proved themselves equal to the demands of the biggest banquet held in Peterborough, and won unstinted congratulations for their splendid service, and for the quantity and quality of the fare. One young man, commenting on the menu, said: "One of the best features of this banquet is the fact that the food that is supposed to be cold is served cold, and that which should be hot is really hot." The satisfaction of the laymen was general, and they turned from the tables to the addresses in the best of humour.

The appointments for the banquet were exceptionally good, the tables being prettily decorated with flowers and candles. Coleman Bros. rose to the occasion in every respect, and their share to the evening's success reflected much credit upon their ability to provide for such an immense gathering.

NEW OIL TANK

A new and improved portable oil and gasoline tank was shipped into the city by G.T.R. freight this morning. It was forwarded from an American manufacturer by the Canadian Oil Companies, Limited, to Mr. G. K. Rackham, of the Ontario Coal Co., who has been appointed local manager in Peterborough, for the company's varied oil and gasoline products. It is a specially constructed outfit and will make an attractive appearance on the streets.

BIG BUCK IS KILLED BY TRAIN

Engineer Richie Gets Fine Head

Engineer W. B. Ritchie, of town, is the proud possessor of the head of a splendid buck deer which he obtained in a most unusual way, and without the payment of a deer hunter's license. Mr. Ritchie was the engineer on the early morning Montreal express on Thursday last, and when near Sharbot Lake espied a big deer standing with its forefeet on the track. Although he whistled repeatedly, the deer refused to move from its position, apparently dazed by the beams of the strong electric headlight. Just as the engine was about to strike it, Mr. Deer jumped for safety, but the big mogul caught it, breaking its back. Upon reaching the next station, Mr. Ritchie left a message for the section men to go out in search of the "game." They did so, and found the animal dead beside the track. The game warden for the district was notified of the strange occurrence, and being at a loss what to do with the carcase, communicated with the head of the department, who ordered the buck to be divided among the poor of the immediate district, and the head delivered to Mr. Ritchie. Every engineer on this division is now keeping a sharp outlook in an endeavour to emulate Mr. Ritchie's feat, and the latter gentleman is having the head mounted as a souvenir of his prowess as a hunter without a gun or license.—Havelock Standard.

RUN-DOWN WOMEN

Find Health in a Simple Tonic.

How many women do you know who are perfectly well, strong and healthy as a woman should be? They may not be sick enough to lie in bed—but they are run-down, thin, nervous, tired and devitalized.

Women are so active nowadays, and so much is expected of them, that they constantly overdo and suffer from headache, backache, nervousness and kindred ills.

Such women need Vinol, our delicious cod liver and iron tonic without oil which will create an appetite, tone up the digestive organs, make pure blood and create strength.

Mrs. Walter Price, Biloxi, Miss., says: "I was in a run-down condition for months. I had taken several medicines but they seemed to do me no good. Finally Vinol was recommended, and from the first bottle I began to improve until I am strong and well as ever."

Try a bottle of Vinol with the understanding that your money will be returned if it does not help you. McDermid & Jury, druggists, corner George and Charlotte Streets, also Payne's drug store, corner George and Simcoe Streets.

FINEST ON THE CONTINENT.

The Grand Trunk Railway are in receipt of a letter from a prominent New York business man who visited Ottawa recently, an abstract from which reads as follows: "Permit me to speak my sincere appreciation of the Chateau Laurier. I did not think that Canada would ever have an hotel of this class but I now feel as if you had not only the finest hotel in Canada, but almost on the Continent. We certainly have nothing, even in Washington, that can compare with it."

YOUTHS ARRIVE FROM OSHAWA

With Object of Seeking Work in Peterborough—Will Visit Lindsay

Two youths aged 15 and 17 respectively arrived from Oshawa yesterday with the evident object of securing work in Peterborough. They visited nearly every local industry during the course of the day, without realizing their purpose. It is evident from their viewpoint, and others who are similarly situated, that the local labour market is overstocked. The boys propose to visit Lindsay, where they will renew their quest for work. They claim that Oshawa is experiencing a period of seasonal slackness, which promises to continue until the advent of spring.

Industries in Peterborough are running full force but do not anticipate any demand for additional help. Some have predicted a hard winter for those who are unfortunate enough to be unemployed at the present time.

MANY NEW CARS EACH DAY

The turning out of ten steel freight cars a day and from eight to ten steel passenger cars a month is the capacity of the latest addition to the Angus Shops operated by he G. P. R. at Montreal. The new buildings for the construction of steel cars are now operating in full blast and already over one hundred freight cars have been added to the Canadian Pacific Railway's rolling stock. Officials of the railway express appreciation as to the manner in which the new manufacturing equipment has been placed. In the month of April work was started on the buildings, and in the record-breaking period of five months everything was completed and the first steel freight car turned out. By the end of September, the sixth month, sixty-eight cars started in as freight carriers between the Pacific and the Atlantic oceans. The buildings consist of two structures 100 feet by 200 feet and 100 feet by 182 feet respectively for the manufacturing of both classes of cars, a building 72 feet by 405 feet for the exclusive manufacture of freight cars, and four buildings 226 feet by 208 feet for passenger car work.

The blacksmith shop, wood mill, and wooden freight car shop previously used in the manufacturing of wooden cars and which had the capacity of turning out thirty-two cars a day, will be utilized in the work of steel car construction. The only change to be made will be the affording of more space in the blacksmith shop for the huge presses and machinery required for steel construction. A new bolt-nut and rivet shop was constructed to which all this class of machinery could be moved. The shop, which is 60 feet by 420 feet, will enable this class to be handled in the most convenient manner.

SPLENDID ADDRESSES AT THE AFTERNOON SESSION

Laymen's Missionary Conference Yesterday Afternoon Was Most Successful--Many Points Brought Out.

THE SPEAKERS

The afternoon session of the Laymen's Missionary Conference, held in the Muray Street Baptist Church yesterday afternoon, was presided over by Ald. Geo. A. Gilespie, and was decidedly enthusiastic. Between two hundred and fifty and three hundred delegates were present at the meeting, and heard six splendid addresses on different phases of the missionary work.

The meeting was opened by a fervent prayer by the Rev. H. J. Keith, pastor of Knox Church. He expressed the dedication of the afternoon's service to God, and made supplication for divine direction during the afternoon.

The first address was given by Mr. H. J. Arnup, Assistant Secretary of Foreign Missions for the Methodist Church. His subject was "The Missionary Committee—Its Organization, Preparation, and Duties." The congregation of a church as yet without a missionary committee would wish to know its object, and what it was going to accomplish before they would rally to support its organization. The answer was that the church that was alive must provide some medium, some channel of expressing itself. The Missionary Committee was an agency through which this could be accomplished. The Church's work was to communicate the life of Jesus Christ universally and locally. If it failed in either one it was perceptibly weakened in the other. So just as they had a local board to deal with the work in that community, the Missionary Committee had charge of the work outside of that locality.

The men at that time attending the Laymen's Missionary Conference—the ones interested in missions—were the ones who should form the foundation of the Missionary Committee. But the object of organizing a Missionary Committee was not to set up a machine in the Church, but to get a body of men who could do something. The men at the conference should go home and see to it that if at present there was no Missionary Committee in their Church, one should be established. The Missionary Committee should embrace representatives from not only the congregation, but from all the organizations within the congregation, and have official connection with all other branches of the Church organization.

MR J. J. TURNER, JR.
Secretary of the General Committee of the Laymen's Missionary Movement.

The members of the Missionary Committee should be chosen from men who have the following characteristics:

1. Missionary Conviction.
2. Knowledge of Mission Fields.
3. Knowledge of the Local Church.
4. Knowledge of Missionary Methods.

The missionary was to give expression in life and thought and prayer to the missionary spirit of the Church. The education of the people to missionary needs could be accomplished by the pastor, in missionary sermons. Then there was the value of missionary prayer and missionary prayer meetings. The acid test of a man's relation to missions was the manner in which he prays.

It was the duty of the Missionary Committee to get the support of the congregation, and until this was done their other duties would fall short.

Missionary Literature.

The subject of Missionary Literature for men was dealt with in a comprehensive manner by Mr. H. C. Priest, General Secretary for Canada of the Missionary Educational Movement. He emphasized more than any other thing the fact that education was needed in the matter of making progress along missionary lines. In this, literature was needed. Ten years ago representatives of the various Mission Boards of Canada joined together in the Missionary Educational Movement, and one of the main results of their efforts since was the publishing of missionary literature, which included many splendid books.

Missionary literature was going to help to conquer the greatest opponents in the missionary battle; it would dispel prejudice, scatter ignorance, break down indifference, and create enthusiasm.

A number of books, some of them not yet off the presses and others sold for the first time during the last week, were set out in a list which was given to all the delegates present. These were recommended for use. "Uganda's White Man at Work," "The Black-bearded Barbarian," "Livingstone, the Pathfinder," and a number of other books were recommended by the speaker for use among boys, who, he said, would digest them as eagerly as Henty's books.

Every Member Canvass.

Mr. Robert Laird, Secretary of the Finance Board of the Presbyterian Church, followed with an address on the "Every Member Canvass." The Every Man Canvass, he said, was past the experimental stage—its value had been demonstrated hundreds of times. The idealist in the Church was apt to regard all organizations with distrust, being afraid lest the Church should become a mere machine. Others, wrapt up in organization, were apt to minimize other things of greater importance. But the organization as followed out in the Every Man Canvass would not have a detrimental effect, but would multiply many times, individual effort. It had made possible the gathering together of many great confederacies of enterprise. But the organization depended on the men who were going to make it work. One must expect from the organization just what was put into it in personality, devotion, and leadership.

The Every Man Canvass showed to each man the need and magnitude of tha mission work, and educated them. Ignorance was the mother of unconcern, and unconcern would lead to antagonism. This was in a measure avoided by the Every Man Canvass.

In concluding the speaker pointed out that the Every Man Canvass brought face to face with the laymen of the congregation that the missionaries were one of the most important assets to the church—holding the church to her mission—helping her to keep faith with herself.

Dr. Ferguson's Address

"If I can speak with any pride of my work in the past, or with my optimism of my work in Formosa in the future, it is because I have a good Canadian nurse in my hospital, and a good Canadian wife in my home," said Dr. Ferguson, who has spent seven years in the mision field as a medical missionary. In a brief speech Dr. Ferguson told a few incidents of his work in Formosa. The doctors in the missionary hospitals, he said, had to be specialists in every thing. If one diagnosed a case and told the patient that some kind of an operation was needed, the reply was: "Well I don't know what that is, but whatever is to be done I want you to do it," and, added the doctor, "If you can't perform the operation you had better not diagnose the case."

If it is difficult for those at home to interest the men in spiritual things when the men have been hearing about spiritual things ever since their infancy, it was still more difficult to convert the class of men who had never in their lives dealt with anything that was not material. According to Dr. Ferguson, the women of Formosa have very expressionless faces compared to the Canadian women, but he says that after they are converted a difference of manners and appearance is very noticeable.

The Idea of Stewardship

Mr. J. M. Ross was the next speaker, and he continued the question of the "Every Man Canvass." He said that the canvassers should not go out after men to subscribe on the 5 or 10 cent basis but rather through their idea of stewardship. More important than a large contribution from each giver was the securing of a large number of systematic contributors. The Every Man Canvass was not merely a money getting project but its results, independent of the money question, warranted its use in the church.

The final speaker was Dr. Walter Daniels of Toronto. He spoke only a few minutes on the general work, urging the churches to grapple with the missionary problem and work in the present generation. There was a time when the Sunday School was laughed at and derided. There had been a time when the installing of an organ for use in church worship had split the congregation into two factions because they disagreed as to the righteousness of the thing. But these times of schism were past and it was the duty of the church to unite and enter into the missionary work with all the inspiration and power that could be summoned for the struggle.

WILL CELEBRATE ANNIVERSARY

HOCKEY

The Woodstock juniors, runners-up last year for the junior O.H.A. championship, have commenced training for the season, and from now on they will do their best to get in shape for the coming season. The training quarters of the juniors, until ice comes, will be at the Y.M.C.A.

At a largely attended and enthusiastic meeting of the Thunder Bay Rowing Club of Port Arthur, A. L. McGovern, secretary, was given instructions to challenge for the Allan Cup on behalf of the Thunder Bay Amateur League champions. The letter containing the challenge was drafted and will be forwarded to the trustees as well as to the Winnipeg hockey club, the present holders of the cup, which is emblematic of the Dominion of Canada amateur championship. In the communication Secretary McGovern states that the Thunder Bays will be open to accept dates at the earliest time convenient, preferring to play before the approaching season opens if possible.

The Bays prospective line-up for this winter will be as follows: Goal, Nicholson; point, Nicklin; cover-point, W. L'Hereaux, Murray; rover, Edgerton Wilson; centre, Wellington; ring wing, Whalen; left wing, O'Neill, Servais; spares, Steight, Bailey and Blair.

London's intermediate and junior teams are working indoors nightly. A despatch says:

From what was seen last night a junior team of more than ordinary strength will wear the red, white and black this year. A partial list includes the following lads under 20 years of age eligible for the junior ranks: Wright, Reuter and Wardrope for goal: Rose, Hagerman and Acheson for defence; Al. Moore, Wilbur Morenz, Brodison and Greers are among the forwards trying out. Of these seven have had experience and should prove just ripe for the plucking of the honours.

Quantity and quality of players is the word in the intermediate ranks and only real work on the ice will sift these fellows down into a winning combination.

OLD COUNTRY FOOTBALL FIXTURES FOR SATURDAY

Clubs in the First Division of the English League Are Well Paired Up Again--A Few Sensations Are Promised

Soccer Games for Saturday.

The clubs in the first division of the English League are well paired up again, and it will come as no surprise, if on Saturday evening it is found that a few sensations have taken place again. The more startling results, the greater the interest, and the season so far has certainly provided a plethora of incidents out of th ordinary, and there can be no doubt on the subject, whatevr, that it is just the surprise result that tickles the curiosity of the average fan. Like many other people, the football enthusiast has many little weaknesses, and one of them certainly is to be fooled by some unexpected happening. Whn he is not so certain who is going to win, it is of course a pure unadulterated sporting proposition, which he dearly loves to see fought out by a close margin, and may the day soon dawn when our own local clubs will enter the arena with an uncertainty as regards the final issue. When both sides are equally matched, then comes the tug o' war; that's what th fans appreciate. May it be soon that way here.

A DARING BASE RUNNER.

Hugh S. Fullerton, the baseball writer for the American Magazine, tells a story about Mike Kelly, the famous player of Boston and Chicago, a generation ago, as follows:

"I believe the most desperate and brilliant bit of base running I ever witnessed and the climax of taking chances was by Kelly. The score was a tie late in the game. Runners were on second and third bases, one out, and the opposing infield was drawn in to cut off the runner from the plate.

"Kelly was the man on second. As the ball was pitched Kelly was on a run at top speed toward third. The ball was hit sharply to the shortstop, who scooped it perfectly and threw home. The runner going from third slid desperately toward the plate, where the catcher was waiting. Kelly had rounded third base at top speed, and was coming up the path behind the other runner, screeching 'Look out for Kel!' at the top of his voice.

"As the runner from third slid behind the plate, trying to get past the catcher, he was tagged out, but before the catcher could touch him and dive back to protect the plate Kelly slid in front of the rubber, dodged under the catcher and scored the winning run."

ERIE NOT ANXIOUS FOR CANADIAN LEAGUE BERTH

ERIE, Pa., Nov. 13.—Erie is not enthusiastic over the prospects of getting into the Canadian League. At the Columbus meeting yesterday the Canadian League filed a request for the Erie territory. Unless Erie can hook up with some other league prior to January 1, the rights will pass into theh ands of the Canadian League.

It is desired to give Erie the Guelph, Ont., franchise. The main objection of the Erie magnates is that the majority of the towns in the league are small. While Ottawa, Hamilton and London are about the size of Erie, the other towns are much smaller, hence it is believed it would be difficult for Erie to make more than expenses.

There is some talk of Erie getting into the Federal League. When the Interstate League broke up, officials of the Federals looked the situation over here and were favourably impressed.

The situation resolves itself down to this: If Erie can hook on with some other league before January 1, it will do so in preference to joining the Canadians.

The Hamilton Spectator says:

The above dispatch was received from Erie this morning and has evidently been issued for a purpose. The Erie magnates have inflated ideas of their city as a ball town, as the talk of a Federal League franchise would indicate. There is no doubt but that the Canadian League will be awarded the Erie territory in the end, making way for the following circuit, providing certain other plans do not materialize: Hamilton, London, Ottawa, Peterborough, St. Thomas, Brantford, Niagara Falls and Erie.

The Niagara Falls people are ready to get busy on the proposition of placing a team in that city and claim that they would prove well able to support a team. That the Canadian League would be greatly strengthened by the addition of these two towns is evident from the following comparison of the proposed circuit with the towns concerned:

Hamilton	110,000
Ottawa	95,000
Erie	75,000
London	55,000
Niagara Falls	35,000
Brantford	30,000
Peterborough	25,000
St. Thomas	18,000

This would give a total population of 373,000 as against the present figures of 335,000, Erie, a city with 75,000 citizens, replacing Guelph, with its 18,000, and Niagara Falls, with 35,000, taking the place of Berlin, with but 15,000. This would mean the substitution of two strong centres, with large populations for two weak members of the circuit. St. Thomas, Peterborough and Brantford are all good baseball towns, well able to stand up with the other five. Of course, the league magnates have other plans in connection with the 1914 circuit, but if these fail there is no doubt but that Erie and Niagara Falls will be taken. The league has been granted possession of the Niagara Falls territory, and is almost sure to land Erie.

ON THEIR WAY TO SCOTLAND

MONTREAL, Nov. 13.—In cariboo coats and hoods, beaded moccasin, and heavy fur gauntlets, Mr. and Mrs. Peter Durie arrived out of the north land to-day. To-morrow they will sail on the Empress of Ireland, to spend three months with their "freens" in Auld Scotland.

Mrs. Durie was the cynosure of all eyes when she alighted at the C.P.R. station this morning with her husband. They had come frof Cormorant Lake, 45 miles away from Le Pas, a little trading post on the Hudson Bay Railway. Mrs. Durie came out just as she was clad in the fur country. A three-quarter length fur coat of cariboo skin was the most striking part of the costume. This was the work of the Esquimaux Indians at Fort Churchill.

On her feet were a pair of moose skin moccasins, while her hands were covered by a huge pair of leather gauntlets, adorned with black bear trimmings and designs on the cuffs worked in red silk by the Indians.

Mr. and Mrs. Durie went into the Cormorant Lake region to engage in the fur trade 15 months ago. Previous to that the husband had been a commercial traveller in the British Isles. One day, however, he received an offer to become associated with Mr. George Cowan, one of the oldest independent fur traders in the north country. Neither one knew anything of the wild life, but they seized the opportunity. Now neither would return to the old order of life on any consideration.

Their place of residence is a little lumber "shack," erected on a bare flat rock, on the shore of Cormorant Lake. The nearest white woman is 45 miles away.

"I get everything I want up there. I am going back to Britain to tell some of the suffragettes that they should come out to the north where they can have all their own way without any fighting for it," she laughed.

Theirs is not a lonely life, however. The woods have their fur animals, and there is always the keen interest in the hunt. There are rats, minks, bears, wolves, lynx, and marten in abundance, while the rivers and lakes teem with fish of all kinds. "We have to hunt for our meat; there is no butcher around the corner there. Once we ran out of 'grub,' and Mr. Durie had to tramp forty-three miles to get some more at a trading store. He made the walk in thirteen hours. He came back by boat with the supplies. When we go out on a hunt we always take three days' food for every day that we expect to be away. One of the worst trips we ever had was when we were three days making eight miles. It was a terrible storm that time.

"It is a grand life we live there. I would not go back to the city again. The canoe and the wild is fine. I like it better every day we are there," she added.

One time Mrs. Durie got a little lonely and wanted a little of the old life. There was a dance arranged for the next evening, but it was forty-five miles away. So she hitched up the dogs, and with an Indian boy went off for the fun. When it was over she came home. The trip was made in fine time and without any unusual incident.

The Cree Indians are the nearest neighbours of the white couple. There is a village near the little shack on the bare rock. The natives are very clean and well behaved. They are absolutely honest in all their dealings—except that they will steal fish at any time if it is needed to feed the dogs. They would starve themselves and remain honest, but when the dogs are hungry they do not hesitate to take possession of any fish that they may find. "We never lock our doors against the Crees," she added.

As happy as two children, and in perfect health, Mr. and Mrs. Durie will sail for a three months' visit to their friends in the Old Land tomorrow, but before the long northern winter, which began on Cormorant Lake on 6th October, is over, they will be back in the little board shack on the side of the lake, with the Crees, canoes, rocks, and muskegs.

THE WRONG WAY

These husbands who murder their wives and then commit suicide go about the job the wrong way. They should kill themselves first.

"New York," observes an exchange, "never runs out of grafters." Certainly not. Another illustration of the law governing supply and demand.

"Man wants but litle here below," but he has to hustle because Mrs. Man wants a 1914 automobile and the nearest approach to 1913 clothes.

Well, all those baseball clubs that did not land a pennant this year have all of next year ahead of them, and all kinds of championships are won between seasons.

Thomas Mott Osborne, acquiring prison experience as a philanthropist, came in for a reprimand at the table, showing that etiquette is complicated no matter where one eats.

Now that a French aviator has flown at the rate of 125 miles an hour, motorists should gracefully concede the speed palm to him and proceed to develop the "safety first" idea.

It is news that a man has succeeded in growing nerves in bottles, but since the memory of man runneth not to the contrary the usual result has been for nerves to grow out of bottles.

If further evidence were required to prove that the Caucasian race is deteriorating one has only to mention the fact that the African cannibals do not think white men are good to eat.

New York has seen twenty churches turned into theatres and garages. Now a theatre is to be turned into a Bible students' tabernacle, with Scriptural "movies." Is the tide turning?

It is said to cost $20,000 to make a new ballad popular. Then times have changed since the days of Stephen C. Foster. He could set the country singing with a capital of 10 cents invested in paper and ink.

The statement that Manuel will soon be returned to the throne of Portugal may be based on what is likely to happen if his new German wife should demand that he be restored. A Deutsch hausfrau can do quite a lot of things.

The free port of Hamburg has now passed London with 25,000,000 tons of exports and imports in 1912. Nothing now remains ahead of the old Hansetown but Antwerp with 26,656,480 tons in 1911, and New York, with 27,322,903 tons in the fiscal year 1912.

Child Almost Strangled

You never know what minute a child will develop a bad cold or be seized by croup. For this reason it takes a great burden off every mother's mind to have at hand Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine.

Mrs. E. W. Silver, South Milford, Annapolis County, N.S., writes:—"I have used Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine for my little boy with most satisfactory results. His throat would fill up with phlegm so bad that he could scarcely make a sound, and I thought he would surely strangle. He grew worse, and had frequent bad attacks, so I began using Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine. Scarcely half a bottle was used when the strangling ceased. This medicine had a wonderfully soothing effect, and when he had taken two bottles I could not tell that he had any throat trouble. We have also used Dr. Chase's Ointment with equally good results. It is a grand medicine for salt rheum."

There are imitations, but the genuine Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine bears the portrait and signature of A. W. Chase, M.D., the famous Receipt Book author.

BIG LITTLE THINGS

By RUTH CAMERON

The bigness of little things of one kind or another is a fact that continually impresses me.

Some weeks ago I wrote you about the big effect of little things in influencing our feelings towards our friends. To-day I am impressed by the bigness of little things of a more material kind.

In the restaurant this noon, I sat opposite a girl who would have appeared charmingly dressed but for one little thing. She had on a stylish suit and a becoming hat. Her gloves, her veil, her handbag and all the other little accessories were trim and smart, but — and what a big little word that is, by the way—she wore a linen collar which was about two sizes too large. Within that her neck —naturally small—looked thin and gawky. It was the first thing one noticed about her and spoiled the rest Such a little thing! And so big!

The dining room of a small boarding-house where I once took my meals was most unattractive and unappetizing. (How I hate that word, boarding-house. I wish there were some more euphonious term for it, like the French "pension." Or does "pension" sound as unattractive to the French as boarding-house does to us, I wonder?)

One day a new hostess took charge of the house and in a week that room was transformed. And yet she had made but two changes: She had the hideous figured paper replaced by soft, plain brown—not one whit more expensive, mind you—and she had shades put on the electric lights so that the light was pleasantly concentrated on the table, instead of glaring all over the room and revealing its defects. Later she made other changes but just these two worked a miracle. You see, they were as big as they were little.

The bigness of little things in house construction is just beginning to be glimpsed. A woman who has recently had new tubs and sink put into her kitchen showed them to me with great pride. "They are six inches higher than the old ones," she said. "That may not sound much to you but it means the difference between backache and no backache. To think that the want of six little inches has been tiring me out all these years!"

Do you know that it makes a house just twenty-five per cent. easier to heat if the kitchen—of course that means a kitchen with a coal range in it—is on the cold, windy side of the house? Just think of it, twenty-five per cent. taken off your coal bill by a little intelligence in construction!

"There are no little things," someone has said, and when one thinks of the big results that may come from what we carelessley call "little things," one is inclined to agree.

NO NAME FOR A POET.

Miller Was Open to Conviction and Shed the Heavy Burden.

"Cincinnatus Heine" was the name that the parents of Joaquin Miller bestowed on him at his christening. How the poet came to adopt the name "Joaquin," under which he is universally known, was told by Mr. Charles Phillips, editor of the San Francisco Monitor. Miss Ina Coolbrith, of whom he speaks, is the California poetess who has been called the "Sappho of the west."

In 1870, when he came down from Oregon and published his first little book of poems, entitled "Joaquin et al.," he told Miss Coolbrith of his determination to go to London and win fame.

"How in the world," she asked him, "do you expect to climb Parnassus with such a name as you have? Miller is bad enough, but Cincinnatus Heine is impossible!"

"But what can I do?" Miller asked. "It's my name, isn't it?"

"Why don't you take some name that will identify you with California?" Miss Coolbrith rejoined. "Take the name of your first book; call yourself Joaquin."

"By George, I'll do it!" said Miller. And from that day he signed himself "Joaquin Miller."

A HAPPY CHILD IN JUST A FEW HOURS

When Cross, Constipated or if Feverish, Give "California Syrup of Figs," Then Don't Worry.

Mothers can rest easy after giving 'California Syrup of Figs," because in a few hours all the clogged-up waste, sour bile and fermenting food gently moves out of the bowels, and you have a well, playful child again. Children simply will not take time from play to empty their bowels, and they become tightly packed, liver gets sluggish and stomach disordered.

When cross, feverish, restless, see if tongue is coated, then give this delicious "fruit laxative." Children love it, and it cannot cause injury. No difference what ails your little one—if full of cold, or a sore throat, diarrhoea, stomach-ache, bad breath, remember, a gentle "inside cleansing" should always be the first treatment given. Full directions for babies, children of all ages and grown-ups are printed on each bottle.

Beware of counterfeit fig syrups. Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," then look carefully and see that it is made by the "California Fig Syrup Company." We make no smaller size. Hand back with contempt any other fig syrup.

ACQUITTED.

Down in the Red River Valley section of Louisiana, there is a planter, a veteran of the Civil War, who is noted for his profane vocabulary.

Not long since he married, and everything sailed along nicely for a few days. But the Captain was called out early one morning by a negro tenant, who wanted to see him on business. As soon as the Captain saw the darky he began to curse.

His young wife, hearing the violent language, stuck her head out of the window and asked: "Is this you dear?"

Before the Captain could answer the darky said, apologetically: "No, ma'am; dat's Cap'n Johnson."

BANK CLERK DEFENDANT

MEDICINE HAT, Nov. 10.—Geo. Noble, a junior clerk in the Canadian Bank of Commerce, is the defendant in a white slavery case in the Police Court. He is charged with procuring for a house of ill-fame the seventeen-year-old daughter of a respectable family of this city, and similar charges are being laid against his brothers, Walter and Andrew Noble, in Winnipeg.

The last time the girl's parents saw her was on the night of 16th October, when she left home in company with the accused, presumably to go to a ball. A young lady acquaintance saw the couple at the station afterward, and saw the girl board train No. 4, and was informed by her that she did not intend going very far.

About three o'clock the following morning the distracted parents went to Noble's room and asked for their daughter. The accused answered that Davidson is defending Noble. the evening and that he had not seen her since. He went so far as to accompany them around town in a search for her.

The young woman was traced to Regina, Saskatoon, and later to Winnipeg, and thither the father followed her. He finally found that she had been taken to a house on Kennedy Street by the brothers of the accused, who had claimed that she was their sister from Ireland. She stopped at the place four days, during which time she visited frequently at the Noble brothers' room, on one occasion spending the whole afternoon there. She had also gone to the Remington Typewriter agency, and asked for a position, giving as her address the Noble boys' room.

Since 24th October she has disappeared as if the earth had swallowed her up, although a letter was recently received from her, purporting to come from Toronto, but which is believed to be a ruse to throw the searchers off the trail, since while the letter was dated 25th October, the postmask showed that it had been mailed in Toronto on the 28th, and it is believed to have been merely sent on there for remailing.

The case was called this morning, and the evidence of the parents and of a girl acquaintance taken, after which a remand was secured for a week to enable witnesses to be brought here from Winnipeg, for which an order of court will have to be secured. It is not known just how the case against the brothers in Winnipeg will be proceeded with, but it is understood that the matter has been placed in the hands of the Winnipeg authorities.

Chief Bruce announced in court this morning that the brothers would be brought here under arrest to give evidence against the accused. Laidlaw, Blanchard & Rand are handling the case for the Crown, and R. B. Davidson is defending Noble.

JOINING THE LANGUAGE.

A mistake frequently made by linguistic purists is to say that all slang is bad, illegitimate, condemnable. There is slang which we may justly regard as good, legitimate and worthy of a welcome as "language in the making."

Broadly speaking, we are justified in saying that any slang phrase which truly possesses the quality of succinct descriptiveness is picturesquely graphic and sufficiently terse, is a potential addition to our mother tongue's worthy word-stock.

Take the two expressions, "Make good" and "Butt in." The former has practically ceased to be slang. The latter will most probably have been graduated into real English before many years have passed.

The acceptance of both as language is fairly on the two-fold fact that each is terse and strikingly graphic after an epigrammatic fashion. Indeed, "Butt in" has few rivals in the field of verbal picture drawing.

To bestow approval on slang that meets the conditions of "language in the making" is not to indorse the great bulk of current slang. Most of it entirely lacks the element of succinct descriptiveness.

BRYAN TELLS A FUNNY STORY.

In the American magazine Charles Dillon writes an article, entiled 'Humours of the Coutrs." It is really a collection of funny true stories about experiences of lawyers. The following is a story told by William Jennings Bryan:

'Five Irishmen, the peerless one said, had been charged with assault with intent to kill. The state tried to prove the disturbance began at 10 o'clock at night. Dennis, one of the accused, sought to show by a witness that was at home and in bed with him and did not get up until long after the trouble was over.

'How do you know that Dennis was in bed by 8 o'clock," the district attorney inquired.

"Hadn't we a clock in the house?" the witness retorted.

"Oh, and did the clock strike after Denis came in.?"

"Wel, no the clock wasn't striking then."

"What was the matter with it?"

"It had been out of order for a few days."

"Then if the clock was not going, how do you know that Dennis was in before 8 o'clock?"

"Well," the witness replied, after a moment's studying, "I know he was in before the time when the clock strikes 8 whin it do be striking."

'But Denis was convicted."

The first electric street railway in any Chinese city outside of foreign settlements was inaugurated in Shanghai in August.

HAD PRESENCE OF MIND

MONTREAL, Nov. 13.—Had Paul Champagne 14 years of age, not been a student of fire drill at the school he attended, had he not kept his head and made use of his knowledge, in all probability his brother, his sister, and himself might have been the victims of an early morning fire which demolished the store and two upper storeys of a house at 151 Dufresne Street occupied by Mr. J. C. Champagne.

It is now the belief that the fire was caused by robbers.

At three o'clock Mr. Champagne was awakened by an intense heat. He rushed to the door. A tongue of flame flashed along the stairs and clung to the hallway. He had time to utter a warning call to the children in the front rooms, who rushed only to find the stairs impassable. Mr. Champagne then lifted his frantic wife, baby in arms, to the window, and, after throwing the baby to the blanket held out below, descended by a ladder.

"Quick! Into this clothes closet," said Paul to his brother Girard. The brother obeyed. An attempt to rescue Barnadette proved futile, and the boys remained in the closet, free from smoke.

Hurried in to rescue by the appeals of a mother, Chief Giroux and his two firemen entered the third storey. Barnadette was lying upon the floor of the room, her face wrapped in a bed cloth. She was passed to the window and down the ladder. The firemen called, the boys answered, and rushed from seclusion to the window, and were, like their sister, carried down.

Mr. Champagne estimates his loss at $10,000, which is covered by insurance.

Methods Of The Stage Manager That Deceive Eye Of Audience

Lincoln J. Carter Describes Some of His Scenic Effects That Were Seen in the Old Bradburn Opera House---Simple Devices That Created Illusions.

Theatregoers of the old days of the Bradburn Opera House may remember Lincoln J. Carter's melodramatic thrills entitled "The Fast Mail" and "The Heart of Chicago." His spectacular scenic effects wer most realistic. He produced storms, fires, lightning, snow, rain, and wind, tossed seas that turned nature green with envy. Here is a description of the train scene that stood out prominently in "The Fast Mail":

"The people little dreamed, as they watched the rapidly moving engine with its accompanying line of coaches and listened to it thunder into the distance, that what had just caused their breath to come and go more rapidly was in reality mainly a strip of canvas 9 feet high and about 300 feet in length. The real train was cleverly painted upon the canvas, which was then attached to a wire cable stretched taut across the front of the stage by a pulley and cord fastened to its upper side at intervals of six or eight feet. The cord was attached to a large fly-wheel back of the scenes to which were fastened two cranks. A couple of stage hands were ready to turn the cranks at the proper moment.

Simple When Explained.

"The sparks and smoke were made by the use of what is called a smoke and spark pot, attached to the chimney of the engine, and had about the same construction as a Roman candle. The head light was a magnesium light attached to a canvas. The grinding of the brakes, the clanging of the bell, and the rumble of the wheels which caused those of a nervous temperament to start suddenly was anything but a real train. Large iron drums were beaten upon with wire brushes so as to produce the sounds desired, and a piece of tubing hit with a mallet served nicely for a bell. Up to the present time, no one has come forward with a better idea."

"The Heart of Chicago."

Do you remember "The Heart of Chicago":

"The features in this were the Chicago fire and a train approaching head on. The perspective was so arranged that at the rise of the curtain the headlight of the engine appeared to be off in the distance, about the size of a quarter. The illusion was perfect. Gradually the light grew larger and brighter, thus appearing as if it neared the audience. This was accomplished by raising the light, which worked in a groove by means of a pulley and invisible wire. In front of the light was a shutter arangement very much like the one which opens and shuts on a camera. A wire attached to this was fastened to the floor, so that as the lamp was pulled up the shutter gradually opened. The stage was darkened, and the audience was in much the same condition as a person in a dark room looking into a bull's eye lantern. The coming of the locomotive was an illusion pure and simple.

"The engine was built on the principle of a telescope, or, I might say, an accordion. When the light first appeared it was pressed flat against the back wall and hidden by the back drop, which was drawn up as the headlight grew to half its full size. At this juncture the stage was brightened enough to allow the front of the engine to be seen, and as it was expanded to its full length the lights on the stage grew brighter until the usual brilliancy was attained. This completed the climax, and the curtain dropped. Very simple when you know how it is done."

THE GRAVE YARD OF LAKE HURON

The Lower End of the Lake Well Deserves the Name That Has Been Given It

A LACK OF SEA ROOM

The lower end of Lake Huron surely earned on Sunday last the sobriquet of graveyard. From Kincardine to Sarnia the shore is strewn with wreckage, bearing evidence that no less than seven vessels, the pride of the Canadian and American freighters, have gone to their last port.

Each of these boats had crews of from 20 to 30 men, of whom not one is left to tell the tale. A loss of seven ships and 175 lives in one comparatively small locality is a record of disaster unique in lake navigation. Hitherto the rocky shores of Lake Superior and Georgian Bay have held the chief terrors for mariners. Apparently the dangers of lower Lake Huron have been minimized.

Seven Boats Lost There.

The seven boats identified as lost in this one arm of the lake are the James Carruthers, Wexford, and Regina of Toronto, and the American boats—Charles S. Price, John A. McGean, Argus, and Hydrus.

The wreckage found farthest north is that of the Argus, reported to-day from Kincardine. Wreckage from the James Carruthers and the John A. McGean is piling up near Goderich, while farther south in the Grand Bend vicinity the waves are bringing in relics of the Wexford, the Charles S. Price, and the Regina.

That the last two named were in collision (one of them being the mystery derelict floating eight miles north of Sarnia), is a theory welcomed by marine men, who hesitate to believe that all these boats were simply overwhelmed by the storm.

A Storm Unparalleled.

So far as known, no boat fought the storm out in lower Lake Huron. One boat, the Northern Queen, survived, but it was only after the storm had beaten her into submission and then in mercy cast her up on an easy shoal at Kettle Point. The story of the men on the Northern Queen gives some idea of the viciousness of the elements.

The lack of sea room is the great peril in lake storms and gives the Great Lakes an unenviable reputation as compared to the ocean.

Seven captains with their crews are to-day at the bottom of Lake Huron, probably because they battled to keep off shore, where they might save their lives, but would likely have destroyed their owners' property. As it turned out, all were lost.

What happened in the trough of the sea, how the twisting sprung the plates, how the shifting plates cut off the heads of rivets, letting the sea rush in, or how the water got into grain cargoes, causing them to swell and burst the sides, what deeds of heroism were done before the battle was finally lost, are secrets Lake Huron keeps concealed in her bosom.

ANOTHER MYSTERY

Second Overturned Hulk Sighted in Lake Huron

MAY BE THE CARRUTHERS

SARNIA, Nov. 15.—The terrible toll of the blizzard which swept over the Great Lakes on Sunday and Monday continues to increase as the fleeting hours bring in reports of new wrecks scattered along the thousands of miles of coast line on the Great Lakes. Yesterday morning, at the Reid Wrecking office here, two messages arrived telling that Lake Huron holds another mystery ship floating on the surface of the lake near Point aux Barques. This boat has a red hull and is supposed to be the Carruthers, which has already been given up for lost, with her entire crew of twenty-five men. The first report of the vessel was received from Duluth, where the master of the steamer W. H. Gratwick reported on his arrival that he had sighted an overturned hulk on his trip up. Reports here declare that the description answers the Carruthers very closely. Several down-bound boats yesterday morning were hailed as they passed down the river, but nothing could be found out from the captains, as they reported that they had not seen the overturned boat. This is very easily accounted for, as the freighters may have been well out from the shore when passing Point aux Barques. With this last report in, it is thought here that the main features of the big Sunday storm have been brought to light and that there will not be any large additions to the total of the dead, except as they come from the list of the missing.

At present it is believed that within 90 miles of Sarnia 128 men are surely lost with the Carruthers, McGean, Regina, Price and Wexford with no hope of any of them being alive.

No Clue Yet.

SARNIA, Nov. 15.—The tug Fischer of the Reid Line was chartered yesterday for another trip to the steamer which is capsized in the lake a few miles from the mouth of the river. When the boat got within a few feet of the front of the capsized hulk a sounding of the depth of water was taken, and was found to be exactly 60 feet. The tug was then taken directly astern of the boat and back about 400 feet, where a sounding showed that the depth was 40 feet. This evidently was taken on top of the bottom of the boat, as a few feet farther back the water dropped away to 60 feet.

It is the opinion of local marine men and representatives of the different lines of boats that the boat must be at least 400 feet long. It is pointed out, however, that the sounding may have been taken over another boat directly behind that which is overturned.

APE NOT ANCESTOR.

He Is Man's Distant Cousin Declares Eminent Scientist.

NEW YORK, Nov. 15.—Dr. J. Leon Williams of London, an eminent authority on anthropology and geology arrived in New York yesterday from Liverpool with 15 skulls of prehistoric man, one of which he estimated to be 500,000 years old. The skull was found by workmen near Folkestone, Eng., in strata that dated back prior to the Pleistocene era, and its existence and discovery have confirmed Dr. Williams in the belief that mankind is at least half a million years old.

Dr. Williams said the finding of these ancient skulls and other human bones did not disprove, in his opinion the Darwinian theory, but altered it in some degrees. Instead of man being a descendant of the ape, Dr. Williams said, these skulls tend to confirm the belief that the anthropoid ape was an offshoot of primitive man. One of the chief distinctions between these skulls and those of apes, he said, was to be found in the teeth.

TO KEEP WASTE PIPES FROM FREEZING.

Now that the cold weather is upon us, there is likely to be much trouble with pipes freezing. A good way to save trouble is to pour a few drops of kerosene oil down the sink the last thing at night. Especially can laundry tubs be kept from freezing in this way. Pour the oil down as soon as you are through washing.

THE VALUE OF HISTORY.

"Not only the romance of the world is in history, but influence, so high in source and in force as to be evensacred, descend through it. Benedictive, sacramental, is its touch upon responsive souls. We become comparatively careless of circumstances; aware of kinship, in whatever heroic element may be in us, with the choice, transcendent spirits, regardless of the criticism, or the snarling scoffs, which here may surround us, if only conscious of a deeper and more complete correspondence with those whose elate and unsubduable temper remains among the treasures of mankind." — Richard Salter Storrs.

"That Affair Next Door"

By ANNA KATHARINE GREEN

"Very well; I will ask the young ladies about them."

"This third room is used as a dining-room, and the closet where I found them is one in which glass is kept. The presence of this hat there is a mystery, but I presume the Misses Van Burnam can solve it. At all events, it is very improbable that it has anything to do with the crime which has been committed here."

"Very," I coincided.

"So improbable," he went on, "that on second thoughts I advise you not to disturb the young ladies with questions concerning it unless further reasons for doing so become apparent."

"Very well," I returned. But I was not deceived by his second thoughts.

As he was holding open the parlour door before me in a very significant way, I tied my veil under my chin, andwas about to leave when he stopped me.

"I have another favour to ask," said he, and this time with his most benignant smile. "Miss Butterworth, do you object to sitting up for a few nights till twelve o'clock?"

"Not at all," I returned, "if there is any good reason for it."

"At twelve o'clock to-night a gentleman will enter this house. If you will note him from your window I will be obliged."

"To see whether he is the same one I saw last night Certainly I will take a look, but—"

"To-morrow night," he went on, imperturbably, "the test will be repeated, and I should like to have you take another look; without prejudice, madam; remember, without prejudice."

"I have no prejudice——" I began.

"The test may not be concluded in two nights," he proceeded, without any notice of my words. "So do not be in haste to spot your man, as the vulgar expression is. And now good-night—we shall meet again to-morrow."

"Wait!" I called peremptorily, for he was on the point of closing the door. "I saw the man but faintly; it is an impression only that I received. I would not wish a man to hang through any identification I could make."

"No man hangs on simple identification. We shall have to prove the crime, madam, but identification is important; even such as you can make."

There was no more to be said; I uttered a calm good-night and hastened away. By a judicious use of my opportunities I had become much less ignorant on the all-important topic than when I entered the house.

It was half past eleven when I returned home, a late hour for me to enter my respectable front door alone. But circumstances had warranted my escapade, and it was with quite an easy conscience and a cheerful sense of accomplishment that I went up to my room and prepared to sit out the half hour before midnight.

I am a comfortable sort of a person when alone, and found no difficulty in passing this time profitably. Being very orderly, as you must have remarked, I have everything at hand for making myself a cup of tea at any time of day or night; so feeling some need of refreshment, I set out the little table I reserve for such purposes and made the tea and sat down to sip it.

While doing so, I turned over the subject occupying my mind, and endeavoured to reconcile the story told by the clock with my preconceived theory of this murder; but no reconcilement was possible. The woman had been killed at twelve, and the clock had fallen at five. How could the two be made to agree, and which, since agreement was impossible, should be made to give way, the theory or the testimony of the clock? Both seemed incontrovertible, and yet one must be false. Which?

I was inclined to think that the trouble lay with the clock; that I had been deceived in my conclusions, and that it was not running at the time of the crime. Mr. Gryce may have ordered it wound, and then have had it laid on its back to prevent the hands from shifting past the point where they had stood at the time of the crime's discovery. It was an unexplainable act, but a possible one; while to suppose that it was going when the shelves fell, stretched improbability to the utmost, ther having been, so far as we could learn, no one in the house for months sufficiently dexterous to set so valuable a timepiece; for who could imagine the scrub-woman engaging in a task requiring such delicate manipulation.

No! some meddlesome official had amused himself by starting up the works, and the clue I had thought so important would probably prove valueless.

There was humiliation in the thought, and it was a relief to me to hear an approaching carriage just as the clock on my mantel struck twelve. Springing from my chair, I put out my light and flew to the window.

The coach drew up and stopped next door. I saw a gentleman descend and step briskly across the pavement to the neighbouring stoop. The figure he presented was not that of the man I had seen enter the night before.

VIII.

The Misses Van Burnam.

Late as it was when I retired, I was up betimes in the morning—as soon in fact, as the papers were distributed. The Tribune lay on the stoop. Eagerly I seized it; eagerly I read it. From its headlines you may judge what it had to say about this murder:

A Startlinfg Discovery in the Van Burnam Mansion in Gramercy Park

A Young Girl Found There, Lying Dead Under an Overturned Cabinet.

Evidences That She Was Murdered Before it Was Pulled Down Upon Her.

Thought By Some To Be Mrs. Howard Van Burnam.

A Fearful Crime Involved In An Impenetrable Mystery.

What Mr. Van Burnham Says About It: He Does Not Recognize The Woman as His Wife.

So, so, it was his wife they were talking about. I had not expected that. Well! Well! no wonder the girls looked startled and concerned. And I paused to recall what I had heard about Howard Van Burnam's marriage.

It had not been a fortunate one. His chosen bride was pretty enough, but she had not been bred in the ways of fashionable society, and the other members of the family had never recognized her. The father, especially, had cut his son dead since his marriage, and had even gone so far as to threaten to dissolve the partnership in which they were all involved. Worse than this, there had been rumours of a disagreement between Howard and his wife. They were not always on good terms, and opinions differed as to which was most in fault. So much for what I knew of these two mentioned parties.

Reading the article at length, I learned that Mrs. Van Burnam was missing; that she had left Haddam for New York the day before her husband, and had not since been heard from. Howard was confident, however, that the publicity given to her disappearance by the papers would bring immediate news of her.

The effect of the whole article was to raise grave doubts as to the candour of Mr. Van Burnam's assertions and I am told that in some of the less scrupulous papers these doubts were not only expressed, but actual surmises ventured upon as to the identity between the person whom I had seen enter the house with the young girl. As for my own name, it was blazoned forth in anything but a gratifying manner. I was spoken of in one paper—a kind friend told me this—as the prying Miss Amelia. As if my prying had not given the police their only clue to the identification of the criminal.

The New York World was the only paper that treated me with any consideration. That young man with the small head and beady eyes was not awed by me for nothing. He mentioned me as the clever Miss Butterworth whose testimony is likely to be of so much value in this very interesting case.

It was the World I handed the Misses Van Burnam when they came downstairs to breakfast. It did justice to me and not too much injustice to him. They read it together, their two heads plunged deeply into the paper so that I could not watch their faces. But I could see the sheet shake, and I noticed that their social veneer was not as yet laid on so thickly that they could hide their real terror and heart-ache when they finally confronted me again.

"Did you read—have you seen this horrible account?" quavered Caroline, as she met my eye.

"Yes, and I now understand why you felt such anxiety yesterday. Did you know your sister-in-law, and do you think she could have been beguiled into your father's house in that way?"

It was Isabella who answered.

"We never have seen her and know little of her, but there is no telling what such an uncultivated person as she might do. But that our good brother Howard ever went in there with her is a lie, isn't it, Caroline?—a base and malicious lie?"

"Of course it is, of course, of course. You don't think the man you saw was Howard, do you, dear Miss Butterworth?"

Dear! O dear!

"I am not acquainted with your brother," I returned. "I have never seen him but a few times in my life. You know he has not been a very frequent visitor at your father's house lately."

They looked at me wistfully, so wistfully.

"Say it was not Howard," whispered Caroline, stealing up a little nearer to my side.

"And we will never forget it," murmured Isabella, in what I am obliged to say was not her society manner.

"I hope to be able to say it," was my short rejoinder, made difficult by the prejudices I had formed. "When I see your brother, I may be able to decide at a glance that the person I saw entering your house was not he."

"Yes, oh, yes. Do you hear that, Isabella? Miss Butterworth will save Howard yet. O you dear old soul. I could almost love you!"

This was not agreeable to me. I a dear old soul! A term to be applied to a butter-woman not to a Butterworth. I drew back and their sentimentalities came to an end. I hope their brother Howard is not the guilty man the papers make him out to be, but if he is, the Misses Van Burnam's fine phrase, We could almost love you, will not deter me from being honest in the matter.

Mr. Gryce called early, and I was glad to be able to tell him that the gentleman who visited him the night before did not recall the impression made upon me by the other. He received the communication quietly, and from his manner I judged that it was more or less expected. But who can be a correct judge of a detective's manner, especially one so foxy and imperturbable as this one? I longed to ask who his visitor was, but I did not dare, or rather—to be candid in little things that you may believe me in great—I was confident he would not tell me, so I would not compromise my dignity by a useless question.

He went after a five minutes' stay, and I was about to turn my attention to household affairs, when Franklin came in.

His sisters jumped like puppets to meet him.

"O," they cried, for once thinking and speaking alike, "have you found her?"

His silence was so eloquent that he did not need to shake his head.

"But you will before the day is out?" protested Caroline.

"It is too early yet," added Isabella.

"I never thought I would be glad to see that woman under any circumstances," continued the former, "but I believe now that if I saw her coming up the street on Howard" at once I should be happy enough to rush out and—and——"

"Give her a hug," finished the more impetuous Isabella.

It was not what Caroline meant to say, but she accepted the emendation, with just the slightest air of deprecation. They were both evidently much attached to Howard, and ready in his trouble to forget and forgive everything. I began to like them again.

"Have you read the horrid papers?" and "How is papa this morning?" and "What shall we do to save Howard?" now flew in rapid questions from their lips; and feeling that it was but natural they should have their little say, I sat down in my most uncomfortable chair and waited for these first ebullitions to exhaust themselves.

Instantly Mr. Van Burnam took them by the arm, and led them away to a distant sofa.

"Are you happy here" he asked, in what he meant for a very confidential tone. But I can hear as readily as a deaf person anything which is not meant for my ears.

"O she's kind enough," whispered Caroline. "But so stingy. Do take us where we can get something to eat."

"She puts all her money into china! Such plates!—and so little on them!"

At these expressions, uttered with all the emphasis a whisper will allow, I just hugged myself in my quiet corner. The dear, giddy things! But they should see, they should see.

"I fear" it was Mr. Van Burnam who now spoke—"I shall have to take my sisters from under your kind care to-day. Their father needs them, and has, I believe, already engaged rooms for them at the Plaza."

"I am sorry," I replied, "but surely they will not leave till they have had another meal with me. Postpone your departure, young ladies, till after luncheon, and you will greatly oblige me. We may never meet so agreeably again."

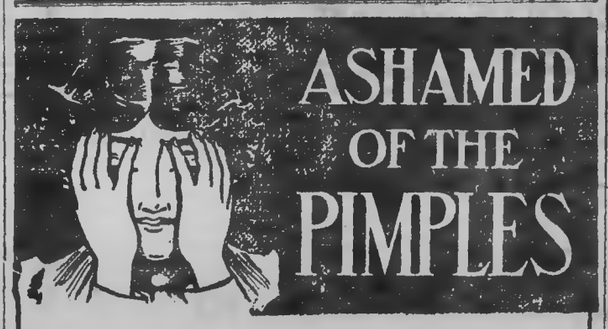
HOW MRS. BROWN SUFFERED

During Change of Life—How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Made Her a Well Woman.

Iola, Kansas.—"During the Change of Life I was sick for two years. Before I took your medicine I could not bear the weight of my clothes and was bloated very badly. I doctored with three doctors but they did me no good. They said nature must have its way. My sister advised me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I purchased a bottle. Before it was gone the bloating left me and I was not so sore. I continued taking it until I had taken twelve bottles. Now I am stronger than I have been for years and can do all my work, even the washing. Your medicine is worth its weight in gold. I cannot praise it enough. If more women would take your medicine there would be more healthy women. You may use this letter for the good of others."—Mrs. D. H. BROWN, 309 N. Walnut St., Iola, Kan.

Change of Life is one of the most critical periods of a woman's existence. Women everywhere should remember that there is no other remedy known to so successfully carry women through this trying period as Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.



ASHAMED OF THE PIMPLES

Pimples and disfiguring skin diseases are particularly distressing to young ladies and gentlemen. The embarrassment is so great that you feel ashamed to appear among your young friends in society.

Fortunately, there is a cure for such annoying skin diseases by the use of Dr. Chase's Ointment. So much is heard of this great, soothing, healing ointment as a cure for eczema and the more serious diseases of the skin that many overlook it when bothered by pimples, blackheads, roughness of the skin and skin irritations.

It is surprising what Dr. Chase's Ointment will accomplish in a few days when applied frequently. Instead of merely covering up the disfigurement, and further aggravating the inflammation, it soothes and heals the skin, and leaves it soft, smooth and velvety.

PIMPLES AND BLACKHEADS

Miss Carrie Altwater, Bittern Lake, Alta., writes:—"I was entirely cured of pimples and blackheads some months ago by using Dr. Chase's Ointment. As I have also found this ointment a splendid treatment for sunburn and chapped hands, I would not be without it in the house. It is the best I ever used."

Dr. Chase's Ointment, 60 cents a box, all dealers. Sample box mailed free, if you mention this paper. Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

THEIR MAJESTIES' MAIL

You Need Pay No Postage On a Letter to the King

No letter written by the King or by the Queen need bear a postage stamp, and letters written by members of the Royal Household strictly upon Their Majesties' business are entitled to travel free, but members of the Household are not entitled to write the magic letters "O.H.M.S." on their private letters, and none of them would dare to do it.

Letters addressed to all the important and unimportant people at the Royal palaces who wait upon the King and Queen travel through the post in precisely the same fashion as letters addressed to the general public, and are delivered by the postmen on the "walk."

Should you ever have occasion to write to His Majesty, the Post Office will carry your communication for nothing; but you would be better advised to write to one or other of his private secretaries, asking that the matter should be laid before the King. For this also costs you nothing, and is the proper procedure.

"Father" of the Scots Greys

The funeral took place in Glasgow of Andrew Gray, formerly of the Royal Scots Greys, who died at the age of eighty-one years. As Gray was for a considerable period the oldest member of the Scots Greys living, he was popularly known as the "father" of the regiment. It was his habit to wear his medals when walking on the streets.

Thought Nothing But Death Would End Her Misery.

WAS TROUBLED WITH Heart Disease.

Mrs. J. D. Talbut, Owen Sound, Ont., writes:—"I have been a great sufferer from heart disease, and leaking valves. I have had resource to every kind of treatment I could think might help me, including the skill of several doctors. I suffered so for years that at times I have felt that nothing but death could end my misery. I was advised by a friend, who had suffered untold pain and misery, just as I had, and had been cured by Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, to give them a trial, so I decided to do so. I am delighted with the result, as I am now completely cured, and can eat and sleep as I have not done for years.

You are at liberty to use my name at any time as I am convinced they are the best pills on the market for any form of heart disease."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50 cents per box, or 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

ETON "ALPINE" FEAT

Boy Fixes Hat on Lightning Conductor Above Buildings

High above the street, pierced by the lightning conductor on top of the Eton memorial buildings, Windsor, England, was visible a soft grey hat, a challenge and a defiance to the powers that be.

It was placed there by a boy who had first to attack the top of the massive dome, then to surmount a number of pillars and ornamental work, and finally at a dizzy height above the street to "shin up" the lightning conductor.

How the climb—which to the ordinary man looks an utterly impossible one—was accomplished remains a mystery.

A local builder was called in to remove the hat. He engaged the services of an expert climber, who with the aid of ladders and other appliances succeeded in getting it down amid the cheers of the boys—but the dare-devil boy who fixed it had no ladder for his 100 foot climb.

The Commuters' Position.

Jerome S. McWade, a member of the New Haven & Hartford Commuters' Association, said in his Stamford office:

"We commuters, we common people, must protect ourselves. Otherwise we'll be squeezed flat between the officials and the workmen. We'll be like the two Americans in Paris.

"Once, in Paris, in the Bois, I noticed a tremendous disturbance and directed my chauffeur to hurry to the scene.

"We found two Americans and two cabbies rioting terribly. We inquired into the affair and learned that the cabbies had bumped their cabs. After the bump they had wrangled; from wrangling they had turned to abuse, and finally one cabby had said:

"'If you don't shut up I'll whack your customer over the head with my whip—'

"'You hit my customer,' retorted the second cabby, 'and I'll hit yours.'

"Then the first cabby had given the second customer a good cut, the second cabby had cut the first's customer in retnrn, and that was what the row was all about."

Language of the Law.

Legal terms are at times liable to bother the best of us, so no wonder that occasionally they stump some of the coloured citizens that find their way into the courts, says the Baltimore News. The other day Mamie Rose, of Vincent Alley, was up before Justice Golden, in the North-Western Police Court, charged with assaulting Alice Cooper, a neighbour.

The facts in the case had been threshed out, when Justice Golden announced that he would hold the case sub curia.

Mamie pondered a minute and then leaning over the brass railing, said: "Judge, I can't understand this law talk; just tell me how long this 'sub curia means in jail.'"

TO CHECK A COLD

It is easy to check a cold if you begin in time. Frequent doses of Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine keep the cough loose, allay the inflammation, and so prevent it spreading to the bronchial tubes and lungs. Mrs. S. M. Moore, Ghertrud, B.C., writes: "I wish to state my gratitude for Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine, for it cured a cold which a friend said would soon put me in the grave."

Gallantry.

Two miners were returning from a lecture at the village institute, when one of them, after a thoughtful pause, remarked: "Say, Bill, I doan see the necessity o' bringing chaps fra London to teach us about manners in the 'ome. We ain't so bad as that feller made out!" "O' course we ain't!" replied Bill. "Not by a long way," wept on the first. "I never swears before my wife—" "No more don't I!" put in Bill. "I allus sez, 'Ladies first!' That's me!"

New Brunswicker Tells of Weirdest Ball Game In History.

They were sitting around the lobby of the Russell House in Ottawa one rainy evening recently discussing modern baseball and finally the conversation drifted into the usual channel—great baseball plays, of the brave seasons that are gone.

"I guess it has been my privilege to see a play that has never been equalled in this or any other country," remarked the quiet-looking young man from down east, "and it was not in the big leagues that I saw it, either."

His companions grinned skeptically at the suggestion of a great baseball play down in the Bluenose country, but the young man from down by the sea calmly lit his cigarette and continued: "For the last ten years I have followed baseball faithfully. I have read countless stories of great spectacular plays, and witnessed many myself, mostly in the big leagues. But it remained for a small country town in New Brunswick to stage what I honestly believe to be the most intensely dramatic baseball episode that there is a record of. It was a game between the old Chatham Stars—a fairly good scrappy team, as teams went in country towns in those days—and a nine from the University of St. Joseph at Memramcook, where some really fast stars have been developed. The game was being played on the college campus, and for some reason or other the rivalry between the teams was intense and bitter. The championship of Northern New Brunswick was at stake. For eight innings the Chatham pitcher had the collegians mystified and scoreless. With the score two to nothing against them they came to bat in the ninth. A puny grounder and a foul fly to left field, and the students saw nothing but defeat and humiliation at the hands of their old rivals. O'Hara, the weakest batter on the team, walked nervously to the plate and the crowd started to leave the little grand stand. Then something happened that made them stop and linger. O'Hara had doubled to right field on the first ball sent up to him. Robidoux, a scrappy young Acadian, was the next man up. The crowd was imploring him to at least save the team from a shut-out, but after he had fouled for two strikes the cheers subsided. The pitcher grooved a speedy straight ball right for the heart of the plate. Robidoux's bat, swung in desperation with all his might, met it squarely on the nose. The ball was seen to soar far out over the centre fielder's head, both runners raced madly around the bases, and the crowd roared its delight. Then there was a sudden lull. O'Hara had fallen face downwards on third base, and remained motionless. Robidoux's hit was a sure home run, but if O'Hara did not move the other base runner, according to the rules of the game, could not pass him, and then the game might be lost after all. The crowd groaned. And it was then that the strangest thing happened on a ball field. Robidoux made straight around the bases, reached third, picked the prostrate O'Hara into his arms, and started for the home plate. A few moments later, amidst mad cheers from the excited crowd, he had touched the plate with O'Hara, done likewise himself, and was carrying his apparently unconscious comrade to the bench. Notwithstanding the violent protestations of the Chatham players, the umpire ruled that both scores would count, and as the score was thus a tie, ordered the teams to play on. And now came the most dramatic scene of all. Young O'Hara was dead. Awed with the announcement the crowd stood around with bared heads, while the village doctor worked hard to restore, if possible, the young player to life. O'Hara had sacrificed his life that his team might win. He had scored a run while dead, and thus made what, to me at least, seems to be the most solemn, most dramatic, and greatest play that baseball has ever seen."

Great Bargain.

Mrs. Breen had talked enthusiastically of the largely advertised fire sale which was to take place in one of the downtown department stores. That evening when her husband came home he looked about at a number of bundles which were lying on a table.

"Well, Mabel, what did you find at the wonderful fire sale?" he inquired.

"Oh, Will, I got some of the loveliest silk stockings at 24 cents a pair! There isn't a thing the matter with them, except that the feet are burned off."

IF KIDNEYS ACT BAD TAKE SALTS

Says Backache is Sign You Have Been Eating Too Much Meat

When you wake up with backache and dull misery in the kidney region it generally means you have been eating too much meat, says a well-known authority. Meat forms uric acid, which overworks the kidneys in their effort to filter it from the blood and they become sort of paralysed and loggy. When your kidneys get sluggish and clog you must relieve them, like you relieve your bowels; removing all the body's urinous waste, else you have backache, sick headache, dizzy spells; your stomach sours, tongue is coated, and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine is cloudy, full of sediment, channels often get sore, water scalds, and you are obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night.

Either consult a good, reliable physician at once or get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate sluggish kidneys, also to neutralize acids in the urine, so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is a life saver for regular meat eaters. It is inexpensive, cannot injure, and makes a delightful, effervescent lithia-water drink.

Regimental Pets.

Nearly every regiment in the British army has its regimental pet, varying from the famous goat of the Royal Welsh Fusiliers to the tame blackbirds and thrushes of the Coldstream Guards. Only a few army pets are dogs, however.

One of the most famous of these dogs was Drummer, which belonged to the Northumberland Fusiliers. Drummer went through three campaigns. He was present at the Battle of Omdurman, in the Egyptian campaigns, when he snapped at the bullets, thinking they were flies! During the South African War he was wounded in the shoulder at Wynberg, but recovered, and was awarded the South African medals and clasps by Queen Victoria. Drummer, by the way, was the only dog which Lord Methuen allowed to accompany his column from Orange River.

Nature Was Improving.

James A. McNeill Whistler astounded many people by the egotism he frequently displayed in his conversation, but those who knew the artist best realized that many of his conceited remarks were inspired by a love of mischief rather than by vanity. Here is an example:

At a house party an effusive lady approached the artist.

"Oh, Mr. Whistler," she said, "I have just been up the river, and it reminded me so much of your pictures!"

"Indeed!" Whistler replied calmly. "Then nature is looking up."

The Most Graceful Act.

A good subject for a dull season discussion, says The Manchester Guardian, would be what was the most graceful act you ever saw. As a contribution to such a discussion this would, I think, be hard to beat. A lady of much charm who is a rigid vegetarian had been living some time in a Somerset village. When she was leaving the village she received some little gifts from the villagers. The most beautiful was a fine hunch of roses sent to her by — the local butcher.

MAGIC OF COLORS

By It We Know of What the Sun and Stars Are Composed.

SECRETS OF THE UNIVERSE.

How They Were Revealed by the Discovery of the Spectrum and the Reasoning to Which It Led—Our Eyelashes Are Primitive Spectroscopes.

The miracle of the spectroscope is repeated before our eyes every day and every night without our recognising it.

If people were more observant and more accustomed to think about the meaning of what they see great discoveries would be as plentiful as diamonds in a Kimberley pipe.

A man said to me the other day. "What is all this color that I see when I squint my eyes and look at an electric light?"

I replied: "It is the greatest revelation that man has ever had in the physical world—it is spectrum analysis. Your crowded eyelashes become an astronomical instrument and analyze the light for you into its primary colors. The multitude of narrow slits through which the light passes as you squint your eyes act like a diffraction grating and change the direction of the various waves of light in accordance with their length.

"The red waves are long, one thirnine-thousandth of an inch in length, and they keep on without much change of direction, but the violet waves are short, one fifty-seven-thousandth of an inch in length, and they are considerably turned out of a straight line. All the intermediate waves, from orange, through yellow, green, blue and indigo, decrease in length and are more and more turned aside as they get shorter. The consequence is that you see through your nearly closed eyelashes a band of colors, which is nothing but the famous spectrum of the astronomers."

By the discovery of that spectrum and the reasoning that it led to we have found out what the sun and the stars are made of. Every known element of matter, when it is made to shine, gives out wave lengths peculiar to itself. Spectroscopic instruments more perfect than the eyelashes reveal these special waves in the light of the sun and the stars and by that revelation enable us to detect the incandescent clouds, composed of the hot vapors of iron, copper, nickel, platinum, carbon, calcium, sodium and many other substances which glow in the atmosphere of the heavenly bodies. We find these things in stars so far away that their light may require 1,000 years to come to us, although it flies with a speed of 186,300 miles per second.

Look around you when you enter a brilliantly lighted parlor with crystal chandeliers hanging from the ceiling. The mysterious spectrum flashes at you from a hundred directions at once. The glass crystals of the chandeliers are also spectroscopes, and they, too, separate the various colored waves, though on a somewhat different principle. They act not as diffraction gratings, but as prisms, but the effect is nearly the same. When light goes through a prism the red waves are less bent out of their course than the orange, the orange less than the yellow, the yellow less than the green, the green less than the blue, the blue less than the indigo and the indigo less than the violet. The result is that what was white light, with all its waves intermingled, when it entered the prism, comes out in beautiful sheaves of color.

A similar effect is produced by the beveled edge of a mirror or the facets of a piece of cut glass glittering on a dinner table.

The beauty of jewels depends upon their spectroscopic powers. Every transparent substance has its own "index of refraction," which means its peculiar power of turning light waves aside. The diamond, as the king of gems, possesses this power in the highest degree. Calling the refractive index of air 1.00, that of glass is from 1.51 to 1.71, according to its density, while that of the diamond is 2.47.

This property alone furnishes a means of detecting the genuineness of a diamond. Taking advantage of its high refractive power and shaping its facets accordingly, the jeweler can vastly increase the brilliancy of a diamond by proper cutting. He can bring about internal reflections that make the stone blaze as if its atoms were all afire.

The shimmer of colors in an opal is due to the existence of invisibly minute fissures, which split up the light waves and scatter their hues in delicate, intermingled rainbows.

Nature has been doing these things for thousands of years in plain sight before man found out that he could use the principle on which she acted to uncover the secrets of the universe. Very likely she is giving us many other equally valuable hints which we are still too stupid to understand.—Garrett P. Serviss in Spokane Spokesman-Review.

Whole Train Was Lost.

It is said that in the days of the construction of the C. P. R. line through Gossport Sicing an engine attached to a string of cars sank through the grade and was never recovered. Some probability is given the story by the recent finding of kegs of old spikes and rusted nails along the track at that spot.

Kootenay's Output Grows.

British Columbia is getting new mining records this year. The mines of the Kootenay and boundary districts have paid $1,600,000 in dividends so far in 1913. This is half a million more than was paid in all of 1912.

Not a Soloist.

The late Theodore Thomas was rehearsing the Chicago orchestra on the stage of the Auditorium theater. He was disturbed by the whistling of Albert Burridge, the well known scene painter, who was at work in the loft above the stage. A few minutes later Mr. Thomas' librarian appeared on the "bridge" where Mr. Burridge, merrily whistling, was at work.

"Mr. Thomas' compliments," said the librarian, "and he requests me to state that if Mr. Burridge wishes to whistle he will be glad to discontinue his rehearsal."

To which Mr Burridge replied suavely, "Mr Burridge's compliments to Mr. Thomas, and please inform Mr Thomas that if Mr Burridge cannot whistle with the orchestra he won whistle at all."

TORONTO'S SITE ONCE UNDER WATER

This Was Eight Thousand Years Ago —Winters Growing Colder and Summers Warmer

The greater part of what is now the city of Toronto was once covered with water, if we may believe the statement of an eminent scientist, Dr. A. P. Coleman who deals with the subject in a volume issued by the Canadian Institute. The high ground in the northern part of the city formed the shore of the old glacial Lake Iroquois, which is known only by name, having been taken off the map some eight thousand years ago. In Rosedale, now a district of aristocratic homes, mammoth and caribou once wandered, and at a more distant period fresh water molluscs abounded in the water that spread over even this area, now several hundred feet above the level of Lake Ontario.

With the gradual wearing away of the vast forests, says the chapter containing Mr. R. F. Stupart's report of the weather of the Toronto district, climatic conditions have slightly changed, winters being colder than in the early days of settlement, autumns and summers warmer, but with the springs practically the same. Spring now lasts from March 10 to May 20; summer from May 21 to September 10; autumn from September 11 to November 25; and winter from November 26 to March 9.

During the 73 years of observations taken at the Meteorological Institute there, the mean annual temperature has been found to be 44.4 degrees, being, according to the seasons 23.4 in winter, 41 in spring, 65.8 in summer, and 47.5 in autumn. The heat record was broken in July, 1911, with a temperature on six consecutive days of 98, 101, 103, 97, 95 and 92. February, 1875, was the coldest month on record, with an absolute minimum of 16 degrees below zero. The downward curve of the temperature curve is stated to be gradual during the autumn, not reaching 50 degrees until October 7, and dropping to the freezing point on or about November 26. The coldest part of winter centres about February 4, but from this approximate date the curve ascends first slowly and then more rapidly, crossing the freezing-point in the direction of warmth on March 26.

Raising Cottonseed Standard.

A severe blow will be dealt to the Indian cottonseed industry unless a way can be found to clean the seed before it is shipped. In England, which takes 98 per cent. of all the cottonseed exports of India, the importers have decided not to accept any hereafter which contains over 2 per cent of dirt. At present the dirt averages not far from 8 per cent.

Irish Volubility.

It is said that the English peasant has a vocabulary of from 300 to 500 words. That of the Irish peasantry of the Aran islands is over 2,500 words. A vocabulary of 3,000 words is used by Roscommon peasants who can neither read nor write, and in Munster, especially in Kerry, the average vocabulary in use is probably between 5,000 and 6,000 words.—London Globe.

WAS SUBJECT TO SEVERE BRONCHITIS.

Doctors Only Gave Temporary Relief.

Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup CURED HIM.

Bronchitis is generally the result of a cold caused by exposure to wet and inclement weather, and is a very dangerous inflammatory affection of the bronchial tubes. Neglected bronchitis is one of the most general causes of consumption, so cure it at once by the use of Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup.

Mrs. C. G. Dring, Hamilton, Ont., writes:—"Our little boy has been subject to severe bronchitis ever since birth, and different doctors claimed to be only able to relieve him temporarily. A neighbor advised us to use Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, so I got a bottle, and after the third dose noticed a decided change, so kept on with it, and a couple of bottles were enough to completely cure him. Now we always keep a bottle on hand, and give it to him as soon as we notice him troubled with a cold, after which it disappears as if by magic. We recommend it to all our friends who find it is just as good as I say."

Price, 25 and 50 cents a bottle.

Be sure and get the genuine "Dr. Wood's" when you ask for it. Put up in a yellow wrapper, three pine trees the trade mark, and manufactured by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont

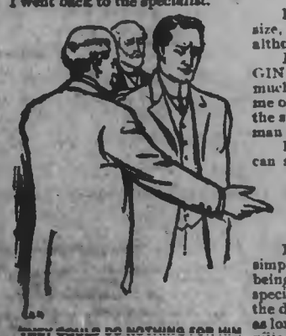
DOCTORS AFRAID TO OPERATE

Could Not Remove Stone From The Bladder. Gin Pills Enabled Him To Pass It.

JOLIETTE, P. Q.

"During August last, I went to Montreal to consult a specialist as I had been suffering terribly with Stone In The Bladder. He decided on an operation and was assisted by another doctor. They said the calculus was larger than a bean and too hard to crush, and that they could not take it out.

I returned home suffering greatly, and did not know what to do, but was recommended by a friend to try GIN PILLS. I bought a box and found relief from the pain at once. I took a second and third box of GIN PILLS after which I went back to the specialist.



He told me the calculus was reduced in size, still he could not relieve me of it, although he tried for two and a half hours.

I returned home and continued to take GIN PILLS as they reduced the pain very much, but I did not expect they would relieve me of the stone, but to my great joy, I passed the stone on October 3rd, and am now a well man and very happy.

I am sending the stone to you so that you can see for yourself what a great work GIN PILLS did for me. GIN PILLS are the best medicine in the world and because they did so much for me, I will recommend them all the rest of my life".

J. ALBERT LESSARD.

THEY COULD DO NOTHING FOR HIM

Isn't it wonderful? Just think of these simple pills, that even children can take, being able to perform what the greatest specialists in Canada could not do. Surely, the days of the miracle have not passed away, as long as we have Gin Pills. These wonderful pills dissolve stone in the bladder or kidneys because they are a natural solvent for uric acid, which causes calculus. If GIN PILLS are not sold in your neighborhood, send us 50c. for a box or $2.50 for 6 boxes. Sample free if you write us mentioning this paper. "Melancholy cannot hold its own with perennial good nature. Sunshine is contagious. Smiles are epidemic. One joyous nature will fill an auditorium with good cheer. Despondency is a poor debater. It can bring no argument that sunbeams will not penetrate."

* * *

Let us not be low-spirited over little things. Worry never accomplished anything. It is useless to cross a bridge until we get to it. Evil forebodings never lightened any pathway, and the feet are prone to stumble or go astray in the darkness of melancholy and sorrow. Look on the bright side. Be cheerful. Be self-reliant. Be brave and patient.

* * *

If a young girl reads that which is weak and false and foolish, she will be weak, false and foolish; but if it is true, tender, and inspiring, then something of its truth and tenderness will glow into her soul and become a part of her very self. The boy who reads deeds of manliness, of bravery and noble daring feels the spirit of emulation glow within him, and the seed is planted which will bring forth fruit of pure endeavour and exalted life.

"Is your father rich?" someone asked a five-year-old girl; and the little one replied confidentially, "Why, of course, he's got me." And she was right, too, for the father of a sweet, loving, helpful little daughter is richer than some millionaire whose money mannot buy them the love of a single heart. How about your father? Does he think he is a rich man because of the daughter at home? There are households where "it is hard to make both ends meet," but where there is plenty of that better wealth of love and kindness and loyalty. Is yours one of them?

Everyone has annoyances. The housekeeper finds them in lazy servants; or on a rainy day the stove wood will not burn; the floors get soiled and the children fret. The business man finds them in an unfaithful partner, and we all find them in one thing or another. We have found them in disappointments and failures; life is too short to be trifled away in sighs and worryings over the trials and rough places in our way. There are too many good things to enjoy. Just think of the bright things all around us. It matters not how poor we may be, still the bright sunshine is ours; the flowers and little birds that sing for us. And there is too much to do in our one short lifetime. As we once heard an aunt say, "Well, we hear so much about good words, why doesn't someone do something good?" And it is high time we were all doing it.

* * *

We owe it to our friends and we owe it to ourselves to cherish gentle good nature, that has a sympathetic eye, a glowing, bright face, and a warm, responsive heart to greet the world with. It is one of the most effective of all means of doing good. Kind words and gentle looks cost nothing; and yet they are often more grateful to the poor and oppressed than purses of gold.

All love is sweet, given or returned. They who inspire it most are fortunate, but they who feel it most are happier still.

The word "home" is only applied to the habitations of man. Beasts have lairs, birds have nests—temporary abiding places, both of them. Man alone builds his permanency, and a safe housing of his treasures and loved ones. A house is not a home. You cannot rear a home with boards alone.

Men and women were made to labour, but not to slave. Each one of us has an inalienable right of liberty and happiness, and we must insist upon the rights. Let us take time for conversation, for pleasant, social intercourse, for making and keeping friends.

Such a being is wanted by ten thousand human beings throughout the world.

A man who is a man at all, does not want his wife to be a beast of burden; and, if curcumstances make it necessary for her to overwork, he will at least endeavour by tenderness and forethought and such help as his own labours permit, to make life easier for her. Such is the heart of a woman that this attitude on the part of her husband is the elixir of life to her, and sustained by it she can endure strain and toil that otherwise would break her spirit and materially injure her health.

TWO NEW PARISIAN AFTERNOON DRESSES—Designed by Mlle. Nelly Martyle, of Paris.

Some Cold Coffee Desserts

Sometimes the housewife finds that a quantity of coffee is among the leftovers, and hesitates as to the best method of utilising it advantageously. Here are a few recipes for desserts in which coffee forms the flavouring.

Coffee Charlotte Russe.—Soak half a box of gelatine in half a cupful of cold water for ten minutes and then dissolve by standing it over hot water. To one pint of very thick double cream that has stood for twenty-four hours in the ice chest, add a small cupful of powdered sugar and with an egg beater or cream whip beat until solid. Flavour the cream quite strongly with strained, strong coffee and beat steadily, adding very gradually the strained gelatine and the stiffly whipped whites of two eggs. Beat again until the mixture will hold its form and pour into a glass dish that has been lined with lady fingers. Dust the top thickly with crushed macaroon crumbs and place on the ice for one hour before serving.

Coffee Fritters. — Cut some stale whole wheat bread into neat but rather thick slices and remove the crusts. Then soak the slices lightly in strong black coffee and drain. Beat the yolks of one or two eggs (according to the amount of fritters you intend to make), flavour with a pinch of salt, a saltspoonful of ground cinnamon, and mix in a teaspoonful of powdered sugar. Brush over the slices of the drained bread with the egg mixture and fry in deep, hot fat to a golden brown. Lift them out, drain for a moment on brown paper and serve on a folded napkin, dusted with powdered sugar. These fritters, when properly made, should be covered with a rich, crisp crust while the inside is slightly moist and quite strong with the coffee flavouring.

Frozen Coffee.—Prepare a thick sugar syrup by boiling together a quart of water and two large cupfuls of sugar for fifteen minutes. Skim the syrup carefully; add a large cupful of the strongest black coffee and a tablespoonful of gelatine that has been softened in a little cold water. Cool and strain when the gelatine is dissolved, stir in the stiffly whipped whites of two eggs, and freeze to the consistency of soft snow. Serve in thin, tall glasses, each portion capped with a tablespoonful of sweetened whipped cream.

CHILD'S FONDNESS FOR SUGAR

Sugar in some form or other is in nearly all foods. Milk, the food of the baby and child, and the staff on which the young being leans for strength and support during its early life, contains sugar as one of the three important elements.

Not only is sugar contained in milk, but it is found in our vegetables, meat, fowls.

Since there is a widespread prevalence of sugar in the tissues of the animal body, the "sweet tooth" is not a surprise. It is necessary. The fact that children crave sugar or sweets, to a thinking mother, should mean something. An instinct that has come down through thousands of years, unaltered, should have an important place in our plan. A child likes sugar just as it likes air, sunlight, play and sleep, and this desire has "Nature, the good old nurse," back of it. It should not be ignored.

The mother who has an idea that because children like sugar it must be bad for them, is greatly mistaken. Of course the danger of excess is always present. A child may eat too much sugar, as in many cases it may stay too long in the bathtub. It may be out too long in the sun and fresh air, but no intelligent mother is going to deprive her child of baths, sun, air. Why should the ban be placed on sugar?

A craving for candy is due to sugar starvation. See that the child gets sugar in other forms in its food. The unnatural appetite will be modified considerably. If a child is given plenty of sugar on its cereal, bread and butter puddings and a regular amount of good, simple cake and fruits, he will not sell his little soul for candy.

Sugar is a carbohydrate and is one of the three great foods without which the human being cannot exist.

It has high power for muscular energy, and can be rapidly absorbed and burnd up in this bodily engine of ours. Great specialists have found that fatigue in both animals and men is rapidly counteracted if pure sugar is eaten. Very tired persons who have no appetite for most food keep appetite for sugar.

One thing which has been acknowledged as a scientific fact is that the larger the amount of sugar or sugar foods to an army or to an individual the smaller the craving for alcohol.

Look to the sugar or sugar food in the child's diet.

New Method of Reducing Fat

Good News From Paris.

A recent item from Paris informs us that the American method of producing the "slim figure," is meeting with astonishing success. This system, which has made a wonderful impression over there, is the Marmola Prescription method of reducing fat. It is said by many that we have nothing better in this country. Any one desiring to reduce the excess flesh, without a day without injury to the health, the causing of wrinkles, the use of exercising or dieting, or interference with one's meals is a mighty important and useful addition to civilization's conveniences. Just such a catalogue of good results, however, follow the use of these genuine, scientific and economical little fat reducers. We say economical because Marmola Prescription Tablets (made in accordance with the famous prescription) can be obtained of any druggist or the Marmola Co., Farmer Bldg., Detroit, Mich., for seventy-five cents the large case, which is a decidedly economical price considering the number of tablets each case contains.

NOTES OF THE FASHIONS

There is certainly no lack of extreme models among those displayed in the most fashionable shops this fall. Yet, after all, comparatively few women, even among the wealthy, are even seen wearng the most extreme styles. These fantastic creations are affected chiefly by women who "don't care" so long as they create a sensation.

One of the new ideas in skirts is the bustle effect, which is carried out on evening gowns by the use of draperies and bows placed directly in the back. The hoop effect is achieved by means of a three-tiered skirt, with the edges bound in ribbon concealing feather boning.

Brilliant colours are used this autumn but they are smoky. That seems to be the only word to describe the dull haze that has been imparted to their surface by the dyers. Purple yellow, red and bright blue have a softening of tone that is remarkably well done and carries the conviction that colours can be worn and brilliantly combined if one imparts a certain look of age to them. This smoky tone is especially apparent in the new blues and purples.

The new coats with waistcoats, which Paquin, Bernard and other famous designers have shown this autumn, promise to be decidedly popular, and in most cases they are rather becoming. The backs of these new coats are excessively long-waisted and they have no belt, which is an innovation in this month's fashions. The peplum is laid into two or more wide side pleats that spring out and flare from the body because they are unstitched. They start at the end of the long waisted line, several inches from each side of the middle. The fronts, which are cut away, are ful enough to ripple at the hem, as they reach the back, and they give a flat effect to the figure in the front, although even the long waistcoats ripple at the hem. This is probably due to the influence of the minaret tunic, so fashionable at the present time. The absence of revers on some of the new coats is emphasized.

One of the smartest things in the line of waistcoats is one of bright sulphur yellow peau de chamois, which, of course, resembles chamois skin. This is fastened in a straight line from a low waist to the chin, with buttons of gun metal, and the loose, rolling collar stands higher than the coat and frames the face. There are small pockets on each side. Such waistcoats made of duvetyn, velvet or corduroy are unusually good for cold climates.

The velvets, plushes, duvetyns and wool velours, combined with fur trimmings and fancy waistcoats, make the suits this fall very elegant. Owing to the heavy texture of even the finest velvets, sheer materials, are used in the waist portion, being more suited to the average indoor temperature. These dresses designed particularly to street wear, however, have the waist of velvet.

Fur trimmings are not only used on street suits of velvet, but also on velvet evening and reception gowns. The heavy texture of the velvet is very favourable to long lines, and for this reason tunics are not used on velvet evening gowns. When a short drapery is desired, tunics of tulle, chiffon or lace are arranged over the long draperies. The most popular weaves for dressy suits are the embossed and moire velvets. They are used in combination with satin, crepe meteor, panne velvet and moire silk. For practical use coat suits of velvet are trimmed with chincilla, squirrel, fox, or skunk.

As a refreshing change from white waists, the black lace waist, usually in Chantilly, is made over flesh colour or white lining, which will give equally good service with a newer style. They are just as suited as white waists for wear with a suit of any colour. There is a great variety of styles in these waists, some having the foundation of net, chiffon, or lace in white, with the black Chantilly lace in bolero or jacket arrangement, with the lower section of the sleeves and the front of the waist in white.

Velvet is much used in combination with fur, and velvet muffs edged with fur bid fair to prove as popular as muffs edged with ruffles of velvet. One effective velvet trimming takes the form of a velvet chain, made of loops of velvet cord, formed by rolling a two-inch or three-inch strip of velvet. The loops of the chain measure two or three inches across. These chains are festooned across the face of the muff or are used to finish collars.

THE FIRST SANDWICH.

The first sandwich, so-called, was made of two large slabs of bread with a slice of ham between, and was devoured by the fourth Earl of Sandwich, who was born 195 years ago on November 3, 1719. This earl, says an exchange, like most of the English nobles of that time, was devoted to games of chance, and it was this prediction that was responsible for the application of the name to the sandwich. When the stakes ran high the bolted earl was unable to tear himself away from the gaming table, and it was his custom to order servants to bring his slices of bread and ham. Other devotees of the goddess of luck followed his example, and gave the name of "sandwich" to the combination for bread and meat. The passion for gambling is no longer so prevalent as in the Earl of Sandwich's day, but the rush and hurry of modern life have given the sandwich a wide popularity who would "get filled quick", at the expense of digestion and health. The noble who invented the sandwich was long first lord of the admiralty, and held other high positions in the English Government.

The Matter with Aphrodite.

The extent to which the modern child is educated in matters of hygiene appears from a recent episode in a Boston school:

The class had visited the art museum and the teacher wished to learn what the children had observed, and how they were impressed. The subject at the moment was the exquisite head of Aphrodite, one of the chief treasures of the museum. A little boy who frantically waved his hand was called upon. He announced, triumphantly:

"I noticed she had adenoids!"

"Why, Peter," exclaimed the shocked teacher, "what do you mean?"

"She keeps her mouth open all the time," was the reply.

APOSTLE OF PEACE.

Langdon-Davies Is an Exponent of the Angell School.

Mr. Langdon-Davies, who has just concluded a ten days' visit to Canada, with the record of an exceptionally large number of addresses delivered one after the other to various audiences and societies in Toronto, Montreal, and Hamilton, is a young man, thirty-six years of age, and one who has left behind him a favorable impression on all those with whom he has come into contact.

He is an interesting man for more than one reason. For example, he is a disciple and colleague of the famous Norman Angell, the author of "The Great Illusion," embodying the thesis that war, even from an economic and material aspect, does not benefit the victor, and that armed aggression is therefore futile. Mr. Langdon-Davies is on a three months' tour of America, preaching the doctrines of anti-militarism, advanced by the "Little Man." This is the term of pride and endearment with which the friends of Norman Angell refer to the world-famous peace advocate. Angell is small of stature, but colossal in intellect.

Quite apart from his relation to his illustrious chief, however, Langdon-Davies is an attractive personality in himself, and by his own right. He is a brilliant graduate of Cambridge University, and is a man of active, effective energy, of charming disposition, and of polished, persuasive eloquence. He is equally at home in discussing the problems of peace and international relations at gatherings of students, labor men, or Canadian Clubs.

Before joining Norman Angell and the Garton Peace Foundation, Mr. Langdon-Davies was a tutor in London. His pupils were not all the ordinary, every day English people who usually make a tutor's life rather uneventful. Within a couple of years he had under his charge several Parsees, a number of sons of Indian rajahs, and quite a generous installment of Chinese, in addition to the heirs of Prussian nobles, and Parisian aristocrats. This incident illustrates in rather a fresh outlook the cosmopolitan nature of English education and learning. Langdon-Davies remarks on the deep responsibility involved in tutoring and supervising these foreigners, especially those from India and the Orient. Strangers in a strange land, and amid a civilization quite different from their own, they pass through quite a normal and intellectual crisis.

Mr. Langdon-Davies tells a story, which shows the traditional habit of the Chinaman, in his "lackadaisical" manner, and his refusal to become excited or alert. While sitting in his study one day, this tutor heard the door open and someone come in quietly. After a moment's delay, he looked up and saw three young Chinamen standing in a row before the desk. One of them was a pupil Langdon-Davies had tutored a year before, who had returned to China. Without writing a line or letting the tutor know in any way, he had returned to England, and had brought with him two of his companions, who also had a thirst for western education and western pleasures. The tutor's time might have been completely taken up, and their coming might have been embarrassing to him and untimely for themselves, but they had evidently not thought it worth while to make any preliminary arrangements, and had left China and went to England, entirely unheralded.

The Stone Age.

The stone age still exists among some of the islanders of the south Pacific and the Eskimos of the extreme north as well as in a few other spots here and there on earth. The progress of early culture in Europe seems to have been from the south and east toward the north and west, so that the emergence of the different peoples from their age of stone was accomplished much earlier in southern and eastern Europe than in the north and west. But, while the stone age of different areas is thus not necessarily synchronous, it seems to be true of all European areas that this is the earliest condition in which man has appeared upon them. This holds for all other areas as well, evidences of the stone age having been fully established in India, China, Japan, Africa and the Americas.

He Who Spares Vice.

He who spares vice or apologizes for it in the places of the world wrongs virtue in every place. He helps the good to look upon it leniently, and thus to lower the tone of morality within themselves. He assists the bad to make it respectable, and thus to give the warrant and license in its imitation, and even in its emulation. He discourages virtue in the humble and poor—the great masses, who form the real basis of society, and upon whose goodness and truth the state must rely for its character before the world and its stability in the world.—Dr. J. PARIS DOCTOR SAYS

Dandruff, Falling Hair Are Caused by a Microbe—Dr. Sangerbond Proves It

Dr. Sangerbond is the leading dermatologist of France.

To prove his theory that germs cause dandruff, he infected a guinea pig with these microbes and in a short time the hair from the animal's body disappeared.

Parisian Sage, which can now be obtained all over Canada, has an immense sale and is highly recommended by physicians in all parts of the world.

It is just because it is the only prescription or hair tonic that is absolutely sure to kill the dandruff germ.

It is guaranteed to cure dandruff, stop falling hair or itching scalp in two weeks or money back.

In warm weather it keeps the scalp clean and cool and free from obnoxious odours. Parisian Sage is a pleasant and dainty hair dressing that will put a bewitching charm and lustre into faded and lifeless hair in one week. It is distressing for any woman to have dull, unattractive hair and women so unfortunate should use Parisian Sage.

Parisian Sage comes in large 50-cent bottles at the Warne Drug Co., and is sold by leading druggists everywhere. "The Girl with the Auburn Hair" is on every bottle.

THE GIRLS' HOSTEL.

Ottawa Women Doing a Great Work For the Friendless.

The amelioration of the condition of the working girl has occupied the time and attention of philanthropists for some years now. The fight for a minimum wage, for decent lodging at lowest rate, and for a reasonable proportion of play after working hours, is agitating all the women's clubs today. Anyone who has a practical idea for the treatment of women who are obliged to earn their daily bread may be sure of sympathy and a hearing. So when the Women's Hostel and Travelers' Aid Society was suggested, it received immediate support from thinking Ottawans.

The Travelers' Aid Society had its origin at a small meeting held Nov. 30th, 1909, at the Working Girls' Home, for the purpose of providing comfortable lodging for shop girls at lowest possible cost and at the same time surrounding them with a wholesome, homelike, and Christian atmosphere. The experience of those attending the meeting showed that often a girl's worst crime was poverty, and when the struggle for respectability became too great, she succumbed to the temptations with which she was daily beset.

At the time of the establishment of the Working Girls' Home, no work of a charitable nature was carried on in the east end of Ottawa. The King's Daughters and Y. W. C. A. took care of a good many girls whose wages were small, but there was need for another place where they could secure comfortable lodging and board. The Girls' Home was opened, where lodging was given for $2.25 a week, transients' meals and beds at 15c. each if the girl's wage did not exceed $5 a week. Creed or nationality was immaterial; a girl's necessity was her only passport.

As is the case in every philanthropic effort, success made for broader work, and the Travelers' Aid grew out of the Working Girls' Home. While only three years in existence, the reports show an almost unlooked-for progress. During the first year 272 girls were brought from the stations to the Home; this year only 126 were taken in charge. This does not mean a falling off in the work—quite the reverse. It shows that the officers of the society are so vigilant that there are fewer women loitering about the stations, which are the meeting-places of innocence and vice; that there is less activity in the white slave traffic, and that the Travelers' Aid is doing noble and efficient police preventive work. At the Union Station, both day and night, trains are met; at the Central Station day trains only, although there is urgent necessity for having "the lady with the white badge," as one frightened country girl described the officer on duty, at night there, also. Financial stringency is the only curb, and it is earnestly hoped that with the appointment of two women to the Ottawa police force—Miss Campbell and Mrs. Cheney—this need will be met. Mrs. Cheney is now on night duty at the Union Station, and Miss Campbell meets all day trains at the Central, besids doing work for delinquet girls in the police court.

The Women's Hostel was a still further enlargement of the work. Its object is to bring out girls from the old country for domestic service, and Ottawa is not the only city in the Dominion benefitting by the work of the Hostel. Girls are sent to many different points. They are also received at the Hostel from different cities and institutions, such as the Miss Fitzgibbon hostel, Toronto; the Francis Guild, Montreal; Girls' Friendly Association, the Salvation Army, and others. — Canadian Courier.

SANE AND SENSIBLE.

A Project Which Is Arousing Widespread and Favorable Comment.

Once more rural England is to be rejuvenated, inspired and informed. Under the auspices of the Woman's Imperial Health Association, the now famous Florence Nightingale caravan has started on its yearly trip throughout the country districts conducting a health crusade in the form of a lecture tour.

On former tours the caravan has been so successful that its fame has gone abroad. Germany has become interested in the movement and is planning similar caravans under the auspices of a Juvenile Health Association.

The Florence Nightingale caravan is a real caravan. It is a large wagon, drawn by two powerful horses. This year it is in charge of Miss Janet St. Clair, a nurse, who preaches the gospel of an open air existence. She is practicing this creed, too, for she gives all of her lectures out of doors, declining to hold them in stuffy halls. Miss St. Clair carries a motion picture machine, with full apparatus, with her. She drives to the public square or most central point of the small towns and then delivers her lectures. Among her health commandments are the following:

Keep the windows open day and night.

Take daily exercises in the open air and in the sunshine when possible.

Always laugh when you can. Laughter is a cheap medicine.

Wash the whole body at least twice a week. A daily bath is better.

Drink plenty of good water and eat only wholesome food.

All of Miss St Clair's preachings are equally sane and sensible and will make for normal health, if followed. Fathers and mothers are listening to the daily lectures and are impressed enough to follow them. She is showing them the easiest road to health and happiness and the people are profiting by her advice.

Miss St. Clair is also conducting the juvenile health crusade.

"Catch them when they are young," is the motto of the crusade.

"If children are taught to realize the importance of health and are taught in an easy and in an interesting manner to achieve and retain health," she says, "as they grow older they will take care of themselves as a matter of course. This is the best way to cause an interest in the 'business of being healthy'."

That national awakening to the importance of the anti-tuberculosis campaign in Canada is spreading by leaps and bounds, is shown in the fact that over a thousand congregations of all creeds and denominations will observe Tuberculosis Sunday on November 30th. In reply to its circulars announcing the date, the executive of the National Sanitarium Association is in receipt of letters from clergymen announcing their intention of giving up at least one service in the day to the aid of the movement in behalf of the penniless victims of the white plague throughout Canada. Not less gratifying to the promoters of the propaganda is the fact that the scheme for a special Sunday has been given the hearty endorsation of several ministerial associations and other clerical bodies, while prominent men in public and private life have given personal approval of the idea.

For the most part the ministers will devote their sermons to the subject, going into the necessity of the work and the achievements thus far in the battle with consumption and outlining the duty of the citizen with regard both to the sufferer and to the public, to whom the uncared-for victim is so great a menace. In some cases, well known workers in the anti-tuberculosis cause will occupy the pulpits, while in many others the pastor's address will be supplemented by short talks from those who have this cause most at heart.

The association is making a purely educational campaign on Tuberculosis Sunday and no collections are being taken for the crusade.

An oxygen respiration apparatus for aviators to enable them to fly to high altitudes in safety has been invented.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

Keshiono's Garden

"It Must Be Fate."

By CLARISSA MACKIE

The curio seller who sits at the crossing of the Two Roads in Tokyo grinned amiably up into Terry Preston's sunburned face.

"If the honorable lord desires to see delightful flowers it would be much recommended that he pay call visit upon the garden of Keshiono."

"Where is this wonderful garden?" inquired Terry, to whom all parts of Tokyo were alike, to whom all the world was flat and stale and uninteresting now that Dulcie Morse had jilted him and married Oscar Converse.

The man pointed along the upper road.

"If the honorable lord will follow that road until he comes to a red gate in the bamboo hedge he will find beyond the gate a path that will lead him straight to the garden. Many have found happiness there," he added, with a sly glance at Terry's moody face.

"Happiness?" jeered Terry. "Pray, tell me how happiness may be found in a garden."

"Happiness," mused the curio dealer, fanning himself gently, "consists in being with those we love—in the case of a lover, with the particular beloved one. The story goes that many centuries ago a beautiful maiden named Keshiono lost her lover through a quarrel, and to console herself she made this beautiful flower garden The gods pitied her and sent her lover wandering into the garden, and when he saw Keshiono flitting among the iris beds he fell on his knees and begged forgiveness. They were married and lived long and happily in a house which has long crumbled to ruin When they died they were changed into two beautiful plum trees that guard the inner gate. Ever since then the garden has been noted for bringing happiness to disconsolate lovers. One has only to wander there."

Terry grinned in spite of himself at the man's fluency. "You have told the story many times?" he questioned as he moved away.

"And have witnessed the desired to be end," came back the answer promptly, and he deftly caught the coin that came spinning toward him from Terry's hand.

SHILOH

quickly stops coughs, cures colds, and heals the throat and lungs. 25 cents.

A laughing red haired youth came swiftly from the upper road and paused by the curio seller's booth.

"You're a cheerful liar!" he declared.

"The garden is only for the disconsolate lover," chided the curio dealer sedately as he pocketed his accuser's liberal tip. "The honorable lord is too insanely cheerful to be in need of the pity of the gods."

"Thanks. I suppose that's a compliment," grinned the other as he went on to catch a trolley car. "But you got us coming or going, eh, Togo?"

"Excuse. Name is not Togo, but is Yunisho. Good day, honorable sir. Get them coming or going. That sounds funny English," he mused.

Terry Preston sauntered along the upper road under the arching trees. The shaded footpath rambled beside a high hedge of bamboos, whose green feathery tops rustled pleasantly in the light breeze.

Now a well defined path wandered idly between green hedges until he reached a second gate that swung wide open. On either side of this gate was a beautiful plum tree, fresh in its May bloom of pink and white. These trees represented the beautiful Keshiono and her loving husband.

Terry involuntarily removed his straw hat as he passed under the trees, and he blushed a little at the surrender to sentiment that the little act implied.

"Bosh!" he muttered.

Beyond the gate he found the garden, a charming mixture of old and new. There were ancient corners where dark cryptomerias made a dim green shade. Here one came upon stone lanterns green with years and perhaps a summer house crushed in the deathlike grip of a giant wistaria vine that might be a century old, so heavy was its trunk.

Birds sang in the trees, and the waterfalls tinkled musically. It was very beautiful and deliciously still.

Terry found an old stone seat half hidden in a group of lovely oleanders in the older part of the garden. Surely this spot must have been the garden of Keshiono as it was in the old days.

Women's voices broke the quiet.

"Dear Aunt Ophelia," said the girl's sweet tones, "is it not perfectly wonderful?"

"It is. It is hardly to be believed, May," responded the older woman eagerly. "But look; see if that is not the colonel yonder! See, he is looking at the goldfish in the pool! Mark the sad droop to his shoulders in spite of his military training. Ah, but I do regret my cruelty to him!" she sighed.

Terry got up. He was feeling very uncomfortable now, but before he could make his presence known the girl had spoken quickly, decisively:

"Now, Aunt Ophelia, you know this is the garden of reunited lovers, and who knows what may happen? You look sweet, dear; indeed you do! Now just walk along this p... and you are sure to meet the colonel, and you have my blessing. He's a perfect dear!" She laughed as her aunt moved majestically away in the direction of the stout, white clad gentleman gazing into a flab pool in a distant part of the grounds.

The girl came laughing out of the sunlight and flung herself in a corner of the stone seat, which sat in deep shadow.

She uttered a startled cry as she saw Terry Preston standing there, surprised and embarrassed, in his gray tweed clothes, with his straw hat in his hand.

"Ah, I didn't know any one was here," she cried breathlessly.

"I was about to go," murmured Terry, with a reluctant glance at the stone seat.

"Pray do not let me drive you away, I shall go on presently." The girl settled herself in the corner, tipped her sunshade over her face to obscure it and opened a guidebook.

Terry hesitated a moment and then sat down, his cigarette still between his fingers. He glanced at the girl and saw only the white dress with the red book held open by pretty white fingers. He noted that she wore on her right hand a turquoise ring, and on her left, as she turned the pages, he saw a small ring on her little finger.

The rest of her charming person was quite concealed by the white linen parasol.

Presently there came a sneeze from under the parasol.

"I beg your pardon; I hope my smoking has not annoyed you. Really I forgot to ask you if you minded," apologized the discomfited Terry.

The parasol went over her shoulders and he looked into a pair of beautiful gray eyes, black lashed and drooping at the outer corners. Such a rose tinted skin, such a dainty nose, such a kissable mouth with dimpled corners, such a firm white chin, such seashell ears peeping out from the midst of black hair!

Truly she was marvelously beautiful. She didn't look as though she would throw a fellow over because she had found a richer man. She lacked that little hard look in the eyes that marred Dulcie Morse's perfect beauty, and somehow she had Dulcie "beat a mile," in Terry's self expressed opinion

Treason, pure treason, all this.

"I don't object to the smoke at all," said the girl pleasantly, then craning her pretty neck as she looked toward the spot where her aunt had disappeared.

"I wonder"— she was beginning when Terry interrupted her.

"They are coming now," he said—"your aunt and the colonel."

"Together?" she asked excitedly.

"Yes," and Terry craned his neck, eager to report to his fair companion any items of interest.

"Do they appear to be engaged"— she was beginning when again he broke in:

"Why, yes, you might think so. He's got his arm around her."

"His arm around Ophelia?" The girl arose and laughed tenderly. "You have surprised me, sir. I was going to ask if they were engaged in amicable conversation, but from what you say I am sure they must be! Perhaps I better explain that my aunt had a very unhappy love affair in her youth, and it just happened that we were directed to this garden of Keshiono. You have heard the story of how many lovers have found happiness here?" She looked at him with clear, beautiful eyes, in which there was no trace of coquetry.

"I have been told that story," said Terry, blushing deeply.

"If ever I was in trouble of that sort I should come here," observed the girl dreamily. Terry saw her eyes were fixed on the approaching couple, the handsome military man and the blooming middle aged woman, and he felt a swift pang of jealousy, the first dart of the little god.

"I hope you may never have to come," he said awkwardly. And then he added as the reunited lovers were almost upon them, "I hope you don't mind if I stay and congratulate them, for, you see, Colonel Preston is my uncle, and we are traveling together, and some day we may be cousins-in-law! I am Terry Preston."

The girl gave him her hand, and at that instant the colonel and Aunt Ophelia came upon them, and both started with surprise.

"Terry, you rascal!" cried the colonel, slapping his nephew on one broad shoulder.

"May—why, my dear, you don't mean to say—why, I didn't know there was anybody!" faltered Aunt Ophelia, her sweet eyes still dim with stirring of old emotions.

May blushed beautifully, and Terry went scarlet, but their eyes had met in one swift flash of mutual understanding, and each one knew that the garden of Keshiono had worked a magic spell upon them both that must never be broken.

So the curio dealer at the crossing of the Two Roads was not surprised when four people passed him, coming from the garden of Keshiono. There was an elderly couple with shining, happy eyes, and the man tossed him a wad of paper money.

There was a young couple, the man smiling tenderly down at the girl, whose eyes were half veiled to hide the awakening of love in their beautiful depths. Terry flung him a golden coin, and they all passed out of sight.

The curio dealer smiled contentedly and folded his slim, brown hands over the money.

"I get them coming, and I get them going, and they come back happy! There must be something in that garden after all!"

DOGS OF THE WILD

Australian Dingoes or Wild Dogs Easily Domesticated

Although the highest authorities agree in stating that the dingo was at some remote period introduced into Australia, and that it subsequently reverted to a wild state—like the "wild" horses of the Andes—there are still those who regard this dog as one of the original wild dogs from which our domestic dogs are descended. In any case, the breed is one of very great antiquity, and therefore of the highest interest to all dog lovers.

The dingo is about the size of a collie and much resembles a wolf in appearance and habits, but he is much more easily tamed. Those who know him best are warm in his praise, declaring that the dog may not merely be tamed, but is capable of readily acquiring useful habits, and of becoming a good companion. Even his voice alters as he comes under the influence of domestication. In course of time he learns to bark, an accomplishment unknown to the dingo of the wild.

The Zoo is Popular

Only the impossibility of distributing the Zoo and its inhabitants throughout London has prevented the huge "Noah's Ark" in Regent's Park becoming the most popular institution in London. It is situated in a district that is easy of access only to people living in the neighborhood. The people of London, that "huge wen" on the face of the globe—cannot all live in the northern division or close to Regent's Park. Thousands who would gladly spend a day in the company of the limping and unwieldy elephant, the cheerful chimpanzee, or the "humpy" camel—it seems unfair to trifle with its infliction—are obliged to forsake these joys. The Zoo is too far away for them, except on the rare occasions when they can snatch a day's respite from work. It is nevertheless, interesting to note that over 880,000 people visited the famous garden of wild and mild beasts in a year.

I Will Stake This Medicine Against Your Time

A Few Days Will Be Sufficient to Prove its Value in Your Disease

A few minutes of your time for a few days and I will demonstrate to you, without expense to yourself, that I have a medicine that drives Uric Acid poison from the system and by so doing conquers kidney trouble, bladder trouble and rheumatism. I don't ask you to take my word for it, but simply want you to let me send you some of this medicine so that you can use it personally

I am trying to convince sufferers from these diseases that I have something far better than the usual run of remedies, treatments and such things, and the only way I can demonstrate that fact is to go to the expense of compounding the medicine and sending it out free of charge. This I am glad to do for any sufferer who will take the time to write me. Understand, I will not send you a valueless "sample, proof or test treatment," nor will I send you a package of medicine and say that you can use some of it and pay for the rest, but I will send you a supply free of charge and you will not be asked to pay for this gift nor will you be under any obligations.

All I want to know is that you have a disease for which my medicine is intended, as it is not a "cure-all," and I give herewith some of the leading symptoms of kidney, bladder and rheumatic trouble. If you notice one or more of these symptoms you need this medicine, and I will be glad to send you some of it if you will write me the numbers of the symptoms you have give your age, and your name and address. My address is Dr. T. Frank Lynott, 56 Franklin Building, Toronto, Ont. You promise me nothing; you pay me nothing for it. All I ask, so there shall be no mistake, is that you send me the numbers of your symptoms or a description in your own words and that you take the medicine according to the directions I send you. It is my way of getting publicity for my medicine so that it will become widely known.

You will agree when you have used it that it dissolves and drives out uric acid poison. It tones the kidneys so that they work in harmony with the bladder. It strengthens the bladder so that frequent desire to urinate and other urinary disorders are banished. It stops rheumatic aches and pains immediately. It dissolves uric acid crystals so that back and muscles no longer ache and crooked joints quickly straighten out. It reconstructs the blood and nerves so that you soon feel healthier and stronger, sleep better and eat better and have energy throughout the day. It does all this and yet contains nothing injurious and is absolutely vouched for according to law.

Sufferers from these dreadful and dangerous diseases can surely afford to spend a few minutes each day for a few days to demonstrate to their own satisfaction if they are curable, especially when you who will send medicine free of charge to those who need it.

consider no expense is involved, and I willingly give you my time and my medicine. All any fair-minded afflicted person wants to know is if a certain thing will relieve HIM or HER, and here is an opportunity to find out without cost, obligation or important loss of time. THESE FEW DAYS may be the turning point in your life.

All who are interested enough to write me for the free medicine will also receive a copy of my large illustrated medical book which describes these diseases thoroughly. It is the largest book of the kind ever written for free distribution and a new edition is just being printed. I will also write you a letter of instructions and medical advice that should be of great help to you; but in order to do this I must know that you need my medicine. Write me the numbers of the symptoms that trouble you, and your age, and I will promptly carry out my promises. Show an inclination to get well and write me, and I will gladly send you a supply free.

MAN KILLS WIFE.

Then Son Turns on Father and Crushes His Skull.

CLEVELAND, O., Nov. 15.—Lewis Van Luven, aged 68, a farmer living at Harpersfield, near Geneva, Ohio, shot and instantly killed his wife late yesterday and then was killed by his son, Matthew, aged 17, in self-defence. Young Van Luven surrendered to the police.

According to the story told the police by the boy and his 19-year-old sister, their mother was killed while sitting in the kitchen. The elder Van Luven fired almost point blank at her and then attempted to kill the boy and his sister. The boy succeeded in tearing the shotgun away from his father and then brought down the heavy stock of the weapon on his father's head, fracturing his skull.

Lioness Loose In School.

KOESLIN, Pomerania, Germany, Nov. 14.—A young lioness, while on exhibition before the boys of a local classical school here yesterday, escaped and seriously injured a seven-year-old school boy and caused a panic among the other pupils. The keeper was leading the lioness through the ranks of the boys, some of whom took fright and ran. The lioness broke from its keeper's hold and pursued the boys, felling one of them with a blow on the head. Some workmen in the grounds drove the animal away from the lad and it dashed into the school, where it was captured after an exciting chase.

Cause of Ferry Upset.

MONTREAL, Nov. 15. — Evidence yesterday morning submitted at the inquest into the deaths by drowning of the nine victims of the Lachine canal ferry disaster Wednesday evening, showed that George Mahorker who had charge of the craft, had practically no experience of rowing.

It was also shown that the passengers in the boat, which was overloaded, were standing up because the seats were wet. The accident occurred at the time the men were hurrying up from work.

A verdict of accidental death was brought in.

Ferdinand To Abdicate?

LONDON, Nov. 15.—The Daily Telegraph asserts that, despite official denials, King Ferdinand of Bulgaria will abdicate within a few months perhaps a few weeks. It says his downfall is due to the King having offended Russia by seeking Austria's assistance against Servia.

Killed By Explosion.

PORT COLBORNE, Nov. 15. — A man named John N. Bruce was killed at the steel plant yesterday afternoon by an explosion of the generator. Bruce was an Englishman and had been in this country for only a short time. He leaves a widow.

A 10-cent box from your druggist will keep your head clear, stomach sweet and your liver and bowels regular for months. Don't forget the children—their little insides need a gentle cleansing, too.

FLOUR FOR REDMOND.

Suffragette Decorates Nationalist and Wife—Birrell Interrupted.

NEWCASTLE, Eng., Nov. 15.—John Redmond, the Irish leader, and his wife, were attacked by a suffragette yesterday while on board a train at Durham. The suffragette entered the compartment where Mr. and Mrs. Redmond were seated, and, after declaring that the Irish leader had not done enough for the women of Ireland, struck him on the head and Mrs. Redmond on the back. She then scattered the contents of a bag of flour over Mr. and Mrs. Redmond. A train attendant forcibly ejected the woman from the train and handed her over to the police.

Mr. Redmond in a speech delivered in the town hall here last evening said that there was no demand, however extravagant or unreasonable that might be put forth on behalf of the Ulster Unionists which the Nationalists would not be ready to consider, so long as it was consistent with the principle of national self-government for Ireland.

Suffragette Threw Dead Cat.

LONDON, Nov. 15.—Viscount Haldane, the Lord High Chancellor, speaking at Edinburgh, and Augustine Birrell, Chief Secretary for Ireland, addressing an audience at Bristol, were subjected to suffragette disturbances last night. A dead cat thrown at Mr. Birrell set the meeting in an uproar, and when the offenders were ejected a general fight ensued

In his speech Mr. Birrell said it was hoped a settlement of the strike in Dublin would be speedily arranged He said the Government was placing all legitimate pressure upon the employers with that object in view.

RHEUMATISM AND BRIGHT'S DISEASE

Prof. Radleng Was Quickly Relieved of Both Afflictions by Using Rheuma

If you suffer from any form of Rheumatism, remember that RHEUMA goes to work quickly to remove the cause, not simply to relieve the distress, Many years' use has demonstrated that it goes to the seat of the disease and expels the poisonous matter through the natural channels—the kidneys, bowels, liver, and skin.

"For many years I was troubled with Rheumatism, also with Bright's Disease of the Kidneys. I suffered awfully. Tried many advertised remedies. After using your truly remarkable preparation, RHEUMA, I was fully cured."—Prof. C. J. Budlong, Sound View, Conn.

RHEUMA is guaranteed by Warne Drug Co., who sell it for 50 cents a bottle.

WHISTLED IN VAIN.

Goderich Signal Made No Reply to Wexford Declares Marine Man.

GODERICH, Nov. 15.—"After investigating, I am satisfied that the steamer Wexford, off the port, had been blowing her signals from two o'clock on the afternoon of Sunday until eight o'clock at night. During all that time the fog horn at Goderich had never sounded once." So said Captain W. J. Bassett, manager of the Western Steamship Co. of Toronto.

"If the fog whistle had blown during that time, my steamer, in all probability, would have been lost, but the poor boys might have been saved. I am not complaining of the loss of the boat, but of the loss of the crew."

Captain Bassett had intended going to Grand Bend yesterday on the tug Horton to see if others of the Wexford unfortunates had been washed ashore, but the sea was too turbulent. The tug could not go out.

WAS WALKING ARSENAL.

Wild West Method of Securing Drinks Is Rudely Checked.

TORONTO, Nov. 15.—Jail doctors will examine Harry Cruickshanks to find out whether there is something wrong with his head.

Armed with two revolvers, one 32 and the other 38 calibre, both loaded in every chamber, Cruickshanks went to the Woodbine Hotel last night and demanded a drink. As he was under the influence he was refused, and thereupon he drew his heavy artillery.

This got him the drink all right, and he left that hotel and went to the Palmer House. Here again he tried for a drink, and after a display of arms, got it. Then the police got him.

For Compulsory Education.

QUEBEC, Nov. 15.—There is every probability of the introduction at the present session of the Legislature of a bill providing for compulsory education in the provinces of both Protestant and Catholic children. Last session it will be recalled Dr. Finnie's bill making education compulsory for non-Catholic children was rejected on second reading by 62 votes to 6.

BODIES WASHED UP.

Ten Found Near Goderich Had Carruthers Lifebelts.

GODERICH, Nov. 15.—Lake Huron still continues to give up its dead, when yesterday morning eleven bodies were found by searchers, one being at Naftel's Point, five miles south of here, another probably from the steamer McGean. Ten bodies were later discovered between Amberly and Kintail, about 25 miles north of here all having life-preservers on bearing the name Carruthers.

The discovery of the bodies so far north must show that the boat was wrecked north of this point, and not south, as first reported.

The bodies will be brought here pending an inquest.

Captain Bassett, owner of the Wexford, is here and doing everything in his power to get all bodies looked after and identified.

He is at variance with the law regarding an inquest over the bodies at the different points where they are found.

He is trying to have all the coroners come here to this point, with all the bodies, and to have the inquest one. He speaks of taking the matter to the Attorney-General to allow this.

The report from Bayfield, that a boat containing thirteen men had drifted ashore, upon investigation is unfounded, although a 25-foot boat has been found about eight miles down the shore.

ANXIOUS TIMES FOR PARENTS

Children Often Seem Pining Away and Ordinary Medicine Does Not Help Them

The health of children between the ages of twelve and eighteen years, particularly in the case of girls, is a source of serious worry to nearly every mother. The growth and development takes so much of their strength that in many cases they actually seem to be going into a decline. The appetite is fickle, brightness gives way to depression; there are often serious headaches, fits of dizziness, or occasional fainting and a complaint of weariness at the slightest exertion. Ordinary medicines will not bring relief. The blood has become thin and watery, and the child must have something that will bring the blood back to its normal condition. At this stage no other medicine can equal Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Their whole mission is to make new blood, which reaches every part of the body, bringing back health, strength and energy. Mrs. James Harris, Port Rowan, Ont., says: "At the age of thirteen my daughter began to look very pale, and seemed listless and always tired. She didn ot take interest in her school work or in those amusements of girlhood. In fact she just seemed to drag herself about, complaining of always being tired; did not eat well, and did not sleep well at night. I took her to our doctor who said she was anaemic, and advised me to give her Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. She took the Pills for nearly two months, when she was as well and lively as any girl could be, gained nicely in weight, and has since enjoyed perfect health. I am quite sure that what the Pills did for my daughter they will do for other pale, weak girls. I have also used Dr. Williams' Pink Pills myself with the best results and can only speak of them in terms of greatest praise."

Sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

HUERTA IS WAVERING

His Friends Advise Him to Give Up Dictatorship

CONGRESS MEETS TO-DAY

MEXICO CITY, Nov. 15. — President Huerta's attitude towards the demands of the United States, that he make way for a new government, is that of being only half convinced, notwithstanding the fact that a few of his closest friends and political advisers are urging, although with due caution, that he accede.

The representatives of this element in the Cabinet conferred yesterday with Nelson O'Shaughnessy, the American charge d'affaires, but were given no assurances that President Wilson has unbent sufficiently to warrant hope that the negotiations will be reopened. In spite of this, however, those friends of Huerta who now are convinced that the United States Government is not bluffing, believe that will be able yet to bring about the desired changes in time to prevent a complete rupture of diplomatic relations. This conviction is based upon the fact that Washington as yet has not put into effect its implied threat to remove the embassy or announced any new course of action.

Huerta is said to-day to be considering his own elimination although this is always denied whenever the direct question is put to anyone connected with the Government.

To-day is the date fixed for the preliminary meeting of Congress, and this morning there appears to be no reason to believe that it will not convene, notwithstanding the unequivocal demand of the United States that it should not do so.

It has been represented to Huerta that the United States doubtless will regard this preliminary meeting as seriously as it would were it the formal day of opening, since it will indicate the intention of the Mexican Government to defy Washington in this regard.

Washington Hopeful.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 15.—Instructions were sent to Charge O'Shaughnessy last night, indicating to him the extent to which the United States Government will go in reopening the negotiations with those counsellors of Provisional President Huerta, who earlier in the day sought to renew the parleys.

The anxiety shown by these officials close to Gen. Huerta was regarded as a favorable sign by high officials here.

The position of the American Government, however, is that unless something is definitely promised by the Huerta officials the resumption of the negotiations would be fruitless.

Americans Advised To Leave.

MEXICO CITY, Nov. 15.—The proprietors of business houses here are ordering their employes to leave the capital and proceed to Vera Cruz.

Nelson O'Shaughnessy, the American charge d'affaires, refused last night to give information of any character concerning the situation between the United States and Mexico.

Recognized by Two More.

MEXICO CITY, Nov. 15.—Portugal and Bulgaria have been added to the list of countries whose Governments have given recognition to the Provisional Government of Gen. Huerta. Querido Moheno, the Mexican Minister for Foreign Affairs, yesterday announced that autograph letters from President Arriaga of Portugal and King Ferdinand of Bulgaria had been presented to President Huerta.

Gen. Huerta's counsellors, who have expressed themselves as being anxious to reopen negotiations between the Mexican Government and Washington, had received no intimation up till one o'clock yesterday afternoon of President Wilson's willingness. They still hope, however, that Charge d'Affaires O'Shaughnessy will be instructed to resume the conferences. Up to the hour mentioned, the counsellors of the Provisional President had received nothing definite from Gen. Huerta in the way of promises.

WILL LOSE MILLIONS.

Southern Planters Appeal For Intervention In Railway Strike.

NEW ORLEANS, Va., Nov. 15.—Except for two transcontinental passenger trains, one arriving and one leaving here yesterday, traffic on the Southern Pacific Railway in Louisiana is tied up by the strike of enginemen and trainmen. An embargo has been placed on freight and the road will not attempt to operate freight trains. All passenger trains but the two through trains have been annulled indefinitely.

With the loss of millions of dollars staring sugar and rice producers of Louisiana in the face because of the strike, business men here yesterday, through a committee, sent a long message to President Wilson appealing to him personally to intervene to help settle the strike. Cane producers are in the midst of harvesting a large crop.

Salvador Bank Failed.

LA LIBERTAD, Salvador, Nov. 15.—The Banco Nacional yesterday suspended payments. It is not connected with the Government in any way. The remaining banks have satisfied the Government regarding their stability and are absolved from the obligations to change their notes to silver during the next six months.

The economic situation of the country is excellent. The coffee crop will be heavy. No disturbances have taken place.

Boys To Be Enlisted.

OTTAWA, Nov. 15.—Militia orders announce that a limited number of boys will be included in the establishment of the Canadian Ordnance Corps, mainly for the purpose of being trained as clerks or armorers.

Boys may be granted the fifth rate of corps pay when 15 years of age, if considered by their commanding officers to be qualified to do the duty of a fifth grade clerk or fourth class artificer.

PIMPLES NEARLY COVERED FACE

Especially on Forehead and Chin. Ashamed to Go Out. Cuticura Soap and Ointment Cured in Month and a Half.

McMillan St., Oil City, Ont.—"My face was nearly covered with pimples, especially on my forehead and chin. The trouble began with pimples and blackheads and there were times I felt ashamed to go out. They were little red lumps and then festered and I squeezed the matter out.

"I rubbed on different remedies, ——— Saive said ——— Cream but they did no good. Then I saw the advertisement of Cuticura Soap and Ointment and sent for a sample. I got it and began using them and in a week's time I noticed a change. I used the remainder of Cuticura Soap and Ointment and one box of Cuticura Ointment from the drug store with the Cuticura Soap. In a month and a half the pimples and blackheads were gone and I am completely cured." (Signed) Miss Lydia McIlwain, May 23, '13.

A generation of mothers has found no soap so well suited for cleansing and purifying the skin and hair of infants and children as Cuticura Soap. Its absolute purity and refreshing fragrance alone are enough to recommend it above ordinary skin soaps, but there are added to these qualities delicate yet effective emollient properties, derived from Cuticura Ointment, which render it most valuable in overcoming a tendency to distressing eruptions and promoting a normal condition of skin and hair health. A single cake of Cuticura Soap and box of Cuticura Ointment are often sufficient when all else has failed. Sold by druggists and dealers everywhere. Liberal sample of each mailed free, with 32-p. Skin Book. Address post-card Potter Drug & Chem. Corp., Dept. D, Boston, U. S. A.

BURIED UNDER WALL.

Ten Workmen Crushed Beneath Collapsed Concrete.

CEDAR RAPIDS, Iowa, Nov. 15.—The rear of a seven-storey concrete building nearing completion yesterday collapsed, carrying with it fourteen men who were working on the roof slab. Four were taken from the ruins severely injured, and the others are believed to be buried beneath a mass of concrete and steel used in the reinforcement. Hundreds of men were working last night with axes and shovels, and with the aid of a big steam derrick, removing the debris in a search for the bodies.

The four men taken from the ruins were located soon after the building fell. They were pinned fast, but not buried, and their cries directed the rescuers.

PETERBOROUGH SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 15, 1913

LOCAL MASONS COMMEMORATE 50th ANNIVERSARY OF PETERBORO' LODGE--IT WAS A GALA NIGHT

Between Three and Four Hundred People Participate in the Event —Honour Conferred Upon Bro. J. I. Davidson, Who Has Been a Member of the Lodge Since Its Inception.

A RETROSPECT

Peterobrough and visiting Masons, together with their friends and a large representation of ladies, foregathered on Friday evening in the Masonic Hall at the corner of George and Simcoe Streets. The occasion was the fiftieth anniversary of the institution of Peterborough Lodge, Ancient, Free and Accepted Masons, No. 155, Grand Register of Canada. The event was favoured with the presence of the Most Worshipful Brother, W. D. McPherson of Toronto, Grand Master of the Grand Lodge of Ontario, and a member of the Provincial Legislature.

Sole Surviver.

A significant feature of the evening was the presentation by Bro. W. D. McPherson of a handsome charm to Bro. J. J. Davidson. The latter is the sole survivor of those who were concerned in the organization and institution of the lodge half a century ago. All others have passed away.

Bro. Davidson was proposed at a meeting held on March 6th, 1863. At this meeting propositions were also received from Robert Grant, James M. Dunn and John S. Peters. The last two were principal and teacher respectively of the local Grammar school. These candidates were received and initiated.

The Presentation.

"I have been commissioned by the officers and members of this lodge to present to you this token of recognition and esteem," said Bro. W. D. McPherson as he extended the hand of good fellowship to Bro. Davidson. The latter, upon whom the dignified cloak of old age has fallen, was assisted to the platform by W. Bro. W. R. G. Higgins. On one side of the charm is delineated the square, compass and mystic "G," all emblematic of the Masonic Order. On the other side has been inscribed the name of the worthy brother to whom it was presented.

A Sacred Heritage.

The presentation was prefaced with a brief address by Bro. W. D. McPherson, in which he repudiated the criticism that was perpetuated from time to time concerning the mystic rites of the order. "Some of the greatest forces known to the world are clothed in impenetratable mystery," said the speaker. He instanced the stars that travel through celestial space at a tremendous speed. These mysteries are guided by the unseen hand that instituted the world and established man thereon. A man, to become a member of the Masonic Order must possess qualities of good citizenship and must carry out the commandment of the Architect of the Universe. They must uphold the traditions and liberty that has been handed down as a sacred heritage by those who preceded them. "We are simply trustees of this grand and glorious heritage," said the speaker in conclusion.

50,000 Masons.

In the territory over which Bro. D. W. McPherson has jurisdiction, there are aproximately fifty-five thousand Masons in good standing. Between fifty-five and sixty per cent. of the members of both the Federal and Provincial Legislature are Masons.

Following the Grand Master's address, the appended programme was rendered by a galaxy of artists, all of whom were heartily encored:

Vocal Solo (selected)—Miss Allan.
Violin Solo, "Concerto" by De Beriot—Miss Mignon Telgmann.
Highland Fling—Miss Elsie Wright.
Accompanist, Miss Baird.
Vocal Solo—Mr. M. Park.

LOCAL MAN REMANDED

Jack Kelly and His Alleged Confederate Were Charged With Having Explosives in Their Possession

WILL INVESTIGATE

SASKATOON, Nov. 15.—The two alleged safeblowers, J. Scarth and Jack Kelly of Peterborough, who were arrested here last Wednesday, were arraigned before Magistrate Brown in the Police Court and charged with having in their possession explosives. They were not asked to plead, the deputy-chief requesting a continuation of the case until Nov. 18. The object of this remand, which was granted, is to enable the members of the Detective Department to secure all the evidence available in western Canada relating to the two men. From information so far received it appears that the prisoners are fairly well-known in many western cities. Inspector Gladdon of the Regina detective department, aftr seeing the two men, is inclined to believe that Scarth is one of the number who are known to have operated in Regina.

The police allege that Scarth practically admits having operated in Winnipeg, Regina, Moose Jaw, and Calgary. The police also claim he admits being implicated in the blowing of safes in Regina in the latter part of August. Photographs of the prisoners have been forwarded to practically every chief of police in western Canada with a letter asking for information in regard to the men.

LARGE AUDIENCE TO HEAR MRS. WELLS

First Woman to Act As Police Officer Will Lecture in the Collegiate Institute Hall.

HAS LECTURED EXTENSIVELY

On Thursday, Nov. 20th, the local Council of Women hope to have a large representative audience to meet Mrs. Wells in the Collegiate Institute Hall. The local Council has an enrolment of 29 affiliated societies, representing upwards of 500 women in this City.

The committee who have this matter in charge, feel that such a backing means a crowded house, and they appeal to all women whether connected or not with the Council to do their utmost to secure an audience of responsible citizens, very particularly the chosen few with a vote. The following extract has been culled from the Herald, Washington, D.C.:

"Mrs. Alice Stebbins Wells gave an address last night on "The Need of Police Women and Their Work." Commissioner Rudolph, chairman of the evening, introduced the speaker.

The necessity of women police officers was explained by Mrs. Wells. Women hesitate to go to a policeman for advice or help. This is easily understood, and it behoves every municipality to provide women officials who can render help in many ways whereman would be powerless. The police woman's work is largely preventive. Mrs. Wells is small, and we who heard her talk in a low sweet voice, would be apt to hazard a guess that she was a college professor or a litterateur."

DEPT. OF LABOUR REPORTS PRICES UP DURING OCTOBER

The Department of Labour index number of wholesale prices stood at 136.8 for October, 1913, as compared with 136.0 in September, and 135.0 for October last year. Corn, peas, Ontario barley, hay and bran were higher, but wheat, flaxseed, western oats and barley were lower. Cattle and beef were higher, but hogs and hog products continued to decline. All dairy products were higher except cheese. Fresh Canadian fruits and potatoes were lower. Record prices for jute and the highest price for cotton since 1911 raised the level of textiles. Copper, brass and lead were up, but steel, tin, quicksilver and silver were lower. Brooms were steeply up. Rope and raw rubber declined. In retail prices, meats, eggs, milk and butter were higher, but there was a general decline in potatoes as the crop came on the market. Beans, flour, rolled oats and sugar showed weaker tendencies, while evaporated apples and coal were upward. As above stated, the general effect of the month's changes was to send the level distinctly higher.

Pictures From Lake Huron of Storm's Havoc

THE STORM'S WORK NEAR GODERICH

Lake Huron's shores are strewn in many places with wreckage tossed up on the beach after the waves had toyed with the lake freighters and then crushed them between the moving forces of water. The lower picture shows coffins containing the bodies of sailors being carried away from shore.

CHURCHILL'S SPEECH NOT WELL RECEIVED

Report Says Liberals Do Not Like Naval Statement—The Daily News Attacks Armament Ring

MILKS TAX PAYERS

Special Wire to The Examiner.

LONDON, Eng., Nov. 15.—The more the Liberals discuss Winston Churchill's naval statement at the Guild Hall banquet, the less they like it. Party loyalty keeps most grumblers averse from publicity, but in party clubs and elsewhere there is much complaint. Men say that Churchill has never really shed his ancient Toryism and that his father who sacrificed his career for national economy, much better understood Liberal principles than his son.

There are many signs that the speech has been badly received in Germany and will be used as a weapon by th naval party and therefore an increased programme.

A. G. Gardiner, Editor of the Daily News, in a signed article published this morning, denounces the international armament ring, which, he declares, directly promotes panic agitation to obtain more orders. "It is a cosmopolitan business for milking the taxpayers. It uses panics as another trader uses advertisements. It has only a voracious appetite for dividends. It has reduced the Liberal party in this country to helplessness."

WORLD-WIDE INTEREST IN ST. GEORGE'S BAZAAR

The St. George's Bazaar is taking great form—almost exciting world-wide interest. The latest information is that, in addition to distinguished Canadians, who are taking an interest in it, the Marquis of Salisbury, the Earl of Derby, the Earl of Selborne, Lord Penrhyn and Rt. Hon. Lewis Harcourt, Secretary for the Colonies in the Asquith Cabinet, have given their patronage to the Bazaar and implemented their interest by substantial contributions. This is a condition unprecedented in connection with bazaars in Peterborough. The object of it appeals to the general citizenship—to meet the spiritual and moral needs of the fast-growing south of the city.

The Armouries have been secured for the occasion and the Band of the 57th Regiment has been permitted to perform the afternoon and evening of each day of the bazaar.

PARBOILED.

Mrs. Longwedde—Such a charming husband Mrs. Von Pickle has! So tender after ten years of marriage.

Mr. Longwedde—Quite natural! It would make a rhinocerous tender to be kept in hot water for ten years.

HAMMER AND TOMATO THROWN AT COURT

During the Trial of Rachel Pearce, a Suffragette who Was Sentenced to 18 Months

FIVE WOMEN IN TOILS

Special Wire to The Examiner.

LONDON, Eng., Nov. 15.—During the trial of Rachel Pearce, a suffragette, on a charge of arson, somebody threw a ripe tomato and also a hammer at Justice Lawrence. His Lordship dodged and the hammer smashed the glass of the prisoners' dock. The tomato bespattered him and several eminent King's counsel. They had to change their robes. Immediately the Court was cleared and five women were arrested. Rachel Pearce was convicted of arson in setting fire to a country mansion and sentenced to eighteen months' imprisonment.

MID-NOVEMBER BLOOM

The answer to the poet's question—"What so rare as a day in June?" has arrived. As rare and rarer, is a day in mid-November, when pansies and marigolds in full bloom, can be plucked en plein aire, as was done in a garden on Gilmour street, to-day—Nov. 15th. "White icicle" radishes of edible size were pulled at the same time.

STORES WILL BE RECONSTRUCED

Mr. J. R. Bell has taken out a building permit for the reconstruction of a number of stores on Hunter Street. The upper part of the buildings will be converted into apartments. The total cost of the work is estimated at $5,000.

Charles Whitred, alterations to dwelling at 123 James Street. Cost, $90.

Frederick Finnie, brick veneer house on Prince Street. Cost, $1,200.

S. A. Laplante, brick veneer dwelling at 192 Perry Street. Cost, $1,200.

Richard Lees, a garage at 514 Gilmour Street. Cost, $75.

R. W. F. Davidson, coal shed at Sherbrooke Street. Cost, $90.

MYSTERY SURROUNDS FINDING OF BODY

Conflicting Rumours in Regard to Death of William Zufelt—Inquest on Monday Night

EVIDENCES OF LIQUOR?

Examiner Special:

ROSENEATH, Nov. 15—The inquest into the death of William Zufelt, who was found dead on the highway near Burnley on Saturday last, will be resumed on Monday evening. The deceased was a married man, aged 44, and it is reported that the condition of the body when found has raised a question as to the cause of death. Nothing very definite can be learned as to how he met his end. It was reported that there were evidences of alcoholism, but Dr. Aylesworth would not make any statement, as he is to be a witness at the inquest. The news did not spread very rapidly and more or less mystery has been linked with the affair. It is not definitely known whether signs of violence were found on the body, but the report of an antimortem debauch has received some support. The whole matter will be aired on Monday at the coroner's enquiry. The liquor end of the story recalls rumours to the effect that the young man who was drowned in Rice Lake a week ago was not himself before he started for home.

WILL ATTEND TO LARKIN'S MEETING

Examiner Special:

LONDON, Eng., Nov. 15. — The government has arranged to handle James Larkin's demonstrations without gloves at Manchester, to-morrow, where he is scheduled to address workers to get a general strike in aid of the Dublin strikers.

Special police will be on hand and any attempts at sedition will bring about wholesale arrests. The Home office is determined that his recent release shall not be construed as a weakness of the government.

Hunters Got Thirteen Deer

The Eagle Lake Hunt Club are trekking southward from their hunting grounds and are expected to reach the city about seven o'clock to-night. They are bringing back with them thirteen fine specimen of deer, and are well satisfied with this season's hunt.

There are fourteen in the party, who came near bagging a deer for each member of the club that went north. With the party are A. Mitchell, H. Evans, C. Gunsolus, J. Leahy, J. Leary, A. Funner, and Mr. Carruthers.

The party when heard from were at Buckhorn.

TWO MORE VESSELS REGARDED AS LOST ON FINDING OF WRECKAGE AND ABSENCE OF DEFINITE NEWS

The "Jas. W. Watts" Not Heard From Since Sunday—"Bridgeport's" Wreckage Washed Up—The "Charles F. Price" Identified in an Unknown Wreck.

NEW BOATS TO BE BUILT

TORONTO, Nov. 15.—There were anxious enquiries at the newspaper offices to-day regarding the freighter "Jas. W. Watts," of Toronto, which was reported westbound at the Soo on Sunday, and has not been heard of since. She carried twenty men, and was about a 400-feet boat.

MONTREAL, Nov. 15.—The Dominion Coal Co. this morning abandoned all hopes for the steamer "Bridgeport" when a report was received of its wreckage being thrown up on Bird Rock Island. She carried a crew of forty-two, not one of whom survived, as far as is known. She sailed from Sydney, C.B., November 1st, with ten thousand tons of coal.

The "Price" Identified.

SARNIA, Ont., Nov. 15.—Word from Port Huron this morning says that the mystery ship upturned in Lake Huron near here, has been definitely identified by a diver this morning as the "Charles F. Price."

To Build New Ships.

TORONTO, Nov. 15.—According to the officials of the St. Lawrence and Chicago Navigation Company, which owned the freighter "Carruthers," the Merchants Mutual line which owned the freighter "Regina," and the Western Steamship Company which owned the "Wexford," these steamers will be replaced for the opening of next season, temporarily, by the lease or purchase of equally large or larger steamers. The directors of each company will meet shortly to decide on the building of new steamers to permanently replace those lost.

Wreckage in Power Wheels.

BUFFALO, N.Y., Nov. 15.—Fearing that the hulk or wreckage from the lightship which was lost in the storm will get down the Niagara river and block up the power works which supply power to Ontario and New York State, two revenue cutters have been despatched with instructions to make a systematic search over Lake Erie for the same.

A SILVER WEDDING

4th Anniversary of South End Church

Rev. Father Doyle Will Preach in the Morning and Evening at the Church of the Sacred Heart

Rev. Father Doyle, S.J., of Guelph, will preach at the morning masses and at vespers in the Church of the Sacred Heart to-morrow on the occasion of the fourth anniversary of its opening. Three masess will be celebrated, at 7:30, 8:30, and 10:30, the last a Pontifical High Mass, sung by His Lordship Bishop O'Brien. Vespers will be at the usual hour, seven o'clock. Sunday marks the close of a triduum during which there has been a congregational celebration of the Constantinian Jubilee. It is therefore of double importance to the south end congregation. Rev. Father Doyle was formerly connected with St. Mary's College for Boys at Montreal, and preached the sermons in English in the Church of the Jesu.

Prices Unchanged On The Market

The supply of potatoes on the market this morning was light, and farmers has but little difficulty in getting $1.10 a bushel. Fresh meat was average in supply and price; beef fronts 11c., hinds 12c.; lamb, fronts 14c., hinds 16c.; pork fronts 12c., hinds 14c. Apples were liberally offered, "snows" at 25c. a peck, "pippins" at 30 cents, and other varieties at different quotations.

The Inside Market.

There was a plentiful supply of produce on the inside market. The demand was a little weak, consequently prices relaxed to a slight extent. The Examiner representative was conceded the privilege of purchasing a well-nourished duck for eighty cents, its original value was eighty-five cents. Chickens were offered at prices ranging from sixty to seventy-five cents each. The medium price per individual bird was sixty cents. Geese were plentiful. They sold at from one dollar and seventy-five cents to two dollars each. An occasional turkey was offered at two or three dollars each.

Butter and Eggs.

Eggs were worth about three cents apiece. A few lots were sold as high as forty cents a dozen. This price was the exception rather than the rule. The prevailing price was in the neighbourhood of thirty-five cents. A large quantity of butter was offered for sale at an average price of thirty cents a pound.

CANADA'S LAYMEN SET AN EXAMPLE

Special Cable to The Examiner:

LONDON, Nov. 15.—John R. Mott, the famous missionary leader, who has just visited London from the East, is urging on the British churches to follow the lead of Canada in the methods of the laymen's work for missions. Mr. Mott declares Canada has led the world in thus setting an example which the United States copied.

A DISTINGUISHED VISITOR

J. Joyce Broderick, Esq., H. B. M., Acting Consul General at New York, is making a short visit to Canada, and addressing a few Canadian Clubs in which will be included Montreal, Ottawa, Toronto, and Peterborough. Mr. Broderick will be the guest of the Canadian Club at Peterborough on Wednesday evening, November 19th. He is said to be an eloquent and infoming speaker. His address will be on the British Consular Service in its relation to Canada. A large attendance is expected and as the seating capacity of the room is limited, members are requested to obtain their tickets in advance. Tickets will be on sale at the Bank of Ottawa.

MR. H. B. COWAN GAVE AN ADDRESS

Over 80 boys heard the splendid address by Mr. H. B. Cowan, of the Farm and Dairy, last night. Mr. Cowan spoke on "Journalism," and outlined to the boys the advantages and disadvantages of taking up newspaper work as a vocation. Mr. Cowan was formerly a reporter of the Montreal Herald, and he told of a number of his experiences in that city, which illustrated in an excellent manner the duties and opportunities of a newspaper reporter.

Mr. Cowan's address was most interesting, and he was given a most attentive hearing throughout. A short programme of recitations and gramaphone selections was arranged, and was greatly enjoyed.

HAND WAS LACERATED

Mr. Ernest Oke, 263 Engleburn Avenue, East City, bookkeeper at the Peterborough Furniture Company, sustained a painful injury to his left hand while operating a machine. The accident, which occurred this morning, necessitated medical attention. The victim was first removed to St. Joseph's Hospital, where the injuries were dressed, thence to his home. Three fingers of the left hand were badly lacerated as a result of the accident.

THE RESPONSIBILITY.

Montreal is bewailing the shocks that have come to it in masses of late—shootings, stabbings and such like pastimes of the foreign born population. No doubt a great deal of this is due to the facilities permitted for the purchase of pistols and other deadly weapons. In reckless hands they prove an irresistible temptation to employment of them. Douglas Jerrold has told us that one of his characters was as honest as the sun if temptations were removed from his eyes, ears, hands and other senses. Take away the weapons, take away their easy acquirement by the foreign born, enforce the Blake law against carrying concealed weapons, and the crimes will diminish. Few murders or crimes of violence are committed with the naked hand. When the authorities are negligent and permit the conditions that contribute to, and indeed practicaly incite to, crime, we must expect that crime will continue. Is not Montreal itself morally responsible for the crimes wave that overflows it? It sets the example. It permits the Tramways Company to garrote the city in the light of day and seems to be pleased with the delicate attention; it shouldn't squirm at a few shootings or stabbings that "remove" a corresponding number of undesirable citizens.

THE WAY OF IT.

The Toronto Star is responsible for the following statement:

A large majority of the students at Toronto University are Liberal. Well, youth is the time for progressive impulses, and this is a young country.

The sceptical Conservative may ask what becomes of them when they get out into the world—asserting that the ballot box doesn't show a corresponding preponderance. It must be confessed that possibly a good many of them go to the bad and become Conservatives or even Tories. When they leave college they do so with high ideals and "progressive impulses." They immediately bump into the bread and butter problem. This develops selfishness; the greed of personal gain comes on apace till getting things becomes an obsession that crowds high ideals to the wall and smothers noble impulses. The shortest way to success opens temptingly and is taken. The shortest way lies over respect for the rights and interests of others, and these are trodden under foot in the mad race for gain that develops, and the young man that pursues it becomes in the generic sense a "grafter." If his ambition takes a political direction he becomes a partisan and seeks the party that favours the principle of aggrandizement, which involves special privilege, easily developed into divine right, to the plums that grow and ripen in a country so given to politics as Canada. He comes to regard special special privileges as an inalienable right irrespective of the rights of the unprivileged—the masses. Thus he becomes a Conservative, or if his downward devolution continues, a Tory. Here ends the career of many a hopeful young college student, when he enters the rough-and-tumble fight of active life, with "progressive impulses"—'tis true, 'tis pity; pity 'tis 'tis true."

TUBERCULOSIS SERMONS.

To-morrow should see large congregations in all our churches. We shall not probably have repeated the downpour of rain of last Sunday, which both figuratively and literally dampened the ardor of worshippers, and largely left the practice of piety to empty pews. Interest in the subject of tuberculosis arises, or should arise, from the same motive as interest in the Gospel, itself — which means interest in the welfare of our fellow men—in our neighbour. "Who is my neighbour?" has been answered by an unknown poet:

"Thy neighbour? It is he whom thou
Hast power to aid and bless,
Whose aching head and burning brow
Thy soothing hand may press."

All who are in sorrow, sickness, need or other adversity are our neighbours and come within the claims which the spirit of the Gospel of Christ impose upon us. No class of the afflicted makes so direct and forcible demand upon our help and sympathy as the afflicted with tuberculosis. When we remember the terrible character of its visitation and relentless grasp; when we remember that not only this generation but generations to come, are affected by it; when we remember that the plague may be lighened or stayed by proper means and remedies; when we remember that the employment of these remedies will be more effective in proportion to popular knowledge of them; when we remember that our desire to familiarize ourselves with these precautions and remedies is heightened by appeals to our sympathy by the presentation of information—when we remember all these things we may be induced to attend the services in the churches to-morrow—and receive knowledge and inspiration to play the role of the Good Samaritan, and figuratively pour oil and wine into the wounds of the man that falls among thives — becomes victim to the scourge that robs him of health and condemns him to drag a lengthening chain of progressive suffering, which involves his family and friends, and, collectively, the whole community.

AN ORNAMENTAL OFFICE.

A new and costly Government House is being built for Ontario. The salary of the Lieutenant-Governor is to be increased from $10,000 to $20,000. Such are the proposals now before us and likely to be carried into effect. What is the use?

The Lieutenant-Governor takes no active part in the government of the province. If Sir John Gibson were to oppose and try to obstuct the measues of the Whitney Government, there would be trouble at once. Government House, in the main, is a rendezvous for fashionable society in Toronto. The Lieutenant-Governor performs, usually with grace and tact, certain ceremonial functions. But is it right that he should he paid twice the salary of the Prime Minister, and that Toronto society should be entertained at the expense of the province?

In the absence of the Lieutenant-Governor, his duties are performed by the head of the Ontario judiciary, and legislation proceeds without interruption. Would not the province be just as well served if that arrangement were made permanent. Do we need a Lieutenant-Governor.—Toronto Star.

CATTLE ROAM OVER THE RESERVE

A number of Indians belonging to the Chemong reserve are complaining of the action of certain farmers residing in the vicinity, who, it is alleged, allow their cattle to roam over the reserve. This is contrary to the law. The reserve comprises two thousand acres and is ceded to the Indians, together with hunting and fishing privileges. The reserve practically constitutes an incorporated district, and is allotted for the exclusive use of the Chemong Indians.

One resident of the reserve states that he counted thirty-six head in one herd. They were disposed of last week. One man, who claims to have lost several head of cattle by reason of the invasion of alien cattle, promises to bring the matter before the proper authorities for adjustment.

MEXICAN REBELS KILL 3 AMERICANS

Special to The Examiner.

FORT WORTH, Texas, Nov. 15—The rebels this morning began a fierce attack on the Town of Juares, just across the border from El Paso, and United States troops have been summoned from this place with all speed to protect United States property in the vicinity. It is thought that this demonstration by the rebels is to compel the United States Government to do something drastic against Huerta.

Three Americans were killed in an attack of the Mexican rebels on

MUSIC AND THE DRAMA

Manager Turner Secures the Season's Musical Triumph "The Dream Maiden" For Next Wednesday, Nov. 19, at "The Grand." Some Facts About the Notable Production

Manager Turner has put the music lovers of Peterborough under a distinct obligation by bringing to the Grand next Wednesday evening, November 19, the biggest and best of the season's musical productions in "The Dream Maiden."

This beautiful production with its metropolitan cast is on its way to Chicago where it opens for a month before it goes into the theatre beautiful, the New Amsterdam, in New York, the goal of the most ambitious and pretentious musical offerings.

That Klaw and Erlanger have chosen "The Dream Maiden" for this high honour is the very best proof of its value, and Manager Turner has given us the absolute cast and production which is looked for to make the sensational hit of the present year.

Arrangements are being personally made by Allen Lowe, who is an old Toronto boy and who has given the stage nineteen successful musical comedies and operettas. He is well known on the other side of the line in Elk and Masonic circles, and has a wonderful following among the best class of theatregoers. He has given us "Isle of Spice," "The Defender," "Belle of Newport," "Prince Petticoat," and others of merit, but his best work is claimed to be in "The Dream Maiden."

The music which Mr. Lowe claims to be superior to any libretta he has ever written and a most distinctive, hauntingly beautiful and melodious score is by the distinguished Hungarian composer, Bela Laszky, who is called the "Waltz King," and has written the beautiful "L'Eccentrique" and "Shy Countess," as well as a great deal of the light music which has made the Viennese School so popular.

How America's Great Melting Pot is Producing the Races. These Four Ponies, All Seemingly Alike, are an Irish Girl, an Italian, a Greek and a Nova Scotian

The first act is purely romantic opera and has gained golden opinions in every city in which it has been seen and the fact that it has been selected by the New York management of one of the biggest houses is the best proof that it has succeeded. After the romantic first act, a jump in action from 1560 to 1913 brings the play up to modern musical comedy where the lovers of the first period are happily reunited in the second act. The two acts are joined by an intermezzo which lyrically and musically is said to be a wonderful composition, beautifully delivered by the noted English actress, Emily Fitzroy, who was with Willie Collier for the past two seasons.

Heading the cast is the real find of the operetta season, Audrey Maple. A gloriously coloured blonde, ethereal in form and with a beautiful soprano voice in the mezzo range she is the living embodiment of the author's "Dream Maiden." Miss Maple will be remembered in "The Arcadians," and in "The Firefly." She was cast for the leading role in the present big New York success "Adele," but finds in the character of Rose the biggest opportunity ever given an ingenue and one in which it is said Broadway will acclaim her.

The leading male role is that of Louis Prince of Hendonia, the dreamer, who masquerades as a jester and finds it much harder to be a merryman than a prince, and pays the price of his folly. It can easily be seen that such a part calls for voice, acting ability, stage presence and a strong sense of comedy. This is asking a great deal of a tenor, but Philip Simmons, specially loaned to Allen Lowe by Lee Herrick, representing Klaw and Erlanger, is up to the requirements.

Will Cameron, who played the low comedy role in "Madame Sherry," and who was the talk of two continents in "The Belle of New York," has the best part of his life as the jester who was a wise man in his own garb, but felt like a fool in the dress of a prince.

John Mogan, the former buffo-basso of the Boston Grand Opera Company, and for two years with Donald Brian, is the pleasure-loving Duke of Bellamore, who turns out to be the missing heir to millions after generations of poverty.

Suzanne Morgan is the character woman. Louise Morrison, the young concert singer, and Kathryn Bowen, who played Yvonne in "Madame Sherry," are the friends of Rose, the Dream Maiden. Al Magarry is the chancellor, and Norman Blume plays the court crier who turns into a society tittle-tattle.

The production was staged by Charles Sinclair, who handled most of the Savage successes and the wonderful light effects are by Wilfred Buckland, who was the wizard of lightning in Belasco's "Darling of the Gods."

The musical numbers are many, and while all are very high class, the big hits are "Beautiful Visions of Dreamland," "Twilight Is the Time for Love," "Springtime of Love," "I Want to Go a-Fishing," "A Man and a Maid," "To Strain of Music," "Best Bad Actor" and the rousing "Smith" song, telling of the foundation of that noble family.

With an organization of seventy-one people in the cast and inclusive of ten orchestral soloists in agmentation of the local orchestra, "The Dream Maiden" carries two car loads of brand new scenery and costumes, and a special equipment of electric and lamp effects. It is the one big musical production of the early season that has survived the test of public approval.

The libretto is described as follows by one of the critics, who, by the way, have been unanimous in their endorsement of its ingenuity, and master workmanship:

It is possessed of a solidity that few musical comedies have, and in fact it is not to be classed as a musical comedy at all, but as a comic opera. It is fanciful throughout, and should make an appeal because it forsakes the trodden path for an atmosphere entirely different. The first act takes one back into a time which has furnished the choicest material for the DeKoven operas, and then, just to even matters up a bit in view of modern public taste, it jumps into the present day. It is all done through the medium of transmigration, and is in a musical way what "The Road to Yesterday" was in the realm of drama. It is a pleasing idea and one which works out well in light opera, giving as it does the chance to indulge in flights that are always pleasing, but which could not be brought about if the audience were to demand the foundation of dramatic offering wholly. In the story the Duke has two daughters, and the choice of the Prince charming is the younger. She is a maiden of dreams, who sees into the far distant future and who believes that her lover shall come to her in the disguise of a jester. The prince, learning of this, changes his royal raiment for that of his jester and thus woes the princess.

He is discovered in his deceit and the unbending law of the realm decides that he shall be banished and that the fair princess of his love is not for him.

The second act transpires some 400 years later and the plot is again taken up, this time by the descendants of the original actors. There is a mystery to be unravelled and a family ring to be found before the happy climax can be culminated, but luckily for the reincarnated prince and the princess, who, by this time have lost their royal titles to become mere members of the great family of Smith, both of these tasks are accomplished and the curtain descends upon the united couple, and the audience is far happier, perhaps, than if the blessing had fallen upon the royal ancestors.

It is a clean, wholesome, sentimental, comical, melodious and high-class offering and deserves well at the hands of all who wish to see the stage kept clean and elevating.

Following is the house programme:

Skin Smooth and Hairisss After This Treatment

(Beauty Notes)

Any woman can easily and quickly banish objectionable hairy growths, without pain or inconvenience if she will simply mix a little water with some powdered delatone and then cover the hairy surface with this paste. After 2 or 3 minutes the paste should be removed and the skin washed to take off the remaining delatone and it will be entirely free from hair and as soft as velvet. Buying the delatone in an original package is the only way to insure its full strength and purity.

A Retrospect.

The lodge was established under dispensation from the Grand Lodge of Canada, and Grand Master [illegible] Bro. T. D. Harrington, the dispensation being dated January 27th, 5863.

The Charter Members are as follows:

George Barnham, W. M.-elect.
Robert Stevenson, S. W.-elect.
Allan T. Huffman, J. W. elect.
P. C. Butcher, Sec'y.
N. Hofeler, Treas.
Henry Lawson, S.D.
Samuel Ridpath, S. D.
Thomas Gulley, J. G.
Lewis Grant.
J. J. Christie.
J. M. Burns.
William Helm.
W. Bruce Ferguson.
B. Kimball
J. A. Butterfield.
A. Smith.
H. Aitkins.
John Drake,
(was afterwards named as Tyler.)

Of these who were interested in the organization and institution of the Lodge, and others who joined the Order in this Lodge in the very early days, one one is living, Bro. J. J. Davidson, 815 George Street.

A Subsequent Meeting.

At the regular meeting held on April 10th, 1863, other candidates were presented, the number indicating that the Lodge looked forward to a fairly large membership. Among these were names, afterwards very familiar to Peterborough citizens, including George A. Cox, Alex. Graham, Chas. Cameron, John Manson, R. Romaine, G. W. Hastings and others.

As an incident of the early fraternal doings of the Lodge, it may be noted that with the advent of the Festival of St. John the Evangelist, December 7th, 1863, a committee was appointed to arrange a Grand Ball in commemoration of the occasion. This committee reported that a suitable hall was not available. It was decided to hold a supper and Bro. Allan Huffman, owner of the principal hotel, was asked to name his price at which he could serve "a good, respectable supper." He quoted $1.00 a head, exclusive of wines.

After some discussion Bro. Geo. A. Cox moved that Bro. Huffman provide such a supper as he might at fifty cents per head, exclusive of wines. This amendment was carried.

The early minutes of meetings record faithfully, and at times minutely, the transactions of the Lodge, and indicate that the Order found favour with the best of the men of the town, and as a consequence the membership attained a considerable number very quickly. The Lodge prospered from year to year, and is the largest and one of the most important in the District. The present membership is 360.

MUSIC AND THE DRAMA

Manager Turner Secures the Season's Musical Triumph "The Dream Maiden" For Next Wednesday, Nov. 19, at "The Grand." Some Facts About the Notable Production

Manager Turner has put the music lovers of Peterborough under a distinct obligation by bringing to the Grand next Wednesday evening, November 19, the biggest and best of the season's musical productions in "The Dream Maiden."

This beautiful production with its metropolitan cast is on its way to Chicago where it opens for a month before it goes into the theatre beautiful, the New Amsterdam, in New York, the goal of the most ambitious and pretentious musical offerings.

That Klaw and Erlanger have chosen "The Dream Maiden" for this high honour is the very best proof of its value, and Manager Turner has given us the absolute cast and production which is looked for to make the sensational hit of the present year.

Arrangements are being personally made by Allen Lowe, who is an old Toronto boy and who has given the stage nineteen successful musical comedies and operettas. He is well known on the other side of the line in Elk and Masonic circles, and has a wonderful following among the best class of theatregoers. He has given us "Isle of Spice," "The Defender," "Belle of Newport," "Prince Petticoat," and others of merit, but his best work is claimed to be in "The Dream Maiden."

The music which Mr. Lowe claims to be superior to any libretta he has ever written and a most distinctive, hauntingly beautiful and melodious score is by the distinguished Hungarian composer, Bela Laszky, who is called the "Waltz King," and has written the beautiful "Eccentrique" and "Shy Countess," as well as a great deal of the light music which has made the Viennese School so popular.

How America's Great Melting Pot is Producing the Races. These Four Ponies, All Seemingly Alike, are an Irish Girl, an Italian, a Greek and a Nova Scotian

The first act is purely romantic opera and has gained golden opinions in every city in which it has been seen and the fact that it has been selected by the New York management of one of the biggest houses is the best proof that it has succeeded. After the romantic first act, a jump in action from 1560 to 1913 brings the play up to modern musical comedy where the lovers of the first period are happily reunited in the second act. The two acts are joined by an intermezzo which lyrically and musically is said to be a wonderful composition, beautifully delivered by the noted English actress, Emily Fitzroy, who was with Willie Collier for the past two seasons.

Heading the cast is the real find of the operetta season, Audrey Maple. A gloriously coloured blonde, ethereal in form and with a beautiful soprano voice in the mezzo range she is the living embodiment of the author's "Dream Maiden." Miss Maple will be remembered in "The Arcadians," and in "The Firefly." She was cast for the leading role in the present big New York success "Adele," but finds in the character of Rose the biggest opportunity ever given an ingenue and one in which it is said Broadway will acclaim her.

The leading male role is that of Louis Prince of Hendonia, the dreamer, who masquerades as a jester and finds it much harder to be a merryman than a prince, and pays the price of his folly. It can easily be seen that such a part calls for voice, acting ability, stage presence and a strong sense of comedy. This is asking a great deal of a tenor, but Philip Simmons, specially loaned to Allen Lowe by Lee Herrick, representing Klaw and Erlanger, is up to the requirements.

Will Cameron, who played the low comedy role in "Madame Sherry," and who was the talk of two continents in "The Belle of New York," has the best part of his life as the jester who was a wise man in his own garb, but felt like a fool in the dress of a prince.

John Mogan, the former buffo-basso of the Boston Grand Opera Company, and for two years with Donald Brian, is the pleasure-loving Duke of Bellamore, who turns out to be the missing heir to millions after generations of poverty.

Suzanne Morgan is the character woman. Louise Morrison, the young concert singer, and Kathryn Bowen, who played Yvonne in "Madame Sherry," are the friends of Rose, the Dream Maiden. Al Magarry is the chancellor, and Norman Blume plays the court crier who turns into a society tittle-tattle.

The production was staged by Charles Sinclair, who handled most of the Savage successes and the wonderful light effects are by Wilfred Buckland, who was the wizard of lightning in Belasco's "Darling of the Gods."

The musical numbers are many, and while all are very high class, the big hits are "Beautiful Visions of Dreamland," "Twilight Is the Time for Love," "Springtime of Love," "I Want to Go a-Fishing," "A Man and a Maid," "To Strain of Music," "Best Bad Actor" and the rousing "Smith" song, telling of the foundation of that noble family.

With an organization of seventy-one people in the cast and inclusive of ten orchestral soloists in agmentation of the local orchestra, "The Dream Maiden" carries two car loads of brand new scenery and costumes, and a special equipment of electric and lamp effects. It is the one big musical production of the early season that has survived the test of public approval.

The libretto is described as follows by one of the critics, who, by the way, have been unanimous in their endorsement of its ingenuity, and master workmanship:

It is possessed of a solidity that new musical comedies have, and in fact it is not to be classed as a musical comedy at all, but as a comic opera. It is fanciful throughout, and should make an appeal because it forsakes the trodden path for an atmosphere entirely different. The first act takes one back into a time which has furnished the choicest material for the DeKoven operas, and then, just to even matters up a bit in view of modern public taste, it jumps into the present day. It is all done through the medium of transmigration, and is in a musical way what "The Road to Yesterday" was in the realm of drama. It is a pleasing idea and one which works out well in light opera, giving as it does the chance to indulge in flights that are always pleasing, but which could not be brought about if the audience were to demand the foundation of dramatic offering wholly. In the story the Duke has two daughters, and the choice of the Prince charming is the younger. She is a maiden of dreams, who sees into the far distant future and who believes that her lover shall come to her in the disguise of a jester. The prince, learning of this, changes his royal raiment for that of his jester and thus woos the princess.

He is discovered in his deceit and the unbending law of the realm decides that he shall be banished and that the fair princess of his love is not for him.

The second act transpires some 400 years later and the plot is again taken up, this time by the descendants of the original actors. There is a mystery to be unravelled and a family ring to be found before the happy climax can be culminated, but luckily for the reincarnated prince and the princess, who, by this time have lost their royal titles to become mere members of the great family of Smith, both of these tasks are accomplished and the curtain descends upon the united couple, and the audience is far happier, perhaps, than if the blessing had fallen upon the royal ancestors.

It is a clean, wholesome, sentimental, comical, melodious and high-class offering and deserves well at the hands of all who wish to see the stage kept clean and elevating.

Skin Smooth and Hairisss After This Treatment

(Beauty Notes)

Any woman can easily and quickly banish objectionable hairy growths, without pain or inconvenience if she will simply mix a little water with some powdered delatone and then cover the hairy surface with this paste. After 2 or 3 minutes the paste should be removed and the skin washed to take off the remaining delatone and it will be entirely free from hair and as soft as velvet. Buying the delatone in an original package is the only way to insure its full strength and purity.

A Retrospect.

The lodge was established under dispensation from the Grand Lodge of Canada, and Grand Master T. D. Bro. T. D. Harrington, the dispensation being dated January 27th, 1863.

The Charter Members are as follows:

George Burnham, W. M.-elect.
Robert Stevenson, S. W.-elect.
Allan T. Huffman, J. W. elect.
P. C. Bleicher, Sec'y.
N. Hofeler, Treas.
Henry Lawson, S.D.

Thomas Galley, J. G.
Lewis Grant.
J. J. Christie.
J. M. Burns.
William Helm.
W. Bruce Ferguson.
B. Kimball.
J. A. Butterfield.
A. Smith.
H. Aitkins.
John Drake,
(was afterwards named as Tyler.)

Of these who were interested in the organization and institution of the Lodge, and others who joined the Order in this Lodge in the very early days, one one is living, Bro. J. J. Davidson, 815 George Street.

A Subsequent Meeting.

At the regular meeting held on April 10th, 1863, other candidates were presented, the number indicating that the Lodge looked forward to a fairly large membership. Among these were names, afterwards very familiar to Peterborough citizens, including George A. Cox, Alex. Graham, Chas. Cameron, John Manson, R. Romaine, G. W. Hastings and others.

As an incident of the early fraternal doings of the Lodge, it may be noted that with the advent of the Festival of St. John the Evangelist, December 7th, 1863, a committee was appointed to arrange a Grand Ball in commemoration of the occasion. This committee reported that a suitable hall was not available. It was decided to hold a supper and Bro. Allan Huffman, owner of the principal hotel, was asked to name his price at which he could serve "a good, respectable supper." He quoted $1.00 a head, exclusive of wines.

After some discussion Bro. Geo. A. Cox moved that Bro. Huffman provide such a supper as he might at fifty cents per head, exclusive of wines. This amendment was carried.

The early minutes of meetings record faithfully, and at times minutely, the transactions of the Lodge, and indicate that the Order found favour with the best of the men of the town, and as a consequence the membership attained a considerable number very quickly. The Lodge prospered from year to year, and is the largest and one of the most important in the District. The present membership is 260.

RICHARD HALL & SON LIMITED

ALL STAPLE FOODS EXCEPT MEAT ARE LOWER THAN A YEAR AGO

Canned Goods, Butter, Eggs, Dried Fruits, Flour and Others Are All Reduced Below 1912 Quotations

BUT MEAT SOARS HIGH

Meat is almost the only article of food that is quoted at a higher price than prevailed a year ago. And the meat bill cuts a big hole in the pay envelope for the reasons that the average family insists upon it in some form or other at every meal, because they demand the best cuts, and lastly on account of its price.

But a local grocer states that the majority of the other staples should offer a slight ray of satisfaction when their prices are compared with the quotations of a year ago.

Canned Goods.

First consider canned goods. Last year tomatoes sold at 15c. a tin. Today they are two for 25c. Standard peas were two tins for 25c. a year ago; now they are selling at 19c. a tin. Corn remains at ten cents. The grocer stated that these prices covered canned goods that are really first-class. Canned salmon will be down by Dec. 1. In fact the new stocks are expected next week, although they may not arive until the end of the month. Last year at this season first grade pound talls were quoted at 28c.; one grocer will sell them at 25c. when his new stocks arrive. Half pound tins were 20c. a year ago and will be down to 15c. The second grade salmon may be secured at considerably lower figures.

In the fish department, sardines are slightly higher, and tins that sold at five cents will have to bring six cents. Those that sold at 2 for 25c. will have to be disposed of at 15c. straight to make any profit.

Butter is Lower.

Flour is slightly, but not appreciably lower than a year ago. Potatoes are quoted at a reasonable price and may go lower. Twelve months ago the price was at a higher level. Butter is down about five cents. It is now from 30c. to 33c as compared with 35c. to 37c. a year ago.

Raisins and Currants.

Raisins and currants were two pounds for a quarter, good stock. The retail price is ten cents a pound this year. This should cut a few cents off the cost of the Christmas pudding and mince pies.

Rolled oats are 25c. a cwt. lower, but this reduction will make but a slight change in the retail price. Bread is steady in its figures, but meat, well some of the butchers believe that it will not be long until the desired cuts will retail at 25c. a pound.

Best Meat Demanded.

It may be covering well trodden ground, but it is none the less interesting to note that even persons whoes weekly wages would be considered, these same persons will buy the best meat as long as they can afford it. And after all whose to blame them apart from the financial consideration? The tendency is to live in the present with many who have a "fair job" even though it does not promise to run forever. The rainy day seems far off, and we should worry. That about the general attitude, and meanwhile prices are steep and are going up.

Where Profit is Made.

A butcher stated recently that he has to make his profit on the choice cut. There is so much waste in the shank, around the neck and in other sections that the deficiency has to be made up somewhere. When the meat is cut from the shank there is nothing but the bone left. Sometimes it may be sold for soup, but not always. The four shanks of a beef are generally regarded as a section of the carcass where a loss is to expected. The sides return no material profit and there are left only the sirloin, porter house and round steaks. These must be quoted high, not only because meat in general is high, but also because of the waste sustained in other portions of the carcass.

This refers to the man who sells good butcher's beef. Where bulls and old cows are cut up a lower price may be quoted, but—

Here is something that the average householder may not be acquainted with. Beef can be brought in from Toronto, and the freight and cartage paid locally, and the retail price in Peterborough will be 22c. for sirloin as compared with 25c. in Toronto. A man stated recently that when he was in Toronto bacon sold there at 25c. a pound, and yet bacon purchased from the same Toronto wholesalers was sold to Peterborough consumers at 27c.

SAID FAREWELL TO MR. G. SKELDING

President of Carpet Weavers' Union Who is Leaving the City, Honoured by Presentation in the White House Last Night.

About forty friends of Mr. Geo. Skelding, gathered in the White House last night, and gave him a royal send-off. Mr. Skelding, who resides on Ware street, has been an employee of the Brinton Carpet Company for the past few years, and a deservedly popular citizen of Peterborough. He was president of the Carpet Weavers' Union, of this city, and a delegate to the Trades and Labour Council.

Last night's gathering was presided over by Mr. Sheward, and Mr. Skelding was the recipient of a handsome solid leather club bag, and a purse of money. Mr. A. Giles made the presentation. A programme of songs was given in his honour, and a very pleasant social evening was spent—an occasion that will do much to alleviate the feelings of Mr. Skelding in leaving his old friends and associates.

Mr. Skelding is leaving this city, to accept a position as weaver in Freehold, N.J. He carries with him the best wishes of all the workingmen of Peterborough, for whom he has worked persistently during his stay in the city.

PHYSICIAN GIVES GOOD ADVICE.

"If you have dyspepsia, indigestion, sour stomach, belching, distress after eating, heartburn or any other stomach trouble due to hyperacidity (the usual cause of stomach troubles), you should take no medicine to act upon the stomach itself. That is positively not the way to cure the trouble. Again, you should not half starve yourself by going without the nutritious food that you need to rebuild waste tissues. Some foods are not good for people even when in perfect health—very rich, sweet, highly seasoned dishes. Avoid these, but eat fairly substantial meals of plain foods. Eat slowly. Even if you drink nothing but water, you should not drink with meals. Drink before and after eating. Do not take pepsin or other artificial digestants. If you follow the foregoing simple instructions it is probable that you will not need any medicine at all except, if you want to call it medicine, a little antacid after meals. The best antacid is ordinary bisurated magnesia, which can be purchased at any drug store. This is not to act upon the stomach but on the contents of the stomach. The antacid, as you can learn by consulting your dictionary or encyclopaedia, is merely to neutralise or counteract the excess acid so the stomach can digest the food normally. Take a teaspoonful of bisurated magnesia in a little cold or hot water after each meal. You should get immediate relief, even if your case is severe. Careful, moderate eating and the use of bisurated magnesia should put your stomach in normal condition in a short time; if you have not allowed dyspepsia to advance to the extreme stage of developing stomach ulcers or cancer."

SPECIAL SERVICES AT KNOX CHURCH

Commencing on Sunday and Continuing All Next Week—Important Event for the Congregation and City

THE PROGRAMME ARRANGED

Special services at Knox Church will be held to-morrow and each evening next week. 'The King's Business' will be the special theme receiving attention.

Following the Laymen's conference and looking forward to the every member canvas, the session of Knox Church has made arrangements for a series of evangelistic services next week, commencing at the morning service to-morrow.

The Rev. G. A. Woodside of Brantford, has been secured for the occasion. He occupies one of the most prominent pulpits in Western Ontario and is a preacher of attractive presence and of remarkable power. He is no stranger to Peterborough, as he conducted similar series in Knox Church two years ago with marked results.

During these services Miss Jessie McNab of Toronto, wil give valuable assistance with many solos. Miss McNab is a very effective singer and has had a striking history that goes back to Scotland. She will sing at both services on Sunday. Mr. Kenyon will preside at the organ.

To-morrow Rev. Mr. Woodside will conduct morning and evening services, taking in the morning, 'The Death of Christ,' and in the evening 'Christ's Appeal to Men.' At three in the afternoon he will address a men's meeting in the Brotherhood room.

The people have been looking forward to these meetings and during the last two weks prayer metings were held in the Church. A most interesting and helpful time is looked forward to. The meetings are open to the public.

THE LEAVEN BEGINS TO LEAVEN A LITTLE

Will It Give Sir James Whitney a "Rise?"

LONDON, ONT., Nov. 14.—At the opening meeting of the Temperance Alliance campaign in Ealing schoolhouse, East Middlesex, last night, Ex-Ald. James Hale of Toronto, declared himself a supporter of the general policy of Sir James Whitney, but believed the time had come for plain speaking on the temperance question. As a Conservative he had worked to put Sir James in power, and hoped for great things from him. He believed there was great independence of thought on the part of the electors now, and that the time was coming when the country would be swept by the temperance issue. For this reason he appealed to all to vote for the candidate, Mr. John W. Laidlaw, who advocated these principles.

The untiring efforts of Mrs. Stubbs resulted in a splendid entertainment and all present voted the affair a very pleasant one.

Makes Face Young-- Tightens Love Ties

("Aurilla" in Woman's Sphere)

A fretful expression, a wrinkled face and a faded complexion, do more to drive the male members from home than is commonly supposed. It was one of my greatest difficulties to appear smiling, fresh and elegant when my dear ones were with me. But I have overcome all that. I have changed my mental attitude and I now find it second nature to look cheerful. Due partly to this, partly to a remarkable treatment recommended by a friend, my appearance has so improved I look fifteen years younger than before.

A simple face lotion made by dissolving an ounce of powdered saxolite in a half-pint witch hazel, proved a wonderful wrinkle-chaser. I still use this occasionally. To renovate my complexion I purchased an ounce of ordinary mercolised wax at my druggist's and before using this up, a marvellous transformation had taken place. It was like removing an unsightly mask, revealing a new face, a youthful complexion of distinctive delicacy, clear, white and velvety. I merely applied the wax like cold cream before retiring, washing it off mornings. Ten days' treatment sufficed.

MINISTERS PRIMED FOR TUBERCULOSIS SERMONS

In order that clergymen may be supplied with accurate and up-to-date information for their addresses on Tuberculosis Sunday, which will be observed throughout Ontario on 30th November, the National Sanatorium Association is distributing outlines of the salient facts connected with the extent of consumption in Canada, the methods of fighting it, and a statement of the work which has been done towards tha tend.

The facts when published should prove of vital interest to Canadians. Apart from the poverty and indirect results of the scourge, the death list last year in Ontario alone numbered 2,250, and while this record is gloomy enough, it really shows that by preventive and curative measures the present crusade has been responsible for an immense reduction in the mortality.

Quite apart from the raising of the general level of hygiene which has been accomplished by the campaign, the National Sanatorium Association has, since its inception, sent 4,500 patients back to their homes benefited, in addition to weeding out the infection from several times that number of houses where deaths would undoubtedly have occurred. The compilation of facts should prove at once the most startling and the most hopeful documents of the statistical reports of the year.

Prelate Lends Aid.

Archbishop McNeil of Toronto has asked and has secured the assistance of the Separate School Board and the teachers of the city in the furtherance of the crusade against consumption.

In a brief address before that body the other evening, His grace declared that the campaign against tuberculosis was one in which the Roman Catholic organizations of the country could not remain indifferent. There were over a thousand members of the Roman Church at present numbered among the patients who had received treatment in the National Sanatorium Association's Hospitals in Weston and Muskoka. He suggested, therefore, that the Board take steps to have the children of their schools help by the distribution of Christmas seals.

The Archbishop's proposal met a unanimous affirmative and the teachers will be instructed to provide seats for sale by the children.

In a subsequent letter to the secretary of the National Sanatorium Association, Archbishop McNeil spoke more eloquently by deed, even than by word:

"I send herewith two hundred and fifty dollars to endow one bed for a year in one of your Free Hospitals for Consumptives, and I trust the coming Christmas will bring you many generous contributions for the great work."

The Archbishop also announced his intention of urging the Catholic clergy of the Diocese to take part in the Tuberculosis Sunday exercises on 30th November.

A WONDER WORKER

"It heals like magic," is a favorite expression when Dr. Chase's Ointment is used. It works quickly, stops all itching at once, often heals in a single night. For eczema, salt rheum, barbers' itch, skin irritations or eruptions, it is a most satisfactory treatment. Being antiseptic, it prevents blood poisoning.

The Velvet Hat is Fashion's Favourite

And the Millinery Showrooms on Second Floor are displaying a whole host of them in all the smartest shapes that are correct for Winter wear. Most appropriate they look, too, with their soft crowns and drooping shapes relieved by catchy sprays of ostrich feathers, and other mounts, and a touch of color in the tiny bunch of gay flowers which seem so popular just now. Nor are these handsome creations high-priced, for many are between $5 and $6, others being marked in proportion to the work and material in them.

THE FINE FINISH OF SOLID MAHOGANY

It lies chiefly in what the finisher calls "rubbing down." And this he does with water and powdered pumice after the last coat of varnish has become quite dry.

Then comes the polishing.

This is the highest class of finish in varnish to be obtained and is applied to a handsome, solid Mahogany Parlour Suite that we are showing on the Third Floor

The back and arms of the three pieces are of scroll design, that enhances the beauty of the wood.

The legs are shaped, while the Upholstery is a silk tapestry in a buff, grey and silver shade.

Each article is strongly put together, and will add beauty to your parlour at the same time giving a lifelong service.

A Poor Towel Mars the Pleasure of Cleanliness

To say the best about it, a poor Towel is a sorry equipment for either bed or bathroom.

After a pleasant bathing of face or hands it is a genuine disappointment to most people if the Towel is not a real 'Old Bleach' Linen Huckaback.

And when they can be obtained for such a moderate outlay, every home should possess a number of them. These for instance, size 20x38 in. are 25c each, while another size 24x40in. are 37½c. Both Towels, though marked so cheaply, are real 'Old Bleach' Linen. They are the huckaback variety, which, by the way, is the kind of Towel used in the Royal Household, and are woven plain throughout.

A Poetical Precipitation

Which Reveals the Attitude of its Author Towards the Downie Street Creek

The Summer days are over,
And Autumn now is here;
With all its wondrous beauty,
The grandest of the year.
It brings with it thanksgiving,
So let us singe one grand sweet song;
We'll soon hear the end of the Downie Street Creek problem,
For the old one now is gone.

And in its place the City Council
Built one both large and strong,
To withstand the fiercest floods or rain
That ever came along.
For its walls are all cemented,
Reinforced bottom and all;
Just what the people wanted,
For the floods both spring and fall.

Great Praise can be given
To the City Engineer,
For his work is a credit to the city
And will last for many a year.
I know the next generation
Will bless the councillors too,
As well as the present people,
And all the Northenders do.

Goodbye old creek, we're glad to have you go;
Goodbye to floods in spring time,
In fall and winter snow.
We'll now see smiling faces
And a hearty shake of the hand,
We'll give the City Councillors
For the work they did was grand.

HAWKES POUNCES UPON DENMARK AS AN EXAMPLE

TORONTO, Nov. 14. — "Denmark, with a population a little less than that of Ontario," said Mr. Arthur Hawkes at the University Liberal Club last night, "has four thousand Danes in her navy. Denmark could not propose to resist successfully the onslaught of one of the great powers, but every man of that four thousand would go down fighting." This, said Mr. Hawkes, was a precedent for Canada. If Canada had stood alone among the nations, she would have had either to do what Denmark has done or else cravenly hand herself over to the charge of the United States; then why should it be considered impossible for us to do now what could and would have been done then?

Mr. Hawkes was speaking on "The Creed of a Canadian Imperialist," and in the course of a stirring appeal pointed out that the position of the British Empire as "the political miracle of the ancient world" is to be traced to the hardihood of those who left the shores of the British Isles and carried their traditions across the seas to the nations they were to build up in the 'great, empty, untamed spaces of the earth."

Mr. Wilmott, Mr. Hill, and Mr. Beeton spoke after Mr. Hawkes, and the chair was held by Mr. H. C. McLaughlin, the president of the club.

Arthur Kennedy, who is on the blacklist, was arrested for being drunk yesterday. In Police Court this morning he pleaded guilty to the charge against him and was fined $10 and costs—$13.75.

In the witness box Kennedy swore that his brother, Bruce, gave him the liquor yesterday afternoon. He gave Bruce 50 cents to buy a bottle, which he did. Kennedy got drunk on the contents and was arrested.

"There's a Reason"

SAILOR TELLS OF EXPERIENCE IN LAKE STORM

PORT FRANKS, Nov. 15.—Charles Ryan, second engineer of the wrecked Northern Queen, tells a stirring story of the fight of the crew of 22 good seamen to save their ship, and finally to save their own lives.

"I was working in the engine hold as usual on Sunday afternoon when the storm came up," Ryan said. "The Northern Queen was caught in the trough of the sea, and to save her from plunging to the bottom, Captain Crawford turned her nose up the lake. Within an hour the waves, lashed to tremendous heights, pounded over us, stripping some of the upper works and smashing in through the ports.

"Water poured into my quarters, and we were compelled to make for other parts of the ship. All hatches were down, but the flood came through and killed most of our fires. A couple of the boilers were still in shape, but we had not steam enough for power. We made the most of it till 6 o'clock that night.

They Stayed Below.

"Snow then came down, and our mast raked the clouds that swept over us. Men strapped on their lifebelts, but stayed below as much as possible to avoid being washed overboard.

"The boat rolled and the coal crashed down out of the bunkers on top of us. Captain Crawford knew that to attempt to make Port Huron would send us to the bottom, but we were anxious to get to any place of safety. We agreed that the best plan was to strike back into the teeth of the gale.

"No one slept that night and along in the morning we lost our rudder, and knew that we were up against it. At 4 o'clock the Queen veered around and dropped into the trough of the sea. We dropped both anchors, but they dragged. Then she caught and held fast. The heavy sea ran over us and threatened to pound her to pieces, but she stayed with it. Then with a sudden lurch she shivered and crunched from stern to stern, slacked back an instant, and with the next leaped her cable' length. There was a terrific crash and we knew she had lost both anchors.

Snow Fell in Clouds.

"In the meantime the yawls with one exception, were smashed and torn from their davits. There was nothing to it but stay with Queen, and that was what we wanted to do. The snow fell in clouds, through which it was impossible to see more than a few feet and in the roar of the gale the siren could not be heard any distance.

"Later the sky cleared but the wind kept up and dashed us about. We could not get out of the trough, and were drifting rapidly before the wind. When daybreak came we found ourselves a mile off Port Franks. We knew pretty well what our location was. A couple of hours later the ship's keel went on a shoal and it felt like the finish. A big sea was still running and time and again she eased off, raised by the waves, only to go harder on than before.

"Finally she set fast and after that we got only the side lash as she rolled in the heavy seas. The waves broke over her throughout the day and we made no attempt to land. Monday night we found ourselves without fire and practically without food, and soaked through and shivering we grouped our way about the vessel. There was still a little fire in the boilers, but there was not enough steam to turn the engines over. We hunted about and got a little coal and tried to make fires to keep warm but it was a tough job.

The Rescue.

"All night waves buffeted us and Tuesday at daybreak it still looked bad. We were then 1000 yards from the beach. Late in the afternoon the gale ceased off a little and the Captain ordered our only remaining yawl over the starboard side forward.

"She dropped into the sea and ten men plunged into her. A line had been made fast that she might be hauled back to take the rest of us ashore. The cable snapped and we were left marooned.

"A number of people from the Village and a couple of fishermen were attracted out and were prepared to help them in. They plunged into the water and sent up a cheer we could hear when the men were landed. They were fagged out, but all were safe.

Later in the afternoon we tied a wire cable to a big crate of goods and cast it overboard. The crate found its way in, and after a couple of hours was within twenty-five yards of the beach. A couple of the men landed and got the crate before she was carried out by the undertow. They were both knocked out, but they got our line.

"The yawl was made fast and two fishermen came with her to the boat. The next load off left only five men on board the Northern Queen. They found matters easier at night. I came off with the second trip. The Captain and a couple of men stayed to the finish."

THE LAYMEN'S MISSION PLAN.

Matt. 28:18-20.

Enlist the laymen in the fight,
Unite your forces all,
That all departments of the Church,
May rally to the call;
The every-member canvass,
And the every-member pay,
Will bring to light and life in Christ,
A nation in a day.

The Mission of the Church of Christ,
In His own Word is given,
Including those of every race,
And nation under Heaven;
To this end Jesus gave Himself,
A sacrifice for sin,
And now He is of life the door,
By which we enter in.

Vast millions yet in darkness grope,
Through sin and superstition,
Because that we have not fulfilled,
The terms of His Commission;
We've failed to give as we've received,
Or as the Lord hath prospered,
And thus the sin of robbing God,
Within the Church is fostered.

Let us endeavour thus to bring,
Within this generation,
The Gospel of our living head,
To every heathen nation;
And so to this end we have launched,
The "Laymen's Mission Movement,"
For "we can do it if we will,"
And now we're going to prove it.

Rev. F. A. Conners.

CORPS OF ST. JOHN'S AMBULANCE SOCIETY FOR PETERBOROUGH

Meeting of Those Interested in First Aid Work Was Held Last Night.

EVERYBODY INVITED

An auspicious and enthusiastic meeting was held at the Y.M.C.A. last night, by those interested in the formation of a Peterborough branch of the St. John's Ambulance Society. It was auspicious in that those present organized a local brigade, elected officers, and decided on a course of lectures in first aid, bandaging, etc.

The officers were elected as follows:

President—Wm. Lybern.
Treasurer—J. Cumming.
Secretary—Andrew Forrest.
Instructor—Dr. E. V. Frederick.
Committee—Messrs. W. J. Emery, Albert Stephens and F. Dainton.

The first meeting of the new Corps will be held in the Y.M.C.A., Tuesday night at 8 o'clock, when a lecture on First Aid will be given by Dr. Frederick. Bandages, text books and appliances will be on hand so that a thorough demonstration will be given.

The meeting last night was the outcome of the lecture by Captain Collins, in the Labour Hall last Monday night, and Andrew Forrest's missionary work, and the nucleus formed points to a bright future for the brigade in the city.

Much discussion has taken place as to where the regular meetings will be held. Armouries, the Public Library, the Collegiate Institute, were all suggested, but it is likely that the meetings will be held in the Y.M.C.A.

A fee of 50 cents is charged each member for bandages and text books, and that is about the only expense connected with the movement, as other appliances—stretchers, etc., will be borrowed from similar organizations in the city.

Value to Manufacturers.

The gentlemen behind the movement to form a Peterborough corps are impeled principally through the fact that they are members and realize the value of the work in any community. They point out that every manufacturer should urge as many of the men in his employ to take advantage of this five weeks' course. It would then be a simple matter to provide any factory in the City with skilled ambulance corps. The men who learn the work in the classes and the appliances would cost but little to the firm.

Value to Every One.

This short course recommends itself to men of all walks. One of the officers stated that on looking at a picture in the Examiner of the Turnbull building's collapse it was apparent that several men carrying an injured woman knew nothing of the fine points taught in the ambulance course.

It is open to every man in the City over 18 years, and a large attendance is expected for Tuesday night's meeting.

A number of ladies have signified their desire to have a class formed for them, and if their number increases it will be formed. Ladies interested should communicate with Mr. Forrest, Downie Street.

DOWNIE STREET CREEK

The Downie Street Creek is nearing completion. The construction of the ditch proper was finished a few days ago. A brand new bridge of concrete construction has been built across Edinburgh Street. The removal of the wooden forms from underneath the structure will herald the conclusion of the work.

Youngest Cathedral Organist In The World Has Uncle In This City

Eleven years old, and the organist of St. Ann's Cathedral in the city of Leeds, England.

Those who read the Buffalo Express probably noticed the picture in last Sunday's edition of the youngest organist in the world, Frank Chambers, a little, bright-eyed chap, wearing an Eton collar and dark suit, sitting before the manuals of an immense organ.

The article comes near to Peterborough in the fact that Mr. J. W. Chambers, employed with Alex. Elliott & Co., is an uncle of the boy.

The Yorkshire Evening Post recently contained an interesting sketch of Master Chambers. In this, the father, Mr. Harry Chambers, said: "When he was two years old, he sang the little songs his mother taught him in perfect tune. But it was not until he was seven years that I noticed he had any particular bent in the direction of music."

The boy made rapid progress, and transposition seemed natural to him, and at an early age he passed difficult tests. When the organist of St. Ann's became ill the boy deputised for him, and the musical part of the service in the big Roman Catholic Cathedral was as good as ever.

The Yorkshire Post concludes: "To-day that little lad is eleven, and he is the youngest Cathedral organist in the world. Leeds should be proud of him. Proud of that little lad whose tiny fingers touch the keys that move the multitude."

And a feature of his youth has been his active participation in and enjoyment of the games of the other boys. His mother says he is just an ordinary boy, but there is a host of mothers throughout the country whose hopefuls are taking lessons, and who wish that something of this genius has been given to their sons.

PETERBORO' Y. M. C. A. BOYS TO BROCKVILLE

Will Attend Conference to Be Held Next Week at Boys' Conference —Ten Are Going.

THE LIST OF SPEAKERS

The annual Boys Work conference, held in Galt last year, has been divided, and conferences will be held this year in Brantford and Brockville. The delegates from western cities and towns will attend the Brantford conference, and those from the eastern cities, including Belleville, Kingston, Ottawa, Peterborough and Toronto, and the counties of Carleton, Dundas, Durham, Glengarry, Grenville, Hastings, Lanark, Leeds, Lennox and Addington, Ontario, Prince Edward, Renfrew and Stormont, will attend the gathering at Brockville. One hundred delegates are expected from the provinces of Quebec.

Representatives of the local Sunday schools and associations of this City will attend the Brockville conference, which is being held on November 21st, 22nd and 23rd. Only 10 delegates can be sent from this City, as each city and county has a certain number of apportioned credential privileges.

Last year twenty delegates from Peterborough attended the conference at Galt, and it is likely the full number of delegates will represent local institutions at Brockvile this year.

The speakers at the conference will be Rev. Wm. A. Brown, Chicago, Ill., International Sunday School Association; Albert E. Roberts, New York City; County Work Department, International R.M.C.A.; Will W. Lee, Quebec, Que. Immigration Department, National Council, Y.M.C.A.; Rev. Norman E. McLeod, St. Annes, Que., Minister, Union Church, MacDonald College; Chas. W. Bishop, General Secretary National Council, Y.M.C.A.

Being firmly convinced that a certain contest would terminate in conformity with his opinions, a farmer in New York State wagered his new automobile against a wheel-barrow on the result of the contest in question—and lost. Giving up the property, he grimly trudged seven miles to his home. Probably his family noticed that he had a grouch, too. Considered in the calm, clear, cold light of pure reason, the gentleman succeeded in proving himself a near relative to a California canary—otherwise known as a donkey. Had he won the bet the result would have been pretty much the same. For betting is not argument, evidence or proof of anything. It adds no force, power or dignity to any opinion or set of opinions. It is merely the utpouring of the gambling spirit, and it is a spirit that has led many a man to utter beggary who might have adorned a home and ornamented a community.

News Of The Play-houses Along The Great White Way

Maude Adams Has Reached 41 Years —Ugliest Woman in the World on the Road—John Drew Is Almost Sixty.

INTERESTING PERSONALS

Make 'em blush to their ears and bathe 'em in tears; make 'em grin, make 'em sigh, make 'em laugh, make 'em cry; make 'em squeal with delight, and turn white with fright; make 'em wink and turn pink; put their nerves on the blink; tickle 'em, thrill 'em, and feed 'em on gore, and grieve 'em and shock 'em and thrill 'em some more. Such, poetically expressed, seems to be the purpose of the Princess, the "theatre of thrills" the playhouse of mingled—and mangled—emotions.

"There has been a most delightful revolution in feminine dress," remarks Robert Henri, the painter, just back from Europe. Change the first "o" to "e" and the "u" to "a" and the average masculine Broadwayite will agree with him, ab-so-lute-ly.

In addition to Mlle. Fatima, who has a full assortment of nether limbs and does not give a cream puff who knows it, Hammerstein's bill includes "the only legless lady," whose paucity of limbs is "the result of birth, not accident." Mr. Anthony Comstock is said to be particularly pleased at the innovation.

"See 'America' first" seems to be the cry of visitors to New York, which suggests the folowing as an appropriate yell for the tourists and buyers: "Rah! Rah! Rah! Who are we? Folks from Joplin and Kan-ka-kee, Medicine Hat and Troy and Rome, and we're all a-going to the Hippodrome."

Miss Maude Adams, who will be forty-one next Tuesday, and who has out permission to live forty-one years longer, will be seen in a one-act play by J. M. Barrie, entitled "Rosalind," the gift of author to actress, during her New York season beginning next month.

At Madison Square Garden a large force of men are engaged in polishing the blaze of glory and tuning up the blare of trumpets, which, in accordance with reportorial traditions, will open the annual horse show at that well-known edifice a week hence.

Sarah Bernhardt's first American appearance took place just thirty-three years ago, at Booth's Theatre, New York. She played "Adrienne Lecouvreur" to an overflowing and enthusiastic house. Booth's has vanished from the theatrical map, and, in all probability, a majority of the audience have paid the debt to nature, but Sarah the Divine goes on for ever.

Mme. Polaire, self-proclaimed "ugliest woman in the world," resembles most of the baseball players who pose as actors in that she gets her money by false pretences, but she gives good value at that. The Madame is to go on the road at the head of a company of her own, as will her erstwhile—diable!—companions, Gertrude Hoffman and Lady Constance Richardson.

Miss Emily Stevens, the ruined lady in "To-day," has received a letter from a woman who records an experience very much like that of the faithless wife in the drama. "Miss Stevens, of course, withholds the name of the writer." Of course!

May Irwin, plump, pulchritudinous, frolicsome, funny, and—fifty—is again in our mirthful midst. The fair Canadian makes "A Widow by Proxy" one big scream.

Marie Dressler will celebrate her birthday Sunday. It's really none of your affair but, if you must know, she will be forty. Miss Dressler was born in Cobourg, Canada, educated in Toronto, and made her stage debut at 16 in "Under Two Flags."

All who have visited Miner's or the Columbia know that chorus ladies are bipeds, but that this physiological peculiarity extends to society women will be demonstrated for the first time at the coming Madison Square Garden horse show, where many of the ladies will ride astride. Line forms on the left. Don't push!

John Philip Sousa, who celebrated his 57th birthday this week, gave a concert at the Hippodrome on Sunday night, November 9th, as the closing feature of his twenty-second annual concert tour.

It was just four years ago that the New Theatre, built by thirty American millionaires who were going to uplife American dramatic art, opened its doors to the public. The scheme was a failure, but the magnificent edifice (now the Century Opera House, is performing a true service to art as the home of grand opera in English.

A budding playwright has permitted us to read the manuscript of a drama of negro life, which he will produce as soon as he finds a purchaser. A court room scene offers the following bit of dialogue: "De sentence of dis court is dat you be hanged by de neck until mortified, an' dat dis sentence be excruciated at once," says the cullud judge. "Mah beabens, jedge," shrieks the convicted man, "does yo' aim to ruin me?"

Handsome John Drew will pass the three score mark next week, but age has not withered his infinite variety of histrionics and haberdashery.

"The Fight," although disappointing to devotees of the Marquis of Queensberry, who expected something different, now goes on the road with an excellent metropolitan record behind it.

Play-acting may not be a business, Mawruss, like a drygoods store or a real-estater, but could you see the people that go to George M. Cohan's theatre every night, understand me, the least you could say is Cohan is a smart young feller. "Potash and Perlmutter" has made a hit at Cohan's, and a second company presenting Montague Glass's famous characters will take to the road next month.

Ignace Paderewski, the Polish pianist, had 43 candles on his birthday cake this week.

Manhattan's pioneer skyscraper, the Tower building, which rises to the amazing height of 11 stories, is soon to be demolished.

Atlantic City has been given the premiere of Harrison Gray Fiske's "The Honey Bee," and also of "The Land of Promise," in which Billie Burke will star.

Donald Brian, in "The Marriage Market," at the Knickerbocker, is a native of St. John's, Newfoundland, and made his first stage appearance at the age of five at a benefit of the Irish Society in his native city. While touring with a glee club many years ago, he was stranded in Michigan, and joined a medicine show at five dollars per, to earn money to pay his way back to New York.

Al. H. Woods is preparing for early production an imported musical comedy entitled "Mlle. Ula-La," and also a Viennese operatta, "The Forbidden Kiss."

The elections in this village are over, and Candiadate Tweedledum has triumphed over Candidate Tweedledee It was a glorious vic-tor-ee.

LABOUR DISPUTES WERE MUCH LESS

October Better In This Regard Than Any Month of the Present Year.

70,000 WORKING DAYS LOST

The Department of Labour reports that the industrial situation from the standpoint of the number of trade disputes in existence, was better in October than at any time during the year. The loss of time to employees through trade disputes actually commencing during that month was small, and in all there were only eight disputes in existence, this number including those already in existence at the beginning of the month and those which commenced during October. On no occasion during the present year has the number been as small as this; the next best record being in September when eleven disputes were reported. About 3,657 employees were directly and indirectly involved in the disputes of the month. About 70,000 working days were lost through strikes and lockouts during October as compared with 83,380 during September, and 98,0000 in October, 1912. As in the previous months the most important dispute was that of coal miners on Vancouver Island. It is difficult to estimate the loss of time through this dispute, as it is probable that the strikers obtain work from time to time in other localities and that other men are taken on by the operators concerned. An estimate would show about 2,000 men out of work directly as a result of this dispute during October.

APPROACHING BALDNESS

Ma, Be Checked by Using Herpicide

The above expression is one which is used frequently in connection with hair preparations. Just exactly what is meant by it in each instance is a question. Baldness is not a disease and hence, does not permit of a cure. It is a result invariably to be traced to the dandruff germ and if the condition has become chronic, that is, if there is complete atrophy of the hair follicles, a "cure" is absolutely impossible.

Approaching baldness, seen in falling hair, may always be checked and if the hair follicles are not atrophied the hair may be induced again to grow.

This is accomplished by regular applications of Newbro's Herpicide, which cleanses the scalp and eliminates the dandruff. Checking the accumulations of scarf skin removes the most common enemy to beautiful hair.

Soft, glossy, fluffy hair cannot grow on a scalp infested with dandruff any more than a delicate plant can grow on an ash heap. The scalp must be kept clean and free from dandruff. The best remedy for doing this is Newbro's Herpicide which receives the highest endorsements from professional men, the stage and the best people everywhere.

Newbro's Herpicide in 50c and $1.00 sizes is sold by all dealers who guarantee it to do all that is claimed. If you are not satisfied your money will be refunded.

Applications obtained at all first-class barber shops and hair dressing parlours.

Address the Herpicide Co., Dept. R., Detroit, Mich., enclosing 10c in postage or silver for sample and booklet. McDermid & Jury, Special Agents.

Burglaries In Orillia Stores

Three robberies and one attempt occurred on Friday night of last week when two Orillia merchants and the C.P.R. station were robbed of over $60. All of the thefts may or may not have been committed by the same party.

At the Canadian Pacific station the small south window in the ticket office was pried up and the lock broken off. Entry was then made through the open window and the till was then broken open, but found to be empty. The safe was then opened by means of the combination. The safe had two doors, one inside and one outside, each with a combination lock, and they were both opened without force. Mr. Cox, who had charge of the cash, says that he locked the safe carefully before going away on Friday night. The thieves took all the money, $29.95 in cash, one ticket voucher and cancelled ticket, for which $1.50 had been paid, one discharge (c.g.) cheque for $13.25, which had been paid, and was therefore, of no value to anyone exceptitig the operator, and three unpaid c.g. cheques were also taken. These latter are payable only at Orillia.

The same night the store door of J. F. Lawson's grocery store was broken open with a crowbar. Five dollars in silver and 83 coppers were taken from the cash register, a box of Fry's milk chocolates containing twenty-one packages, and one box of gum, containing twenty packages. When Mr. Lawson arrived at his store on Saturday just before 7 a.m. he found the doors wide open and the cash register opened with the "No Sale" sign up. It was not his custom to leave money in the till but after putting the currency in the safe on Friday evening his attention had been called away before he had transferred the silver. Having locked the safe later on without putting it in, he decided to leave it as it was.

The store of J. C. Irwin's next door was entered in the same manner exactly. Two dollars in coppers was taken from the till but nothing else was disturbed.

The same instrument apparently was tried on the door of W. S. Frost & Co's jewellery store, "Diamond Hall." In this case, however, the store being on the nightwatchman's beat the robbers evidently were disturbed before they had time to gain an entrance, the lock being stronger than in the other cases. No trace has yet been found of the miscreants.

Constable W. T. Y. Lee was on the beat between Front and West streets during the absence of Mr. Harry Wright, and the fact that the robbers met with no success there is very creditable to him.—Orillia Times.

A Miniature Battle

NEW YORK, NOV. 14.—A miniature naval battle was fought under the shadow of Brooklyn bridge just after midnight this morning, when detectives, concealed aboard barges and policemen in launches, exchanged shots with armed river pirates. Four detectives were injured, but three pirates were captured and three motorboats loaded with stolen coffee were recovered. Watch had been set, because the Night Dock company complained that coffee valued at more than $2500 had been stolen during the last two nights from their barges in the East River. Early this morning three large motor boats with engines muffled, were seen to draw alongside one of the coffee barges. Three men climbed aboard the barge and began to throw bags of coffee into their motor boats. The hidden detectives ordered the men to throw up their hands, but, instead, each drew a revolver and began to blaze away. The The detectives closed in, however, and a hand to hand fight ensued, during which one of the detectives was thrown into the river and three others were slightlyw ounded. One of the pirates succeeded in getting away in his boat and was rounding the battery at full speed when two police launches intercepted him and effected a capture. The other prisoners were taken on board the barge. They gave their names as Alfred Brecknel, Charles McLeil and Andrew Johnson, all of Jersey City, and each of the men was over 40 years of age.

Mock Rabbit.

Half a pound of steak and one pound sausage, or one pound round steak and half a pound sausage meat, three slices of bread moistened with water, one egg, one onion, quarter pound salt pork, pepper and salt.

Chop the meat. Chop the onion and cook (but do not brown) it in the fat tried out of a small portion of the pork. Add the bread and cook a few minutes. When this is cool, mix all the ingredients and form into a long round roll. The surface can easily be made smooth if the hand is wet with cold water. Lay the remaining pork out in thin slices on top and bake 40 minutes in a hot oven. The sausage may be omitted, if desired, and other seasoning used.

How Lions Behaved In Leipzig When They Escaped From Cage

"Leipzic was on Monday morning the scene of a battle, in its way as unique as that which, 100 years ago, decided the fate of Europe. For there surely is no precedent for eight lions and a tiger being at large in the very heart of a big European city like the Saxon capital. Considering the forces engaged, the consumption of ammunition was enormous," says the Berlin correspondent of the London Daily Telegraph.

"It was on the stroke of midnight when a carman drew up his horses opposite a tavern in Berliner Strasse, in the immediate neighbourhood of the 'largest railway station in the world.' He was driving the travelling home of a happy feline family, consisting of eight lions and lionesses and a tiger. It was a foggy autumn night, and the carter was probably very thirsty. These, at any rate, are the only things to explain why he left the rear end of the van projecting slightly over the tramline. The haziness of the atmosphere was obviously the reason why the next car that came that way bumped into the cage in such a manner as to fling open its grated door.

The Lions Step Out of the Cage.

"No doubt the animals were rudely jolted out of their sleep, and woke with a sense that something not quite in accordance with regulations had happened. They found the door open, and naturally stepped out to see what was the matter. For a few moments they stood in irresolute perplexity. Numbers of tramcars, with fierce, fiery eyes loomed up through the mist. Fleeing figures flitted about, roising cries of fear and appeals for help. The centenary illuminations were repeated last night, and an unusual number of people were about in spite of the lateness of the hour. Their commotion sounded menacing, and the lions made off. No so the tiger, which, with the feeling of diffidence, becoming in minorities, had been the last to emerge from the cage. Doubtless if left to himself he would have joined in the general sauve qui peut, but at that moment a familiar figure appeared on the scene. It was the lady who was accustomed to put the happy family through its tricks, and the hesitating tiger meekly allowed itself to be led to the van and shut in. Feminine inveiglements also induced one of the lions, which had lagged behind the rest, to return to its proper abode.

The Lord High Everything Else.

"Meanwhile the other lions were wandering about 'at a loss what to do,' and were gradually being driven to madness and desperation by the frantic efforts of well-meaning, but indiscreet pursuers.

"In a German town, the fire brigade is the Lord High Everything Else, to which the people turn in all unclassified emergencies. It mustered in strength, but none of its apparatus was of much service in the war against the lions. The police, who also assembled in great force, were better equipped for the fray. Very glad of a little target practice with their revolvers, they quickly took up the pursuit, and soon shots were ringing out on every hand.

Lion on the Motor Bus.

"By this time the carman had been informed that his charges had broken loose. He rushed from the pothouse to find that in its frenzied terror a lion had jumped on to the back of one of his horses. With commendable pluck he flung his arms around the beast, and dragged it off by main force. The terrified lion, looking round for some other means of escape, espied a motor bus and hurriedly scrambled on to the front platform, where it took possession of the driver's seat. Not seeming to find this position an ideal one from the point of view of security, it explored the interior of the vehicle, and eventually descended by the steps into the street.

"But here it was confronted by a line of police heralding their approach with flashes of fire and alarming detonations, so it hastily climbed up on to the driver's seat, where it was soon stretched dead by a rain of revolver bullets.

"Another of the lions jumped over a fence into a garden, whither it was followed by the police, who riddled it with lead.

The Lion Tamer's Appeal.

"The chase now concentrated itself on three of the escaped animals, which had held together. But at this point an element of real tragedy enters into the fantastic comedy of the Leipzic lion hunt. For the tamer came running up in a state of great distress, and implored the police to spare her cherished pets. She assured them that if she was left to deal with the lions by kindness and persuasion she would soon have them all safely secured in their cage. As words were unavailing, she tried to interpose her own body between the deadly bullets and her four-footed friends. But if the lions were amenable to reason that was more than could be said of the police. Their blood was up, and they were deaf to her entreaties. Dragging the wretched woman to the rear, they poured in a rapid and relentless rain of projectiles, and three more lions were added to their bag.

"Six of the runaway lions had now been accounted for, one having been recaptured and five slain. The police had discharged between a hundred and fifty and two hundred bullets, and the skins of their victims were perforated like sieves. The adventures of the two animals which yet remained at large were the oddest feature of the whole incident. As they were gazing round for the hospitable harbour of refuge, their eyes fell on the Blucher Hotel. The door was open and the place looked bright and inviting, so they walked in.

They Go Upstairs.

"Perhaps it was a sound instinct which then prompted the lions to go upstairs. Presently a lady who wanted to put her boots out to be cleaned opened the door of her bedroom. She heard soft and stealthy footsteps, and, looking down the corridor saw to her horror a large animal, which she probably had not the presence of mind to recognize, stalking towards her. With a blood-curdling shriek she slammed the door to, and then she relieved her feelings with a fit of hysterics.

"Along another corridor a Frenchman was roused from his slumbers by a knocking or scratching at his door. Thinking that perhaps some urgent message had come for him, he dragged his sleepy limbs out of bed, and rubbing his eyes with one hand, opened the door with the other.

"It is highly favourable testimony to the conduct of the lions through the whole affair that, on his own admission, he at first sight thought that the animal which he found standing on the mat outside was a calf. But sleepiest man stare when it comes knocking at his bedroom door at midnight in a Leipzic hotel. So the Frenchman opened his eyes very wide, and then he realized that the intruder was the very reverse of a ruminant, and he, too, lost no time in shutting the door.

The Last Two Netted.

"The lions seem to have been discouraged by the reception accorded them upstairs, for they returned to the ground floor, which they were permitted to investigate at their leisure. Whether the police, having attested their valour, thought that the time for discretion had arrived or whether the remonstrances of the tamer had at last prevailed, is not clear, but it appears that no attempt was made to recapture the hotel by storm. What was done was that a number of members of the staff of Barnum's circus, to which the escaped animals belonged, and of the Leipzic Zoological Gardens, were gradually assembled, and between six and seven a general move was made, with the object of taking the two lions alive.

"A position was reconnoitred through the windows, and when it was discovered in which rooms the animals had established themselves, measures were adopted to scare them into the corridors. here they were awaited by trained and skilled hands, who had little difficulty in flinging nets around them, and so bringing their escapade to an end.

LOCAL LAWYERS IN LAKEFIELD COURT

There were a number of cases on the Division Court list before Judge Huycke in the Town Hall, on Tuesday, but two of them took up all the time, the others were adjourned or speedily disposed of.

The case of Wm. Dunford vs. J. R. Payne was an action brought by plaintiff on a due bill for cattle which plaintiff claimed were bought from him. The defendant claimed that plaintiff had agreed to take the lime for a house he was building at 20 cents a bushel on the price of the cattle, and that he had got 50 bushels and defendant had burned another 100 bushels for him which he never came for, and that plaintiff had also got loads of sand and gravel. The plaintiff claimed he need only take what lime he liked and that he had got only 56 bushels. The defendant also claimed that the Statute of Limitations barred the plaintiff and anyway that their differences had all been settled. Many witnesses were called and the case was spirited throughout. Judgment dismissing the case with costs. R. Ruddy, K.C., of Peterborough, acted for plaintiff, and O. A. Langley, for defendant.

Lloyd vs. Little—Was an action brought on a note for a horse. The defendant admitted the note but claimed misrepresentation of the horse. This was denied by plaintiff. The defendant and H. S. Bell swore the horse was of little or no use and was finally shot. The plaintiff and two witnesses swore the horse had been satisfactory to them and had done their work. Judgment was reserved, the judge recommending the parties to settle. O. A. Langley for plaintiff, V. McElderry for defendant.

Ontario Wind Engine vs. Payne—Adjourned until next court. Plaintiffs ordered to deliver itemized particulars of their claim to defendant or his solititor at least 10 days before next court. V. McElderry for plaintiffs, O. A. Langley for defendant.

Waldon vs. Pammett—Adjourned until next court by consent. Mr. Langley for plaintiff, Mr. Gordon for defendant.—Lakefield News.

D.D.D. Opens New Era In Cure of Skin Disease

D. D. D. Prescription—for 15 Years—the Standard Skin Remedy

Mr. Corns' case of eczema was known to almost every hospital and physician of reputation throughout the city of Toronto. His letter is another interesting demonstration of what is being accomplished by the famous specific D. D. D., Prescription.

"I will consider it a favour if you will allow me to add my testimonials to the many hundreds you no doubt have in praise of the great cures effected by the D. D. D. Prescription. I was a sufferer for two years with eczema on the legs and ankles I tried three or four different doctors and none of them did me any good. I got tired of trying their remedies. I then went to a skin specialist but he was no better than they.

I secured a trial bottle of D. D. D. and it did me so much good that I sent for a dollar bottle, also a cake of soap. That is all I used, and I am perfectly well. You are at liberty to use my name for I consider D. D. D. the best remedy in use," I. W. CORNS, 21 Givens St., Toronto, Can.

Ask any druggist to-day for D. D. D. Prescription. He'll tell you it allays the itch instantly—and soon there are signs of cure.

We have handled the remedy for years and regard it as the specific for skin troubles of all kinds. Come in or ask us about D. D. D. Prescription, also about D. D. D. soap especially for tender skins.

We offer the first full size bottle on the guarantee that unless it stops the itch at once, it costs you not a cent.

IN THE WORLD OF SPORT

SIDELIGHTS FROM THE BRITISH SOCCER CAMPS

Notts Forest have a valuable man in Gibson. One week he is leading the forwards, and the next he is playing a dashing game at full back.

Will Statt's brilliant display at full back against the Liverpool Reserve was the one redeeming feature of the Wanderers' Central League match.

Burnley's three away draws have all been made on Lancashire soil. They were, however, still without a league win over a Lancashire rival, home or away.

The Wanderers' "box of tricks," Vizard, had to plough a lone furrow. He proved himself one of the best men seen on the Liverpool ground for many a long day.

Mr. Leitch, the football architect, says that he could make Sheffield Wednesday's ground, Hillsborough, accommodate 150,000 if desired. And Sheffield is so central!

Baverstock in the little time he played gave one a good impression. His countenance makes one take to him some way, and his build is ideal. This from a Liverpol admirer.

Everton and Liverpool are ringing the changes, and no mistake. When will the clubs get their teams settled? Everton have now tried nineteen players and Liverpool twenty to date.

A good deal of humour prevailed at Anfield on Saturday. When one of Liverpool's backs was floored, the crowd started to count "one, two, three, four," etc., counting him out.

Fairfoul doesn't apear to have felt quite at home in English league football yet. But, of course, he has been up against some hot stuff in Hodkinson, Martin, Robertson, and Vizard.

The Livers gained their first home victory at the expense of the Trotters, but if the Bolton skipper had not been injured in the first few minutes of the game, a different tale might have been told.

Things are getting desperate out Heywood way. With a strong forward line—on paper—goals won't come, and the first victory had not materialized up to this morning. Have Nelson proved the first victims?

The unfair football player requires taking in hand by his club's directors. This would prove a far more "telling" method of stamping out rough play than the present system of F. A. investigation and suspension.

Just as there is peace with the A.F.A. the league is on its dignity. It has not been officially invited to the public dinner of the F.A. Surely those who give the F.A. its funds should officially guzzle at its banquet. So says "Truth."

"One who was present" says Liverpool's opening goal should never have been counted, for Baverstock was out of action (in fact, was lying on the ground), when the ball was put through. The Anfielders were indeed lucky in being granted a goal under the circumstances.

Unusual scene at a football match. Huddersfield play the full ninety minutes with one Mann! Ahem!

Wallace doesn't seem so well able to waltz without his partner Halse.

R. G. Brebner, the amateur, is playing brilliantly in goal for Leicester Fosse.

Moore of Glossop will be one of the near future transfers at a thousand pounds.

Barber scored again for the Villa and had several "near shaves" with other shots.

Walker, late of Swindon, has not yet shown international form in Middlesborough's colours.

Riley, late of Burnley, played a great game for Third Lanark in the Glasgow Cup final last week.

Hardy, the erstwhile Anfielder, is at present defying criticism. His great reputation is secure.

Rangers have never won the Glasgow Cup without also winning the Scottish League championship.

Jack Feebery has been described as a long, lusty, loose-limbed, leather-lifter. It's a leviathan description, ain't it?

Hull found the Lions at Swinton a harder nut to crack than anticipated, and sustained their first defeat this year.

The form of Walden, the Spurs' outside right, seldom varies, and he is classed as one of the best wingmen in the country.

Jack Parkinson seemd to be in quite a dashing mood against the Wanderers. Ask the cinematograph man what he thinks.

There isn't a great deal to choose between Hampton, Freeman, Elliott, and Lillycrop on the score of centre forward ability.

THE GRAND OLD GAME OF GOLF

Affords Not Only Pleasant and Effective Physical Exercise But Also Presents a Moral Force---Skill and Accuracy Developed

When young Geary Steffen, alias Willie Ritchie, took to the golf links to train for an important bout, he set an example that may well be followed, not alone by other boxers, but by people of all ages and conditions who desire to improve thir physical and mental efficiency. The lightweight champion declares that the Scottish game has all other training stunts beaten by a mile, and what is good for a boxer is good for all, since life itself is a battle, and strength, health, and nerve are qualities as much needed in the fight for business or professional success as in the ring.

Scotland has long been famous for a certain brand of appetiser that is put up in a bottle, but it does not compare with the old "Scotch croquet." After a few hours on the links the average golfer is prepared to devour raw meat. As a recreation for the tired business man, musical comedy now has a threatening rival in the golf course.

Visit any links and you will find business and professional men shedding their worries and cares—and sometimes their coats and waistcoats—and entering into the game with all the zest and spirit of boys playing "three old cat." You will, if you repeat the visits, see fat men growing leaner and lean men growing fatter. You will see old men, who ought by rights to be sitting in chimney corners, prancing about like colts, with cheeks flushed and rosy, and immensely proud of their prowess.

At first acquaintance golf may not seem attractive, but after a little experience on the links the beginner feels the enthusiasm that sent Willie Ritchie back to Van Cortlandt Park day after day, in the earnest determination to make the first hole in five. It has been said, by cynical onlookers, that golf is a disease, but if so, it is a most beneficent one that prolongs life instead of shortening it. Anyway, there is no demand for a serum to cure the disease.

Golf exercises and develops most of the vital organs and the principal muscles of the body, and in addition the long walks in the open air are naturally highly beneficial. The man who would take a cab or street car to cover three blocks in the city will walk ten miles over a golf course, and finish strong and hearty and able to sit up and take nourishment in large quantities.

The skill and accuracy that must be brought to bear in driving and putting necessitate steady nerves and a keen vision, and the exercise makes the golfer gulp down vast quantities of ozone. This takes the kinks out of decadent lungs and makes deep breathing a habit. On the links a fat man develops suppleness, and many gradually decrease in weight, and a multitude of women inclined to obesity have found golf the best reducer.

The late Tom Morris, who was known all over Scotland and England as "the father of golf," was an excellent example of what golf will do in warding off the disabilities of old age. He was nearing four score and ten when he died, and when well past his eightieth year his arm was almost as strong and his eye as keen as ever. His life was devoted to golf, more than that of any other man who ever lived, and he reaped the reward in a long, contented and happy life, practically free from illness.

There are many books telling how to play golf, and some of them are excellent. A perusal of one of them, merely to gain a general idea of the game and its technical terms, is desirable, but do not be discouraged if the writer makes golf seem to be very complex. The best may to learn golf is to play it. At almost any golf course you will find plenty of willing critics, whose advice, if none too complimentary, will be of value and will goad you to greater effort.

You will remember those who sneer at your style of play, and it will be a happy day, and one long to be treasured in memory, when you have so improved your game as to be able to defeat one of your former detractors. You will not mar the pleasant occasion by "rubbing it in" on your vanquished rival. Far be it from you. You may casually remark that he does very well for one of his size and intelligence, using the same tone effected by an old man when he pats a small boy on the head and calls him "bub." You will magnanimously promise to take a day off some day and give him a few lessons. But you will not bespiteful or mean, nor say anything that might hurt his feelings or recall to his mind the aspersions he once cast on you. Of course not.

Golf has a moral danger, however, in the temptation to the beginner to use his hands or feet, instead of his niblick, in getting a ball out of a difficult place. If nobody is looking, what difference does it make? you say to yourself. Doubtless many men who have enviable reputations for honesty have cheated themselves in this manner. Then, too, there is the incentive to make use of such lurid languages you may have picked up by association with bad men, when the pesky ball, with the uncanny devilishness of inanimate things, seeks refuge on the most difficult spot on the course. Not even a collar button can use such apparently impish and malevolent intelligence in searching out a hiding place as the little pellet of guttapercha that answers to thedescription of a golf ball.

Not until you have overcome the wild desire to cheat yourself, and eradicated from your system all tendency to cuss words, can you claim a place among the imperturbable elect, for there is an unwritten law that the true golfer must have moral as well as physical and mental self-control.

One of the most attractive things about golf is that it looks so easy, to the novice, to swat the ball precisely on the trade mark and drive it in any desired direction. It does look easy—but the first attempt usually results in an upturning of a sod somewhere in the general neighbourhood of the ball, or in sending the pellet in a very different direction from the intended route. Such a failure arouses the "dander" of anybody with sporting blood, and he determines then and there to conquer that ball and make it eat out of his hand. That's the way thegolf fiend usually begins—a casual visit to a course, a condescending smile on his features as he watches the game, the acceptance of an invitation to "have a try," humiliating failure, and then, with determination writ large on his features, he is off. He has caught the golf disease.

Of course, the golfomaniac is crazy—stark, raving mad—or he wouldn't go about in the hottest or coldest weather, chasing an innocent little ball that never harmed him or his, hammering it with a big club. Of course, he's loony, but then, as Eva Tangney says: "It's great to be crazy."

DEATHS TOTAL 256

Day Passes Without Further Reports of Fatal Disaster

MAJOR'S CREW IN PORT

PORT HURON, Mich., Nov. 15.—For the first time since Sunday, a day has passed without revealing more lives lost in the storm which passed over the great lakes in the early part of the week. Only one additional boat disaster developed yesterday and that was the wrecking of the steamer Major of Cleveland, off Whitefish Point in Lake Superior. She was abandoned by her crew Thursday night after a futile effort had been made to weather the second storm of the week. The crew was picked up by the steamer Byers. The ship was in a sinking condition when the crew left her, the funnel gone and the after works washed away.

Last night the life loss among sailors is estimated at approximately 256 and the property loss is figured at more than $5,000,000. The property loss includes the score or more of vessels driven on the rocks or shore and partially or totally destroyed. One hundred and ninety-five lives were taken on Lake Huron, if the approximate figures are correct; 48 lives were lost in Lake Superior, seven in Lake Michigan and six on Lake Erie.

The list of wrecked vessels that resulted in death and the lives lost compiled yesterday follows:

Lake Huron wrecks—John A. McGean, crew of 28; Charles S. Price, 28; James Carruthers, 25; Regina, 20; Wexford, 20; Argus, 23; Hydrus, 23; Scott, 28.

Lake Superior—Leafield, 15; William Nottingham, 3; Henry B. Smith, 30.

Lake Michigan—Plymouth, 7.

Lake Erie—Lightship, No. 82, 6.

A total of 256.

Besides the foregoing list there are more than a score of vessels which were either totally or partially destroyed without loss of life.

Peril To Other Ships.

SAULT STE. MARIE, Mich., Nov. 15.—The steamer Barnum, upbound, picked up the derelict steamer Major, which had been abandoned by its crew Thursday night on Lake Superior.

It was feared she would be a menace to navigation and efforts were made to get the Tuscarora to look after her. Before communication could be had with the Tuscarora, however the Barnum brought the vessel behind Whitefish, where she now lies The smokestacks and after cabins are gone. Great difficulty is experienced in wreck operations on the Hartwell and Nottingham. It was expected that the Hartwell would be released to-day, but no news of her release has yet reached the Soo.

The Tuscarora is standing by the Nottingham. The weather has been fair, with a fresh northeast wind and occasional snow flurries.

To Patrol Shore.

GODERICH, Nov. 15. — Owing to the inadequate system of patrolling the shores of Lake Huron Mayor Reid has been in communication with the Government at Ottawa asking that assistance be given in the work As a result he received official notice that the Government boat Lambton will leave Windsor at once and will patrol the shore from Grand Bend as far north as is deemed necessary.

Capt. McDonald of the life-saving crew also received notice to patrol the shores.

Relics of "Henry B. Smith."

MARQUETTE, Mich., Nov. 15.—Four oars and a pikepole marked "Henry B. Smith" were picked up on the shore east of Marquette in the height of the storm Sunday night, and the finding of the oars and other small wreckage tends to confirm the fears of the last two days. It is thought that the boat gave up the attempt to make the Soo and sought to battle her way to shelter east of Keeweenah.

Relief Steamer Starts.

CLEVELAND, O., Nov. 15. — The steamer John W. Gates, one of the largest vessels in the Pittsburg Steamship Co.'s fleet, left Thursday on a relief expedition up the lakes to aid the score or more of vessels reported stranded. The Gates was fitted with supplies of all kinds.

WAS HE A BURGLAR?

Dead Canal Worker Had Directory of Unsafe Doors.

ST. CATHARINES, Nov. 15.—Quite a mystery is surrounding the man killed on the Niagara and St Catharines Railway at Thorold Wednesday night, whose name has been given as John Yeagley of Berlin. The police of that city can find no trace of any relatives or any person who ever heard of him. The man was apparently about 44 years of age. Tonight mate while working on the Welland ship canal work the man had talked as if he had not a living relative, but had visited various parts of the world, having been a cowboy in Mexico when 10 years of age. The finding of a small steel saw in his pocket, along with entries in a memorandum book regarding the safety of doors in the neighborhood, is regarded with suspicion by the police of Merritton and Thorold, where robberies have been frequent of late.

Conspirators Sentenced.

PARIS, Nov. 15.—A despatch from Saigon, French Indo-China, says that 150 persons convicted in connection with the bomb outrage which occurred at Hanoi last April received sentences of from five to twenty years' penal servitude. The boy leader of the conspirators, aged seventeen, and two others, were sentenced to life imprisonment.

NEW CONVENIENT TRAIN TO WINNIPEG.

CANADIAN PACIFIC

The popularity of Canadian Pacific service, and the excellence of that road's equipment, has ben so greatly appreciated by the travelling public that it has been found necessary to put into service an entirely new Through Standard Express Train between Toronto and Winnipeg.

Commencing Sunday, October 26th, the "Gate City Express" will leave Toronto at 2.30 p.m., and will run daily thereafter, arirving Winnipeg at 8.25 a.m. second morning. The train will consist of the highest-class modern equipment; Observation Compartment Car, Standard Sleeping Cars, Tourist Sleeping Car, Dining Car, First-class Coach and Colonist Car. This will be found the most convenient and best train between Toronto and Winnipeg on account of the daylight departure from Toronto at an hour when the Union Station is not badly congested, and also on account of the early hour of arrival at Winnipeg.

The present "Vancouver Express" will continue to leave Toronto at 10.20 p.m. daily and will consist of the same equipment as the "Gate City Express." This train is the best to take for points west of Winnipeg, but for Winnipeg and east the "Gate City Express" is the right train to travel by.

Full particulars from any Canadian Pacific Agent or write M. G. Murphy, District Passenger Agent, Toronto.

VARSITY STADIUM, TORONTO, Nov. 15.—About nine thousand fans at 'Varsity Stadium, Life or death game for 'Varsity. Nine hundred rooters under Dutch McPherson made things lively before the game. Box office accommodation too slim. At 2.30 a thousand people were hanging over the rack fence at each end. McGill is in full strength, Williamson replacing Abbott at centre scrimmage. Timmins did not start as was expected. 'Varsity's cripples were on the mark when Referee Ben Simpson and Dan Gilmour gave final instructions. Captain Maynard on crutches. Gage limped out also. Reaume, outside wing, the only cripple, covered. 'Varsity won the toss and defended the south goal. A lazy breeze behind them. No sun and field in fair condition after the rain.

First quarter—Varsity 0, McGill 0
Second Quarter. Total score, McGill 11, Varsity 2.

Pastel People

By RUTH CAMERON

There are a great many people in this funny old world who seem to take a peculiar pride and pleasure in the enjoyments and possibilities which they miss.

For instance, there are people who are proud of their disdain for bright colours. Subdued greys and mauves, respectable dark blues and dull browns are the only class of colours for which they have any use. If a costume has a splendid dash of vivid colour about it they call it unrefined. The cheerful living room which has not been kept strictly to the subdued tones, offends their artistic sense. They can look at the most magnificent gorgeous sunset that ever was splashed across Nature's canvas without a thrill; it takes some pastel effect in pale grey with a half hint of pink to reach their pastel hearts.

And then there are people who take pride in not being in touch with the times. I know a most estimable lady who has a hundred perfectly good reasons for pride but passes them all by to be proud of the fact that she cannot endure a telephone and cannot even make herself heard over one. Although she is a wealthy woman, she will not have a telephone in her home, and she is as proud of this fact and makes as much display of it as the crudest newly-rich would make of her grand, new phone.

I know another woman who dislikes the very sight of automobiles and will never get into one. She also is very proud of her prejudice and no one is long in her company before she has impressed upon them the fact that she considers automobiles vulgar and that although she could quite afford to keep a machine she prefers horses.

I cannot see the sense of all this.

Why should it be considered an evidence of crudity to like bright colours? Is God, or whatever creative force you acknowledge, crude? He certainly doesn't dislike bright colours. Think of the vivid blaze of blue, the swimming seas of gold, the flame of burnt orange, the blood-red of dawn, with which He decks out the heavens, which are, according to theology and inherent feeling, His particular dwelling place! Somehow I cannot believe that these people who shudder at a bright colour have better taste than God Himself.

And isn't it childish to disdain any useful thing, just to prove your superiority and exclusiveness? Why not accept the automobile for speed and convenience, the horse for its own distinctive charm, steam heat for comfort, the open fire for good cheer, the telephone for utility, the personal interview for pleasure, and be thankful to the Creative Spirit that made this such an interesting and varied world.

If a man were to stop up his ears and live only in his four other senses he would thereby elect himself to a limited and exclusive class, but he certainly wouldn't be any happier, nor have any particular reason for pride on account of his exclusiveness, and the same holds true of pastel people.

Stock Markets

A. H. Stratton & Co., Brokers, report the following:

The condition of the market in general is good. The technical situation is strong. The money situation is improving. The general news conditions is complicated but we see signs of betterment. There is no doubt that the absorption of good stocks is continual, but only on declines. The buying of the large interests does not follow up yet. The shorts raise prices as a general thing except where investors find it advisable to bid.

We think it will be found that the rest from speculation has raised a new lot of traders better educated, to be sure, but still with the speculative longing of human nature. This will result in activity as soon as the general financial and political situation shows more manifest improvement, when prices should be higher than they are now in U.P., St. Paul, S.P., Atchison, Baltimore and Ohio, N.P., A.C.P., and United States Steel.

IN FLAMES AT SEA

Spanish Steamer Rescued and Towed into Port

PASSENGERS ARE TAKEN OFF

HAMILTON, Bermuda, Nov. 17.—The Spanish steamer Balmes, with her cotton cargo on fire, was towed into St. George's harbor yesterday morning by the tugs Gladiator and Powerful, convoyed by the Cunard liner Pannonia. The Cunarder had on board 103 passengers of the Balmes, taken off the burning ship Friday morning in mid-ocean and while heavy seas were running after a forced draught race to the rescue in answer to wireless calls for help.

When the Balmes came to anchor in the harbor her hatches were lifted. Great clouds of smoke belched forth, but powerful pumps soon sent tons of water into her hold and drowned out the fire. The steamer is in good condition except for the damage done by the water and the fire in her cargo.

The fire on the Balmes was discovered Wednesday night at eleven o'clock, while the steamer was plowing eastward on her trip to Cadiz, Spain, from Galveston and Havana. The flames were in hold No. 2, and spread rapidly, the smoke penetrating to the engine-room and the stokehold. The second engineer and several members of the crew were partially suffocated, but stuck valiantly to their posts.

The wireless operator, by direction of Captain Ruiz, then began sending out calls for assistance. The call reached the Pannonia, some 180 miles to the north, bound for New York, and Captain Robert Capper answered that he would come to the Spaniards' aid. The British cruiser Suffolk also answered the Balmes' plea, but the message she sent was indistinct.

Turning south, the Pannonia, under forced draught, raced at top speed toward the spot where the Balmes had said she was in distress. All Wednesday night and throughout Thursday Captain Capper pressed the Pannonia. Thursday night the Spaniard hove in sight of the Cunarder, which was soon to leeward alongside the burning vessel.

Captain Capper stood by the Balmes until morning, and then took off her passengers, the captain and crew electing to remain on board their ship to navigate her and fight the fire. When the transfer of passengers had taken place, the Pannonia and Balmes headed for Bermuda.

WILL DEPORT MANIAC.

Man With Penchant For Writing Must Go Home.

TORONTO, Nov. 17.—An order has been issued for the deportation of George F. Robinson, Richmond street west, who appeared in the Police Court Saturday and was found insane. This action, which will be performed by the Dominion immigration officers during the next two weeks, puts an end to a case which, although it has been concealed from the public up to the present, is of an uncommon nature.

Robinson's insanity was suspected from a mania he exhibited for writing letters to prominent persons and institutions in Canada and Britain. Several of these missives were published in the British journals, in which he wrote about conditions in Canada and the advisability of coming to this country to make a living.

Reels Stuck In Mud.

MONTREAL, Nov. 17.—While Mr. Cohen, his wife and four children were watching their home burn at No. 2,559 Cartier street Saturday the hose wagon was stuck in the mud on the street a few blocks away. The family had a narrow escape from death in the blaze. The street was in a fearful condition, so one fire horse balked, and the wagon stuck fast. Other horses had to pull it out.

TIDAL WAVE SUGGESTED.

Marine Men Say Recent Storm Was Not an Ordinary One.

SARNIA, Nov. 17.—The theory that a tidal wave swept Lake Huron and caused the heavy loss to lives and shipping, is being advanced by old mariners of this place.

The steamer Calcite of the Wyandotte Transportation Co., bound for Port Colborne in charge of Captain Joseph Parsons, has arrived in Detroit and reports that on Sunday, Nov. 9, just abreast of Long Point, Captain Parsons, who was on the bridge, heard a terrific rumbling, washing sound far aft, and turning beheld a gigantic wave, seemingly about 30 feet high, sweeping toward his boat at a terrific rate.

His vessel was traveling straight ahead of it and there was not time to turn and head into the wave, so he continued to run before it. With a crash and crunch the wave struck the ship aft, tons of water pouring over her stern up over the after cabins and engine house and curling high up around the smokestack.

The ship leaped ahead from the force of the wave, and hundreds of tons of water rushed down the deck to the forward end of the craft. The skylights on the top of the engine house were broken in, but no other damage was done to the Calcite. Had the vessel been taken broadside by the wave which seemed to come from nowhere, the vessel would have been wrcked without a doubt.

With the news of the wave on Erie, local vesselmen are inclined to believe that just such a wave swept over Lake Huron. The very bottom of the lake was affected by the storm as is shown by the delivering of the terribly decomposed body and wreckage from the fish tug Searchlight at Harbor Beach. The Searchlight disappeared on Lake Huron, April 23 1907, and went down in history as a mysterious disappearance. Nothing from that day was heard of her until the body and wreckage washed ashore last Wednesday.

Car Killed Montreal Woman.

MONTREAL, Nov. 17.—Failure to guage the speed of an oncoming car in endeavoring to cross in front of it, resulting in the death on Saturday afternoon of Mrs. Fitzjames E. Browne, wife of the president of the House of Browne, real estate brokers.

Pig's Bite Fatal.

HALIFAX, Nov. 17.—Jas. Smith, aged 70 years, of Upper Falmouth, was bitten by a pig on the right leg yesterday, severing the main artery. Smith bled to death before medical aid reached him.

DID THEY GO DOWN?

Seven Ships in Lake Disaster Not Accounted For

MORE BODIES COME ASHORE

SARNIA, Ont., Nov. 17.—With the identification of the overturned steamer as the Charles S. Price, one mystery has been solved, but the more serious question now being asked is "Where are the steamers Hydrus, Argus, Scott, Carruthers, Wexford, Regina and McGean?"

The opinion expressed by prominent marine men of the city seems to be unanimous that these vessels are lying in water from 80 to 100 feet deep within a radius of 30 miles of Sarnia. A possibility exists that some of these vessels may be floating about the lake partially submerged. Not much hope is entertained that any of them will come ashore. However, should another storm something of the proportions of the recent one occur, there would be a chance for these boats to be washed ashore.

Up to late last night seven bodies from the steamer Price have come ashore, and are now in Sarnia. They are John Groundwater, chief engineer of Cleveland; Herbert Jones of Superior, Wis.; I. W. Morrey of Detroit; Walter McInnis, nea Owen Sound; Ernest J. Patton of Escanaba, Mich.; A. McIntosh, of St. Clair, and Chris. Faulkner, of New York.

Another body, thought to be one of the Price's crew, is here, but Milton Smith, former first engineer, and familiar with the crew, is unable to identify it.

More Bodies Found.

GODERICH, Nov. 17.—Ten more bodies of members of the crew of the James Carruthers have been found near Port Albert, and are lying in a local undertaker's rooms awaiting identification.

Two other bodies from the McGean, found at Bayfield several days ago, were not brought here till yesterday, some difficulty having been met owing to the undertaker at Bayfield not wanting to give up the bodies, in spite of the order that all bodies are to be brought here. All wore lifepreservers, one body being completely clothed and wearing an overcoat and mitts. From the description given by the owners of the boat he answers the description of E. Ollson of Chicago, a Swede.

Nothing was found on the other body to make identification possible.

The tug Horton picked up lifeboat No. 1 of the Argus just outside the north breakwater, standing on end, because of one of her forward air tanks being gone. The boat was badly broken.

Captain Whitney of the Lake Carriers' Association has arrived here and has made his headquarters at the Bedford. Everything that can be done to identify victims will be done through that office. He left yesterday morning on the tug Toronto for up shore near Kincardine, returning in the afternoon, but nothing was found.

Captain Babb yesterday received a message from the constable at Zurich saying that some person was giving the farmers along the shore permission to remove the wreckage. He will leave in the morning for St. Joseph, where he will search with the constable for this man and also store away what is left.

Northern Queen Released.

SARNIA, Nov. 17.—The steamer Northern Queen of the Merchants' Mutual Line, has been released from her dangerous position at Kettle Point. Early Saturday the tugs Fisher and Jackson went out to the wreck and worked all day removing the sand that had formed around the craft since she grounded. It was found that she was imbedded ten feet in the bank.

Goderich Holds Memorial.

GODERICH, Nov. 17.—A service was held in Knox Church yesterday afternoon, in memory of those who lost their lives in the lake storm. The Oddfellows, Masons, Foresters Orangemen and Sons of Scotland, also the town council, were all present in a body. The church choir was assisted by the choirs of all the other churches. The church was jammed to the doors, fully 1,700 people being present. Rev. J. B. Totheringham, rector of St. George's, preached.

Lashed To the Wheel.

GODERICH, Nov. 17.—A report has been going around town to-day that a board has been found down near Naftel's Point, on which was written in pencil: "I am with the boat lashed to the wheel.—B." It was probably written by Bruce Cameron, of the Wexford, as his body has not yet been found.

Memorial at Toronto.

TORONTO, Nov. 17.—A big crowd gathered in Massey Hall yesterday afternoon at a service in memory of the sailors who lost their lives in the terrible storm on the great lakes last Sunday. James S. Potter, superintendent of work among sailors, recounted his experience on the steamer Huronic, which passed through the heart of the storm, and addresses were delivered by Rev. Dr. Hincks Rev. Dr. Gilmour and others.

Funerals In Collingwood.

COLLINGWOOD, Ont., Nov. 17.—The body of Orin Gordon, wheelsman of the Wexford, which reached here Friday night, was interred in the Baptist Cemetery Saturday afternoon, and was followed to its last resting place by a large number of relatives and friends.

Four funerals in twenty-four hours seem to be a record here, and unhappily no one knows how many more are to follow.

Sir William Meredith Finishes Compensation Bill

RAILROADS ARE EXCLUDED

TORONTO, Nov. 17.—Sir William Meredith, special commissioner of the Ontario Government on workmen's compensation, has submitted his final report to the Lieutenant-Governor and the Cabinet.

The commissioner points out that this problem is one of the most pressing in the country, that the present law works an injustice to the workingman, and it was with this idea in view that he endeavored to formulate his measure throughout.

The new Compensation Act of the province will be along the lines of the German law, with modification. The two great points which had to be settled primarily were that the injured workman and his dependents would receive the compensation to which they were entitled, and that the small employer should not be ruined by having to pay compensation for the death or permanent disability of his workmen caused by no fault of his.

By the new bill industrial diseases are put on the same footing as to the right of compensation as accidents. Power would be given by regulations to an executive board to add to the number or manner of disease it thought best.

The commissioner makes quite plain his preference for a board to take charge of the whole matter in its adjustment and carrying out, although an American expert had feared a political interference.

Sir William believes that no hard and fast rule should be laid down for the reserve fund, and that it should be left to the board to determine. The provision allows that the employers shall not be unduly or unfairly burdened, and that on failure of the board to maintain the fund Governor-in-council may require the board to make a supplementary assessment of a necessary sum.

The commissioner explains the outline of the draft bill which he submitted at the last session of the Legislature, and states that inasmuch as the inclusion of the railways was opposed by the three principal steam railways and others he saw no reason why they should contribute to an accident fund.

Schedule two also includes telephone and navigation companies, which are exceptional in character. In order to ensure additional security in this schedule provisions are embodied to require an employer to commute weekly or periodical payments and to keep workmen insured against accidents.

In referring to the exclusion from the act of farming, wholesale and retail establishments and domestic service, the ground is taken that the state of public opinion would hardly justify this step as yet. Provision is made to bring them in when the board sees fit.

The new act entirely abrogates the common law doctrine that an employe takes on the risks incidental to his employment, as based on the fallacious assumption that the wages a man receives are to include compensation for those risks.

Another serious matter is that to which when a workman is guilty of contributory negligence, with the employer also negligent, the employer is not liable no matter how slight the part of the injured man. In the new bill, contributory negligence shall not be a bar to compensation but shall be taken into account in the settlement.

In Sir William's judgment the furthest the Legislature should go in allowing the intervention of the courts should be to provide that the Lieutenant-Governor-in-Council may state a case for the opinion of a divisional court of the appellate division of the Supreme Court of Ontario.

The crown is not included in the bill, but will call on the board in case of accidents to Government employes.

In the case of injury traceable solely to wilful or serious misconduct the commissioner's bill provides no compensation unless the injury results in death or serious disablement.

"The question in my mind is not what other countries have done," says the commissioner, "but what does justice demand should be done. I have no fear that it will handicap the manufacturers."

He shows that the workman will suffer under the new law to the following extent: (1) Loss of wages for seven days, if disability does not last longer; (2) pain and suffering for injury; (3) outlay for medical treatment; (4) loss of 45 per cent. of wages while disability lasts. All that the employer bears is the 55 per cent. of the injured party's wages while off duty. The burden which the workman is required to bear he cannot shift upon the shoulders of anyone else, but the employer may, and no doubt will, shift his burden upon the shoulders of the community, or, if he has any difficulty in doing that, will by reducing the wages of his workmen compel them to bear part of it.

The bill also calls for a substantial contribution from the Provincial Government.

STEAMER IDENTIFIED.

Overturned Steamer Proves To Be the Charles S. Price.

SARNIA, Ont., Nov. 17.—The mystery of the "mystery ship" is solved. The great steel freighter Charles S. Price, over five hundred feet long, lies on the bottom of Lake Huron, where she turned turtle on Sunday last during the awful storm which swept the lakes.

Diver Baker, of Detroit, in company with Captain Bob Thompson, on the tug Sport, unlocked the secret of the lake at break of day Saturday morning in short order, after disappearing beneath the surface of the water in his diving outfit.

For nearly a week anxious mothers and wives have waited for some inkling as to the identity of the big steamer. But not until Saturday, with a smooth lake and favorable conditions, could the name of the ship be learned.

When the tug steamed into the river from the lake Saturday morning the suspense tried the nerves of the marine men and anxious relatives. Captain Thompson and Diver Baker revealed the name of the steamer to the eager reporters. There is no boat under the Price, as Captain Thompson dragged his anchor around the sunken steamer and found no obstacle.

The Price appears to have turned over in turtle fashion and without a moment's warning to the crew. Diver Baker found no bodies. He says he believes there may be some, but he couldn't get inside the steamer to learn. It is probable that work will now be immediately begun by the owners of the Price.

"That Affair Next Door"

By ANNA KATHARINE GREEN

Thy fidgeted (which I had expected), and cast secret looks of almost comic appeal at their brother, but he pretended not to see them, being disposed for some reason to grant my request. Taking advantage of the momentary hesitation that ensued, I made them all three my most conciliatory bow, and said as I retreated behind the portiere:

"I shall give my orders for luncheon now. Meanwhile, I hope the young ladies will feel perfectly free in my house. All that I have is at their command." And was gone before they could protest.

When I next saw them, they were upstairs in my front room. They were seated together in the window and looked miserable enough to have a little diversion. Going to my closet I brought out a band-box. It contained my best bonnet.

"Young ladies, what do you think of this?" I inquired, taking the bonnet out and carefully placing it on my head.

I myself consider it a very becoming article of headgear, but their eyebrows went up in a scarcely complimentary fashion.

"You don't like it?" I remarked. "Well, I think a great deal of young girls' taste; I shall send it back to Madame More's to-morrow."

"I don't think much of Madam More," observed Isabella, "and after Paris——"

"Do you like La Mole better?" I inquired, bobbing my head to and fro before the mirror, the better to conceal my interest in the venture I was making.

"I don't like any of them but D'Aubigny," returned Isabella. "She charges twice what La Mole does——"

Twice! What are these girls' purses made of, or rather their father's!

"But she has the chic we are accustomed to see in French millinery. I shall never go anywhere else."

"We were recommended to her in Paris," put in Caroline, more languidly. Her interest was only half engaged by this frivolous topic.

"But did you never have one of La Mole's hats?" I pursued, taking down a hand mirror, ostensibly to get the effect of my bonnet in the back, but really to hide my interest in their unconscious faces.

"Never!" retorted Isabella. "I would not patronize the thing."

"Nor I?" I urged, carelessly, turning towards Caroline.

"No; I have never been inside her shop."

"Then whose is—" I began and stopped. A detective doing the work I was would not give away the object of his questions so recklessly.

"Then who is," I retorted, "the best person after D'Aubigny? I never can pay her prices. I should think it wicked."

"O don't ask us," protested Isabella. "We have never made a study of the best bonnet-maker. At present we wear hats."

And having thus thrown their youth in my face, they turned away to the window again, not realizing that the middle-aged lady they regarded with much disdain had just succeeded in making them dance to her music most successfully.

The luncheon I ordered was elaborate, for I was determind that the Misses Van Burnam should see that I knew how to serve a fine meal, and that my plates were not always better than my viands.

I had invited in a couple of other guests so that I should not seem to have put myself out for two girls and as they were quiet people like myself, the meal passed most decorously. When it was finished, the Misses Caroline and Isabella had lost some of their consequential airs and I really think the deference they have since showed me is due more to the surprise thy felt at the perfection of this dainty luncheon, than to any considerate appreciation of my character and abilities.

They left at three o'clock, still without news of Mrs. Van Burnam, and being positive by this time that the shadows were thickening about this family, I saw them depart with some regret and a positive feling of commiseration. Had they been reared to a proper reverence for their elders, how much more easy it would have been to see earnestness in Caroline and affectionate impulses in Isabella.

The evening papers added but little to my knowledge. Great disclosures were promised, but no hint given of their nature. The body at the Morgue had not been identified by any of the hundrds who had viewed it, and Howard still refused to acknowledge it as that of his wife. The morrow was awaited with anxiety.

So much for the public press!

At 12 o'clock at night, I was again seated in my window. The house next door had been lighted since ten and I was in momentary expectation of its nocturnal visitor. He came promptly at the hour set, alighted from the carriage with a bound, shut the carriage-door with a slam, and crossed the pavement with cheerful ceirity. His figure was not so positively like, nor yet so positively unlike, that of the supposed murderer that I could dfinitely say, "That is he," or "This is not he," and I went to bed puzzled, and not a little burdened by a sense of the responsibility imposed upon me in this matter.

And so passed the day between the murder and the inquest.

IX.

Developments.

M. Gryce called about nine o'clock next morning.

"Well," said he, "what about the visitor who came last night?"

"Like and unlike," I answered. "Nothing could induce me to say he is the man we want, and yet I would not dare to swear he was not."

"You are in doubt, then, concerning him?"

"I am."

Mr. Gryce bowed, reminded me of the inquest, and left. Nothing was said about the hat.

At ten o'clock I prepared to go to the place designated by him. I had never attended an inquest in my life, and I felt a little flurried in consequence, but by the time I had tied the strings of my bonnet (the despised bonnet, which, by the way, I did not return to More's), I had conquered this weakness, and acquired a demeanor more in keeping with my very important position as chief witness in a serious police investigation.

I had sent for a carriage to take me, and I rode away from my house amid the shouts of some half dozen boys collected on the curb-stone. But I did not allow myself to feel dashed by this publicity. On the contrary I held my head as erect as nature intended, and my back kept the line my good health warrants. The path of duty has its thorny passages, but it is for strong minds like mine to ignore them.

Promptly at ten o'clock I entered the room reserved for the inquest, and was ushered to the seat appointed me. Though never a self-conscious woman, I could not but be aware of the many eyes that followed me, and endeavoured so to demean myself that there should be no question as to my respectable standing in the community. This I considered due to the memory of my father, who was very much in my thoughts that day.

The Coroner was already in his seat when I entered, and though I did not perceive the good face of Mr. Gryce anywhere in his vicinity, I had no doubt he was within ear-shot. Of the other people I took a small note, save of the honest scrub-woman, of whose red face and anxious eyes under a preposterous benefit (which did not come from La Mole's), I caught vague glimpses as the crowd between us surged to and fro.

None of the Van Burnams were visible, but this did not necessarily mean that they were absent. Indeed, I was very sure, from certain indications, that more than one member of the family would be seen in the small room connecting with the large one in which we witnesses sat with the jury.

The policeman, Carroll, was the first man to talk. He told of my stopping him on his beat and of his entrance into Mr. Van Burnam's house with the scrub-woman. He gave the details of his discovery of the dead woman's body on the parlour floor, and insisted that no one—here he looked very hard at me—had been allowed to touch the body till relief had come to him from Headquarters.

Mrs. Boppert, the scrub-woman, followed him; and if she was watched by no one else in that room, she was watched by me. Her manner before the Coroner was no more satisfactory, according to my notion, than it had been in Mr. Van Burnam's parlour. She gave a very perceptible start when they spoke her name, and looked quite scared when the Bible was held out towards her. But she took the oath notwithstanding, and with her testimony the inquiry began in earnest.

"What is your name?" asked the Coroner.

As this was something she could not help knowing, she uttered the necessary words glibly, though in a way that showed she resented his impertinence in asking her what he already knew.

"Where do you live? And what do you do for a living?" rapidly followed.

She replied that she was a scrub-woman and cleaned people's houses, and having said this, she assumed a very dogged air, which I thought strange enough to raise a question in the minds of those who watched her. But no one else seemed to regard it as anything but the embarrassment of ignorance.

"How long have you known the Van Burnam family?" the Coroner went on.

"Two years, sir, come next Christmas."

"Have you often done work for them?"

"I clean the house twice a year, fall and spring."

"Why were you at this house two days ago"

"To scrub the kitchen floors, sir, and put the pantries in order."

"Had you received notice to do so?"

"Yes, sir, through Mr. Franklin Van Burnam."

"And was that the first day of your work there"

"No, sir; I had been there all the day before."

"You don't speak loud enough," objected the Coroner; "remember that every one in this room wants to hear you."

She looked up, and with a frightened air surveyed the crowd about her. Publicity evidently made her most uncomfortable, and her voice sank rather than rose.

"Where did you get the key of the house, and by what door did you enter?"

"I went in at the basement, sir, and I got the key at Mr. Van Burnam's agent in Dey Street. I had to go for it; sometimes they send it to me; but not this time."

"And now relate your meeting with the policeman on Wednesday morning, in front of Mr. Van Burnam's house."

She tried to tell her story, but she made awkward work of it, and they had to ply her with questions to get at the smallest fact. But finally she managed to repeat what we already knew, how she went with the policeman into the house, and how they stumbled upon the dead woman in the parlour.

Further than this they did not question her, and I, Amelia Butterworth, had to sit in silence and see her go back to her seat, redder than before, but with a strangely satisfied air that told me she had escaped more easily than she had expected. And yet Mr. Gryce had been warned that she knew more than appeared, and by one in whom he seemed to have placed some confidence!

The doctor was called next. His testimony was most important, and contained a surprise for me and more than one surprise for the others. After a short preliminary examination, he was requested to state how long the woman had been dead when he was called in to examine her.

'More than twelve and less than eighteen hours," was his quiet reply.

"Had the rigor mortis set in?"

"No; but it began very soon after."

"Did you examine the wounds made by the falling shelves and the vases that tumbled with them?"

"I did."

"Will you describe them?"

He did so.

'And now" — there was a pause in the Coroner's question which roused us all to its importance, "which of these many serious wounds was in your opinion the cause of her death?"

The witness was accustomed to such scenes, and was perfectly at home in them. Surveying the Coroner with a respectful air, he turned slowly towards the jury and answered in a slow and impressive manner:

"I feel ready to declare, sirs, that none of them did. She was not killed by the falling of the cabinet upon her."

"Not killed by the falling shelves! Why not? Were they not sufficiently heavy, or did they not strike her in a vital place?"

"They were heavy enough, and they struck her in a way to kill her if she had not been already dead when they fell upon her. As it was, they simply bruised a body from which life had already departed."

As this was putting it very plainly, many of the crowd who had not been acquainted with these facts previously, showed their interest in a very unmistakable maner; but the Coroner, ignoring these symptoms of growing excitement, hastened to say:

'This is a very serious statement you are making, doctor. If she did not die from the wounds inflicted by the objects which fell upon her, from what cause did she die? Can you say that her death was a natural one, and that the falling of the shelves was merely an unhapy accident following it?"

"No sir; her death was not natural. She was killed, but not by the falling cabinet."

"Killed, and not by the cabinet? How then? Was there any other wound upon her which you regard as mortal?"

"Yes, sir. Suspecting that she had perished form other means than appeared, I made a most rigid examination of her body, when I discovered under the hair in the nape of the neck, a minute spot, which, upon probing, I found to be the end of a small, thin point of steel. It had been thrust by a careful hand into the most vulnerable part of the body, and death must have ensued at once."

This was too much for certain excitable persons present, and a momentary disturbance arose, which, however, was nothing to that in my own breast.

So! so! it was her neck that had been pierced, and not her heart. Mr. Gryce had allowed us to think it was the latter, but it was not this fact which stupefied me, but the skill and diabolical coolness of the man who had inflicted this death-thrust.

After order had been restored, which I will say was very soon, the Coroner, with an added gravity of tone, went on with his questions:

"Did you recognize this bit of steel as belonging to any instrument in the medical profession?"

"No; it was of too untempered steel to have been manufactured for any thrusting or cutting purposes. It was the end only that I found."

"Have you this end with you,—the point, I mean, which you found imbedded at the base of the dead woman's brain?"

"I have, sir"; and he handed it over to the jury. As they passed it along, the Coroner remarked:

"Later we will show you the remaining portion of this instrument of death," which did not tend to allay the general excitement. Seeing this, the Coroner humoured the growing interest by pushing on his inquiries.

FOUR WINTERS OF RHEUMATISM

Cured of Sciatica And Muscular Rheumatism By "Fruit-a-tives"

RIDGETOWN, ONT., May 21st, 1913.

"Fruit-a-tives" cured me of Rheumatism. It was the only medicine that made any impression on me. I was a terrible sufferer from Rheumatism. I was laid up for four winters with Sciatica and Muscular Rheumatism, and was completely crippled.

Some neighbor of mine told me that "Fruit-a-tives" helped him, and I started in to take them. I used "Fruit-a-tives" faithfully for two years, taking them every day as I saw they were doing me good, and the results were marvellous.

For over two years, I have been completely free from any Rheumatic Pains whatever, and I give "Fruit-a-tives" the credit." W. H. RACHER.

MURDERED RACE, MURDERER TO DIE

Greatest Criminal of All History Soon to Meet His Fate.

A REIGN OF SIN AND DEATH

Jesus Charged Satan With Murder—Adam and His Race the Victims—The Murderer at Large Six Thousand Years—He Had Added Insult to Injury—He Has Made Us Believe That Our Best Friend Caused the Race Eternal Ruin—The Hidden Things of Darkness Now Coming to Light—The Deceiver to Be Bound For a Thousand Years While His Nefarious Work Is Undone—Then He Is to Be Utterly Destroyed.

[The matter under this heading is supplied by the Pastor Russell Lecture Bureau, who conduct the Brooklyn Tabernacle (unsectarian) Bible Studies, and who have arranged for its insertion.]

Steubenville, O., November 16—Pastor Russell is here and has given two addresses. We report one of these from the text, "He (Satan) was a murderer from the beginning and abode not in the Truth. * * * When he speaketh a lie, he speaketh of his own; for he is a liar and the father of it." (John 8:44.) Pastor Russell said:

We all know that the holy angels of Heaven are free from the blights which cause sorrow on earth. In Heaven there is no sighing, no crying, no dying, no sickness, no heartaches, no headaches, no insane asylums, no funerals, no doctors. On earth these things are so familiar that many assume that they always have been and always will be. And yet without a question we all acknowledge that the same God who made such a splendid provision for the angels is the God of humanity, our Maker. Why should He have done so differently with two creations of His own family—His own creatures, His own children?

The Bible explains that the reason for the difference between God's treatment of mankind and His treatment of the angels is that the human family became sinners, depraved, alienated, through the disobedience of Father Adam; that the entire race of Adam is mentally, morally and physically impaired; and that these impairments are all incidental to the curse, or penalty of sin; namely, "Dying, thou shalt die."—Genesis 2:17—margin.

Jesus declares that Satan is wholly responsible for the death of our race. He was the murderer of our first parents, and by the laws of heredity we all lost our lives through his terrible deception. Satan persuaded Mother Eve that God, who cannot lie, had lied to her; that the declaration, "Dying, thou shalt die," is an untruth; that man could not die; that he had some inherent life that even God Himself could not interfere with. He persuaded her that God had a selfish motive in making the death threat, in telling the lie; that God wished to keep herself and Adam in ignorance; but that, by obeying himself, they would become like God.

Man's sentence was carried out. Our first parents were driven from Eden, that they might no longer have access to its life-sustaining fruits, that they might come under the penalty, "Dying, thou shalt die." There never was a sentence, Thou shalt live in eternal torment and be tortured by devils. All such misrepresentations are slanders of the Divine character, purpose and plan, intended to dishonor God and turn mankind away from Him.

Before considering the murderer and his fate, let us glance at the murdered race, which now has numbered approximately twenty thousand millions of souls. They are all dead or dying. There is no hope for them except in God. Has God a gracious provision, and if so, what is it?

CURE SICK HEADACHE.

Backache Banished.

Thousands of men and women are suffering from weak, lame and aching backs, and many of them unable to do any work for the pain.

The stitches, twitches and twinges are bad enough and give enough misery, but, back of the backache, and the cause of it all are the disordered kidneys crying out in warning through the back.

Backache is kidney ache, and there's serious trouble ahead for you if you neglect it.

Doan's Kidney Pills cure every form of backache by curing the sick kidneys that cause it.

Mrs. Jack Mason, Springhill, N.B., writes:—"I have been suffering from backache for a very long time. I tried everything and did everything, but still I would suffer. One day I was looking over your Almanac, and saw your advertisement for Doan's Kidney Pills, so I got 5 boxes, and I am glad to say that they brought me back to life again, and from now on I will never be without them."

Doan's Kidney Pills are 50 cents per box, or 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

If ordering direct specify "Doan's."

The Bible assures us that God is very compassionate, and that He so loved the world as not to wish them to perish like the natural brute beast. He therefore gave His Son, that all exercising obedient faith in Him might be saved from perishing and might attain everlasting life. We must not overlook the fact that, as we were not sentenced to eternal torment, neither did God provide a redemption from eternal torment. The death penalty on humanity would have reduced our race to the same condition as the brute; for a dead man would have had no superiority over a dead beast. But here God interposed. He provided a Saviour and a great One, who could save to the uttermost. He proposes to save us from perishing—from destruction—not from eternal torment, of which the Bible knows nothing.

The word Saviour signifies Life-giver. Father Adam, having fallen into sin, failed to give his race life-perfection. We were all born a dying race. The thing we need is the thing which we lost—life, everlasting life. And this is what God has provided for the race. He purposes that "all who are in their graves shall hear the voice of the Son of Man and come forth." The salvation which God has promised is a resurrection—a raising up from death to life—to give beauty for ashes—perfection for imperfection.

Thus it is written, "As by a man came death, by a man also comes the resurrection of the dead. For as all in Adam die, even so all in Christ shall be made alive. But every man in his own order (or company); Christ (Head and Body), the First-fruits; afterwards those who shall become Christ's at (during the time of) His presence"—the thousand years of His glorious Reign for human uplift.—1 Corinthians 15:20-23.

The uplifting, the resurrecting, the Restitution, will not be merely an awakening from the tomb to the conditions which prevailed before death; much more is implied. Father Adam's dying began when he was perfect. It included all the processes which finally led him to the tomb. His resurrection, or raising again, will not signify merely his coming from the tomb, but will include all the steps of progress up, up, back to all that he was at first—to all that he lost through sin—to all that was redeemed for him at Calvary. And the same principle will hold with all his children, his race. In him they all fell from perfection, and through Christ they may all reattain the perfection which they lost.

The blessings of Restitution will include the whole race, with two exceptions. The first exception will be those who will reject the gift of God, eternal life, through Jesus Christ our Lord, by refusing to co-operate with God in the love and service of righteousness and in the hatred of iniquity.

The second exception will be the Church of this Gospel Age—not the nominal Church, but the Church whose names are written in Heaven—all saints, out of all nations and denominations. These will not be returned to the perfection of Adam, because according to the call of this Gospel Age they are invited to a change of nature, and in the present life experience a begetting of the Holy Spirit. If faithful, they will share the First, or superior, Resurrection, and will be made perfect on the Heavenly plane, that they may be associated with the Master in the great work of blessing and uplifting humanity in general.

For all these six thousand years Satan has maintained his attitude of enmity toward God and antagonism toward all the Divine arrangements, laws and regulations. God, all-powerful, could have restrained Satan at any moment if He chose. The fact that He has allowed him to remain and to practice to some extent his evil work assures us that the results will fully justify the course pursued by the Almighty.

In the sight of the holy angels, the vicious, scheming, plotting, deceiving, lying, murderous spirit of Satan has been fully manifest; and by and by the whole world of mankind, now subject to his deceptions, will be fully recovered and fully informed respecting them. God undoubtedly sees that the permitting of sin to take its course will eventually bring to the world, to angels, and to the Church, a wider knowledge of good and evil, of right and wrong, than could have been communicated to them in any other way.

Satan, evidently always hopeful that he might outwit the Almighty and accomplish his purpose, has especially labored during the past nineteen centuries. When he could not seduce the great Redeemer to disloyalty to God, he sought to put Him to ignominious death, only to find that in this he had fulfilled the Scriptures. Later, in persecuting the Church and in bringing in damnable heresies, through seducing spirits inculcating doctrines of demons, Satan has sought to turn the hearts of all against the Heavenly Father, and to mislead them in respect to the Divine character and Plan.

God's great Plan will soon have matured. Soon the Church will be completed. Then Christ will receive her to Himself as His Bride and Joint-heir in His Kingdom. Then the work of that Kingdom, the rescue of the world, will begin. Mankind must first be rescued from error, superstition, darkness, ignorance of God, brought on them by Satan. He shall see the wreck of all his deep-laid schemes, but he will be powerless to any further deceive humanity and misrepresent the Creator. One of the first acts of Messiah in His Kingdom will be to "lay hold on that old Serpent, the Devil, and bind him a thousand years, that he may deceive the nations no more."—Revelation 20:1-3.

Our great Creator has one Law for His Empire: "The wages of sin is death; the gift of God is eternal life." Satan was given this gift; but it was conditional—dependent upon his obedience. From the moment of his rebellion he was worthy of the sentence of death. But it was not decreed. Time was given him to see the folly of his course. Century after century increased Satan's spirit of opposition to God and to righteousness. Even the terrible disaster of sickness, sorrow and death which he has brought upon mankind swerved him not from his evil course. Even the death of the Saviour for the redemption of the race moved him not to sympathy and pity. His heart seems to have become the more hardened in proportion as he has seen manifestations of Divine love and pity. This is an illustration of the general trend of sin—to hardness of heart.

A certain time has been fixed in the Divine Program for the execution of this great murderer. He must first witness the undoing of all his work. He must behold how the light of the knowledge of the glory of God will sweep away all the delusions which he has fostered, and will emancipate humanity, and lead to the anthem, "Glory to God in the Highest, and on earth peace, good will toward men."

The Scriptures do not inform us of where Satan will be during the period of his bondage, during the period of his restraint from doing evil—during the thousand years of Messiah's Reign. It merely informs us that at the conclusion of that period he will be loosed again, that he may bring a trial and a test upon the human family, then perfect in the flesh. Their number, we are told, will be as the sand of the seashore—a world full. They all will have enjoyed the full benefit of Messiah's Reign—Restitution to all that was lost—to full human perfection. The earth, brought to perfection, will be as the Garden of Eden—the Garden of the Lord, Paradise restored.

The Bible answer is that God desires to prove, to test, all of the human family. They will have had a knowledge of sin, a knowledge of God's goodness, a knowledge of human recovery from sin and death. But the question which God would decide with them is, Have they so learned the lesson of the sinfulness of sin and the bitterness of its results that they would hate sin and love righteousness—that they would be obedient to God, trusting Him where they could trace Him and where they could not? Any who after all the experiences they will have passed through would not be absolutely loyal to the Lord to the very core in word, in deed and in thought, would not be dependable—would not be worthy of eternal life, which God purposes only for those who have demonstrated fully established characters in harmony with the Creator's.

As to the nature of the test we are not informed. We are merely told that Satan will be loosed that he may tempt all mankind. We may be sure that the temptations will be along the lines of full submission to the Divine will. The Scriptures imply that when Messiah shall deliver up the Kingdom at the close of the Millennium the government of the world will become a Republic, in which each person is a king, and one of the kings chosen by vote to be the Administrator of the affairs of the Government.

Let us suppose as an illustration that mankind would be expecting such a change of government at a particular time. Let us suppose that God had allowed them to misunderstand some feature of His Plan and thus to expect the change of government at the wrong time. Here would be an opportunity for a test upon all. A question would arise which would tend to cause a division amongst all mankind. Some might be inclined to say, The time for the change has come, and it should be made; and those who are retaining the government are in error. So believing, they might make a demand upon the earthly representatives of the Divine Government that a transfer should be made, and that the world should become a republic instead of remaining a theocracy.

Others of mankind might say, Nay; we are debtors to God for all that we have. We may have misunderstood the time or some feature of the Divine purpose in respect to the time of the change in the government of the world, but we are very happy, very thankful to God, very appreciative of the blessings we are enjoying. If God wishes to make a change in the government, well and good. If God wishes that the present government shall hold over indefinitely, all well and good. We refuse to join with those who are proposing a demand for the transfer of the government.

Something of this kind would seem to be implied in the figurative expressions of Revelation 20:9. "The camp of the saints and the Beloved City" would seem to represent the earthly phase of the Kingdom, and the encompassing of the camp would seem to imply a protest. Such a division of sentiment would show clearly how many had fully learned to commit everything to God and to trust absolutely in the Divine supervision of their affairs, and how many, after all the great lessons of seven thousand years, would still be inclined to take matters into their own hands—world-wide.

The denouement here and elsewhere pictured is that there came down fire from Heaven and devoured them—Satan and all those who took the side of self-will and who indicated a measure of disloyalty and unfaithfulness.

Many are the Scriptures which seem to tell us of the final destruction of Satan; as, for instance, Romans 16:20, which declares that God will ultimately bruise Satan under the feet of the Church, thus associating the Church, the Body of Christ, with the Lord, the Head. This corresponds with the Divine statement in Eden that ultimately the Seed of the woman would crush the Serpent's head—ultimately destroy the Serpent and all that he stands for; namely, sin and rebellion against God.

Thus eventually the wages of sin and death must be meted out to any wilful, persistent rebel against the Divine Law, whether he be an outward rebel or one secretly disloyal. The lesson is one for all of God's people and for the whole world. If we know the Spirit of the Lord in respect to sin, happy are we if we conform our lives thereto.

Let us mark well the course that will ultimately lead to Satan's destruction. Let us mark well also the course of Jesus, which led to the highest glory. Which example shall we follow? Shall we in humility walk in the footsteps of our Redeemer, and become His joint-heirs, or shall we take the other course of pride, and thus become disciples of the Adversary, and reach his doom?

The Delicacy of Baby's Skin

Cold Air, Rough Winds, Strong Soaps Often Bring on Chronic Eczema.

More beautiful than the rose is baby's skin when in health, and so delicate that it is susceptible to anything which irritates. For this reason baby's skin troubles are many, and frequently chronic itching eczema is developd.

Nothing can be better for baby's skin when irritated, than Dr. Chase's Ointment, and when eczema is developed you can apply this preparation with the knowledge that its wonderful record as a healer of the skin is due to the success it has proved in the cure of eczema.

The intense itching of eczema of the face and scalp is very hard for the little one to bear, and is a source of worry and anxiety to the mother. The itching parts are scratched, and nasty and coloured scars are formed. Eczema naturally becomes chronic and spreads over the body. You can positively control eczema and cure it by the use of Dr. Chase's Ointment. What is better still is to use this ointment for all chafing and irriation of the skin and prevent eczema from getting started.

CORN ON THE FARM

Becoming More Popular Everywhere—Easy to Grow and Harvest

Corn farming is becoming very popular among the farmers of both eastern and western Ontario.

I was talking to an experienced farmer, and he told me that there was less labor in caring for ten acres of corn than in caring for three acres of roots, says T. S. Millady in Canadian Countryman.

As soon as the ground is well cultivated, drills in which to sow the roots have to be made. It is much easier and much quicker to take an ordinary corn planter and sow ten acres of corn than to make the drills and sow three acres of roots.

Later when the time for weeding comes, the roots have to be thinned very carefully and the weeds cut out, while the weeds alone have to be taken from the corn field. This, indeed, is a decided advantage by way of saving time, for ten acres of corn can be scuffled and hoed thoroughly in four days, while three acres of roots could not be attended to in that time.

In the fall, ten acres of corn can be cut into the silo in less than one day. This, of course, is done by the farmer with the aid of his neighbors. If that same farmer had roots instead of corn, he would not think of asking his neighbors to help him take them off. Instead, he would spend two days at least in getting the root crop into the root house.

Finally, let a man go through the country and make notes on the condition of the different herds of cattle as they are put out on grass in the spring. Those cattle which were fed on corn during the winter are always in better condition than root-fed cattle, other things being equal.

ART OF GROWING TALL

You May Easily Increase Your Height by This Process

Not a little envy must have been created in the minds of those who lack stature, and who aspire to greater physical height than that with which nature has endowed them, by the recent announcement that there is a man living who can add several inches to his height in the course of a few minutes. Such extraordinary growing powers are, of course, unique; but, at the same time, it is possible, without artificial aids, but by merely indulging in certain exercises, to add appreciably to one's height, even after what is popularly known as the "stop growing" period has been passed.

It should be mentioned, however, that exercises are scarcely likely to be beneficial after one has passed thirty years of age, for at that time the bones and cartilages have been so thoroughly matured that it is practically impossible to affect them. The following exercise, however, is often indulged in by army men, and if systematically carried on is said to give a man an extra inch in height.

The main exercise consists in standing, back to wall, until you are just as erect as possible. Then take two paces forward away from the wall, letting the arms hang by the sides with palms outward, and slowly raise the arms above the head until the fingers meet, taking care not to bend the arms in the least, and keeping the palms outward; then lower the arms. By doing this exercise thirty times in the morning and thirty times at night every day for a month or so, one seldom fails to add at least half an inch to the height, and it has been known to give a man even an inch and a half.

There are also certain simple rules which, if carried out, add considerably to one's height. There is the old habit of stooping, for instance. Nearly everyone stoops a little, and if we would only endeavor, as far as possible, to prevent this habit, we should not only look taller but feel taller.

Endeavor to sit up perfectly straight at all times, and stand up perfectly straight. It is not easy at first, particularly when one follows a sedentary occupation. In fact, one is rather apt to feel uncomfortable, but by quiet persistence it will be found quite as easy in a short time to walk and sit perfectly upright as it is to stoop.

If you wish to relax when sitting, don't get into an easy chair and bend over or sag down into a lazy position. Always rest in a chair by leaning back, no matter how far; but never bend forward to rest or talk or read.

CANADA'S PROGRESS

Lord Strathcona Predicts Era of Tremendous Expansion

"Looking back on Canada as it was seventy-five years ago," said Lord Strathcona recently, "the change is, indeed, amazing. Canada was then comparatively a wilderness, with a population of barely a million or so of people, and now she has eight or nine millions. And this is nothing to what it will be in another three-quarters of a century, when it will unquestionably have a population equal to or greater than that of the United Kingdom."

"Little more than forty years ago," Lord Strathcona added, "the great territory of Rupert's Land, then possessed by the Hudson Bay Company, did not produce enough breadstuff for the use of the 200 or 300 white people who then resided at the company's posts, and out of that vast territory have been carved the provinces of Manitoba, Saskatchewan, and Alberta—which produces annually 200,000,000 bushels of wheat—the city of Winnipeg, then non-existent, with a population of about 200,000, and several other cities with populations ranging from 30,000 to 130,000, the latter being that of the city of Vancouver to-day."

"A Perfect Woman Nobly Planned To Warn, to Comfort and Command"

Nature never intended woman to be delicate, ailing, or a sufferer from "nerves." Women in middle age complain of "hot flashes." Many women suffer needlessly from girlhood to womanhood, and from motherhood to middle life, with backache, or headache, dizziness, faintness, or bearing-down sensations. For a permanent relief from these distressing symptoms nothing is so good as

as a soothing and strengthening nervine—allays and subdues nervous excitability, irritability, nervous exhaustion, and other distressing symptoms commonly attendant upon functional and organic diseases of the feminine organs. It induces refreshing sleep and relieves mental anxiety and despondency.

Your dealer in medicines sells it in liquid or tablet form; or you can send 50 one-cent stamps for a trial box of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription tablets. A PAGE OF THE BEST HUMOR OF THE WEEK

He Meant Well.

The Bride: "See what your Uncle Zeb has sent us for a wedding present. A baby carriage!"

The Groom: "Oh, well, good old Zeb means all right! We can exchange it for something useful!"

Anecdotal.

Menelaus was king of ancient Laconia, and being such, he deemed it only his duty to be as laconic as possible, so, in a manner of speaking, to set the pace for his people.

Now, his wife was none other than the beautiful Helen, and, of course, the day came at last when she wanted a new hat. Could she have it?

"No!" replied Menelaus.

"Just because 'no' is a letter shorter than 'yes'!" protested Helen, and burst into tears, and at the first chance ran away with Paris.

Like Football.

Willis: "Is that new young preacher you hired fresh from college up to date?"

Gillis: "You bet! He called out the choir squad last Sunday, and has ordered practice behind closed doors."

Sometimes.

Silence may be golden, but a remarkable amount of pertinent verbal observation often helps to bring in some kind of legal tender.

A Welcome Change.

"Before you take this house," said the honest real estate agent, "I wish to tell you something that is against it."

"What's that?" asked Hemmandhaw.

"It's right next to a boiler shop."

As he took out his wallet to make the first payment, Hemmandhaw replied:

"Oh, that's all right! The family next to where we now live has a parrot, a phonograph, and a pair of twins'"

No Jobs Open.

Willis: "The ministers are certainly up against it nowadays."

Gillist "You bet! You notice they don't even use them for college presidents any more."

The Music.

Knicker: "Is that fellow Jones on the Roosevelt band-wagon?"

Bocker: "It is hardly a band-wagon; just a mouth-organ."

Depending.

Human nature runs pretty close to sample. The man who sneaks up a back alley to get cyclone insurance is sure that the fellow who crawls under the bed for a thunder shower is a fool.

San Francisco, however, is practically certain that any German scare is a joke, while New York knows that we'll never have a war with Japan.

Privileged.

"I suppose you still take a chance once in a while?" inquired his friend of other days.

"My boy," replied the millionaire, "there's no such thing as taking a chance when you're rich, for if you happen to get caught it merely means a fine."

Is There Any Difference?

"I have read this book," said the irate patron, "and it is the worst ever. It has the average penny-dreadful looking like a Sunday-school tract; and yet you gave it to me when I asked you for a historical romance."

"Oh," gurgled the fair librarian, "I thought you asked me for a hysterical romance!"

Congenial Occupation.

"What's that friend of yours with the anarchistic tendencies doing these days?"

"He has a job in an automobile factory."

"Gee! I'll bet he loves his job."

"He surely does. All he has to do is to blow up the tires."

She Was Nearly Thru.

"Are you nearly thru with your shopping, dear?"
He asked, "It is growing late, I fear."
"Yes; we've visited fourteen shops, you see,
And there's just one other in town," said she.

He Knew His Business.

Hewitt: "He is considered a most resourceful fellow."

Jewett: "Right you are! I have known him to pray for rain in order to have an excuse for keeping a borrowed umbrella."

Too Much.

First Alpine Guide: "Strange that the American should collapse. The avalanche didn't even touch him."

Second Alpine Guide: "No; but he is a Democrat, and the sight of two landslides in a year was too much for him."

Position.

The advertising manager was in a towering rage.

"What is the matter?" asked the managing editor.

"Why, the make-up editor placed our prima donna's testimonial for a sure cold cure on the same page with the announcement that she had a sore throat and couldn't sing tonight!"

The Flunkies.

Colonel Georgia: "So you didn't like the banks in New York, cunnel?"

Colonel Kentuck: "No, suh! Every bank president was standing out on the front step same as they do here, but would you believe it, suh, every one of them was a coon, suh!"

Speaking in Time.

The Congressman's Wife: "When will the Panama Canal be formally opened, George?"

Congressman: "Why, I don't know the exact date."

Congressman's Wife: "Well, just keep in mind that I want fifty cards for the private view."

The Canny Scot: "Yes, sir, that was a good restaurant you recommended, and very moderate; and, would ye believe it, I found sixpence on the table."

Always.

Willis: "Did you know that the mine we thought no good has yielded nine millions in the past two months?"

Gillis: "Who says so—the company?"

Willis: "No; the prospectus of the company that is promoting the mine next to ours."

The Public.

Willis: "Didn't you go motoring yesterday?"

Gillis: "With the wind blowing a sixty-mile-an-hour rain-storm? I guess not. I almost wish we had, tho. We went to the fair instead, and that yellow-hearted pup of an aviator was afraid to make a flight!"

"I 'ear Mrs. Green and Ginger Nut 'ave got spliced. 'E's a 'ot'n. I shouldn't thought she'd 'ave 'ad 'im."
"I ain't surprised, any old rake can get over a grass widder/"

She: How can he ever hope to win a woman's love, when he wears such whiskers?
He: He raised them as a forlorn hope, after seeing the way she fondled her skye terrier.

Envious.

The man who could not afford an automobile was hailed by his friend who had just purchased one which is widely known because of its simplicity and low price.

"Want to take a little ride?" asked the friend.

"No, thank you. I've got an engagement."

"Well, say, what do you think of my machine? For a cheap car, isn't it a bird? I get just as much good out of it as if it cost two or three thou'—"

"It looks all right, but where do you shake out the ashes?"

Ambiguous.

His Mother: "Remember, Tommy, the devil finds work for idle hands to do. Now, run out and bring in some wood."

Comparative Manners.

Mrs. Jones: "So you got seats at Blank's Theatre! How did you find their new box-office man?"

Jones: "He was so rude that he made me feel like a Chesterfield."

Wasting Away.

"I notice that our cook," said he, "is thinner than she used to be."

"Yes," she replied; "from day to day she seems inclined to waste away."

Oh, Pa!

Miss Flip: "I wish some one would give me an idea how to put on a hair net."

Father: "I wish some one would give you an idea to put under your hair net."

No Gentle Joke.

Hemmandhaw: "When Beanbrough got married, one of his friends threw an old shoe thru the carriage at him and hit him on the head.

Shimmerpate: "Couldn't he find out who owned the shoe?"

Hemmandhaw: "No; it belonged to a horse."

Honesty.

Teacher: "Henry, can you define a hypocrite?"

Henry: "Yessum. It's a kid wot comes to school wid a smile on his face."

A Cinch.

Howard: "Is there any advantage in having your best girl highly educated?"

Coward: "Sure thing! No one tries to get her away from you."

Business.

Grouch (in street car, speaking to neighbor): "Terrible weather! Wonder what kind we'll have tomorrow?"

Conductor (smiling): "Fare, sir."—Stanford Chaparral.

Geometrical.

"What is his sphere in life?"

"Well, judging from the circle of his acquaintances, I'd say he was a rounder."—California Pelican.

Doc Brown.

"What does he do?"

Salesman: "So would I."—Minnesota Minne-Ha-Ha.

Wher He Lied.

"I will soon lie with my forefathers," exclaimed a blatant orator at Cardiff one Sunday.

"Yes," interupted a knowing auditor, "and give them points at it, too."

And He Drove On.

"Say," calls the bright youth to the honest agriculturist who is working in his garden, "why don't you set a hen on your egg plants?"

"Ma set one on 'em last year," answers the agriculturist, barely looking up.

"Did she? Hatch anything?"

"Yep. Hatched out that bed o' cockscombs by the fence."

Dobbins: "I say, old fellow, you are getting thin since you retired from business."

Tobbins (ex-shopkeeper): "That's right. You see, I don't weigh as much as I did."

Talkative Barber (about to lather): "Do you mind shutting your mouth, sir?"
Patient One: "No—do you?"

They had scrambled thru the first dance on the program and he was leading her back to a seat.

"I could die dancing, couldn't you?" he asked.

"No," she replied. "There are pleasanter ways than being trampled to death."

Miss Hogabuat (of Chicago): "And what profession is your son in, Lord Hightop?"

Lord Hightop: "Oh, when Algy leaves college I expect he will take orders."

Miss Hogabuat (surprised): "You don't say! Well, poppa has got some real nice gentlemen traveling for him."

A teacher in a certain town (we considerately decline to be more specific) had a great deal of trouble to make a boy in his class understand a point in his lesson. Finally, however, he succeeded, and, drawing a long breath, remarked:

"If it wasn't for me, you would be the greatest donkey in this town."

"There is a tide in the affairs of men," said the man who habitually quotes Shakspere, "which, taken at the flood, leads on to fortune."

"Yes," replied the man who had married an heiress, "I remember the tide that led to my fortune well."

"What tide was that?"

"It was an eventide, and we were sitting in the garden."

The story is told of a veteran of the American Civil War who returned to the home of his boyhood to attend a banquet given by the old boys. The diners were all men he had known as youngsters. He expected them to talk over old times. Instead, one talked incessantly about his bad liver; another discoursed on his weak heart; a third had a lot to say about his kidney trouble, and so it went on. When the veteran returned to his home he was asked how he enjoyed the banquet.

"Banquet!" he replied, showing vexation, "it wasn't a banquet. It was an organ recital."

Johnny was putting some questions to his father on the subject of astronomy, in the course of which he asked if the moon was inhabited.

"Oh, yes," said the parent, "there are people living in the moon."

"Are there many?" queried the youngster.

"Yes, lots," was the reply; "far more than in this world."

"Why, then," said the youth, "aren't they crowded a good deal at half-moon?"

Not long ago a north-country vicar married an elderly couple at eleven o'clock in the morning. At three in the afternoon his duties took him to the neighboring cemetery, where he met the same couple seated lovingly on one of the benches.

"You see, sir," the husband explained, "my wife is a real 'un for pleasure. I wanted to go back to me work this afternoon, but th' missus sed we'd better enjoy oursel'es to the full and mak' a day on't."

A traveling salesman died suddenly and was taken to his home. His relatives telephoned to the nearest florist, some miles distant, to make a wreath. The ribbon should be extra wide, with the inscription "Rest in Peace" on both sides, and if there was room, "We shall meet in heaven."

The florist was away, and his new assistant handled the job. It was a startling floral piece which turned up at the funeral. The ribbon was extra wide and bore the inscription: "Rest in peace on both sides, and if there is room we shall meet in heaven."

Regrets.

"It's a great pity," said the convicted burglar to his counsel, "that you couldn't have made that closing speech of yours at the opening of the case."

"I don't see how that would have improved matters," said the advocate.

"It would, tho," explained his client. "Then the jury would have been asleep when the evidence came on, and I'd have stood some chance."

An irascible elderly gentleman ordered a bottle of hock with his lunch.

"Cock, sir?" said the waiter.

"Yessir."

"Not 'cock,' said the customer; 'hock—hic, haec, hoc. D'you understand?'"

The waiter disappeared, and some twenty minutes elapsed while the elderly one sat nursing his wrath to keep it warm. At last, catching the errant waiter's eye, he yelled, furiously:

"Where's that hock?"

"Cock, sir?" said the waiter, in a grieved and surprised tone. "I thought you declined it."

Dr. Abernethy once visited a crusty old laird who was laid up with gout. He wanted to get out with his gun, and was in a temper, and while the doctor was looking at his foot swore roundly at him for tinkering at his toes, and asked him:

"Why don't you strike at the root and get me better?"

Solemnly the doctor got up, took his walking stick, and smashed to pieces a decanter of wine which was standing on the table. The astonishing laird sprang to his feet and demanded an explanation.

"Oh," said the doctor, "I am only striking at the root!"

Poor Chink.

They had cut off a Chinaman's queue,
And were painting his head a bright blueue;
So the Chinaman said,
As they daubed at his head:
"When I sueue yueue, yueue'll rueue what yueue dueue."

The Juvenile Questioner.

Son: "I say, pa!"

Father: "Well?"

Son: "Is a vessel a boat?"

Father: "Yes."

Son (after some thought): "I say, pa!"

Father (impatiently): "What is it?"

Son: "What kind of a boat is a blood-vessel?"

Father (absently): "It's a life-boat. Now run away to bed."

Where He Drew It.

A professor of Illinois University, who is very popular among the students, was entertaining a group of them at his residence one night. Taking down a magnificent sword that hung over the fireplace, he brandished it about, exclaiming:

"Never will I forget the day I drew this blade for the first time."

"Where did you draw it, sir?" an awestruck freshman asked.

"At a raffle," said the professor.

Didn't Blame the Angels.

The new baby had proved itself the possessor of extraordinary lung powers. One day baby's brother, little Johnny, said to his mother:

"Ma, little brother came from heaven, didn't he?"

"Yes, dear," answered the mother.

Johnny was silent for a minute, and then he went on:

"I say, ma."

"What is it, Johnny?"

"I don't blame the angels for slinging him out, do you?"

The Doctor Knew.

"Doctor," said the caller, "I'm a victim of insomnia. Can you cure me?"

"I can," replied the physician. "But before I take the case I want to ask one question: Are you in business for yourself, or do you work for others?"

"I'm employed as an assistant at a grocery," answered the patient.

"Then you'll have to pay in advance," said the doctor. "I'm not doubting your honesty, but after I get thru with you the chances are you will sleep so soundly you'll lose your job. Then you can't pay me."

Illustrating the Point.

Miss Wantem was growing tired, for Mr. Nutt had been calling three months, and the final words which had been lingering on his lips for so long had not yet been spoken.

One evening, however, being in an extra bright mood, he was inclined to make some brilliant observations.

"We live in a wonderful age, don't we, Miss Wantem? Just think how everything is becoming wireless nowadays."

"Yes," snapped Miss Wantem, stung to desperation, "pa was only saying this morning that even the sofa was becoming wireless."

In his last illness, when out walking, Tom Hood was accosted by a friend, who said:

"Ah, Mr. Hood, you walk slow."

"Yes—but I'm going fast," was the reply.

"Oh my!" exclaimed the excited woman, who had mislaid her husband. "I'm looking for a small man with one eye."

"Well, ma'am," replied the polite shopwalker, "if he's a very small man, maybe you'd better use both eyes."

Try as he would, the bookish man seemed unable to pay her any direct compliment, until he turned the conversation thus:

"I am rather more in favor of the English than the American mode of spelling."

"Yes?" she returned, rather uninterestedly.

"Yes, indeed; take 'parlour,' for instance; having 'u' in it makes all the difference in the world."

Giles: "My wife can drive nails like lightning."

Miles: "You don't mean it!"

Giles: "Sure, I do. Lightning, you know, seldom strikes twice in the same place."

She had sent a telegram and was waiting for an answer. Suddenly the peculiar halting click of the receiving machine sounded in the office, and she said to her companion:

"That's from Charlie, I know; I can tell his stutter."

"Noo, John, what hev Aw to bring ye frae the toon?" asked the Scottish guidwife of her husband, as she was leaving to catch a train.

"Ma snuff's done, an' Aw wad like you to fetch me half an ounce," said John.

"Nay, nay," replied the guidwife, "ye mustn't be extravagant. Ye ken ye've been aff wurk a week, so you mustn't use ony snuff. Jist tickle yer nose wi' a straw instead."

"Turn about's fair play, Doc. I've bin a patient o' yours fer two years."

Fresh—Once.

There was no doubt about it—he was very angry when he entered the village grocery store and demanded to see the proprietor.

"You sold my wife some eggs yesterday, Mr. Peavey," he said, when the grocer appeared.

"Wa-al, yes," said Mr. Peavey, genially. "Believe I did."

"And you told her that they were fresh eggs," continued the visitor.

"Wa-al, yes; it seems to me I did," said Mr. Peavey.

"But see here, Peavey; you had no business to say they were fresh eggs!"

"Why not? I bought 'em fresh from Si Wiley, too."

"I don't believe it. Si Wiley's an honest man."

"Wa-al, Si said it all right. He came in here with his basket full of 'em, and put 'em down on the counter an' traded 'em off for a box of biscuits."

"When was this?"

"Oh, I dunno. 'Bout three months ago, I guess."

The pastor was a very prosy speaker, and one Sunday morning when the service was over and the congregation was dispersing, Deacon Jones, who was a great admirer of the pastor, met a friend at the door, and said:

"A fine sermon this morning. So well timed, too."

"Yes," replied the other man. "It was certainly well timed. Nearly half the congregation had their watches out."

A Happy Discovery.

A Chicago man bought a highly-recommended hai rtonic. He used it faithfully. His hair continued to come out.

Then he grew despondent, and, believing the stuff to be poisonous, drank all that was left of it—with suicidal intent.

He still lives. The tonic proved a stimulant. It strengthened and cheered him. His dyspeptic symptoms vanished. He felt like a new man.

Now he's growing happier and balder with every bottle he drinks.

You never know what a hair tonic is good for until you try it."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

WITHOUT MILITARY DISTINCTION

Lieutenant Ulansky pulled off his clothing, rubbed his muscular body with his hands, and went down from the common dressing room into the bathroom.

He shivered slightly as he stepped on the cold floor overrun by streams of water, but the shiver soon gave way to a pleasant sensation as he walked through the hot, damp air past the couches upon which a number of men were dozing.

The splashing of the water, the sound of human voices and the spluttering of the two electric arc lamps filled the room with a mixture of soft, confused sounds.

The lieutenant wended his way cautiously among the lounges, the rubbers and bath stewards, who, in their rubber coats, walked about with water and soap dishes. At last he found an unoccupied couch far from the wall and steerd toward it.

On the bench next to it a small man with a yellowish skin was performing his ablutions without the aid of the stewards. He peered at the lieutenant with his little piercing eyes and it was evident that he was only waiting for an opportunity to begin a conversation.

One the bench on the other side was a big, stout man with a grey moustache, and an enormous stomach, whom a steward was rubbing vigorously with soap and brush, the man groaning in time with the rubbing. It seemed to the lieutenant that this fat man was staring at himself as well as at the little man with the piercing eyes.

"That bench is free," said the little man to the lieutenant, though the fact, of course, was obvious enough.

The lieutenant sat down, and while the rubber went for hot water he examined his two neighbours. Then he drew a deep sigh.

"I know nothing more delicious than a god steam bath," said the little man with a friendly smile. "We Russians simply cannot live without them."

"No?" said the lieutenant.

"And we make it hot for others, too," he laughed.

"How?" asked the lieutenant.

"Well, we certainly did make it hot for the Turks twenty-five years ago, but we did not quite succeed in knocking out the Japs."

The old man sighed.

"Perhaps you are an officer?" the lieutenant asked.

"No," said the little one, rather embarrassed. "I work in a notary's office. But perhaps you are an officer yourself?"

"Yes, I am an officer," the lieutenant replied, and gave the number of his regiment just as he disappeared under a rush of water which the steward poured over him.

"I thought so," the little one went on when the lieutenant emerged. "Well, I believe we were beaten because our generals were no good."

"Perhaps, perhaps not," replied the lieutenant diplomatically.

The steward had soaped his head and at last the soap got into his eyes. This made him angry and he scolded the attendant severely.

"As a matter of fact," he suddenly declared, without knowing why, "there are very few good generals."

"I am sure you are right," the little man laughed.

The fat man on the other side growled wickedly. He sat up on his bench, his grey moustache dripping with water, and stared at the lieutenant viciously.

"I wonder who that fool is?" the lieutenant thought. Turning again to the little man, he said in a voice of deep conviction:

"The fact is this—that most of our generals are old, worn-out fellows, who like to brag about their deeds of arms at home and call us down. It would be far better if they gave the young men a chance."

"Right you are," said the little man. "Exactly what I think. The British generals are all old, while those of the Boers were young men, and that is why they beat the British in Africa."

"Why, of course! In my regiment we have some old crocodiles who are always roaring at us right and left," the lieutenant went on, sitting up on the stone bench.

"It does not matter whether you are doing right or wrong. They only know how to cheat the state. What they don't know about military matters would fill volumes."

The little man laughed delightedly and told a story of a surgeon trepanning the head of a general and finding absolutely no brains inside.

In return the lieutenant told him several stories of generals committing the worst and most stupid kind of blunders.

The little man roared with laughter.

The lieutenant saw the stout gentleman get up angrily, stare at him furiously, and go into the cold shower bath. Something in his carriage and the way he walked made the lieutenant wonder. He did not quite know what it was himself.

"That fellow did not look very amiable," he remarked to the other.

"Something like a general, eh?" laughed the little one. "No head, but plenty of stomach. I am sure he is at the very least a sausage manufacturer."

The lieutenant went into the shower bath which the "sausage manufacturer" had just left. Then he sat long in the dressing room, wrapped up in blankets and drinking beer, while dreaming pleasantly of a rapid promotion and a rich marriage, or such things in which lieutenants generally are interested.

The street lamps were lighted when the lieutenant, with tightly buttoned overcoat, walked slowly toward the quarters, saluting the ladies he knew, smiling pleasantly as a man who is perfectly at peace with himself and the world.

He had completely forgotten his two neighbours of the bath. His empty stomach, however, soon reminded him that it was a long time since he had eaten, and as he happened to be in front of a fashionable restaurant he decided to go inside.

Just as he was about to enter, a man in a general's uniform came out. There was no mistake. It was the same grey moustache, the same expression, the same figure. It was he—the "sausage manufacturer."

The lieutenant stood as transfixed and more dead than alive, until the general, who carelessly returned his salute, had gone.

His heart had almost stopped beating and he saw the visions of an interview with his colonel, arrest, and degradation. He thought for a moment, then ran after the general.

"Your Excellence, your"—— he panted when he had reached the general, who stopped, turned about, stared at him, and shrugged his shoulders.

"Your Excellency, I have acted like a fool, and I beg your Excellency to accept my humble apologies," stammered the lieutenant, saluting with a trembling hand.

"I don't understand," said the general impatiently.

"Don't report me, please. Your Excellency, remember the bath about an hour and a half ago? Your Excellency wore no military distinctions and I am so sorry."

There was something strange in the glance with which the general examined the young officer. Then he once more shrugged his shoulders, and walked away.

The lieutenant stood on the sidewalk completely petrified and without a single thought in his brain he saw the general disappearing in the distance.

Perhaps the man had been a sausage manufacturer after all.

-FACT HUNGER-

As children, our first demand is for nourishment; our second for facts.

All through life we go about searching for information.

We make a new acquaintance; but before we will accept him as a friend or invite him to our home we ask for facts about him.

We visit a foreign land; and from the moment we step across its border we are asking questions—searching for facts.

We are asked to try a new food product; isn't it instinctive with us to ask at once:

"Who makes this new article?"

"How is it made? what goes into it?"

"Is it worth the price charged for it?"

Facts—we are simply hungry for them.

Strange, isn't it, that we should so often have to search for them? Odd, that some manufacturers still withhold the facts about their product. Not always because they are facts to be ashamed of—for there are many worthy articles yet unadvertised.

But it will not be so much longer. The fact-hunger of the human race is becoming keener and keener. The more facts we get, the keener our relish for more of them.

Soon it will be impossible to sell a man or a woman anything until everything has been told about the goods that can be told through Advertising.

The public has discovered that Advertising tells much-needed facts—that, in fact, Advertising satisfies fact-hunger.

If you are doing a local business talk over your advertising problems with the Advertising Department of this newspaper.

If you are doing a provincial or national business it would be well for you to have the counsel and assistance of a good advertising agency. A list of these will be furnished, without cost or obligation, by the Secretary of Canadian Press Association, Room 503, Lumsden Building, Toronto.

WHITENED HAIR

Divergent Opinions as to Change of Color Over Night

One reads occasionally in novels and other literature of cases in which a person's hair was turned white within one single night, under some severe mental stress. An alleged historical case of this kind is that of Marie Antoinette. The true cause of the bleaching of the hair is a matter of some dispute, says a scientist who, investigating a case of sudden greying of a man's hair reported that the inner canal of the hair had become filled with small air bubbles, which imparted to it its white appearance. According to another physician on the other hand the phenomenon is due to the destruction of the hair pigment by the phagocyte cells. Others deny altogether the truth of reports of sudden blanching, or assert that where it has occurred this may have been due simply to the fact that the person in question was suddenly placed under circumstances compelling the discontinuance of the practice of hair dyeing.

About the British Empire

Her home area is a mere matter of 121,000 square miles, but that of the empire is eleven and a third million square miles. The population of the United Kingdom, estimated at the middle of 1912, was a little over forty-five and a half millions; the population of the empire, according to the census of 1911, was slightly over 417 millions.

Minus Nothing.

"It is bad enough to be a young doctor, a young lawyer, or a young preacher—their work is worth very, very little—but how much worse it is to be a young sculptor, whose work is worth minus nothing, whose work, instead of creating value, destroys it.

The speaker was Charles Grafly, the noted sculptor of Philadelphia. He continued with a smile:

"'Why don't you have your statue carved out of that block of marble?' one young sculptor asked another. 'Soon your money will be all gone and you'll have nothing but a clay model for your work.'

"Well, you see,' was the other young sculptor's reply, 'as long as I don't make a statue out of that block of marble, I can sell it.'"

Young Surgeons a Menace Declared Clinical Congress.

CHICAGO, Nov. 17.—War against "legalized murder" by surgeons who are commissioned to wield the knife before they have been sufficiently trained, was declared at the closing session of the Clinical Congress Saturday.

To prevent "criminal malpractice" so far as possible, the congress appointed a committee to visit the State Legislatures of this country and the provinces of Canada to urge enactment of the following into law:

"Require physicians to have five years' experience in general medical practice before permitting them to practice surgery, ordering that two years of their practice be passed in active hospital work or under the direction of a surgeon generally recognized as of the highest attainments; requiring medical colleges to give full clinical advantages as part of their courses in medicine."

Captain McNabb Is Dead.

COLLINGWOOD, Nov. 17. — Captain James McNabb died here yesterday. He was an old master mariner and had served in both sailing vessels and steamers. He also was in charge of one of Lord Wolseley's boats in the Red River expedition, and held the medal for this service, which was sent to him by the general personally.

For some time he has been keeper of Nottawasaga lighthouse, three miles outside this harbor. He leaves a widow and family.

Some years ago he published a book of his experiences, which was widely read.

BAD BLOOD

IS THE DIRECT CAUSE OF Pimples.

Pimples break out on the face and body, and it is impossible to get rid of them, unless you cleanse the blood of all of its impurities.

Burdock Blood Bitters is without a doubt, the very best medicine for this purpose.

This old, and reliable medicine has been in use for nearly forty years, and has a reputation unequalled by any other preparation for removing all the impurities from the blood and banishing the pimples.

Mr. Edward Paquette, Navan Centre, Ont., writes:—"One month ago my face was covered with pimples and a rash. I had tried a number of these so called blood purifiers with no avail. Seeing an almanac of yours in which you strongly recommend Burdock Blood Bitters, I decided to try a bottle, and after I had taken it I could see a decided change, and after using three bottles more all the pimples had completely disappeared."

DR. BURWASH DEAD.

Brother of Victoria Ex-Chancellor Passes Away in Calgary.

CALGARY, Nov. 17.—Dr. John Burwash, for many years connected with Victoria University at Toronto, and well known all over the Dominion as an educator, died here yesterday.

The late minister was born near St. Andrew's, P.Q., May 8, 1842, his father, John Burwash, being one of the U. E. Loyalists. He was educated at Victoria College, Cobourg, and took his B.A. degree in 1863 and his M.A. in 1872. He studied also at Harvard.

In 1867 he married Miss Edet Henwood of Port Hope. He was professor of natural science at Mount Allison University, New Brunswick, and later was provincial assayer and analyst for New Brunswick. He was professor of pastoral theology and English at Victoria University, and retired on a pension with the title of Professor Emeritus in 1910. He was an honorary LL.D. of New Brunswick University. Dr. Burwash was a Conservative in politics. Deceased was a brother of former Chancellor Burwash of Victoria.

Another Quake in Sicily.

MESSINE, Sicily, Nov. 17. — A strong earthquake occurred here about two o'clock yesterday and was repeated forty minutes later. The disturbances caused much alarm, but less than usual, because a majority of the populace were enjoying the fine Sunday in the open air.

Natural Gas Near Calgary.

CALGARY, Nov. 17.—It is announced that natural gas to the value of $2,000 is escaping daily from an oil well being bored forty miles from here. Directors of the company are considering means of piping the gas to Calgary or compressing it to extract gasoline.

YOUTH IN OLD AGE

Possible With Proper Care.

A few generations back a man at 50 was considered old, grey-bearded, and waiting for death. Note the change to-day; at a meeting of the Medico-Legal society it was stated that a man of 50 ought to have forty good years ahead of him and, thus at ninety he is in the fulness of maturity.

What if you have seen sixty, or even seventy birthdays — temperate habits, fresh air and exercise, with a simple diet and a sufficient amount of sleep will guard your health.

If perchance, your circulation is poor, if you become run down—weak and no appetite — nothing in the world will tone up those tired backsliding organs—enrich the blood and create strength so quickly as our delicious cod liver and iron tonic Vinol.

We ask every feeble, discouraged old persons in this vicinity to try Vinol on our agreement to return their money if it fails to give satisfaction. McDermid & Jury, druggists, corner George and Charlotte Streets; also Payne's drug store, corner George and Simcoe Streets.

Missed Bullet; Eased Pain.

GENOA, Nov. 17.—Baron Paterno, the murderer of Princess Giulia di Trigana, a lady-in-waiting to Queen Helena, underwent a second operation yesterday for the extraction of a bullet which he had fired into his head in an attempt to end his life after the murder.

The surgeons opened the cranium, but were unable to find the bullet. They removed, however, several extraneous bodies, which, it is believed, will relieve the patient of the severe pains from which he has long suffered.

Englishman Flew Upside Down.

VERSAILLES, France, Nov. 17.—Flying head downward and turning somersaults in the air are becoming common in the French aviation field. Hanouille, a French aeroplanist, flew over the aviation field here yesterday for twenty seconds with his machine upside down and then cut two vertical circles in the air.

Hucks, an Englishman, flew for 35 seconds with his head hanging downward, and he also accomplished four consecutive loops.

W. C. Kidd Dead.

LISTOWEL, Nov. 17.—Horsemen in general throughout Canada will regret to learn that W. C. Kidd of Listowel, Ont., one of the best-known and most popular horsemen in this country, died at his residence yesterday afternoon at the age of 64 years. Mr. Kidd had been confined to bed for several months with heart trouble, which disease caused his death.

He was the senior member of the firm of Kidd Bros., widely known for their fancy drivers and saddle horses, which were ribbon-winners at Boston, New York and Chicago Horse Shows.

OLD FOLKS FIND CROXONE RELIEVES ALL KIDNEY AND BLADDER MISERIES

Drives Rheumatic Pains Away, Few Doses Relieve Backache and Bladder Disorders

Sleep disturbing bladder weaknesses backache, rheumatism, and the many other kindred ailments which so commonly come with declining years, need no longer be a source of dread and misery to those who are past the middle age of life.

Croxone relieves all such disorders because it reaches the very cause of the trouble. It soaks right into the kidneys, through the walls and linings; cleans out the little filtering glands and cells, and gives the kidneys new strength to do their work properly. It neutralizes and dissolves the poisonous uric acid substances that lodge in the joints and muscles, causing rheumatism; and makes the kidneys filter and sift out the poisonous waste matter from the blood and drive it out of the system.

It matters not how old you are or how long you have suffered, Croxone is so prepared that it is practically impossible to take it without results. There is nothing else like it. It starts to work immediately and more than a few doses are seldom required to relieve the most chronic, obstinate case.

An original package costs but a trifle and all druggists are authorized to return the purchase price if Croxone should fail in a single case.

SICK, SOUR STOMACH, INDIGESTION OR GAS

Take "Pape's Diapepsin" and in five minutes you'll wonder what became of misery in stomach

Wonder what upset your stomach—which portion of the food did the damage—do you? Well, don't bother. If your stomach is in a revolt; if sour, gassy and upset, and what you just ate has fermented into stubborn lumps; head dizzy and aches; belch gases and acids and eructate undigested food; breath foul, tongue coated—just take a little Pape's Diapepsin and in five minutes you wonder what became of the indigestion and distress.

Millions of men and women to-day know that it is needless to have a bad stomach. A little Diapepsin occasionally keeps this delicate organ regulated and they eat their favourite foods without fear.

If your stomach doesn't take care of your liberal limit without rebellion; if your food is a damage instead of a help, remember the quickest, surest most harmless relief is Pape's Diapepsin which costs only fifty cents for a large case at drug stores. It's truly wonderful—it digests food and sets things straight, so gently and easily that it is really astonishing. Please, for your sake, don't go on and on with a weak, disordered stomach—it's so unnecessary.

JOHN W. LAIDLAW CHOSEN.

Will Be Liberal Candidate In East Middlesex Contest.

LONDON, Ont., Nov. 17.—Mr. John W. Laidlaw, reeve of Westminster Township, is the Liberal candidate in East Middlesex. The choice of the Liberal Executive was ratified Saturday by the Reform Association of the riding. There was some talk at first of simply endorsing Mr. Laidlaw, who had already been formally nominated by the Temperance Alliance.

On the other hand, there was a larger number who took the view that inasmuch as Mr. Laidlaw was a strong Liberal, who had been waited upon prior to the temperance convention, and who had consented to accept the Liberal nomination, he should be nominated on the Liberal ticket. In the end this view prevailed, and the nomination was made unanimous.

N. W. Rowell and F. G. Inwood were among those who spoke.

ALLAN SEES VICTORY.

Thinks Milkmen Will Reduce Price to Seven Cents a Quart.

HAMILTON, Nov. 17.—Success has at last crowned the efforts of Mayor Allan in securing for the people of Hamilton seven-cent milk. Arrangements have been completed with an east-end dealer to deliver the lacteal fluid at seven cents per quart, and all orders left at his store will receive immediate attention. The mayor is asking the people to continue the strike for a few days longer, as he is confident the larger companies will reduce their price to eight cents, and probably seven cents, per quart.

His worship was given to understand yesterday that each day eighteen ten-gallon cans of milk were being sent to a condensed milk company at St. George, and that the price was fixed at 12 1-2 cents per gallon.

Astor Gave $10,000 Ring.

NEW YORK, Nov. 17. — Society was interested Saturday in hearing about Miss Helen Dinsmore Huntington's engagement ring, which was made for Vincent Astor by a jewelry firm of this city. It is set with seven stones, a huge emerald, Miss Huntington's favorite gem, being in the centre, surrounded by six perfect diamonds. The ring is said to have cost $10,000.

Miss Huntington's engagement to Mr. Astor was announced last Saturday.

Held Responsible For Death.

MONTREAL, Nov. 17.—Guilty of manslaughter was the verdict returned Saturday night by a jury in the Court of King's Bench against Pierre Valade, charged with causing the death of 13-year-old Ida Robertson on Sept. 9 last. The prisoner will be sentenced next Wednesday. The young girl either jumped or was thrown from the fourth floor of Valade's boarding-house, and medical testimony tended to show that an assault had been committed upon her.

BRIEFS FROM THE WIRES.

Teams Saturday began work on the Emmett farm, near Merritton, for the big lock for the Welland Ship Canal.

Playing around an old well on the Malt House property at Kingston, Russell Jackson, seven years of age, fell in and was drowned.

Rev. Dr. Symonds, of Christ Church Cathedral, Montreal, has written the Western University at London declining the offer of the position as principal.

John Valantine, aged 53, was drowned in the slip at Princess street, Kingston, on Saturday night. Valantine missed his way along the unlighted dock.

Congratulations were showered Saturday from all parts of the world on the Rt. Hon. Joseph Chamberlain and his wife on the occasion of their silver wedding.

It is believed that another Kingstonian, John Tait, son of Wm. Tait, of the Kingston Shipbuilding Co., lost his life on the steamer H. B. Smith, sunk in Lake Superior.

Three written applications, all local, have been received by Sheriff Ross of Brantford for the position of hangman when Jas. Taylor pays the penalty of the law for his crime.

Bermann Weiss, a carman, of Pankow, Prussia, committed suicide on learning that a lottery ticket, which he had exchanged for another, because it bore an unlucky number, has gained a $5,000 prize.

John R. Neff, member of the Legislative Assembly in the old Northwest Territory from 1888 to 1896, and member of the executive committee, is dead at Moose Mine, Sask. He was born in St. George, Ont.

Infant Mortality High.

BRANTFORD, Nov. 17.—The fact that in the past twelve months there were 46 deaths in Brantford from infantile intestinal trouble and cholera infantum, by far the largest number from any one cause, being nearly triple those from tuberculosis, and that there were 109 deaths of babes under one year and a total of 125 under five years of age, was brought out at the annual meeting of the Board of Health.

Dr. F. G. E. Pearson, M.O.H., recommended municipal depot for milk, a trained nurse in charge to give instructions to mothers on how to feed the babes.

It All Depends on the Liver

So important is the liver and so great is its influence on the other vital organs of the body that it may be said you have little to fear from the ordinary ills of life so long as the liver is in healthful working order. The digestive processes are so dependent on free action of the liver that any derangement of this organ soon brings trouble.

Biliousness and constipation follow, with headache and depressed spirits. Additional work is thrown on the kidneys and soon the whole eliminating system is deranged and the blood carries poisons through the body. Careful eating is a great help towards keeping the liver right, but when it does get wrong there is nothing like Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills to restore the liver to healthful action.

With the secretion of bile by the liver, constipation and biliousness are cured, and the digestive and excretary systems are set in order. It is wondrful the benefit obtained by a few doses of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills under these circumstances. A trial will convince you of their superior merit.

HON. MR. FIELDING'S PLAN.

He Suggests That Britain Consider General Federal Scheme.

LONDON, Nov. 17.—(C. A. P. Cable.) — Considerable prominence is given to a suggestion from Hon. W. S. Fielding on the home rule situation. His proposition is that the parties should agree to a conference limited to only two conditions, namely: (1) That the conference consider the practicability of devising a scheme of federalization for the United Kingdom; (2), that in such scheme not only Ireland, but also England and Wales and Scotland shall receive the largest possible measure of home rule in local offices through local legislatures, having large powers, not merely county councils, but legislatures dealing with a class of subjects sufficiently comprehensive to give these bodies positions of dignity and importance, provided that such local legislatures shall have no part in the control of imperial affairs; and that paramount authority of the Imperial Parliament shall be recognized in terms that are beyond all question.

Runaway Weddings Fewer.

The effects of the new marriage act authorized by the Ontario Government during the last session are now becoming apparent. In the border towns, where miniature Gretna Greens had sprung into existence, the annual record of marriages has decreased by one-third, and this before the first year of operation has run out. That such a decrease should follow is considered as a distinct success by the Provincial Board of Health, inasmuch as the abnormal rate of license required formerly was known to be productive of evil in several ways.

There have not yet appeared before the board any serious attempts at evasion, although several American parties have come to inland places with the object of marriage in view and presumably hoping for more laxity farther from the border.

Choosing a Preacher.

They tell a little story of the canniness of a certain Scotch Presbyterian congregation in Ontario which recently faced the problem of choosing a new pastor.

There came a long, thin clergyman first. He did not meet with approval.

The second was almost as thin. He, too, was passed up.

The third was a stout man. "Let us take him," said one wise old elder. "Stout men are not too long-winded."

And they took him.

GREY HAIR BECOMES DARK, THICK, GLOSSY

Try Grandmother's Old Favourite Recipe of Sage Tea and Sulphur

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural colour and lustre to the hair when faded, streaked or grey; also ends dandruff, itching scalp and stops falling hair. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is musey and troublesome.

Nowadays we simply ask at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy." You will get a large bottle for about 50 cents. Everybody uses this old, famous recipe, because no one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the grey hair disappears and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, thick and glossy and you look years younger.

GATEWAY TO CANADA.

Quebec Bureau's Work With Immigrants Is a Marvellous Sight.

"Go to Canada for two years, or else to the penitentiary."

Not so very long ago this was quite a common sentence for an English judge to pass upon a criminal, but we have changed all that now. Let a criminal or undesirable of any class present himself at the gateway of the Immigration Offices down on the Embankment at Quebec—which is to all intents and purposes the gateway of the New World—and see how quickly he will be marched back on shipboard, and deported from our shores.

No! Getting into Canada is no longer the "easy" thing it was, as many aliens anxious to leave their country for their country's good have found to their extreme dismay. Canada has her own problems to solve, problems of citizenship, of naturalization, of colonizing and development, and among these she does not propose to include a new one of how to pet, protect and propagate the lunatics and outlaws of other nations. Back they may go where they came from, with very short shrift.

The immigration question is admirably handled from this end at least, though on other counts it may be open to criticism. The season of 1913 has not yet closed, but when it does, it is thought that 250,000 new settlers will have passed through the gateway at Quebec, an increase of 50,000 over last year. Only a proportion of these stay in Canada of course, many going on to the United States.

The Immigration Bureau at Quebec is a kingdom by itself, and like other kingdoms, it has its rulers and its leading personalities. And first and foremost among these is Mrs. Cornell, whose friends and admirers in all ranks of life must be quite innumerable by this time. Mrs. Cornell is the Immigration Matron, and has been for twenty-five years, and what she doesn't know about character and human nature and "real life" is not worth knowing. She is slight and erect and energetic, with white hair and keen blue eyes, and the capacity of the born ruler written all over her. You laugh and think she is making a mistake when she tells you that she is eighty-four years old, but she says so, and she ought to know. And certainly last July there was a celebration and a presentation and an address from all the staff, and general festivity at the Immigration Bureau in honor of Mrs. Cornell's birthday—which she said was her eighty-fourth.

The Superintendent of the Bureau, Mr. Stafford is practically the whole department and from his decisions there is no appeal save to the Minister of the Interior. Mr. Stafford's father before him was Superintendent for thirty-one years, and he himself has been there for twenty years.

Untrustworthy.

"I'm glad I refused that man. He's untrustworthy."

Where Cato Was Remembered.

In 1798 the little settlement around Fort Schuyler, New York, aspired to the dignity of a village charter and the question of a new name arose. A number of the citizens met in Bagg's tavern to discuss the matter, and it was decided to draw lots for the name, each person present to deposit in a hat a slip of paper with his choice written thereon. The first name drawn out was to be the one accepted. Thirteen slips were deposited, and the first one drawn forth chanced to be that written by Erastus Clark, a man of scholarly interests, as was illustrated by his choice. He had done honor to his favorite Roman, Cato, by inscribing on his slip the home of Cato's adoption in Africa. This was Utica, N. Y., named.—Ladies' Home Journal.

A Collector's Bequest.

"My wish is that my drawings, my prints, my curiosities, my books—in a word, these things of art which have been the joy of my life—shall not be consigned to the cold tomb of a museum and subjected to the stupid glance of the careless passerby. But I require that they shall all be dispersed under the hammer of the auctioneer, so that the pleasure which the acquiring of each one of them has given me shall be given again in each case to some inheritor of my own tastes."—From the Will of Edmond de Goncourt.

Mrs. Percy Elam of Chicago will be one of the workers for a cleaner city, now that she has the vote, since she is the woman who recently had her clothes damaged to the extent of $500 by a cloud of soot.

Mme. Sinka Iovonovitch, a social leader and wife of the minister of public instruction of Servia, has been nursing in the General Military hospital, Belgrade, where over 500 wounded men were housed recently.

One of the walking canes for women has really been seen, carried by a Philadelphia woman. Mrs. Charles Henry Hart. The cane is a tall, slim, graceful thing, as high as Mrs. Hart's shoulder and topped with a gold crook.

LOCOMOTOR ATAXIA

THRILLING WORD PICTURE OF THE STORM WHICH SWEPT OVER THE GREAT LAKES

Mr. Jas. S. Potter, Well Known in Peterboro', Held Audience Spellbound as He Described the Terrible Nature of the Gale Which Did So Much Damage.

THE HURONIC'S EXPERIENCE

Rev. Jas. S. Potter father of Rev. J. G. Potter, formerly of St. Andrew's Church, here, and who has frequently given addresses there, was the principal speaker at the Memorial service in Massey Hall, yesterday, and the Globe has the following to say:

He is not an orator—and there were no heroics. But he has sailed the seas for over forty years, and knew what he was talking about. His hair and beard are white, and his face is weatherbeaten and lined with service. His voice, deep, strong, resonant, rang through the crowded auditorium of Massey Hall yesterday afternoon as though he were shouting orders from the bridge. And he told his story—a mariner's story—of the storm, an experience just one week old.

It wasn't ornamental. It gripped. The veteran didn't talk. He felt. There were great gaps in his story—gaps in which one heard the hurricane, gaps in which one shivered in the sleet. He left all adjectives to th Doctors of Divinity who surrounded him on the platform, sympathetic and earnest land-lubbers whose business it is to preach. But his was the sermon.

Mr. James S. Potter, Superintendent of the Upper Canada Tract Society's mission to sailors, who was a passenger on the Huronic which ran aground off Whitewash Point during the terrible hurricane which wrought disaster to the shipping of the Great Lakes, but was eventually released without damage, is a veteran mariner. Nearly half a century ago he commenced his sailing career on the Mediterranean, and has sailed ocean, sea and lake for a lifetime.

An Indescribable Scene.

"My tongue can't describe it," he said of the storm. "I never saw anything like it on any ocean I ever sailed. What time we rounded White Fish Light God only knows. Snow and sleet blinded us. The decks and engine room were solid ice. The ship was an iceberg. The wind blew eighty miles an hour and the snow, striking the pitching vessel froze, as it struck. The ship tossed and lurched and creaked and trembled. It was a terrible sea, a wicked sea, such as I never saw before. Inside the ship men were thrown about like toys and furniture was broken to bits. It was tremendous, terrible. You cannot put it into words. Nothing could be seen, but by-and-bye there was a throb and then for hours in the wild darkness we were pounded and battered by the wind and terrible sea. Some thought we had tried to cast anchor, but it was not that. A Divine Providence had driven us on a sand and gravel bed and here we were aground for hours ere assistance came from th Soo. But no leak was sprung. The good ship did not make a pint of water.

Heroic Men.

"A word about the men, the heroic men, on the bridge, in the engine room, at the wheel, on the decks; men with endurance to be prised as much as skill. Captain Campbell, true to his charge, was on duty throughout, unable to pick up the range in the blinding hurricane, but battling on and on almost against hope. These were men, strong men."

The veteran paused. Then he continued, speaking slowly in the great hushed hall: "And the men of the Huronic, heroes every one of them, are not singled out by me as above par. They are but types of the men who have gone out from among us never to come back. As brave men sail the inland waters as ever trod the depths of the mighty ocean.

"A week ago at this time," concluded the speaker, "I had given up hope of ever seing Toronto again. I thought my work was finished. But it has pleased Providence to give me a little longer, and I would use this time that remains as earnestly as I can to further the service of those who go out to the deep in ships."

EGGS WERE FIRM.

Price on Peterborough Market Held Around 40 Cents on Saturday.

Eggs went practically to 40 cents on the Saturday market, although some were sold lower than that figure. The farmers were out to get all that was going and they opened potatoes at $1.25, but the price slid to $1.10 by half-past eleven. A Berlin report states that potatoes sold there a $1.25 and eggs at from 40 cents to 46 cents. The latter were quite firm on Saturday and the increase from 35 cents of the previous week was well sustained.

ATROCITIES IN MEXICO

Prisoners Captured by the Rebels Were Executed and Suspects Were Shot in Cold Blood

SITUATION SERIOUS

Special to The Examiner.

EL PASO, TEX., Nov. 17.—All prisoners taken by the constitutionalist rebels in the capture of Juarez, were atrociously executed Sunday by order of the rebel leader. Civic officials suspected of government sympathies were also shown in cold blood, the wives and children pleading piteously for their lives.

WASHINGTON, D.C., Nov. 17.—Secretary of State Bryan was in communication with Mexico almost continually yesterday, but this morning he said there was no statement to be made regarding the situation. Following the atrocities at Juarez, close to the United States' frontier, President Wilson has received numerous telegrams this morning, urging instant action on the part of the U. S. government to clean up Mexico.

PLOUGHMEN'S CLUB MAY BE FORMED

Fair Directors Will Recommend the Matter to County Council

The Board of Directors of the West Peterborough Farmers' Institute, met at the City Council Chamber on Saturday afternoon. The President, Mr. C. E. Moore, was the Chairman, and there were also present Messrs. A. McGregor, Vice-Pres.; G. W. Mann, John Flood, J. N. Telford, H. C. Garbutt, J. H. Garbutt, T. H. Graham, T. T. Milburn, R. Chambers, and W. Collins, Secretary.

Mr. F. C. McRae, the newly appointed District Representative of the Agricultural Department, was also present. The first business was to make selections of the subjects for the speakers, who will be at Ennismore and Lakefield meetings on December 1st and 2nd; also to make arrangements for halls, entertainments, etc. The Secretary was instructed to invite several local speakers to be present and give short addresses.

The matter of forming a Ploughmen's Club was taken up and seemed to find favour with those present, and it was decided to bring the matter before the County Council and the Agricultural Societies and at the Institute meetings to get the opinions of the farmers and then decide whether or not to go ahead with the movement.

As the Institute had not secured the data, etc., in reference to holding the Supplementary or District Representative meetings, or the Short Course Judging Contest, as usual, committees were appointed to assist the Executive in reference to them, when held.

The latter will be under the management of the District Representativ and his assistant. Messrs. J. H. Garbutt, Warden, and Mr. Mann, Jr., were appointed to assist at the Short Course in getting stock for judging, etc., with power to add to their number.

J. W. WILTON WILL BE THE CANDIDATE

Special Wire to The Examiner.

WINNIPEG, Man., Nov. 17.—The Liberals have decided to oppose Hon. Dr. Montague in St. Andrew's. The candidate will be J. W. Wilton, barrister of Winnipeg, who has large interests in Kildona. The Liberals intend to make it one of the hottest contests ever pulled off in Manitoba.

DEATH OF MR. JOHN STAPLES

The death occurred this morning of Mr. John Staples of Cavan, who formerly resided on Maitland Avenue. Funeral announcement later.

STRANGE SCENE IN LOCAL CHURCH

Man Interrupts Evening Service at Charlotte Street Methodist Church

WAS REMOVED

"Does that mean me," demanded a man, as he rushed onto the platform of Charlotte Street Methodist Church, and announced his intention of addressing the congregation. This extraordinary incident took place in Charlotte Street Church during the course of the Sunday evening service. Rev. T. J. Mansell, pastor, was nearing the conclusion of an interesting exposition on Saul. He had reached the point where Saul was consulting the witch of Endor, when a man who was seated at the rear of the church, rose up out of his seat and made his way to the platform. He placed his hand on Rev. Mr. Mansell's arm and remarked—"does that mean me." Mr. Mansell turned and motioned him to a seat on the platform, but the latter declined and persisted in his attempt to address the audience. Two of the ushers were summoned and the man was led off the platform. He was taken into the schoolroom, where he broke down.

His sobs were plainly audible to the congregation, until they were subdued by the strains of the organ, which was played softly until the cause of the interruption was removed beyond hearing.

Royal Concert Co. In Hamilton

Pleasing Words From the Spectator —Give the Hockey Club a Boost

If ever the Royal Concert Company of Toronto is booked to appear in Hamilton again, it will be greeted with an audience worthy of its work. Last evening the artists of that company rendered a programme in the Association Hall that would do justice to many travelling companies. An audience that comfortably filled the hall was in attendance, and, showed its appreciation of the entertainment with unstinted applause. Variety appears to be the slogan of Albert J. Bentley, the manager, this being accepted as a welcome change from the usual run of such entertainments. Opening with a selection by Miss Margaret Campbell, a capable pianist, the programme consisted of songs, sketches, recitations, duets and impersonations, making the bill one which proved satisfatcory to the most severe critic. The talent included several well known Toronto artists as J. Alfred Hubbard, concert tenor; Miss Mabel Farrance, unique entertainer; Eddie Piggot, comic singer and impersonator; Miss Henrietta Walmsley and Miss Margaret Campbell, the latter acting as accompanist as well as contributing to the programme. —Spectator.

A Painter That Pleases

Any one who has had to undergo the upsetting experiences of turning over their home to the tender mercies of painters and decorators, will gladly appreciate the intelligent workman who does a good job, who doesn't leave it until it is finished, and who has some respect for the comfort of the home while the work is going on. It is, therefore, a pleasure to be able to refer to the excellent work and system of Mr. A. Kingdon, practical painter and decorator, who is favourably spoken of by numerous householders and others. His employers speak of him as doing an honest job and doing it well. In churches, public buildings, and institutions, he makes a specialty of high-class decorating, good examples of which may be seen in Mount St. Joseph's, St. Mary's Convent, and in several churches in Havelock and elsewhere.

MORE OR LESS.

T. H. Sothern is telling this story about Sir Charle Wyndham: A cherished possession of the London Green Room Club is a chair which once belonged to the famous David Garrick. One night Sir Charles, who is not so young as he used to be, entered the Club after impersonating Garrick at the theatre and seated himself wearily in the Garrick chair. An admiring friend immediately remarked: "Sir Charles, you grow more like David Garrick every day."

To which Wndham replied: "And less like him every night."

PECULIAR PERTH PARTY POLITICS.

Colonel J. M. Balderson, K.C., insists on running as candidate in the Dominion election in the Conservative interests, notwithstanding the fact that Dr. A. E. Hanna has been regularly chosen by the Conservative Convention as a standard bearer. In the meantime the Government has not opened up the constituency for a bye-election. Colonel Balderson is the man in uniform.

BRINTON CARPET LAWN BOWLING CUP WINNERS

Summer's Games to be Pleasantly Closed by Concert and Presentation of Splendid Silverware

64 MEN IN RINK GAMES

The Lawn Bowlers of the Brinton Carpet Company will conclude a most successful and enjoyable season with a concert on Tuesday evening, during which three silver cups will be presented to the winners of the singles, doubles and fours competitions.

The games have been played all summer on the green prepared by the Company for its employees, and many a night the games were not over until around ten o'clock and later. When daylight failed play continued beneath the electric globes, and many a "tight end" contested.

The three cups are handsome trophies and are indicative of the general equipment provided for the employees in their athletic departments. Mr. G. R. Copping of Toronto, President of the Company, donated the Cup for the fours, and will be present to-morrow evening to present it to the winning rink, composed of Messrs. H. G. Rew, T. Williams, T. Carrol and R. Black. The Managers' Cup, donated by Mr. Ivor Brock, is for the doubles, and goes to Mr. E. Stansfield, and the singles was won by Mr. J. W. Cooper, who won the Directors' Cup, donated by Mr. O. B. Gordon of Montreal.

The extent to which the members entered into the game was shown by the fact that sixteen rinks played off for the President's Cup, which means that sixty-four men entered into the sport. The men showed their appreciation of the Company's interest by taking full advantage of the green, the cost being borne by the Company.

On Tuesday night a little social will be held at the factory, during which there will be concert features and a presentation of prizes.

NOVEMBER ROSES

Who says we are not in the ever-blooming belt? The Examiner's chronicle of a day or two of pansies in full bloom, plucked in the open on Nov. 15, is beaten by the garden of Mrs. (Dr.) Burnham, 515 Water Street. She plucked full-blown Crimson Rambler roses on Monday, November 17, making the "last rose of summero" a more poetic fiction. What with the watering waggon out on duty, and motor boats puffing their noisy way up and down the river on Sunday, Nov. 16th, we feel as if the North Pole had receded a peg or two and left us in a new climate.

USLESS EXTRAVAGANCE.

The charitable lady was treating a pensioner to a set of false teeth. The pensioner picked out the cheapest set offered.

"Don't you think it would be well to select better teeth while you are about it?" the lady asked, "I am perfectly willing to pay a little more and get good ones."

"Oh, ma'am," lisped the pensioner, "What'th the uthe of putting any more money into thomething that my husband will only knock down my throat the firth time he geth real mad?"

TO ASSIST FAMILIES OF THE VICTIMS

Mayor Bradburn Will Act as Local Treasurer for the Lake Disaster Fund of Canada

A CONCERT AT ST. PAUL'S

To the spirit which makes for the Brotherhood of Man the Dominion Marine Association has decided to appeal, in opening a public subscription list for the families of brave sailors lost in the recent hurricane which swept the great lakes.

Substantial contributions are already offered by the members of the association and subscriptions from all sources will be welcomed. The Mayor of Toronto will act as Honorary Treasurer, and Mr. H. H. Gildersleeve, Manager of the western lines of the Richelieu and Ontario Navigation Co., whose offices are at the Yonge Street dock in Toronto, has been appointed General Treasurer for the fund. Contributions should be sent to either of these gentlemen before December 1st and all returns made by that time, in order that the administration of the fund may be made promptly. All subscriptions will be acknowledged.

The owners of Canadian ships take this opportunity to express their deep sympathy with the bereaved relatives and their confidence that the contribution which they are making to the fund will be generously and heartily augmented by a sympathetic public.

Mayor Bradburn has consented to as sonorary treasurer for Peterborough and will receive donations.

A Local Enterprise.

His Worship has consented also to act as chairman at an organ and vocal recital to be given in St. Paul's Church on Monday evening, Nov. 24th. The musical entertainment is proposed and will be conducted by Mr. Allan, organist and choirmaster of the church, a circumstance that speaks for the excellence of its musical character and should constitute a strong appeal apart from its laudable object. The musicians give their services without fee, and the church auditorium is given for the occasion on the same terms; so that the total proceeds will be turned over to the fund without any reduction for expenses. There will be no fixed charge for admission: a collection will be taken; and all who attend should come prepared to make liberal contribution. There are many widows and orphans placed in straitened circumstances, and many in actual want at the very beginning of winter by the death of the bread-winners, who perished in the greatest storm in Canadian history.

LOCAL DOCTORS HOME FROM BIG CONGRESS

Three Peterboro' Physicians Were in Attendance at Gathering of Notable Surgeons at Chicago.

WONDERFUL OPERATIONS

Drs. Morgan and Buchanan arrived home yesterday after spending a week at Chicago attending the fourth annual meeting of the Clinical Congress of the Surgeons of North America, which was attended by nearly four thousand surgeons from all parts of the world. Dr. Gallivan, of Peterborough, was among the visitors and is spending a few days visiting friends before returning home. The Congress was a huge success, the delegates being able to see many rare operations being performed by skilful surgeons.

A Chicago despatch says:

CHICAGO, Nov. 15.—One thousand surgeons, including two members of the English nobility and a number of other noted members of the profession, witnessed the nailing together of a broken femur at Mercy Hospital yesterday. The two noblemen are Sir Rickman Godlee and Sir William Arbuthnot Lane of London. Dr. John B. Murphy performed the operation. He pinned together with a silver nail two ununited ends of a bone in a young woman patient which had been broken seven or eight months ago.

Dr. Lane performed a similar operation following Dr. Murphy, but employed his own, the "Lane treatment." This consisted of uniting a broken bone and securing it thus with steel splints held in place with silver screws. The nail used by Dr. Murphy was two inches long and 1-16 inch thick.

Two other important operations at Mercy Hospital were:

Transfusion of blood from a mother to her child suffering from loss of blood, by Dr. Edward Lindman, of New York.

Operation on a four-year-old child, blind from birth, having a cataract on each eye, by Dr. R. J. Tivnen of Chicago.

The clinic was held in connection with the clinical congress of surgeons of North America.

Sir Rickman Godlee said he was "struck by the enormous amount of clinical material in your hospitals. I am particularly impressed by the method by which matters in American hospitals are handled," he said. "You live faster in America, but you are accomplishing as much as we are in England."

Next year the congress will probably be held in London, according to the gossip heard around the headquarters at the Hotel La Salle. This will give American surgeons, it is said, an opportunity to study more closely English hospital methods and surgical practice.

CONFLAGRATION IN MILLBROOK

Destroys Barn and Outbuildings Belonging to Mrs. Emma Stevenson

HOUSE WAS SAVED

MILLBROOK, Nov. 17.—Two fires, supposed to be of incendiary origin, disturbed the Sabbath calm that enfolded the village, and incidentally provided a little excitement for the inhabiants. Shortly before six o'clock Sunday evening, fire was discovered in the barns of Mr. W. Shaw. The latter, who resides near the village, was able to hold the flames in check until a contingent of neighbours arrived. A bucket brigade was formed and the fire extinguished. The damage to the buildings was slight.

The services in the Millbrook churches had barely commenced when the fire-bell again rung out an ominous warning. This resulted in a general exodus from the churches and a stampede in the direction of Millbrook station. Here the fire was located in the barn and outbuildings of Mrs Emma Stevenson. The flames had gained considerable headway when the firemen arrived. The outbuildings were completely gutted. The fire was prevented from spreading to the house.

Mrs. Stevenson, it will be remembered, gained considerable notoriety some time ago as a healer of sundry ills that afflict man kind. Her popularity was affirmed by a large number of patients who claimed to have been benefitted by the curative properties of certain herbs, prepared by Mrs. Stevenson.

THE CHURCH AS THE DIVINE GIVER

To the Minds, Hearts and Spirits of Men, But Requires the Support of Mankind.

REV. CANON DAVIDSON'S SERMON

At St. John's yesterday the sermons referred to the Missionary movement. In the morning Canon Davidson's subject was 'The Church, the Divine Giver.' He expressed the fear that through enterprises, which were really incidental and secondary, the church should come wrongly to be regarded as "The Divine Beggar." The true character and attitude of the church was necessarily that which marked her Lord. The Saviour, though a poor man, was never in reality or appearance a beggar, but constantly the Divine Giver to the bodies, minds, hearts and spirits of men. This mission He passed on to His church to represent Him not only in work but in character and spirit. Her mission from the first was to be world-wide. The church, then, was to be clearly "The Divine Giver' to all the world, and it was of the utmost importance that this character should be maintained, and the church's beneficent character made apparent.

In order that this might be done, al members of the church must give systematic and liberal support, and the call was now about to be made to them, not however as a demand, but as a privileged opportunity to share in the church's glorious work. In the main the philanthropic side of religion was evident and there was a great deal quietly done of which nothing could be known. In conclusion the speaker invited general co-operation and suggestions from the congregation as to how the beneficent side of the church could be further developed.

Canon Davidson yesterday referred to the loss of life in the Great Lakes as a national disaster which concerned them all as Canadians, and called forth their warm sympathy.

MYSTERIOUS STRANGER PURCHASED LIQUOR

In this morning's police court a local man, who is on the blacklist, was charged with having been drunk on Monday last. He pleaded "guilty" and was fined $10.

When questioned by License Inspector Stewart, as to where he got his liquor, the defendant said that a man whose name he didn't know, bought it for him.

St. Paul's Church

The male choir of St. Paul's Church made an excellent impression last night by their effective rendering of "Jesus, Saviour, Pilot Me." The Pastor, Rev. Robert Pogue, delivered a powerful evangelistic address on the words in Isaiah: "He was despised and rejected of men." His appeal was fervid and logical and the sermon all through was one of the most impressive heard for many a day.

MONDAY, NOV. 17, 1913

CONTRIBUTORY NEGLIGENCE.

While day after day as information developed by degrees of the terrible extent of the disaster resulting from the late storm over the lakes, and came to our understanding, one was wondering whether meterological science had failed of foresight or whether negligence of duty had left unwarned the doomed vessels leaving port on the eve of a fiercely fatal storm. In this connection it is a pleasure to know that the meterological office in Toronto did its duty in giving abundant and timely warning of the coming gale. In every lake port storm signals—"heavy gales" were displayed, and the masters of vessels which left port in mid-November, against the storm signals that called for heavy gales—with the ever-present possibility of blinding snow—were taking as much risk as the railway engineer who opens wide the throttle and goes full steam ahead with the semaphore set against him. In either event the risk of disaster is almost certain. The air is everywhere filled with the spirit of the age, rush and risk. In obedience to this spirit, this mania, man pits his puny forces against the forces of nature. We see men risk their lives time after time in expeditions of exploration, hazardous to foolhardiness; men risk their lives by thousands every day in dangerous occupations and places, and often perish by wholesale in some mine disaster, for the sake of the bread that perisheth. There is little doubt that the masters of the scores of steamers that left their ports last Saturday on their last voyage, were aiming to get their cargoes to their destination and return to the home port before the frost locked the lakes in ice or the insurance companies advanced the rate of insurance. Sailors who spend their lives with but a plank between them and destruction doubtless become inured to danger and indifferent to risk. And this condition of mind is responsible for the loss of property and extent of wreckage unprecedented in lake navigation in Canada, not to speak of loss of life and wreckage of homes and widespread loss of bread winners, widespread sorrow, not to mention the agonizing uncertainty, worse perhaps than the certainty of death, involved in the word "missing". They that go down to the sea in ships, as we have said example, take the risks blindly—forgetful that no craftsman can fill the order—

Build me straight, O worthy master!
Staunch and strong a goodly vessel
That shall laugh at all disaster,
And with wave and whirlwind wrestle.

Meanwhile the dead are dead; but there are living with the burden of their bereavement and the deprivation due to the loss of the bread winner, widows and children whose present and prospective destitution makes demand upon the liberality of the charitable. A fund has been opened and liberal contributions already made, promise a generous response on the part of the public. Mayor Bradburn has been asked to act as an honourary treasurer of the fund for Peterborough.

NOT VERY ILL.

The Mail and Empire complains that the newspapers are exaggerating the seriousness of the condition of Rt. Hon. Mr. Borden's health. This is good news, especially as it is very probably true. On November 1st it was officially announced that Premier Borden was overworked, as he probably was. He had been "plugging away" at Ottawa and doing a dozen men's work, while most of the ministers were joy-riding over this and other countries, and his health had become such that he must have rest. He immediately sought rest; and the first stage of the rest cure was a visit to the great white way in New York — an ideal and idyllic spot for recuperation of tired mental and physical forces. According to New York papers Mr. Borden was able to attend a jolly little Sunday evening dinner of actors and make a speech of considerable length. When a man is able to attend a Sunday evening banquet in company with jolly dogs like actors he can't be very sick, and the Mail and Empire is justified in declaring that the reports of his ill health are exaggerated, which is a pleasure to all of us to know.

TORONTO HARBOUR.

Toronto has fairly good promise of a harbour that will correspond to her industrial and commercial importance, and provide the means for future development of the most complete and effective character. The Toronto Harbour Commissioners have issued a fine book explaining and illustrating the proposals and plans for "Toronto Water-front Development," which are assumed to be carried out within eight years. If this is done, Toronto will have, by 1920, by an expenditure of about nineteen millions of dollars, maybe the most complete harbour in ta ada, and besides conveniences industrial expansion, and the aesthetic enjoyment of its citizens that will make it a greater and more beautiful city than it is to-day. The water-front drive of fifteen miles, from the Humber, (including the lake front of "the Island) to Scarboro—expanding here and there into small parks—will be a thing of beauty and a joy forever. The reclamation of "Ashbridge Bay" will mean the extinction of a pest hole, and make available for industrial uses 675 acres, with 235 acres for street and railway reservations, and 135 acres occupied by water communication. These things are incidental, but above all there will be a splendid, commodious and safe harbour. This work will be a gigantic one; but it appears to be perfectly feasible from all points of consideration. If things go smoothly Toronto may have her great work of waterfront development completed, and perhaps officially opened, within eight or ten years, so that the warranted celebration of the event may synchronize with the official laying of the corner stone of the new Union Station.

THINGS HAVE CHANGED.

How time flies! It is only 22 years since Sir John Macdonald passed off the scene, and yet Sir John never dodged an automobile, never heard the stuttering of a motor bike, never held a strap in a trolley car, never posed for a motion picture, never posted a letter regularly for less than three cents, never listened to the squeaky voice of a phonograph, never saw an aviator capering round in the atmosphere with a heavier-than-air machine, never dispatched a message by wireless, and never was kept awake at night by the frantic howling of an "emergency."—Alliston Star.

THE VALUE OF BLUFF.

We learn from the Hamilton Spectator that even though the Government's naval contribution bill was blocked in the Senate, its introduction into the House of Commons, and passage by a large majority, had the necessary moral effect. It frightened Germany, and "produced a profound impression in Europe."

"It was then that Germany gave up in despair the hope of disputing England's sea supremacy, and for the first time consented to a relation of sixteen to ten in the number of capital ships to be maintained by the two countries."

It was Mr. Borden's offer that caused Germany, despairing of doing anything in the North Sea, to break up her home fleet, and send some of her ships cruising in the Atlantic. And, further, it has had the effect of promoting a better understanding between Britain and Germany.

All of this may or may not be correct. But if making an offer of money to Britain, and then being unable to give the money, has done such wonderful things, what more can be required? We have all the good results of the contributton without paying out any cash, and both political parties deserve great praise—the Conservatives because they offered tribute, the Liberals because they saved us the money.

It has been a case of involuntary bluff. The Nationalists evidently had the correct idea. They said: "We will offer this money to England for its moral effect; but there is no date fixed for the payment."—London Advertiser.

THE PROBLEM OF THE TAXATION OF OUR RAILWAYS

While it is intimated that the Ontario Legislature will be asked at its next session to increase the amount of taxation to be demanded of railway corporations, it is not indicated that any change will be made in the method by which this taxation is to be levied.

In the state of Wisconsin the total taxes paid by the railroads for the year 1912 were $3,604,000, or an average of nearly $500 per mile on the railways of that state, while in Ontario the total taxes paid by railways during that year were $870,000, or at the rate of slightly less than $112 per mile.

There are 8,714 miles of track in Michigan, valued at $24,126 per mile, and assessed on the actual cash value.

A similar mileage in Ontario, assessed the same way as in Michigan, would produce a revenue of $3,600,000, whereas our present system nets less than a million. The actual mileage is about the same — 8,714 for Michigan and 8,321 for Ontario.

The Sarnia tunnel is capitalized at $2,800,000 and last year the net profits were $215,000. The taxes collected for the Michigan half amounted to $29,000, while the Ontario taxes totalled $700.

In Ontario a flat rate is imposed, based on the mileage of the roads with the result that companies operating in this province pay a much smaller amount than companies operating in most of the states of the American union pay under the system of taxation which prevails there.

The subject is one which has already been made the subject of investigation by a provincial commission and has ben the subject of much debate in the legislature. It is contended by the railway companies that, owing to scarcity of population in many districts, they have a good deal of unprofitable mileage in Ontario, and the American methods of taxation cannot fairly be adopted here. Be that as it may, the disparity at present existing is altogether too great, and there is no reason why corporations which have been most liberally subsidized by government should not return a much larger amount to the people than they have thus far done. —Brantford Expositor.

THAT SETTLED IT.

While expounding to his wife the alleged fact that men control their tempers better than women can, Mr. Hinks fell over the cat and nearly broke his nose.

"That settles it!" he hissed. "I've often threatened, but now I'll drown the brute!"

His wife begged him to be merciful, but his mind was made up.

Accordingly he placed the offending feline, along with two large bricks, in an old flour sack and hastened upon his murderous errand. On reaching the Canal he threw in the bag with such vigour that he overbalanced and fell into the muddy water. After struggling for half an hour, and incidentally drinking half the water in the Canal, he returned home wet and weary.

At the door sat the cat.

"Well, of all—!" exclaimed Hinks. "Why, I drowned the brute!"

"I don't think so, said his wife, as she let him in. 'You didn't give me time to tell you there was a hole in that bag."

It is easier to take things philosophically than it is to part with them philosophically.

SWINDON TEAM DEFEATED SATURDAY FOR FIRST TIME

Southend United Won From the Leaders of the Southern Division--Both Manchester Teams Beaten---Reading Defeated by Score of 1-5.

Many surprises were registered in British football circles Saturday, Swindon Town's unbeaten record was broken by Southend United at Southend. Every team in the four divisions has now at least one defeat against them. Crystal Palace put it all over Reading, as the score of 5 to 1 denotes. Millwall Athletic got away from the bottom of the table by defeating Queen's Park Rangers. The "Rangers" are doing very badly this season. Brighton and Hove only just managed to get away with the points from Cardiff, although the latter are now at the bottom of the table.

Blackburn Rovers Beaten.

The "Rovers" got another severe jolt at West Bromwich for the "Albion" wrested another two of their points off them. It was also a poor day for the Manchester teams as both the City and United were beaten, the former by Bolton with the score 3 to 0, and the latter by Middlesbro' at Old Trafford by 1 to 0 The river Irwell will be overflowing on account of the tears shed by the supporters of the two teams from the Cottonopolis. Preston North End still retain their position at the bottom of the table, as the Liverpudians put it over them to the tune of 1 to 0.

Notts Still Lead.

Notts County still further increased their commanding lead in the second division by beating the "Wolves" at Nottingham. Bradford jumped to second place from seventh as all the teams in between either lost or tied. The "Peacocks" only just managed to get over Lincoln City, although they were playing at Ellard Road.

Hearts' Big Score.

In the Scottish League big scoring was the feature of the day. Hearts downed St. Mirren by 6 goals to 0, while Clyde and Raith Rovers each scored 5 against Motherwell and Ayr United. Queen's Park surprised Hibernians by beating them 4 to 2. Aberdeen, who are at the bottom of the League, took a valuable point away from Partick Thistle after a goalless game. This was the only tie in the division on Saturday. Celtic maintained their lead by giving Dumbarton a severe drubbing on their own grounds to the tune of 4 to 0. The positions of the first three teams were unchanged, while Morton crept up to fourth place.

McGILL WIN THE INTER-COLLEGIATE TITLE BEATING VARSITY 22-14

TORONTO, Nov. 17. — For the second year in succession the championship of the Intercollegiate Union goes to "Old McGill." On Saturday at the University of Toronto Stadium the Montreal student team beat the Blue and White by 22 to 14. Between eight and nine thousand spectators witnessed what was quite one of the best games of the season, the stadium being filled to its seating capacity and much of the standing room being occupied. Conditions of wind, weather and footing were good and did not favour either team.

The game was a desperate struggle. A Toronto victory would have placed the 'Varsity team on even terms with McGill for the championship. A Red and White win meant the title for the Montrealers in addition to being regarded as a triumph for professional coaching methods. The utmost determination was depicted on the fact of every man who got into the game and a determined battle it was.

A Hard-Fought Game.

Both teams played up to their limit. Every play carried with it the very best efforts of the men and players ands pectators were at high tension from end to end. McGill furnished some new football — Shaughnessy football—some of the attack formations being quite unlike anything heretofore seen in this city. Chief among these was a way of lining up the scrimmage with the wings three yards back and the backfield three yards in the rear of the wings. At the moment the signal was given the players raced to their positions and were on the high speed when the ball was heeled out. The play was both spectacular and effective, for it resulted in a clean touch-down.

No particular department of the game can be held to account for Toronto's defeat. McGill had the better football team, standing out in front of 'Varsity most of the time. Fumbled punts are a part of football and McGill made three such mistakes on or behind her own line. Invariably, however, the ball was recovered by a McGill man with 'Varsity wings diving at it. Thus did the luck of the game "break" for the winners. Had Toronto recovered the loose ball on these occasions the score might have been somewhat in their favour.

'Varsity's Crippled Backfield.

The catching of the Toronto backfield was particularly good. McGill's was also good, but the three fumbled punts behind the McGill goal allows of a slight favour to 'Varsity by comparison. Contrary to all expectations Captain Maynard played the entire game. He was heavily bandaged and every play cost him a painful effort, but he manfully stuck to his post and directed the play of the team. Maynard was obviously unable to do himself justice, but he was all "gameness." Carr was injured early in the game and played the last half in a dazed condition. He caught and punted splendidly, but could not run the ball back. Gage, as was expected, was forced to leave the field when his injured knee suffered another wrench. Neither Carr nor Maynard could make a tackle. McKenzie was hurt in the last quarter and the entire backfield was incapacitated. The tenacity of the team under these trying conditions was admirable.

McKenzie Was the Star.

The most brilliant player on the field was "Red" McKenzie, the big centre half. He did not commit a fumble, tackled well and when it came to running the ball back on an exchange of punts his work fairly sparkled. The big fellow had more speed than anybody else on either team. He dodged, hurdled and straight-armed his way through a broken field time and again leaving an array of prostrate tackles in his wake. Each time he took the shortest route to the opposing goal. His mammoth punts were a feature. He combined great height with distance and if he made a mistake it was toward the end of the game when he kicked a little too far for his flying wing men.

McGill's Strong Wings.

McGill showed superiority on the wing line. At times 'Varsity was able to get through, but on the day the Montrealers made much more ground on bucks than did Toronto. Once McGill took the ball clear from midfield to the 'Varsity goal and over for a touchdown without losing possession. Bucks and fake bucks, onside kicks and end runs swept 'Varsity back and back. The Blue and White tightened up thereafter and held the Shaughnessy warriors fairly well.

There was no end of good tackling. It was all hard and low, but 'Varsity tackles not infrequently overran their man. Reaume, until he was taken out of the game, did some exceedingly good tackling.

While the 'Varsity backfield was battered up and unable to tackle, playing largely on grit, the McGill backs all tackled well. Perhaps Draper and Paisley and Laing outkicked the opposing backs on the day. There was not as much loose ball as has been seen at the Stadium in other games this season, but the leather was not always cleanly handled, especially when extended runs were being attempted.

Boxing Bout To Be Held

In Brock Street Rink on Monday, November 24th

A programme of boxing bouts will be staged in Brock Street Rink on Monday, November 24th. Some of the best mitt artists in the United States and Canada have been secured for the occasion, among whom might be mentioned: Harry Westerly, of Toronto, and Kid Ryan, of Rochester. These boys will figure in the 125-pound class The last time they met in Peterborough the pair fought an eleven-round draw.

The two principals will be Artie Simmons, of Detroit, and Tom Papuas, of Terre Haute, the "Fighting Greek." The latter is a nephew of Mr. M. Pappas, of this city. The two are billed to fight ten rounds. Knockout Bradley, of England; Jack Williams, of Winnipeg; Young Pierce, of Chicago, and Fighting Jackson, of New England, will also participate in the programme.

Two local boys will also make their initial appearance in the ring.

THE OLD BOYS LOST AT LINDSAY

On Saturday a hastily gathered together aggregation, styling themselves the Collegiate Old Boys, journeyed to Lindsay and played a game of Rugby with the Lindsay Collegiate team, the latter winning a close, hard game by 7 points to 3. The Peterborough team led by 3 to 2 until the last few minutes when failure to give yards on a kick by Meldrum gave Lindsay the ball on the Peterborough line and they kicked over for a try. The Peterborough line-up was as follows:

Backs—Minorgan, Gibson, Meldrum.
Quarter—Rogers.
Scrimmage—Lees, Pigeon, Adams.
Wings—Staunton, Elliott, Stuart, Hewson, Smith, Richardson.

BASEBALL

TORONTO, Nov. 15.—When President McCaffery arrived home last night from the National Association meeting at Columbus, Ohio, he made the altogether unexpected statement that the interleague arrangement between the International League and the American Association was very apt to become a reality.

Under the proposed agreement the season in these leagues will end some time in August, and each of the teams in one league will play each of those in the other. "I supported the scheme in Columbus," said the Toronto president, "and most of the representatives also expressed themselves strongly in favour of it." The matter will be further discussed by the two leagues at their annual meetings.

The Toronto Club, according to President McCaffery, will dispose of Infielder Isaacs, Catcher Trout and Outfielder Jones, who was with the Scranton team last season. An infielder named McMahon has been signed and will be allotted to one of the Canadian League clubs, probably Hamilton.

President McCaffery announces a number of deals and trades in which the club is interested.

"Toronto Ball Club has secured Catcher Kelly from Pittsburg and Shortstop Fisher from Brooklyn.

"The acquisition of Outfielders Leo Callahan and Benny Meyer from Brooklyn has been completed.

"First Baseman Tim Jordan has been sold to the Western League.

"Second Baseman Ambrose McConnell has been sold to Atlanta, of the Southern League.

"Catcher 'Peaches' Graham has been sold to the Venice Club of the California League."

This announcement means that the Toronto Club will have practically a new team next season, with Borton at first base, Fitzgerald second, Fisher at shortstop, Pick at third, and W. Bradley as utility infielder, and Kroy, Callahan, O'Hara and Meyer in the out-field. The three catchers will be Kelly, Brown and Erwin, and the pitchers will be "Buster" Brown, Fred Herbert, Maurice Kent, Bert Maxwell, Alex. Graham "Hook" Schwab, and several others to be secured.

IN DEBT TO DOUGHTY

CANADA OWES MUCH TO ITS DOMINION ARCHIVIST.

Historian and Collector Who Has With Patience and Zeal and Infinite Skill Built Up the Nation's Records Is Author of a Big List of Books—He Once Wrote a Comic Opera Libretto.

There is at Ottawa a small grey stone building, of Norman but graceful simplicity, whose corridors and rooms are frequented alike by learned students of history and learned counsel of the law, says Francis A. Carman in Toronto Star Weekly. It contains the historical records of the Dominion, including not only the records of politics, but the basic titles to the real estate of the country. The other day a dispute arose over the ownership of an island in the Detroit River. It was solved by a reference to the papers in this grey building. Another day it is a land title in the Province of Quebec. Priceless treasures are within its walls—priceless not only to the antiquarian, but to the practical business man of to-day. Over that building and over those records presides Arthur George Doughty, Dominion Archivist.

As the records in his care bear upon the business world and upon the instilling of the young Canadian with a love for his country's past and faith in its future, so the preparation of Dr. Doughty for his work combined the ideal and the practical. Born in Maidenhead, in the north-eastern corner of the English county of Berkshire, 53 years ago, the future Canadian public servant was educated at Oxford and at Carlisle, steeped in the best that the culture of England could bestow. With the intention of following the life of so many Oxford graduates, young Doughty turned his mind to the church, and for a while saw the sunny side of London in All Hallows' Mission. While there, however, he had his atention turned to Canada and entered commercial life in Montreal, where he came into touch with the Canadian spirit in its most practical form.

His money-making surroundings could not wean him from the love of the muses and after his day's work in a business house he turned his energies in the evenings to the writing of musical and dramatic criticism and—in this pointing the way to his future destiny—to Canadian history. Incidentally he wrote the libretto for a comic opera, under the name of "Bonnie Prince Charlie." During this period he was brought into touch with Mr. H. T. Duffy, later Commissioner of Public Works and Provincial Treasurer at Quebec. As Mr. Duffy's private secretary, entrance was made by Mr. Doughty into the public service, and from that he passed on to become joint librarian of the Province of Quebec, and from that post to the one he now occupies.

Dr. Doughty is in a large sense the maker as well as the administrator of the Dominion Archives. In his historical studies he had been deeply impressed with the lack of access to Canadian historical documents, and he succeeded in interesting Sir Louis Jette, Lieutenant-Governor at the time. Accordingly a meeting was held in the office of Sir Louis, which had much to do with the foundation of the Canadian archives. At that meeting were, besides Sir Louis, Hon. Thomas Chapais, Mgr. Lafiamme, rector of Laval; Mgr. Mathieu, and Dr. Doughty. A plan was drawn up for the publication of the early historical records of the Dominion. The provinces were to be asked to provide for the collection of their records, and then these records were to be edited by a qualified committee and published under the aegis of the Federal authorities, the expense being divided among the Dominion and the provinces.

This particular plan was never carried out, but the effort to solve its problems brought Dr. Doughty into touch with the Earl of Minto and he, too, was caught and held by the enthusiasm of its originator. With the enlistment of Lord Minto, the cause entered on a new phase. The cellars and garrets of the public buildings at Ottawa were ransacked and priceless documents unearthed; among them, for example, were the original plans of the City of Quebec, long thought to be lost. By these means the Federal Government became convinced of the need of a building where the records could be stored in safety, and the present structure—the capacity of which is already seen to be too small—was the result.

Dr. Doughty is a tireless worker. At his office he is always ready to assist any student or writer or business man or lawyer who is in search of information. In his leisure he still devotes himself to literary and historical work, and as an amusement he has made himself a skilled and artistic illuminator of manuscripts and addresses. He has published a formidable list of books dealing with the history of Canada, and is at present engaged with Dr. Adam Shortt in editing a series of historical studies of Canada from its earliest times, under the title of "Canada and its Provinces." His services have been recognized by a number of learned societies, and he was created a companion of the Order of St. Michael and St. George by the King just after the Archives buildings were opened.

FROM CANDLES TO GAS

CENTENARY OF GREAT STEP IS SOON TO BE OBSERVED.

William Murdoch, Who Was Responsible For the Commercialization of Precious Lighting Fluid Was a Quaint Genius—He Wore Wood Hat and Made the Forerunner of the Modern Bicycle.

The discovery of gas as a lighting power is only one of the many romances of modern industrial development. William Murdoch, son of a millwright, of Old Cumnock, Ayrshire, Scotland, is the acknowledged inventor of coal-gas lighting. He was born on August 21, 1754, in a low-roofed, thatched cottage, a replica almost of the little "biggin" in which Robert Burns was born—and his portraits show a face of striking manly beauty and strong character.

In celebration of the centenary of what may be called "the commercialization" of gas as an illuminant, there is to be a National Gas Congress and Exhibition at the White City, Shepherd's Bush, London, shortly. A long list of popular lectures has been prepared and the exhibits will cover the whole ground of the invention and development of gas-lighting.

William Murdoch's share in the development of this enterprise will be fully acknowledge. Murdoch was a quaint genius. His father and grandfather, although they followed other occupations, had been gunners in the Royal Artillery, and pay-sheets bearing their signatures are still preserved in the records of Woolwich Arsenal.

Brought up with his father as a millwright and miller until he was twenty-three, Murdoch went south, and entered the service of Messrs. Boulton and Watt (Watt being the famous inventor of the steam engine) of Soho Works, Birmingham. He changed the spelling of his name from Murdoch to Murdock out of consideration for the Englishman's natural inability to pronounce the guttural.

Among the unusual things which Murdock was always doing was the wearing of a wooden hat. According to the accepted story, Murdock was so nervous at his first interview with Mr. Boulton, of the Soho works, that he let his hat fall on the floor. Boulton had previously been struck by the strange appearance of Murdock's headgear, and the noise it made falling prompted him to ask some questions. In answer to those Murdock confessed that the hat was made of wood and that he had turned it on a lathe of his own construction.

There were makers of gas of a sort before Murdock lit his house at Redruth, in Cornwall, with the new illuminant. In 1785, at Culross, in Ayrshire, although Murdock did not know of this until long afterwards, in the ovens of Lord Dundonald, a member of the ingenious Cochrane family, gas had been produced and rejected as a waste product. Others seemed to have been on the point of making the great discovery, but, as has been said of Murdock, the merit of "the first idea of applying and the first actual application of carburetted hydrogen gas to economic purposes as a substitute for oils and tallows" first belongs to him.

Murdock inherited his inventive genius. His father was the inventor of toothed circular iron gearing, and other clever contrivances. When a boy, William Murdock showed skill and ingenuity in mechanics, and a wooden horse of his own contrivance, on which he and his brother rode to school at Cumnock, is claimed as the forerunner of the modern tricycle, and even of the locomotive.

From his boyhood's days, Murdock impressed his friends with his unusual ability. Boulton was so struck with him that he engaged him at their first interview and wrote to his partner, Watt, from Cornwall where the big Scotsman had been sent as the agent of his principals. "Murdock hath been indefatigable since he began. He has scarcely been in bed or taken the necessary food." Of his stay at Redruth—where he remained for nineteen years — an amusing story is told. It is related of him that, with a gas-filled bladder under his arm, and squeezing the gas out with his elbow, "just as if he were playing the bagpipes of his native land," the gas burning at the end of a pipe attached to the bladder, he used to light his way about in the early and late dark hours of the winter days.

Murdock did other things to scare the wits of the people of Redruth. One of his contrivances was an engine that ran on wheels—a forerunner of the motor-car—and his excursions on this used to alarm the natives, much as the first flying machine would frighten them almost out of reason.

In 1792, while living at Redruth, Murdock carried out the experiments in the distillation of different classes of coal that resulted in the discovery of a gas with which he lighted his house and offices. In 1797 he returned to Scotland, and there also he lighted his house at Old Cumnock with gas. In 1798 he was back in Birmingham, and there constructed apparatus upon a larger scale, with which he lighted the principal building at the Soho Steam Engine Works of Boulton and Watt. He was slowly but surely coming into his own. Up till his forty-fourth year this benefactor of mankind was never paid more than $5 a week, but his departure for Scotland seems to have awakened Messrs. Boulton and Watt to his value. To a man of his temperament, however, money mattered little; but, on his return to Birmingham, he was not averse to accepting a salary of $5,000 a year.

Murdock died at Handsworth, Birmingham, Nov. 15, 1839, in the 85th year of his age; a neglected, but not a disappointed, genius.

Excising the Stolen Goods.

An orchestra leader who has a faculty for detecting reminiscences made himself unpopular with the composer of an opera of serious pretension recently. It had been decided that the performance must be shortened, and the members of the orchestra had been assembled to make some cuts in the score.

"Now," said the leader, "we will begin by shortening the overture."

"What shall we leave out?" asked the concert master.

"Those thirty-two measures beginning with 'Carmen' and ending with 'Rigoletto.'"—New York Post.

The Sensitive Jester.

"De Woose seemed to get mad because I didn't laugh at that weazened joke of his."

"Humor him when you can. You see, De Woose is the sort of humorist that expects somebody to smash the bass drum every time he chortles a pun."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

BANISH THE RATS.

They Are Not Only Disease Carriers, but Thieves as Well.

Almost unbelievable are some of the things done by the rat the fire squealing, filthy, gluttonous all pervading, all destroying brown rat. Rats often gnaw the hoofs of horses until the blood comes. They have been known to attack fat hogs and eat holes in their bodies, causing death. They will fight human beings if cornered. They often steal valuable articles to use in building nests.

The following were found in a single nest: Three bedroom towels, two serviettes, five dust cloths, two pairs of linen knickerbockers, six linen pocket handkerchiefs and one silk handkerchief. This same rat, which was a model of industry and thrift, had carried away and stored near its nest a pound and a half of sugar, a pudding, a stalk of celery, a beet, carrots, turnips and potatoes.

In the last dozen years over 5,000,000 human beings have died of plague in India alone. The India plague commission, after careful inquiry, found that bubonic plague in man is entirely dependent on the disease in the rat!

Marvelous in its destructiveness is the common house mouse, closely related to the rat, and, like it, imported from Europe The field mouse, too, is highly destructive, the most destructive to agriculture of all the rodents.—Farm and Fireside.

Ought to Work.

"I'm afraid these boiled eggs ain't very fresh."

"Write the name 'Genevieve' on one of them," suggested the head waiter. "Mr. Wopsey is romantic, and that will distract his attention if the eggs are not so good."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Hereditary.

"That office boy is never here when he is wanted."

"That's not altogether his fault."

"What do you mean?"

"It's hereditary His father was a policeman."—Houston Post.

RICHARD HALL & SON LIMITED

30,000 RECEIVED COMMUNION DURING THE PAST YEAR

Fourth Anniversary of the Opening of the Church of the Sacred Heart Celebrated Yesterday

A TIMELY SERMON

The Church of the Sacred Heart closed the fourth year of its history on Sunday, and the celebration of the anniversary was marked by Pontifical High Mass and vespers sung by His Lordship Bishop O'Brien under whose pastorate the parish developed to one of the most important in the diocese of Peterborough.

The occasion possessed another feature in the termination of the congregation's participation in the Jubilee of Constantine which by a decree of Pope Pius X. is being celebrated during the greater part of the present year by every diocese of the Catholic Church throughout the world. Practically the entire congregation received communion at the 7:30 and 8:30 o'clock masses, the majority of the people attending the earlier mass.

Rev. Father F. J. Doyle, S.J., of Guelph, preached at the High Mass and vespers to crowds that completely filled the church. In his evening sermon he emphasized the necessity of building up strong Christian characters, pointed out the obligation of parents in this regard and indicated the results to be achieved by leading exemplary lives. Choosing a passage from the Gospel of St. John, "If any man thirst, let him come unto me and drink. He that believeth in me, as the Scripture hath said, out of his belly shall flow rivers of living water." Father Doyle compared the water, of which Christ speaks, to the spirit of God with which, he said, we must be filled if we are going to exert an influence on those around us.

In the third chapter of St. John we are told of a flood from which there followed a rich harvest. In the same manner there may be a harvest of souls in our lives if there is a flood of His grace in our souls overflowing to those around us by the example we show. St. Paul said: "The love of God floods our hearts."

"Some men say that this power is not expected of me. You would not be members of the Catholic Church if God had not thought you fit. There is a consoling lesson for all of us in the fourth chapter of St.John." Father Doyle related the story of the woman of Samaria who in his own town had no social standing, being of bad repute. She came in touch with Jesus at the well of Jacob, and corresponded with that touch. Returning to her own town she told of what she had seen and thousands were converted. She was but an ignorant woman. But there are the results. The Holy Ghost spoke through her life.

Character Is Needed.

God has a plan for every one of us. The world is to be won by tactfully and prudently telling the story of Jesus and above all by our example to those with whom we come in contact. The state of society to-day is appalling. Faith is on the decline even in so-called Christian families. What is to become of the rising generation? Strength of character is the force needed to-day. But we ourselves must be first filled with the Spirit of God. Character is needed to keep the mouth free from evil; to keep the eye from gazing upon things which it should not behold; to keep the members of the body pure for nature's holy purposes. Character is needed to say no when the occasion demands it, and it requires character to live up to the teachings of the Catholic Church. If every Catholic lived according to the teachings of the church the world would be converted in a few years.

Dealing with the formation of character, Rev. Father Doyle said that it must be begun in the homes. "The Church calls upon fathers and mothers to rear up men and women to work for the interests of God, the Church and the country. To become the apostles of Christ you must first be good Catholics yourselves."

Many Communions.

The pastor, Rev. Father John O'Brien stated in the morning that the number of communions during the past year numbered thirty thousand, an increase of six thousand over the previous year. The number during the first year was thirteen thousand, and the increase has been six thousand during each of the succeeding three years. The number of families in the parish has been steadily increasing and there are at present about three hundred and fifty, making a total of between 1,500 and 1,600. Since the consecration of Bishop O'Brien, there have been some fifteen families added to the parish, an indication of the general growth.

His Lordship addressed the congregation at the High mass, stating that he was glad to join with the congregation in its festivity, and expressing the hope that the spiritual development of the parish would continue as in the past.

St. John's A.C. Holds A Social

Upwards of thirty, most of whom were standing members of the club, met together in Coleman's Parlour last Saturday evening, a most enjoyable time being spent. The programme for the evening was varied, the artistes being exceedingly good. Supper was served at 9 p.m., during which Mr. F. Roy took a flashlight picture.

A Surprise Birthday Party

Miss Mary Robinson Receives Umbrella From Her Sunday School Class

The home of Miss Elsie Follis, Rutherford Avenue, City, was the scene of a very pleasant event on Friday evening last, when the members of the Delta, Alpha Class of Park Street Sunday School met in a social way to surprise their teacher, Miss Mary Robinson, whose birthday they wished to celebrate. During the evening Miss Robinson was presented with a beautiful silver-mounted umbrella. The following address was read by the Secretary of the class, Miss Sadie Webb, and at the proper moment Miss Gerty Batley made the presentation:

Miss Mary Robinson.

Dear Teacher,—We have gathered here this evening to celebrate the happy event of your birthday. We feel, as a class, that we cannot let it pass without in some manner expressing to you our feelings of good will and love. Your regularity in attendance at Sunday School, your patience, faithfulness, and daily walk in life has been an example and inspiration to us all. We now beg of you to accept this umbrella as a practical way of showing our appreciation of your work among us. We trust that it will not only mark the milestone you have just passed, but that it will bring you pleasant thoughts of those who gave it.

Signed on behalf of the class,
Lillian Dicks, Vice-Pres.
Sadie Webb, Secretary.

Miss Robinson, in a few well-chosen words, thanked her pupils and friends for their kind thoughts toward herself.

The remainder of the evening was spent in music and games. Refreshments were served by the young ladies.

Lending a Name.

"Waiter," asked the impatient customer, "do you call this an oyster stew?"

"Yessuh," replied Mr. Erastus Pinkley.

"Why, the oyster in this stew isn't big enough to flavour it."

"He wasn't put in to flavour it, suh. He is jes' supposed to christen it."

SPECIAL SERVICES AT KNOX CHURCH

Will Continue for One Week—The Sunday Evening Service

Large congregations attended the special services which were held in Knox Church on Sunday. The services marked the inauguration of a series of evangelistic meetings that will be held throughout the week. The Rev. G. A. Woodside, of Brantford, who has been secured for the occasion, announced on Sunday evening, that the services would commence each evening at seven-forty-five o'clock and conclude at nine.

During these services, Miss Jessie McNab, the well-known soloist, of Toronto, will render the Gospel in song.

Sunday Evening Service.

"Christ's claim upon men," formed the keynote of the evening sermon. Rev. G. A. Woodside developed the theme along three lines. The first dealt with the fact that man is born to be great; second, that he is destined to serve God's Kingdom; and third, that he is to be Godly.

"One of the greatest challenges," said the speaker, "that Jesus Christ ever flung out to the world is contained in the scriptual passage, which is to be found in St. Luke 14:17—"Come for all things are now ready."

"These words emphasize Christ's claim upon man. Man's greatness is not measured by the amount of real estate which he may own. The real estate will come to him sooner than he expected. A man may be a large factor in the greatest commercial centre of the world and yet his great commercial goal will be converted to ashes in his very grasp. Man is born to be great because he is equipped with qualities that endure. Jesus Christ has some claim upon men's lives and he assures them that 'everything is ready.'

"Christ is the only power that can bring about the redemption of man. Queen Victoria once said that the Bible contained the secret of the Empire's greatness. Gladstone, Wilberforce and Bismarck, all responded to God's call. Abraham Lincoln heard it while he was splitting rails, and in after years, touched the life of the country over whose destiny he presidede with his influence.

"Divinity is the measure of man's character. God is the secret of man's power and greatness in life. Christ's claim upon man is based upon the fact that he is born to serve. Nothing is more disappointing in life than to fail in the achievement of some worthy purpose. Let us raise to the true dignity of our manhood, inasmuch as we represent God's image, and heed the call of the Divine power."

More Restrictions On Immigrants

An important announcement was received from Ottawa by the local agent of the Dominion Immigration Department this morning, in which a restriction of the Immigration Act is declared for the time intervening between now and March 1st. Foreigners living in Canada will not be able to procure the admission of adult brothers and sisters by special application to Ottawa, when the said relatives have not the necessary $50 in their possession upon entering the country.

This action means that some thousands of persons living on the other side of the Atlantic will not be allowed to enter Canada this winter. There have been applications made at the Immigration Office for such admissions. The officials state that they received numbers of them daily.

The following extract from the letter sent by W. D. Scott, superintendent of Dominion immigration, explains in full the reasons for the restriction:

"Owing to the present condition of the labour market in our large cities it has been decided, for the present at least, to restrict the scope of P.C. 924 (the section which deals with money qualifications) by limiting the admission of relatives to cases such as a wife or minor children coming out to the husband or father. Consequently it would be well to inform persons making applications for the side setting of this section that adult brothers, sisters, etc., will be required to have the usual money qualification upon landing."

Committee Is Grateful

The Educational Committee of the Peterborough Health Association desires to thank the Examiner for the free use of valuable space for the circulation of items of educational interest in the battle of tuberculosis.

The Hygeine of a Sick Room.

Tuberculosis is a house disease. It is a disease which is produced by residence in houses. The germs which cause it thrive in the living quarters of man, where sunlight and fresh air are often excluded. It is in the house that tuberculosis is contracted and in the house that the disease often develops. It is in the house that the disease remains to attack new members, weeks or months after the death or departure of the patient by whom the germs were unplanted.

Fresh air, lots of sunlight and absolute cleanliness are requisites. If the patient does not have lots of fresh air day and night it will be impossible to avoid contagion. The sick room is best facing the south, and if possible have windows facing south, east and west.

3.—There is no danger of draughts if the patient is kept well covered.

4.—The sick room should be free from all ornaments, carpets, drapery and other articles not needed in the room. A free circulation of air day and night should be admitted and lots of sunlight. Place the bed in the middle of the room if possible. Also the patient should sleep in a room by himself.

5.—The flour, woodwork and furniture of the room should be wiped with a damp cloth and not dusted. A feather duster should never be used when necessary to sweep. Use a broom dampened with a disinfectant solution.

6.—Scrupulous cleanliness in every portion of the premises should be enforced.

7.—It may be said that the prevention of consumption lies very much with the intelligent people of the country and we rely on a hearty cooperation and help of the citizens of our beautiful City in stamping out this most terrible of all diseases. Especially the mothers, who hold the homes in the hollow of their hands, should bring up their boys and girls in a pure, healthy and moral atmosphere, and grow up strong, healthy citizens.

In the consideration of the hygiene of the sick room, attention must be devoted to the health and welfare of the members of the family not afflicted. This can be prevented if the above instructions are complied with.

These health talks will be continued each week appearing every Saturday.

COMPROMISE TO BE MADE

Special Cable to The Examiner:

LONDON, ENG., Nov. 17.—(Special cable.)—To-day's Times make an important announcement in the form of forecast of the government's intentions, which look as if coming from an official source. The Times says that within the next few days Asquith will offer Bonar Law terms of settlement. It is proposed by the government to exclude Ulster from Home Rule for a definite number of years. Further monetary grants will be made to the Nationalists of Ireland to compensate for the temporary loss of the wealth of Ulster. This, closely following the speech of Churchill Saturday, admitting that Protestant Ulster must somehow or other be satisfied and comforted, gives an inkling of what the government expects to do. In the meantime the Nationalists are so bitterly disappointed at the reported compromise that John Redmond, the Nationalist leader, would not be interviewed until he had talked the proposition over with his lieutenants.

A Problem For The Government

Examiner Special:

OTTAWA, Ont., Nov. 17.—The recent terrible disaster on the Great Lakes involving the loss of many vessels, much cargo and numerous lives, will, it is believed, present a problem for the government to solve. The problem not only involves the question of further sea-going navigation on the Great Lakes, but has also to do with very vital matter of marine insurance. The Department of Marine and Fisheries has for years been improving its system of aid to navigation, wireless apparatus, etc., and has no doubt succeeded in making navigation under ordinary circumstances more safe. The tremendous loss of cargoes and hulls must be borne by very few insurance companies whose obligations will be very heavy. The British Lloyds will bear a deal of expense. It is certain that the loss will be heavy and it is almost inevitable that the disaster will have an effect on the rates in the near future. It is even possible that the government will be faced with a demand for a degree of compensation. Once again talk of the formation of a Canadian Lloyds or of some system of government insurance has been revived at the Capital.

NEW ORGANIST FOR ALL SAINTS'

Miss Margaret Flowers is congratulated upon receiving the appointment of organist of All Saints' Church; and All Saints' is to be congratulated, too, on securing the services of another good organist. Miss Flowers is a most capable musician, as she has shown during the past two or three years, during which she has very effectively filled the exacting position of assistant organist at St. John's. To a highly developed musical temperament and natural talent she adds a very capable technique, readiness of musical resource and earliestness in her work.

GUARDIANSHIP OF A CHILD IS CONTESTED

Harold A. Howson, of Toronto, and George Harding, of Dummer Township, are plaintiff and defendant, respectively in an application for the guardianship of eight-year-old Reginald Howson. The case is being tried in the County Court this afternoon, before His Honour Judge Huycke. Mr. F. D. Kerr is representing the plaintiff, and Mr. E. H. D. Hall is acting on behalf of the defendant.

The plaintiff, Howson, who formerly resided in Norwood, is a half brother of the child. The defendant is the paternal grandfather. For the past seven months, the child has resided with the defendant. It has been suggested that in event of the plaintiff securing possession of the child; the latter would be consigned to the care of an aunt, Mrs. Benjamin Howson, who resides in Norwood. The case among other things, involves a question of school facilities.

EVEN PRICE OF VENISON IS UP

The Eagle Lake hunting party sold this morning the thirteen deer brought home on Saturday. There were fourteen members, and in addition to the thirteen killed, there were four hit that made their getaway. The custom of the party is to sell every deer and the price goes toward the general exchequer. The prices ranged at from 10 to 12 cents, but to members who wanted to buy in a deer it was nine cents. Even venison is in the boat with the rest of the high cost of living. A few years ago the members were taxed only five cents a pound, and now it is almost ten. Gordon-Davies got four fine animals this morning. Al told, there were about 1200 pounds of venison thrown on the market this morning, and it is understood that the money realized totalled in the neighbourhood of $116.

Mr. Harry Evans was the "Big Chief" of the party as far as execution was concerned. He got the biggest deer of the party, a 232 pound buck that boasted a splendid crown of antlers. The trophies of the hunt aded a touch of the wild wood to Fitzgerald's carriage works, where they remained over Sunday.

WILL MAKE AN INVESTIGATION

Special to the "Examiner."

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Nov. 17. — Acting on request of vesselmen here, Representative Wm. H. Gordon, has to-day asked President Wilson to make a sweeping investigation of the signal service and coastguard service along the United States side of the Great Lakes, and requests the Dominion Government to do the same on their side. There is strong tendencies in Cleveland to blame recent wrecks upon the lack of sufficient storm signalling.

OFFICE WAS RAIDED BY THE POLICE

Officers Claim They Caught a Number of Local Young Men Gambling on Sunday

WILL ISSUE SUMMONSES

Yesterday afternoon P. C. Reid and P. C. Sills interrupted what they say was a game of poker, participated in by a number of local young men and secured enough evidence to warrant summonses being issued, charging them with a breach of the Lord's Day Act.

For some time the Police Department had suspected that gambling was going on in a certain George Street office, and when the four young men gathered in the office, yesterday afternon, the two policemen took steps to verify their suspicions. By manoeuvring in the building the officers ascertained what was going on and then demanded admission. The door was locked and when they got inside there was nothing in evidence that would indicate a game of poker. But one of the young men was in the act of slipping a stack of "quarters" into his pocket, and when searched, three decks of cards were found in their possession. One of them was loose, as though it might have been in use when the policemen rapped at the door.

Summonses will be issued to the young men involved, who will be charged with a breach of the Lord's Day Act. The maximum fine for an offence of this kind is $40.

ANOTHER FREIGHTER WAS LOST

Examiner Special:

PORT HURON, Mich., Nov. 17.—It is thought here to-day that the wooden freighter "Wyoming," with her consort, went down with twenty-three lives, last Sunday, on Lake Huron. This is a new one the list.

PORT HURON, Mich., Nov. 17.—The wreckage washed ashore on the Canadian side, to-day, has been positively identified as that of the barge Wyoming, which evidently went down with all hands.

TORONTO, Nov. 17.—(Later)—The latest bulletins from the great Lakes steamer Wyoming report her safe in Lake Superior. The steamer "McIntosh" has arrived safely at Cleveland, but there is no further news of the "Isaac M. Scott."

SARNIA, Nov. 17.—The overturned freighter "Price," which was a mysterious derelict for nearly a week, disappeared altogether this morning and is now lying prone on the bottom of the lake. Dynamite will have to be used as she will be of great danger to navigation.

TWO HUNTERS LAY CLAIM TO ONE DEER.

Another Phase of the Eternal Triangle —May be a Court Case.

One of the shots that brought down a deer back in the wooden expanses of the northern part of the county is likely to re-echo in a court case if the reports on the market this morning are true. It seems that two hounds belonging respectively to Mr. Jas. Grant of Smith and to one of the Jopling boys, scented a deer and both took up the chance. Mr. Grant is reported to have shot the deer, but Mr. Jopling claims a certain right in so far as his dog helped round up the animal. The dispute as to ownership may require a judge's opinion for settlement.

PENALIZING HONESTY

By RUTH CAMERON

The injustice of the way in which honest people are forced to pay dishonest people's bills is almost enough to discourage a Diogenes.

Be dishonest and someone will pay your bills for you; be honest and you will pay your own bills and those of someone else in addition.

Take insurance, for example. The rates of fire insurance in certain branches are nearly doubled by the 'rotten risk'. When any article goes out of style, or for any other reason becomes unsaleable, insurance companies are often obliged to refuse to insure the factories where such articles are made. Why? Because these factories are much more likely to burn down than a piece of property which is bringing in a good income. A recent magazine has a story of a man who succeeded in insuring one of these useless factories. The insurance papers are taken out at twelve o'clock; at three the factory burned down. The insurance company paid in the claim, but before doing so it telegraphed "Why this delay?" Honest business men, when they pay high rates for insurance, are paying the bills of men like this.

A shop which carries charge customers always loses a certain number of accounts per year. In the last analysis, of course, this loss is charged up to the honest customer who pays his bills. To be sure, the charge is imperceptible to him because it is in the form of a small percentage added to the price of each article, but it is no less real than if it were a distinct item of the foot of his bill.

Again, take doctor's bills. Tell any doctor that you think the fee charged by doctors, and particularly by specialists, is large, and he will be sure to remind you that a doctor has a great many bad bills. I believe a quarter of his accounts is not considered an abnormal loss. Consequently, that means that when you and I, who pay our doctors' bills, pay a doctor for visiting us, we are really paying fifty cents of that two dollars for someone who cannot or will not pay his bills—more likely the latter.

An osteopath with whom I have recently become acquainted, has found an excellent way of correcting this injustice. He gives treatments for three dollars apiece, if you pay him in the dim, distant future; but they are twelve for twenty-five dollars if you pay at once, "a sort of discount for cash," he frankly calls it. I cannot see why other doctors cannot do the same thing. That would be one small way of correcting the injustice under which the man who pays his bills suffers, and every little helps.

READ A PAPER ON "FATHER MATTHEW"

Bishop O'Brien Promised Support to Canvas for New T. A. S. Members.

The regular meeting of St. Peter's T.A.S. was held on Sunday afternoon. Several new members were initiated by His Lordship Bishop O'Brien. A paper on the "Life of Father Matthew," was read by Willie Begley, after which followed a discussion on ways and means to increase the membership. His Lordship urged each member to constitute himself a committee of one to canvas the city and assured them that he, himself, could do his share. The dramatic section of the society intend in the near future to put on an entertainment consisting of a farce comedy entitled a "Limb of the Law." together with other attractions. The date will be announced later.

Mrs. Peck: John Henry, did you post that letter? John Henry: Yes, my dear. I—er—held it in my hand all the way to the mail box. I didn't even put it in my pocket. I remember distinctly, because—— Mrs. Peck: That will do, John Henry. I gave you no letter to mail.

THE DOWN AND OUTER.

I say, old chap, are you on the dead
With the fellow who's down and out?
How do you know how the man was bred,
What he did and the life he led
Before he was down and out?
Who are you that you turn away
Deaf to all that he has to say?
Who are you that you're better, pray,
Than the fellow who's down and out?

He's ragged and worn and a sorry lot,
The fellow who's down and out-
Maybe 'twas liquor and maybe 'twas not—
No one can tell what a clout he got
When a fellow went down and out!
Maybe he lost all his nerve and sand,
None of us ever can understand
When he lost the clasp of a loved one's hand—
Why a fellow goes down and out!

The world is cheerless and dark and drear
To the fellow who's down and out!
Yet there's an ocean of treasure here—
Cheapest of all in a world of cheer
To the fellow who's down and out;
Treat the fellow in decent style—
Humanlike!—and for God's sake smile!

Who can say in the afterwhile
YOU'LL never be down and out!

—John D. Wells.

THE OLD SONGS.

I'm fond of "Annie Laurie";
To hear it is a boon.
Nobody in that song declares
That he's a Zulu coon.
—Washington Herald.

And I like "Highland Mary";
The rhymes are only fair.
But no one in that song asserts
His loved one is a bear.
—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

I like "The Miller's Daughter";
I do; I always did.
Yet no one in that lyric says,
Believe me, she's some kid.
—New York Mail.

And I like "Swannee River,"
When uttered sweet and low;
For no one in that song confides
That mother's got a beau.
—Judge.

And I like "In the Gloaming";
Though sung by every ham,
The hero isn't longing
To "go to Al-a-bam."
—Buffalo News.

And I like "Silver Threads,"
It is the best of all;
For no one in that song is called
A great big baby doll.

A Character in Absentia.

They were trying an Irishman charged with a petty offence in an Oklahoma town, when the judge asked:

"Have you anyone in court who will vouch for your good character?"

"Yis, yer honour," quickly responded the Celt; "there's the sheriff there."

Whereupon the sheriff evinced signs of great amazement. "Why, your honour," declared he, "I don't even know the man."

"Observe, your honour," said the Irishman, triumphantly, "observe that I've lived in the country for over 12 years and the sheriff doesn't know me yit! Ain't that a character for ye?"

ANXIOUSLY WATCHED

How anxiously the summer weather is watched by thousands of Swiss may be realized from the fact that the amount of money left in Switzerland annually by tourists is estimated at $20,000,000. This estimate, I may say, was made in 1911, since which time the number of winter visitors has sensibly increased, and as the winter visitor, speaking generally, probably spends more than the summer tourist and also stays longer, I am inclined to think that it errs on the side of a slight underestimate, and certainly not upon that of exaggeration.

In this sum of $20,000,00 no account whatever is taken of the sums, which must be considerable, expended by resident foreigners in Switzerland—by the 30,000 French settled in the canton of Geneva alone, or by the numerous British settled in various resorts on the shores of Lake Geneva. The number of tourists who annually visit Switzerland may be put at 2,500,000, of whom in 1911 no less than 40 per cent. were Germans, which proportion has since somewhat increased.

Certainly it has not diminished. Theproportion of British tourists is about 16 or 17 per cent. of the whole in summer. In winter it is, of course, enormously higher. Were such places as St. Moritz and Davos to be excluded, the proportion of the German-speaking tourists there being very high, one is inclined to think that the British winter visitors would number about 75 per cent. of the total number.

This summer there seems to have been at least as many British people in Switzerland as usual, although there have undoubtedly been fewer Americans, and I think not quite so many Germans—a fact which has been universally attributed to the unsettled conditions of affairs consequent on the Balkan situation.

Wasn't a Bridge Expert.

She had been to a bridge party on the previous night, and to her devoted husband it seemed more than likely that she had more than ordinary bad luck. At any rate, breakfast next morning found her silent and depressed.

"Have a bad time last night?" queried the husband at last, nervously fingering his cheque book the while.

"Awful!" she snapped, as she beheaded an egg. "And it was your fault, too!"

"My fault?" he gasped. "Why, you know I wasn't playing."

"No, but you introduced me to that man whom you said was a famous bridge expert, and——"

"Well, so he is, my dear!"

"Nonsense; he's nothing of the kind. He's only an engineer!"

FILLING UP.

"What wil be put in the magazine this month?"

"About forty pages about what we had last month."

"Yes."

"And forty more about what we will have next month."

"And then?"

"That ought to be enough for this month."

Stock Markets

A. H. Stratton & Co., Brokers, report the following:

Chas. Barring incorporated reports in their market letter to-day that the stock market reacted a little but the dealings were so small as to be devoid of significance.

New Haven, for which we predicted 75 when it was 89.2, struck this figure. I would now cover short N. H. whenever it reacts again.

United States Steel ought to be a sale around 56.6 and it ought not to go above 57.

A.C.P. which you should have sold at 71 and 71 1-2 yesterday, reacted over a point and it ought to go 4 or 5 points lower before going much above yesterday's high.

In fact they have reason to believe that the whole list was top yesterday, and we ought to see new low prices all round before they go more than a fraction above yesterday's high. After this next decline, the general list will be a purchase for an advance of 5 to 25 points, and we will indicate the best stocks to buy when the time comes. Meanwhile you can always buy Pacific Mail around 22, Third Avenue at 37, B.R.T. below 86, and I.Q. around 57.

Do not put out any more shorts when the market is weak as the next big move of 15 or 20 points will be up while there are only 4 to 6 points left on the short side.

The Mexican situation is so delicate that our efforts might be damaged by publicity says Washington officials.

S.P. strike still on.

TO PROBE DISASTER

Federal Inquiry and Provincial Inquests Ordered

LEGISLATION IS ORDERED

OTTAWA, Nov. 18.—There will be a searching Departmental enquiry into the terrible marine disaster on the great lakes. Capt. Lindsay, Dominion wreck commissioner, and two others will form the board, which will meet at Goderich or Sarnia probably. The duties of the commissioners will not only consist of probing certain aspects of the recent wrecks, but to suggest some future line of action on the part of the Government in order to make navigation on the great lakes safer.

The Cabinet at yesterday's meeting voted $25,000 for the fund for the relief of the sufferers in the lake disasters. The amount will supplement the sum raised by the general public.

The Government is receiving reports hourly, claiming that the failure of captains and officers to give proper regard to official storm signals, was in a large sense responsible for some of the catastrophes, while it is further claimed that had some of the steamers been equipped, as are ocean liners, with apparatus for sprinkling oil upon the troubled waters, the disaster could not have been so great.

It is expected that later on a commission will be appointed to consider the whole question of lake and river navigation. Hon. J. D. Hazen has a proposed bill already printed which will make regulations more binding upon skippers and impose penalties. Such a commission, it is said here, might redraft the bill if this is deemed necessary.

The whole question of Government insurance has been revived as a result of the great lakes disaster. At present Lloyd's discriminates against Canadian shipping.

Three Inquests Planned.

TORONTO, Nov. 18.—It is understood that the Provincial Government is arranging to have three inquests held in the lake counties which have been receiving the bodies of the storm victims. The enormity of the task, if otherwise handled, has been pointed out to the Attorney-General, and the Department has taken action towards centralizing the investigations.

Walkerton for Bruce County; Sarnia for Lambton, and Goderich for Huron, have been chosen, and the Department has instructed the local crown attorneys as to the best course to pursue.

The Attorney-General states that he is not aware of any steps planned at Ottawa, and that the instructions he has issued will be subject to change if found necessary.

KILLED BY MOTOR.

Little Girl Ran Down Returning From an Errand.

TORONTO, Nov. 18.—While running along the roadway with two other little girls on Clinton street, just north of College, at six o'clock last night, eight-year-old May Gordon of 600 College street was run down by a motor car driven by Frank Bethel of 433 Palmerston avenue, sustaining injuries to her head and body from which she died an hour later in the Western Hospital.

At the time of the accident the child was returning with some wool, with which her mother was going to knit a woollen bonnet for her chum's doll. The children were all running quickly down the sidewalk, when May swerved suddenly to the roadway, and although one of the other girls called to her to watch out for the approaching motor car, she ran directly in front of it, was struck in the temple, and thrown unconscious underneath the wheels of the car.

Mr. Bethel, the driver, picked up the unconscious child and drove at top speed to the Western Hospital, but she never regained consciousness.

Driving to the detective office at the City Hall, Mr. Bethel told of the occurrence and explained in detail how it occurred. He was not detained by the police.

BRIEFS FROM THE WIRES.

Mrs. N. W. Rowell, of Toronto, was re-elected president of the National Y.W.C.A. yesterday in Winnipeg.

John Allard, a Cornwall musician was sent to jail for six months yesterday for supplying liquor to two Indians of Cornwall Island.

The East Indian residents of Natal yesterday declared a general strike, which was accompanied by rioting and the burning of sugar plantations.

Using a set of harness with which to hang himself, George B. Gray, Con. 5, London Township, committed suicide, and his body was discovered by his son.

Stephen Loncar, living at Steelton, Pa., cut his wife's throat yesterday because she would not get up and pack his lunch basket. The woman died almost instantly.

A big gasoline boat the Ariadne, employed carrying supplies from Kingston merchants to people living along the Rideau Canal, was sunk on Sunday by hitting a stump.

Wm. R. Travers, manager of the defunct Farmers' Bank, who is in Kingston Penitentiary, has applied for parole because of failing health. He has served three years out of six.

T. Baker, a Michigan Central brakeman, was run over and had both legs terribly crushed, after falling from the top of a train at Welland yesterday. He was married a week ago.

Eight Montreal shopkeepers appeared in the police court yesterday on a charge of selling butter which contained more than 16 per cent. of water. The minimum penalty is $200 fine.

SCRAMBLE FOR CLOTHES.

Bodies of Executed Federals Stripped by Mexican Rebels.

EL PASO, Texas, Nov. 18.—Eleven men are known to have been executed in Juarez since Francisco Pancho Villa and his rebel forces captured the city on Saturday morning. The rebel officials admit the execution of that number. The bodies of most of the victims are still unburied.

The body of Col. Enrique Portillo, executed on Saturday, was brought to El Paso for interment here yesterday. It was divested of its trousers and shoes by a rebel who was short of clothing while it lay in the military barracks in Juarez.

All rebels are badly in need of clothing, and the distribution of captured federal uniforms made by Villa did not go around, so there has been a scramble for the clothing of the men executed.

BIG EATERS GET KIDNEY TROUBLE

Take Salts at First Sign of Bladder Irritation or Backache

The American men and women must guard constantly against Kidney trouble, because we eat too much and all our food is rich. Our blood is filled with uric acid which the kidneys strive to filter out, they weaken from overwork, become sluggish; the eliminative tissues clog and the result is kidney trouble, bladder weakness and a general decline in health.

When your kidneys feel like lumps of lead; your back hurts or the urine is cloudy, full of sediment or you are obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night; if you suffer with sick headache or dizzy, nervous spells, acid stomach, or you have rheumatism when the weather is bad, get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate clogged kidneys; to neutralize the acids in the urine so it no longer is a source of irritation, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure, makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water beverage, and belongs every home, because nobody can make a mistake by having a good kidney flushing any time.

AWAITING THE END

Financier Boycott Expected to Battle Huerta Regime

IS RAILWAY IN DANGER?

WASHINGTON, Nov. 18.—That the United States in its policy toward the Provisional Government in Mexico is content to await the outcome of the steady pressure being exerted to bring about the downfall of the Huerta regime was apparent yesterday in official circles here. Exciting rumors from Mexico City wholly failed to ruffle the calm confidence of President Wilson or Secretary of State Bryon.

"The mills of the gods grind slowly," was the declaration of one high official of the Government in discussing the developments. The President was not at all aroused by reports that Mr. O'Shaughnessy, the American charge d'affairs, was about to quit Mexico City, and it was stated that no orders had been given either to Mr. O'Shaughnessy or John Lind at Vera Cruz, to leave Mexico. Rumors that the American embassy would be closed within 48 hours were characterized in official sources as "fake."

The President told callers during the day that while there had been some change in the Mexican relations as to persons there had been no essential change in the circumstances to which he had referred the other day as seeming favorable to a solution of the difficulties.

The President, it is said, is confident that the financial boycott of the Huerta regime by the United States and the great foreign powers will be a powerful factor in bringing about the end of Huerta.

While in some quarters there was a disposition to regard Cabinet changes in Mexico, as the forerunner of disintegration of the Huerta regime, in others it was pointed out that they might mark the adoption by Gen. Huerta of a more active and vigorous policy and one more defiant of the United States Government.

The possibility of an interruption of railroad communication between the City of Mexico and Vera Cruz, which is now practically the only outlet for the capital, is giving considerable concern to the officials here and it is said that any attempt to thus completely isolate Americans and other foreigners in the Mexican capital would result in quick action by the United States to prevent it.

Secretary Bryan had heard from some of his agents that the line of communication was threatened, but it was not clear whether the interruption was to be expected as a result of some decree of the Huerta Government or from operations of the revolutionists, who have suddenly appeared in some force in the difficult mountain country lying between Vera Cruz and the capital.

If the Japanese should ever succeed in getting China's 400,000,000 inhabitants thoroughly aroused they would have their little brown hands full.

TERRIER WARNED POLICE.

Dog's Antics Result In Capture of Burglar in Toronto.

TORONTO, Nov. 18.—His suspicions aroused by the actions of a small white terrier dog, Constable Crummey entered the rear of the tailoring shop of A. Samuel & Co., at 321 West Queen street, at 12.30 this morning and caught Samuel A. Corbett, a trainman, of 19 Baker avenue, West Toronto, rifling the premises.

The constable nightly walks up a back lane on Queen street to see that all is in order, and last night, on coming to the rear of Samuel's shop, the white terrier ran up to him, fawned upon him, cringing as if in fear. Entering the premises through a back shed, the constable came upon Corbett bending over a pile of clothing. Asked what he was doing there, the man feigned drunkenness, and mumbled an unintelligable reply, but at last said he lived there. Hearing a noise in the store, Constable Crummey promptly handcuffed his man to a post and went in search of an accomplice, but could find none. A police call brought half a dozen more officers and the premises were thoroughly searched, but the other culprit had escaped.

Corbett proved a tartar when it came to getting him in the patrol wagon. He fought three policemen as long as he could stand against them, and after he had been placed in the patrol, he jumped on the guard and attempted to break away.

BOYS GO TO TRIAL

Murder Charged in Port Credit "Wild West" Tragedy

CORONER BLAMES "MOVIES"

TORONTO, Nov. 18.—Cecil Babcock and William Sherman, aged 15 and 17 respectively will be sent up for preliminary hearing on a charge of murdering Thomas Crisp while Ralph McCallum will be used as a material witness in the trial, as a result of the verdict returned last night by Chief Coroner Johnson's jury, which investigated the circumstances of the shooting affair, near Port Credit, last Saturday, in which Crisp was fatally wounded.

The jury found that Thomas Crisp came to his death as a result of a shot fired, either by William Sherman or Cecil Babcock, in an interchange of shots, with Crisp on the one side and Sherman and Babcock on the other. Their verdict was homicide, but it will be left to the jury in the trial to say whether it was a case of murder or manslaughter. Incorporated in the verdict was a strong recommendation that more stringent regulations be enforced regarding the sale or rental of firearms, and that the age limit for the purchase of same be raised.

William Sherman, one of the boys accused of the murder, told in a most intelligent and straightforward manner of the occurrence of the day up to the time of the shooting. The four boys had left on the nine o'clock car for Port Credit, and spent the morning and part of the afternoon shooting at rabbits and at a target. While walking along the road towards the city, Crisp began shooting into the air to frighten his companions, and in a short time they began retaliating in the same manner. In the course of a half an hour they arrived in front of the gate of Mr. Hall's property when Crisp, who was in the lead turned and began shooting in the direction of the two boys, Sherman and Babcock, who were walking some distance behind him. Price dodged behind a telegraph post, while the other boys sought refuge behind posts on either side of the road. From these positions Babcock and Sherman began firing in the direction of the other boy, Price, but only in fun, with no intention of hitting him. Price in turn was firing at them. The fourth boy, McCallum, had no rifle, so he sat at the side of the road, out of the line of fire. After a time Sherman turned his back to Crisp and was reloading his gun, when he heard another shot, and immediately afterward Babcock called to him to look at Tommy. Sherman saw Crisp lying on the ground, and both boys ran over to him. Sherman claimed that his shot had not hit Crisp, as he had heard it hit the post. He also stated that Babcock had told someone that he (Babcock) had shot Tommy accidentally.

Ralph McCallum told practically the same story, while Constable Holmes stated that Babcock had confessed at No. 3 police station to having shot the boy accidentally. Other witnesses testified, but their testimony had very little weight, other than to establish the fact that Crisp had rented his rifle from Solomon Holbres, a second-hand dealer on East King street.

Coroner Johnson in his address to the jury laid stress on the fact that the boys were committing an unlawful act and must be held responsible for the result of the deed, as it resulted in the death of another boy. The one who fired the shot was guilty of murder. It was his opinion that there was no possibility of the shooting having been an accident, as the boys had, according to evidence, fired at least forty or fifty shots. He blamed the circulation of trashy books, wild west shows and melodramatic moving picture shows for exercising a bad influence on young boys.

Montague Will Be Opposed.

WINNIPEG, Man., Nov. 18. — The Liberals have decided to oppose Hon. Dr. Montague in St. Andrew's. The candidate will be J. W. Wilton, barrister, of Winnipeg, who has large interests in Kildonan. The Liberals intend to make it one of the hottest contests ever fought in Manitoba. The campaign will only last thirteen days, election taking place a week from next Saturday. The constituency reaches away up to the east side of Lake Winnipeg, and it will be impossible to open two polls owing to ice having formed on the river.

Mustn't Dance Tango.

BERLIN, Nov. 18.—Emperor William has forbidden officers of the German army and navy while in uniform, to dance the tango, the one step and the two step, according to the newspaper, The Salon. His Majesty also has instructed the officers to avoid visiting families where these dances are favored and an order of the Royal Theatre in Berlin was advised yesterday by Count George Von Huelsen-Haeseler, the Imperial director of theatres, not to participate in a tango tournament.

ELECTION IS PROTESTED.

Four Petitions Charge Morris With Corruption In Chateauguay.

MONTREAL, Nov. 18.—The election of James Morris as M.P. for the county of Chateauguay was protested yesterday afternoon, when petitions to unseat and disqualify him were deposited in the Superior Court office at Valleyfield.

Bribery, promises of public offices, undue influence, defraying transportation, treating, intimidation and furnishing vehicles illegally are amongst the charges against the Conservative M.P. and his agents.

Four petitions covering the above were deposited, sworn to by four electors of Chateauguay county.

Starting the Day Right

Do you begin the day with a "grouch"? Are you tired in the mornings? Do you fail to benefit by the restorative influence of sleep, which should make good the energy and vitality consumed by the day's work?

Then you are rapidly becoming bankrupt so far as health is concerned. You should look to your habits of eating, make sure that you get lots of fresh air in your sleeping apartments, and restore wasted vitality by using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

This great food cure does not induce sleep by any drugging effect, but when you have been using it for a few days and get the nervous system into condition you find yourself resting and sleeping naturally and healthfully. By keeping up this restorative treatment you will be able to make good the waste and fill the exhausted nervous system with new vigour and energy. This means thorough cure of such symptoms as headache, sleeplessness, indigestion and tired, listless feelings.

Kryptok Lenses

The man who invented Kryptok Invisible Bifocals came very near discovering an equivalent to the Fountain of Youth.

It is the Eyes that make a healthy person feel old, nothing else.

If you wear distant glasses and lower your eyes to read, the page is blurred. If you are wearing reading glasses and raise the eyes to look around, everything is blurred.

You meet a friend who tells you he is wearing bifocal glasses at that moment but to all appearance they are plain glasses. He reads through the reading part and sees his car two blocks through the distant part with equal facility. He is wearing Fowler's Kryptok Invisible Bifocal Glasses.

MOTHERS!
DO YOU KNOW—

That when you put a salve onto your child's skin, it passes through the pores and enters the blood, just as surely as if you put it into the child's stomach?

You would not put a coarse mass of animal fat, colored by various mineral poisons (such as many crude salves are) into your child's blood by way of the stomach? Then why do so by way of the pores?

Take no risk. Use always the pure herbal essences provided in Zam-Buk. Zam-Buk contains no trace of any animal oil or fat, and no poisonous mineral coloring matter. From start to finish, it is purely herbal.

It will heal sores, ulcers, abscesses, eruptions, various ulcers, cuts, burns and bruises more quickly than any other known preparation. It is antiseptic, quickly stops the smarting of a sore or cut, cures piles, inflamed sores and blood-poisoning. It is a combination of healing power and scientific purity. Ask those who have proved it.

"That Affair Next Door"

By ANNA KATHARINE GREEN

"Doctor," he asked, "are you prepared to say how long a time elapsed between the infliction of this fatal wound and those which disfigured her?"

"No, sir, not exactly; but some little time."

Some little time, when the murderer was in the house only ten minutes! All looked their surprise, and, as if the Coroner had divined this feeling of general curiosity, he leaned forward and emphatically repeated:

"More than ten minutes?"

The doctor, who had every appearance of realising the importance of his reply, did not hesitate. Evidently his mind was quite made up.

"Yes; more than ten minutes."

This was the shock I received from his testimony.

I remembered what the clock had revealed to me, but I did not move a muscle of my face. I was learning self control under these repeated surprises.

"This is an unexpected statement," remarked the Coroner. "What reasons have you to urge in explanation of it?"

"Very simple and very well known ones; at least, among the profession. There was too little blood seen, for the wounds to have been inflicted before death or within a few minutes after it. Had the woman been living when they were made, or even had she been but a short time dead, the floor would have been deluged with the blood gushing from so many and such serious injuries. But the effusion was slight, so slight that I noticed it at once, and came to the conclusions mentioned before I found the mark of the stab that occasioned death."

"I see, I see! And was that the reason you called in two neighbouring physicians to view the body before it was removed from the house?"

"Yes, sir; in so important a matter, I wished to have my judgment confirmed."

"And these physicians were——"

"Dr. Campbell, of 110 East —— Street, and Dr. Jacobs, of —— Lexington Avenue."

"Are these gentlemen here?" inquired the Coroner of an officer who stood near.

"They are, sir."

"Very good; we will now proceed to ask one or two more questions of this witness. You told us that even had the woman been but a few minutes dead when she received these contusions, the floor would have been more or less deluged by her blood. What reason have you for this statement?"

"This; that in a few minutes, let us say ten, since that number has been used, the body has not had time to cool, nor have the blood-vessels had sufficient opportunity to stiffen so as to prevent the free effusion of blood."

"Is a body still warm at ten minutes after death?"

"It is."

"So that your conclusions are logical deductions from well-known facts?"

"Certainly, sir."

A pause of some duration followed. When the Coroner again proceeded, it was to remark:

"The case is complicated by these discoveries; but we must not allow ourselves to be daunted by them. Let me ask you, if you found any marks upon this body which might aid in its identification?"

"One; a slight scar on the left ankle."

"What kind of a scar? Describe it."

"It was such as a burn might leave. In shape it was long and narrow, and it ran up the limb from the ankle bone."

"Was it on the right foot?"

"No; on the left."

"Did you call the attention of any one to this mark during or after your examination?"

"Yes; I showed it to Mr. Gryce, the detective, and to my two coadjutors; and I spoke of it to Mr. Howard Van Burnam, son of the gentleman in whose house the body was found."

It was the first time this young gentleman's name had been mentioned, and it made my blood run cold to see how many side-long looks and expressive shrugs it caused in the motley assemblage. But I had no time for sentiment; the inquiry was growing too interesting.

"And why," asked the Coroner, "did you mention it to this young man in preference to others?"

Because Mr. Gryce requested me to. Because the family as well as the young man himself had evinced some apprehension lest the deceased might prove to be his missing wife, and this seemed a likely way to settle the question."

"And did it? Did he acknowledge it to be a mark he remembered to have seen on his wife?"

He said she had such a scar, but he would not acknowledge the deceased to be his wife."

"Did he see the scar?"

"No; he would not look at it."

"Did you invite him to?"

"I did; but he showed no curiosity."

Doubtless thinking that silence would best emphasize this fact, which certainly was an astonishing one, the Coroner waited a minute. But there was no silence. An indescribable murmur from a great many lips filled up the gap. I felt a movement of pity for the proud family whose good name was thus threatened in the person of this young gentleman.

"Doctor," continued the Coroner, as soon as the murmur had subsided, "did you notice the colour of the woman's hair?"

"It was a light brown."

"Did you sever a lock? Have you a sample of this hair here to show us?"

"I have, sir. At Mr. Gryce's suggestion I cut off two small locks. One I gave him and the other I brought here."

"Let me see it."

The doctor passed it up, and in sight of everyone present the Coroner tied a string around it and attached a ticket to it.

"That is to prevent all mistake," explained this very methodical functionary, laying the lock aside on the table in front of him. Then he turned again to the witness.

"Doctor, we are indebted to you for your valuable testimony, and as you are a busy man, we will now excuse you. Let Dr. Jacabs be called."

As this gentleman, as well as the witness who followed him merely corroborated the statements of the other and made it an accepted fact that the shelves had fallen upon the body of the girl some time after the first wound had been inflicted, I will not attempt to repeat their testimony. The question now agitating me was whether they would endeavour to fix the time at which the shelves fell by the evidence furnished by the clock.

X.

Important Evidenc.

Evidently not; for the next words I heard were: "Miss Amlia Butterworth!"

I had not expected to be called so soon, and was somewhat flustred by the suddenness of the summon, for I am only human. But I rose with suitable composure and passed to the place indicated by the Coroner, in my usual straightforward manner, heightened only by a sense of the importance of my position, both as a witness and a woman whom the once famous Mr. Gryce had taken more or less into his confidence.

My appearance seemed to awaken an interest for which I was not prepared. I was just thinking how well my name had sounded uttered in the sonorous tones of the Coroner, and how grateful I ought to be for the courage I had displayed in substituting the genteel name of Amelia for the wak and sentimental one of Araminta, when I became conscious that the eyes directed towards me were filled with an expression not easy to understand, I should not like to call it admiration, and yet it not call it amusement, and yet it seemd to be made up of both. While I was puzzling myself over it, the first question came.

As my examination before the Coroner only brought out the facts already related, I will not burden you with a detailed account of it. One portion alone may be of interest. I was being questioned in regard to the appearance of the couple I had seen entering the Van Burnam mansion, when the Coroner asked if the young woman's step was light, or if it betrayed hesitation.

I replied: "No hesitation; she moved quickly, almost gaily."

"And he?"

"Was more moderate; but there is no signification in that; he may have been older."

"No theories, Miss Butterworth; it is facts we are after. Now, do you know that he was older?"

"No, sir."

"Did you get any idea as to his age?"

"The impression he made was that of being a young man."

"And his height?"

"Was medium, and his figure slight and elegant. He moved as a gentleman moves; of this I can speak with great positiveness."

"Do you think you could identify him, Miss Butterworth, if you should see him?"

I hesitated, as I perceived that the whole swaying mass eagerly awaited my reply. I even turned my head because I saw others doing so; but I regretted this when I found that I, as well as others, was glancing towards the door beyond which the Van Burnams were supposed to sit. To cover up the false move I had made—for I had no wish as yet to centre suspicion upon anbody — I turned my face quickly back to the crowd and declared in as emphatic a tone as I could command:

"I have thought I could do so if I saw him under the same circumstances as those in which my first impression was made. But lately I have begun to doubt even that. I should never dare trust to my memory in this regard."

The Coroner looked disappointed, and so did the people around me.

"It is a pity," remarked the Coroner, "that you did not see more plainly. And, now, how did these persons gain an entrance into the house?"

I answered in the most succinct way possible.

I told them how he had used a door-key in entering, of the length of time the man stayed inside, and of his appearance on going away. I also related how I came to call a policeman to investigate the matter next day, and corroborated the statements of this official as to the appearance of the deceased at time of discovery.

And there my examination stopped. I was not asked any questions tending to bring out the cause of the suspicion I entertained against the scrub-woman, nor were the discoveries I had made in conjunction with Mr. Gryce inquired into. It was just as well, perhaps, but I would never approve of a piece of work done for me in this slipshod fashion.

A recess now followed. Why it was thought necessary, I cannot imagine, unless the gentlemen wished to smoke. Had they felt as much interest in this murder as I did, they would not have wanted bite or sup till the dreadful question was settled. There being a recess, I improved the opportunity by going into a restaurant near by where one can get very good buns and coffee at a reasonable price. But I could have done without them.

The next witness, to my astonishment, was Mr. Gryce. As he stepped forward, heads were craned and many women rose in their seats to get a glimpse of the noted detective. I showed no curiosity myself, for by this time I knew his features well, but I did feel a great satisfaction in seeing him before the Coroner, for now, thought I, we shall hear something worth our attention.

But his examination, though interesting, was not complete. The Coroner, remembering his promise to show us the other end of the steel point which had been broken off in the dead girl's brain, limited himself to such inquiries as brought out the discovery of the broken hat-pin in Mr. Van Burnam's parlour register. No mention was made by the witness of any assistance which he may have received in making this discovery; a fact which caused me to smile: men are so jealous of any interference in their affairs.

The end found in the register and the end which the Coroner's physician had drawn from the poor woman's head were both handed to the jury, and it was interesting to note how each man made his little effort to fit the two ends together, and the looks they interchanged as they found themselves successful. Without doubt and in the eyes of all, the instrument of death had been found. But what an instrument!

HUSBAND TIRED OF SEEING HER SUFFER

Procured Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, which made His Wife a Well Woman.

Middletown, Pa.—"I had headache, backache and such awful bearing down pains that I could not be on my feet at times and I had organic inflammation so badly that I was not able to do my work. I could not get a good meal for my husband and one child. My neighbors said they thought my suffering was terrible.

"My husband got tired of seeing me suffer and one night went to the drug store and got me a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and told me I must take it. I can't tell you all I suffered and I can't tell you all that your medicine has done for me. I was greatly benefited from the first and it has made me a well woman. I can do all my housework and even helped some of my friends as well. I think it is a wonderful help to all suffering women. I have got several to take it after seeing what it has done for me."—Mrs. EMMA ESPENSHADE, 219 East Main St., Middletown, Pa.

The Pinkham record is a proud and honorable one. It is a record of constant victory over the obstinate ills of woman—ills that deal out despair. It is an established fact that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has restored health to thousands of such suffering women. Why don't you try it if you need such a medicine?

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

A New Colonel.

Returning from a fishing trip one recent Monday morning, Mr. G. A. Warburton, of Y.M.C.A. fame, boarded the train by which a Salvation Army band was returning to Toronto from a town not far from the city.

After a while, Mr. Warburton, who was accompanied by Mr. J. Firstbrook, was invited into the coach occupied by the band, the members of which well remembered his enthusiastic support during the General William Booth memorial scheme campaign in Toronto. Mr. Warburton was talking over the events of the week, when, he was suddenly surrounded by the bandsmen, one of whom bore a red tunic and army cap in his hands. "In recognition of your strenuous work for the Army," he said, "we here and now create you honorary colonel, and present you with this tunic and cap which we trust you will count among your many laurels."

Mr. Warburton laughed heartily, and donned his new "robes," to the great enjoyment of the bandsmen, who then insisted on a "speech" from the new "colonel." Wearing the Army cap Mr. Warburton stood up and told the boys what he thought of the Army, and of his pleasure at being able to join in their work, with not even a "private's" pay. But his reward, evidently, had come at last, and well, he would not mind if his friends did call him "colonel."

Alberta's Coal Wealth.

Statisticians in the employ of the Provincial Department of Mines have figured that it would require the services of 4,000,000 men, each producing five tons a day and working 300 days a year, 179 years to mine the coal available to Alberta, which is credited with 14½ per cent. of the total coal resources of the world, estimated at 7,396,551,000,000 tons. The reserves in Alberta are estimated to contain 1,075,039,000,000 tons, as compared with 160,841,910,000 tons for the rest of Canada.

The coal output of Alberta for 1912 is placed at 3,500,000 tons, of a total of 13,000,000 tons for all Canada, taking in seven provinces, the Yukon and Northwest Territories and the Arctic islands. There are three distinct coal horizons in Alberta: The Kootenay, or lower Cretaceous; the Belly River, or middle Cretaceous, and the Edmonton, lying at the top of the Cretaceous. The Edmonton formations cover an area of 77,184 square miles, of a total surface area of 109,168 square miles in the Dominion of Canada.

The Retort Courteous.

When the late G. V. McInerney, K.C., ran for the Local Legislature of New Brunswick, in 1904, his opponent was Edward Lantalum, a well-known junk dealer of St. John.

At the nomination proceedings Mr McInerney referred to Lantalum as being a good fellow, "but always around when there is a wreck."

Mr. Lantalum, however, was elected, and on declaration day he referred to Mr. McInerney's remarks, and said:

"And on election day I had the pleasure of attending the 'wreck' of Mr. McInerney and his ticket."

Missed the Bird and Lost.

The Glasgow News records a slight incident during a crown tennis tie. The two players, who may be termed A and B, were very evenly matched. The game was long, and sometimes one and sometimes the other narrowly led. At length when A was within a stroke of defeat he returned a ball softly, and it looked as if fortune was sealed. So it would have seen, but just at that moment a bird flew across the court in a fine parallel with the ball.

As all good tennis players can well understand, B mistook the bird for the ball and "smashed" at it vigorously. It swiftly rose and he missed it by a feather's breadth, and ere he could recover his balance the ball had dropped on his court.

This stroke proved the turning point in the tie, as A thereafter played up strongly and ran out winner.

Unload Your Freight Right On The Top Floor

WHEN the ground floor or basement is used as a receiving room, store room and shipping room combined, it is impossible to avoid confusion and consequent delay in filling orders.

The logical place for the receiving room, in a factory or warehouse, is the top floor. Here bulky cases may be unpacked and their contents rushed to the store room, or direct to the proper department, leaving the packing cases on the top floor and reserving the ground floor and basement for showing goods and shipping orders.

An Otis-Fensom Freight Elevator makes all floors as readily accessible as the ground floor. It saves money by reducing the time and labor required in handling raw materials and manufactured goods. It makes possible the use of your regular line shaft power, or if line shaft power is not available a "single belt" type of elevator may be had with an independent motor. The prevailing low rates for electric power make this type of elevator most attractive and economical.

OTIS FENSOM FREIGHT ELEVATORS

For those who do not require, or cannot use, a belted elevator we recommend our latest improved Hand Power Freight Elevator, equipped with our Improved Steel Roller Bearings, which run with the least possible friction and without oiling.

Our booklet, "Freight Elevators and Their Uses," will tell you all about an elevator designed to meet your individual needs.

Write for it to-day. Don't put it off until another time. Just sit right down and fill out this coupon NOW, while the thought is fresh in your mind.

The Horse to His Master

I am a Horse; you are a man; I've been your slave since I began, and though I'm strong enough to shake my shackles off and make a break for freedom that would lift the lid, you've noticed that I never did. By day and night I've worked for you, and done the best that I could do; and though I may not always like your methods, yet I never strike; in heat and cold, in wet and dry I'm always ready—glad to do the very most to satisfy my master, man., Therefore, my master, if you please, considering such facts as these, say, don't you think it ought to be your pleasure to look out for me, if for no other reason than for my greater usefulness to man? Of course, you might be worse, I know you sometimes treat your own kind so, but I'm a horse, and truer than the man-slave to his master, man. And, furthermore, my nature is much more dependent than is his. And as I trust you, sir, you should do all you can to make it good. Nor do I ask a lot, I guess, to be a fairly fair success—good food, good shelter, and good care, I think, is just about my share. No other ay I ask—no touch I make, but this! Is that too much?—W. J. Lampton, in New York Times.

Canada's Oil Production

That the petroleum industry in Canada is decreasing yearly is shown by a report made to the Government by John McLeish, B.A. The output is almost entirely from the Ontario oil fields, although New Brunswick contributes a considerable amount, and it might be noted that in the latter province the yearly flow is on the increase.

Nerves Were So Bad

THOUGHT SHE WOULD GO OUT OF HER MIND.

Diseases of the nervous system are very common. All the organs of the body may be sound while the nerve centres may be affected.

Many women become run down and worn out by household cares and duties never ending, and sooner or later find themselves with the nerves shattered, and the heart action weakened.

On the first sign of any weakness of either the heart or nerves, flagging energy, or physical breakdown, do not wait until your case becomes hopeless.

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills will at once quieten the nerves, strengthen the heart and build up the entire system.

Mrs. Archie Goodine, Tilley, N.B., writes:—"When I was troubled with my heart two years ago, I was very bad. My nerves were so unstrung that sometimes I would almost go out of my mind. I doctored myself with everything I could get, until at last I got four boxes of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, and they have cured me. I cannot speak too highly of this wonderful remedy, and will recommend it to all sufferers."

Price, 50 cents per box, or 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

LIFE AT OXFORD

Some Rigid Rules Are Enforced at the University

In the case of the ordinary youth of the upper classes in England going up to Oxford marks the transition from the schoolboy to the "young man" stage of his existence. At the 'Varsity he finds a sudden new liberty unknown at school. But at the same time there are many restrictions which are rigidly enforced by the authorities.

The first rule that is impressed on the student is that of "keeping chapel," for which he has to be fully dressed at eight o'clock in the morning—if not every day, at least four days a week.

He has to attend each lecture in "academical dress"—which consists of a gown no longer than an ordinary lounge coat, but with two streamers, and a mortar-board. This dress must also be worn when calling on his official tutor (who, by the way, does not as a rule teach, but acts as a sort of moral adviser and special pleader when the undergraduate falls foul of the authorities). It must be worn to every "Hall"—that is, dinner—and outside the college after dusk and on every formal occasion.

"Hall" is the great social event of the day. The dons sit on a dais at the bottom of the hall, and are in evening dress. In the body of the hall are arranged tables, at which the men sit by their "years." That is to say, there will be one long table for "freshers," or first-year men, another for men in their second year, and so on.

The 'Varsity abounds with sporting clubs of all kinds, from dominoes to foxhunting. The Bullingdon is one of the smartest and most exclusive clubs in the world. Its principal pursuits are hunting and card-playing.

At nine o'clock at night "Tom Tower"—the tower of Christ church, tolls for about ten minutes, at the end of which time the students have to be inside their own colleges. If they "knock in" between nine and eleven they have to pay a fine of 6 cents, between eleven and twelve the fine is increased to 24 cents, and after midnight the minimum fine is $4.80. But this is a very serious offense, and in the case of an ordinary undergraduate, very probably means rustication—that is, being suspended—for one term.

PAID TO EMPLOYES

Salaries in the Bank of England Range From $500 to $15,000

To enter the service of the Bank of England a candidate must be nominated by a director, be of good moral character, pass a qualifying (not competitive) examination and be between the ages of 18 and 22. The first year his salary is $500, and it then rises at the rate of $50 a year. At the end of the fifth year he proceeds to the fourth class or else leaves the service of the bank. According to figures furnished by one of the bank's officials the average pay at the end of ten years is $1,060. At fifteen years it is $1,300, twenty years $1,545, thirty years $1,945; after that the senior clerks pass to $2,150. The staff and special posts, numbering about 100, are won by meritorious service. The highest salary is paid the chief cashier and is $15,000. The chief accountant draws $12,500, and there are several appointments ranging from $3,500 to $7,500. Agents of branches receive up to $12,000. There is a pension system to which the clerk does not contribute but for which he is qualified after ten years' service.

Fine Paid in Coppers

Dr. Grace Cadell, of Leith, a prominent suffragist, who refused to stamp her servants' insurance cards as a protest against the non-enfranchisement of women was fined $50. An officer who called at her house to collect the money was handed the $50 in coppers, weighing 50 pounds, this being legal tender.

Sheepskins in Gas Meters

It will undoubtedly surprise many to learn that sheepskin plays an important part in the construction and operation of the gas meter. This leather is used to form the "diaphragms" or two bellows from which gas is drawn when a jet is lighted. They are thoroughly saturated with oil and fastened between two circular pieces of metal, acting precisely as the diaphragm in the human body. When gas is drawn from one, the other is refilled, so the consumer is given an even and constant supply.

Women Who Do Not Count.

The female of the species in Montenegro is chiefly a beast of burden. Her status is low on account of her sex. It matters not that she bears men; she does not bear the rifle and is not therefore a fighting unit. She is, in fact, introduced to the world with an apology. A man will announce the birth of a daughter to his friends with the words, "Comrades, excuse me—a girl."

Until thirty years ago the population was only counted as so many "rifles"—that is to say, supposing one of the walled villages to contain 200 men, each with his "handjar" and rifle; 200 women, 300 children, with forty lusty boys, of whom thirty were able to shoot and had guns, and, say, sixty old men and women, then that place would be said to have 230 inhabituuts, non-fighters going uncounted.—"Peeps at Many Lands."

Bermuda.

Bermuda enjoys the distinction of being the only British colony mentioned in Shakespeare. And his way of spelling it—the "still vexed Bermoothes"—is more correct and grammatical than that used today. Bermuda is plural, not singular. It is really an archipelago or cluster of 300 small islands—very small, seeing that all told they do not aggregate more than nineteen square miles. Bermuda is less than 600 miles from the coast of the United States. The exceptional mildness and salubrity of its climate have made it during recent years a favorite winter resort with well-to-do Americans. According to statistics, these visitors number some 30,000 a year. Mark Twain was a regular winter resident of Bermuda.

NOTHING LIKE IT FOR COLDS

Mrs. Holland Ferguson, Sheffield, N.B., writes: "Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine has cured my children and myself of severe colds. We are never without it in the house. There is nothing like it for colds and throat trouble, and it is so soothing and pleasant to take, my children would drink a whole bottle if they were permitted."

Racing in Ancient Rome.

Ancient Rome had its racing and its popular and well paid jockeys. Betting ran high, and the excitement of the people over the races and their favorite color frequently led to bloodshed. Caligula—he who made a consul of his horse—passed most of his time rioting with the charioteers. The circus was the place for the racing. The largest of them, the Circus Maximus, about 21,000 feet long, could accommodate 480,000 spectators. Seven times was it necessary to race round the spina, a low stone wall running down the center of the circus. The jockeys drove in a light chariot—usually four in each race—and wore close fitting tunics and leather caps of distinguishing colors. That the profession was a paying one we learn from ancient writers, money prizes and wages being paid. The jockey Crescens at the age of twenty-two had amassed a fortune, and Diocles, the king of jockeys, left to his son more than $1,000,000.

Beyond Words.

When Senator James Hamilton Lewis was practicing law in Seattle he had for a client an old lady who was afflicted with asthma. She came four times a year to have the colonel make out her pension papers. The colonel never failed to show a tender solicitude in her welfare and always received a wheezy but pleased response.

One morning when the colonel asked his question about her health the old lady turned to her granddaughter, who accompanied her, and motioned. The girl stood and stared. The old lady wigwagged frantically. The girl looked stolidly at her. The old lady wheezed and coughed and panted. The girl stared straight before her.

Finally the old lady burst out furiously:

"Drat you, Mary Louise! Didn't I tell you you would have to talk for me? Can't you see I can't say a word to save my life?"—Saturday Evening Post.

Ugly Buckingham Palace.

Buckingham palace provoked characteristic expressions of contempt from Mr. Creevy. "The new palace still remains the devil's own," he wrote in 1828. And in 1835, after he had been over it, he wrote: "Never was there such a specimen of wicked, vulgar profusion. It has cost a million of money, and there is not a fault that has not been committed in it. You may be sure there are rooms enough and large enough for the money, but for staircases, passages, etc., I observed that instead of being called Buckingham palace it should be the Brunswick hotel. The costly ornaments of the state-rooms exceed all belief in their bad taste and every species of infirmity. Raspberry colored pillars without end that quite turn you sick to look at, but the queen's papers for her own apartments far exceed everything else in their ugliness and vulgarity."—London Spectator.

COAT OF ARMS GOWN.

Snobbish, but the Latest Fashion.

ONE PIECE BLUE SERGE FROCK.

Americans have been accused of all kinds of snobbishness by foreigners, and several seasons ago the stage held this phase of Americanism up to ridicule. A new rich woman whose father achieved distinction as a money king had the family coat of arms embroidered on the back of a white satin dinner gown.

The same idea is carried out seriously this season on the gown pictured, where the owner's coat of arms is embroidered on the front of the bodice. This emblazonment is inconspicuous, to be sure, but the taste of such an adornment is questionable.

The costume in other respects is irreproachable—a charming affair of navy blue serge trimmed with black braid and blue satin. The vest, of exquisite lace, is a dainty touch on the otherwise severe gown.

A blue velvet hat faced with caracal and trimmed with a single white plume accompanies the costume, which also includes heavy white kid gloves and patent leather boots with blue serge tops.

Advance Tips in Fur Sets.

A four piece fur set is made up of a muff, collar, stock and cuffs. The muff, covered with corded white silk, is square, large, perfectly flat and banded an inch from either end with two inch wide strips of fox, sable or skunk. The collar extending squarely across the back is pointed on the shoulders, slightly drops over the top of the arms and parts in front to reveal the vest of the jacket. It is bordered with a two inch band of the chosen pelt and is supplemented by a high stock, which hooks at the back and is top edged by a wide band of fur.

The wide cuffs, equipped with invisible eyes so that they may be hooked over sleeves of almost any size, are wide bands of the silk, trimmed through the center with strips of fur. The girl who owns the remnants of a good fur set may duplicate the above very easily and at comparatively small expense.

A late fad in three piece fur sets can only be adopted by the girl having an unlimited bank account, as the smallest piece travels on four legs. In fact, it is a white Pomeranian, whose tone is repeated in the long stole of white fox, having one end trimmed with a row of brushes and the other end with a baby fox head. This stole should be worn so that the stuffed fox head's bright eyes peer at the world over the edge of a huge round white fox muff.

An Inspiration Banner.

Some folks simply cannot get along without little inspiration clippings and quotations pinned about their desks, mirrors, bedroom walls, etc. And from frequent changing the pretty bedroom paper is soon filled with a smallpox array of pin pricks. The "inspirational" banner solves the problem. It is very simple. Have you a school or college pennant which is not so sacred that you may not pin prick it to your heart's content? If so, hang it in a conspicuous place on a level with your eyes and proceed to pin upon it and unpin from it all the quotations you please. Of course this keeps them all in one place, but that makes them all the more conspicuous—a desirable fault if you wish them to attract your attention.

The Ubiquitous Ruffle.

The neck ruffle we are to have always with us, at least through the winter anyhow, and it is made in great variety. The small tour de cou, which is a filmy ruffle in white or delicately shaded tulle, can be worn with the furs—that is why we shall have it all the winter—and there are several others which can be used under fur, especially as most of the coming season's fur stoles have developed into huge shawl-like wraps, which do not come close up round the neck, but are wound over the shoulders.

A WEALTHY EMPEROR

The Kaiser of Germany Has a Large Income and Much Property

The German rulers and a considerable number of the members of their families are very wealthy men, but their incomes bulk more largely than their actual accumulations. The richest of them is undoubtedly Kaiser Wilhelm as King of Prussia. For as German Emperor he receives no Civil List. His fortune is computed at $35,000,000, his annual income at $5,500,000. The Kaiser's wealth consists largely of land in town and country. He owns forests and lands to the value of seventeen and a half millions, forty castles and country houses valued at ten millions, and various property in Berlin approximately worth five million.

In seven different provinces he owns seventy-four estates, comprising close on half a million acres. With trifling exceptions, all the Kaiser's landed property is entailed.

His eldest son, the German Crown Prince, has property valued at $2,750,000 and an income of two hundred and fifty thousand annually. The Kaiser's brother, Prince Henry, owns property valued at two million, and has an income of at least one hundred and twenty-five thousand. The Kaiser and his relatives own property to the value of about fifty-five million dollars.

Jim Larkin.

The Irish trade union leader, James Larkin, who has suddenly become the storm centre of the troubled isle is one of the most picturesque and arresting personalities in the British labor movement. A big, raw-boned Irishman with tremendous enthusiasm, and more than an average share of native wit, he is a "live wire" at labor conferences, where his gritticisms of other leaders are no less incisive and pungent than his speeches in industrial disputes. His success in organising some of the most unpromising material in the world, from the trade union point of view—the Irish casual laborers—is a remarkable development, and if the new Home Rule Parliament has a sprinkling of Labor members—and it probably will—no small credit for that will belong to Larkin. He is the stormy petrel of Irish trade unionism. In type and temperament he approximates more closely than any other British labor leader to the Syndicalist leaders, who have made the I. W. W. the most dreaded organisation on the industrial field.

A Persistent Friend.

Mr. George Weir, an English actor, in his early days appeared one night in the role of Hamlet in an improvised theatre at Stroud, in Gloucestershire, and suffered much embarrassment from the demonstrative attentions of an enthusiastic former schoolfellow, who sat in the front of the tent and kept up a running comment on the performance. "That be Gargy Weir," exclaimed the admirer. "I knows Gargy! I used to go to school along wi' he." After many expostulations the interrupter was turned out, and all went well until the audience was hushed to deadly silence while Hamlet was going through his soliloquy. Then suddenly a still, small voice arose cheeringly from the back row of seats, "Garge, I be in again!"

New System of Identification Adopted to Run Down Criminals

By Joseph A. Faurot.

Chief of New York City's Detective Bureau.

(Copyright, 1913, by the New York Herald Co. All rights reserved.)

THE old theory that it requires a thief to catch a thief is about as antiquated and out of place in modern police methods as many other relics of a dead past where science had no place. To-day all is different, and even the old time and once dreaded Rogues' Gallery could be dispensed with without material loss, inasmuch as newer methods of identification which are infallible have been adopted. Photographs are often misleading, and, as we in police parlance say, often lie, whereas our present day methods cannot vary in the least detail, and a description once taken and filed by a policeman of the New York School of Identification is as lasting as the Rock of Gibraltar.

A novice might say that while this is possible it requires the study of a lifetime to bring about such conditions. He would be right, too, for it is the perfection of a study extending through several lives and by men who concentrated their entire time and brains upon this new science. When perfected I, like many other policemen, took it up, only I had the advantage of all their research work and sought this knowledge when it had been presented in a concrete and lucid form. This was made possible by the several trips to Paris and other Old World capitals I made at the direction of Commissioner Waldo in order to bring back to New York and inaugurate there a system that would place the Department of Police on a plane of equality with the bureaus of Europe. I think to-day that New York not only equals these bureaus, but in many respects we are far superior.

Not so long ago the first class of detectives was assembled before me to study this new system. Among them were men who had had but meagre ideas of the facial and physical characteristics of their fellow men. They had been working according to old methods, and it was not only necessary to learn the new system, but it was equally important for them to forget the old. The first class I instructed was "graduated" in a few months, although members of that first class still belong to my "post-graduate" class, for, having gone so far, they are eager to gather every possible scrap of information bearing on this interesting and important science. Just how well one of the first graduates learned his little book is best told in the narrative of the capture of a desperate criminal. All pertaining to this arrest was accomplished through latter day and scientific methods.

It was one morning last January, when the streets of New York were practically deserted, a blinding snowstorm having driven all pedestrians to cover, a short, thick set man entered a restaurant in Eighth avenue and ordered something to eat. As the only customer in the place finished his breakfast and left the café the newcomer arose and, clapping a pistol to the head of John Hall, the cashier, ordered him to hand over whatever money there happened to be in the cash register. This the trembling cashier did without hesitation. Keeping his victim covered with his revolver, the highwayman backed out of the room and vanished in the storm swept gloom. The face of the bandit was indelibly photographed on the brain of the victim, even to the minutest details and peculiarities.

An hour or two later the cashier of Louis Becker's saloon, in Tenth avenue, was aroused from his reveries to see a stranger standing before him. He awoke with a start, for the stranger held a revolver in his hand and its muzzle pointed squarely at the head of the terrified cashier.

"Come across with your cash," the stranger growled, "and be quick about it . . . you don't want a bullet in your head!"

Frank Valentine, the cashier, lost no time in complying with the request, and, as in the first case, the stranger backed out into the street and the storm soon swallowed him. Both cases were almost simultaneously reported to the police, and John Scanlon and Charles Dennison, detective sergeants of the second grade, were detailed to look up the cases.

After interrogating the cashiers the two detectives at once surmised that the jobs were committed by the same man. His methods were identical at each place, and them, too, the descriptions the two victims vouchsafed aptly corresponded. The description given by the first victim, however, was much fuller than that supplied by the second. He could tell without the least hesitancy the approximate height of the bandit, his weight, the color of eyes and hair, the peculiar droop of the mouth at the corners and several little peculiarities that the average person might have overlooked. Fright had so quickened the lens of his brain that its imprint of the bandit's face was indelibly photographed, and he was confident he could pick his man from a crowd of a thousand if he but had the opportunity.

But the brains of the two detectives were just as quick and receptive as that of the cashier, for after receiving his description they returned to Police Headquarters and after turning to their files at once drew forth the identification card of a man who had been measured according to the most improved Bertillon methods, and after scanning the finely written lines on the card they felt sure they had the right man in view.

When they left Police Headquarters they went forth to seek George Walmsley, alias George Ryan, No. 6,424 in the Rogues' Gallery, a criminal with a long record and all round bad man. He had been arraigned before Judge O'Sullivan on a charge of assault and robbery and through some technicality escaped sentence. Later he was brought before Judge Mulqueen on a similar charge, but was discharged, although a few months later Judge Mulqueen sent him to the Blackwell's Island Penitentiary for a year after being convicted of carrying concealed weapons. Again, a few months after his release, he was tried before Judge Mulqueen and luck once more favored him, for he was discharged.

After scanning this record Scanlon and Dennison remarked:—"That's a pretty bad chap we are after. He's been lucky, too, but if we can find him this time we think he will do a fairly long stretch in Sing Sing." The two detectives set out to find their man. From his character they knew he would seek the lowest dive he could hide in, and that chances are, with a fair sized bank roll in his pockets, he would be surrounded by his friends of the underworld whom he would call in to share the fruits of his two early morning hold-ups. It is always come easy, go easy with these crooks, and when they are in funds they stick around saloon or dance hall until the last penny is spent and they must go forth and clean up another job.

After visiting scores of saloons and dens of various sorts the two detectives entered a place in West Twenty-seventh street near the water front. Lined up against the bar stood as hard a lot of cutthroats as one would care to meet. The detectives at first glance were prone to quietly leave the place and seek help from nearby policemen, but they knew that should they hurriedly leave the saloon they would attract attention and perhaps suspicion and before they could return their quarry either would have flown or else armed himself and his cronies for a battle.

Without further hesitation the detectives walked up to the man they picked out of the rogue's as the one sought and quietly remarked:—"Ryan, we want you!"

In less time than it takes to tell it Ryan's hand shot to his pistol pocket in quest of the gun that had aided him in his early morning hold-ups. Before he could grasp his pistol, however, the fist of one of the detectives went true to the mark and Ryan was stretched on the floor dazed from the blow that had landed flush on his jaw. His cronies were not men to stand idly by and see one of their number seized by a "bull" unless a fight were put up to save him, and in a jiffy every man in the room had closed in on the detectives and as furious a battle as one would care to see was raging.

Keeping His Victim Covered With His Revolver.

Both detectives were trained athletes and before long they had half a dozen of their adversaries stretched on the floor, although the man who had floored Ryan stood over the prostrate body of his prisoner and never allowed him to move a muscle while the battle raged about him. Ryan was soon disarmed and shackled and led from the saloon to Police Headquarters, where he was identified by a number of the officials there as an old offender.

Hall, the cashier of the restaurant first held up, and Valentine, the second victim, were sent for to come to Headquarters and look the prisoner over. Both identified him as the man who had entered their respective places and robbed them. In addition to these identifications Willam Guzzes and Richard Loshner, who entered the Tenth avenue saloon as Ryan was backing out after robbing Valentine and they readily recognized in the prisoner the man who had "stuck up" the cashier.

There was not the slightest doubt in my mind or in the minds of the two detectives who made the arrests that they had the right man and had him right, too; but when the police are confronted with fastening a crime on one of the underworld —a man who can readily frame up an alibi—it is far easier to arrest him than it is to bring about his conviction in a court of law.

When we arraigned Ryan in the police court, Hall, the first victim, weakened and failed to identify him. In a second we knew that somebody had "got to" Hall and so intimidated him that he would not aid us in the prosecution. Valentine's testimony was not as strong as it might have been, but despite these obstacles we succeeded in having the prisoner committed for the Grand Jury, and his indictment followed.

When the case came to trial we knew it would be absolutely essential to gather together every witness possible to strengthen our case, for Ryan would doubtless summon a regiment of witnesses to prove that he was anywhere but at the scene of the robberies when the hold-ups occurred. The first man to fail us was Guzzes. We learned he had fled the city, and before doing so had told an intimate that it would be as much as his life was worth were he to appear in the court room against Ryan. He added that Hall knew what was coming to him should he testify, and he had reason to believe that the same treatment that would be accorded to Hall would fall to his lot should he further antagonize any member of this band.

We traced Guzzes to Port Chester and thence to Buffalo. We learned that he had been beaten by the members of the band to which Ryan belonged and told that if he put in an appearance at the trial he would be killed outright. Deeming discretion the better part of valor, he had fled, and he swore there was not money enough in New York city to induce him to go back and testify. But he went back, all right, and we convicted Ryan, sending him to Sing Sing for twenty years, the "long stretch" the detectives said would come to him finally falling to his lot.

This is but one of many instances where criminals have been picked up and convicted when the detectives had but meagre clews to work upon. Nowadays the science of identification is so perfected that we have few or no detectives in the service who do not know how to apply its methods.

The methods taught in our "School for Detectives" are such that when we graduate a student he should be able to go forth and pick out any man he is sent after from a crowd of a thousand if needs be. We do not adhere to the old methods by telling our men to look out for "short, thick set chap with dark hair and eyes and swarthy complexion." Instead the description card which the detective has scanned is so full and complete that he has in mind a faithful likeness of the person sought. The detective has made a study of the criminal's ear. He can tell at a glance any peculiarity that might be in the general contour of this organ. The eyes, eyelids and eyebrows have been faithfully portrayed, as have the nose and forehead and the manner in which the hair grows. The mouth is so minutely and scientifically described that the average detective could ordinarily pick up his man after reading this description alone. The forehead is another portion of the face that has its peculiarities, and there are hardly any two men in the country whose foreheads are identical.

When our classes are in session the detectives are seated at their little desk with prepared charts before them. The instructor stands before a big blackboard, and so expert is he with his chalk that with lightninglike strokes he can draw a face, and in a few well chosen words explain and point out its peculiarities and characteristics. This erased, he will draw another almost identical, yet when dissected it will present an entirely different aspect to the students of physiognomy. A line here or there often furnishes a splendid clew upon which to work and will be instrumental sometimes in running to cover a man who is a past master in the art of disguise.

A criminal of the resourceful type can adopt a different disguise for every alias he assumes, and under the old order of things he could come in actual contact with the men seeking him, touch elbows with them and yet escape detection. This could not possibly occur under the present system. No matter how resourceful the crook is, he cannot alter certain lines of the face. He can don wig, false whiskers, daub his face with grease paint and stick on a false nose perhaps, yet he cannot alter the general contour of the eyelids and the shape of the eye. They remain the same from birth until death. Then, again, the ear is a feature which never changes. The ear of a baby at birth remains the same all through life, and we can spot the one we are seeking in a crowd, no matter how big.

These are a few of the things we teach our men, and the fruits of our labor are returning to us in ample proportions. Our students have entered enthusiastically into the line of study and research, and already we find them reaching forth for themselves and eagerly reading every treatise on scientific detection of crime that is in point. Fortunately, we have so many linguists in the department that it matters not what tongue the work is printed in. There is always some one who can read it, and he good naturedly interprets it for his co-students.

A new era has dawned upon the New York detective, and that is why our men are regarded as second to none in the world. They go about their work intelligently, and, after all, when a man concentrates his mind upon his work his interest is not only aroused but sustained as well, and it is a safe bet that he will succeed.

We have in our files descriptions of men that were taken surreptitiously. Perhaps these men had once committed a crime or else we had reason to believe that one day they would be wanted by us. A detective of the new school while unobserved had closely studied the face of the suspect returned to Headquarters and charted it. Later, perhaps, that man was wanted, and with no photograph of him on file some detective would be told to look up this offhand description and go seek him. In several instances arrests were made by this means, and in one or two cases the person apprehended turned out to be a prize crook and one which we had long been eager to see sent away for a long term.

I am an ardent advocate of the new and scientific methods we have adopted, and Commissioner Waldo has given me every help possible to introduce methods here which have practically revolutionized police work. This work is but in its infancy, and every day we are adding something to the curriculum of our school for detectives, which will ultimately place our bureau at the very head of the list the world over.

NEXT WEEK.

Inspector Faurot will tell of the thrilling chase and capture of Ramond Forsbrey, slayer of three. Chased by a policeman after shooting a clerk; fierce battle in dark cellar; arrested; later indentified by means of finger prints as two time murderer.

N England experiments have been made recently in showing the museums and art galleries to the blind. Mr J. A Charlton Deas, F. R. Hist. S., librarian and director of the Sunderland public libraries, museum and art gallery, has made a report of the experiments made with a number of blind children.

On the first Sunday demonstration the dimensions and arrangements of the art gallery were carefully described, including the arrangements for top lighting and the methods for hanging and protecting the pictures. Although these details may seem trivial, said Mr. Deas, "a knowledge of surroundings, relative proportions and 'atmosphere' generally is as important and interesting to the sightless as to the sighted, who are apt to overlook this fact through unconscious familiarity."

Following the physical, social and geographical information, the persons in charge of the demonstration proceeded to "show" the pictures. First, a short explanation of the purpose of pictures was given, then, a small painted and impanied canvas, an artist's palette, brushes and paint tubes were handed to each individual to feel and examine closely. Then the visitors were taken to the pictures, glazed ones being selected for obvious reasons. Their length and height and the character of the frames were gone over with the sensitive fingers, the great size of many of the pictures greatly surprising the "spectators." The guides described the subject of the pictures and then taking the fingers of the blind person outlined the most important objects in them, in this way revealing their size and relative positions. The pictures of large and bold subjects were much admired.

Subsequent demonstrations on Sunday afternoons dealt with objects in museums. The first one started with a lecture on such animals as the chimpanzee, hedgehog, lion, lioness and cubs, otter, pine marten, rat, squirrel, beaver and deer. The objects shown were taken from cases and given as much space as possible to give freedom for handling them and learning their size, shape and peculiarities.

Another time the subject was birds, and the blind visitors were reminded that the birds, unlike the animals they had been handling, depend upon two legs, and that the hands should be passed carefully from the head downward to the tail or feet. This hint was sufficient to prevent any damage.

"Many of the comments," said Mr. Deas, "were interesting, some amusing, but they were never absurd. With several of the adults, and more especially the children, the handling of the albatross was an intermediate reminder of 'The Rime of the Ancient Mariner;' special attention was aroused in consequence, and quotations were showered upon the impassive specimen. The ivory feeling of the narwhal's tusk immediately suggested to one woman of culture, hitherto flabby and useless as blind from birth similarity to the ivory practical use of food.

knob of her umbrella, and caused her to handle her treasure with curiosity as she left the building. The statement that the color of the polar bear changes from white to cream with advancing years induced one person to ask how nearly such a change compared with the appearance of the hair of an elderly human being. Another found pleasure in the fact that the bear's coat was similar in color to a scarf which she was wearing. Several expressed surprise that the head of the walrus and the bear felt out of proportion with the size of their bodies, while another commented on the smallness of the eyes of these two large animals."

In commenting on the experiments Mr. Walker, a man blind from birth and for years a teacher of the blind, said that they had opened up a new world to the blind.

"Contact with nature and her works," he continued, "shows them what is and what is not possible. Where there was darkness and lack of form there are now struggling notions of shape and size. The very effort to bring cohesion out of empty void must quicken and strengthen our mental powers. We have a gallery of new forms to imitate and to which we must now strive to approximate, and these in their turn will suggest and explain hosts of others. Experience and opportunity to observe are imperiously required; appeals must be made to realities and not to inadequate models. Where reality is impossible, the model ought to be as large and as clear and definite in outline as may be. We have a figure of an eagle in school, a few inches in height; this is shown to blind folk and they are told that the form is correct, but they must enlarge it in their minds! What standard have they for their enlargement? Now that the children have seen an eagle, the model will be of some service to help them to picture the shape of wing, &c. This applies all around reality first, then model. The blind who have once seen are of course better off, because they have quite a number of mental pictures to fall back upon and can use them to assist in grasping fresh ones. But even they find great difficulty in assimilating new forms, inasmuch as what they took in through the eye appears different when observed through the medium of touch; furthermore, their standards change and need readjusting through touch. There appears to be a perspective of touch, as well as of sight. The touch is one part at a time and then builds that to another, and yet another, until the whole is produced.

"The sensibilities of the blind have been aroused in all sorts of ways. One said to me that if she were to be squeezed to death she would rather be so by the polar bear than by a snake. I asked her why, and she answered, 'The bear is a comfortable sort of creature to feel, but the snake is horrible. It feels what it is, a horrid beast!' Here is another remark:—'I like the lioness, she seems one that could be tamed; but the tiger, oh, it is terrible, it made me shiver, it feels cruel, its mouth tells you how fierce it is; I could never trust it.' The bear was a general favorite, I think because of his coat. This is symbolic of human nature, is it not—because of his coat?

"Another blind man remarked that the lion was much admired. 'How majestic he must have looked in life! We saw a marked contrast in the lioness; she was much more quiet looking, with smooth hair even to the tip of her tail. The walrus was not a favorite with us. We thought it an ugly animal, and the ugly sets up feelings of repulsion, the beautiful feelings of pleasure and joy. I was much interested in feeling the fishes and to discover their way of breathing, and the fact that their fins are not used for swimming, but only for balancing.'

"One of the girls, who had lost her sight in early childhood, said, 'What chance have I ever had of knowing such things before? Tell me more about them.'

"The rattlesnake's tail afforded much amusement. The crocodile and alligator appeared ugly animals to the touch, and were not at all favorites with us. The fossils and shells created great interest, especially the fossil tree trunk. The lecture on the human skeleton was a rare treat. On first putting our hands on the bones it set up uneasiness and creepy feelings, but we became quite familiar with the skeleton. It brought to our minds a quotation from the Psalmist David—'I will praise Thee, O God, for I am fearfully and wonderfully made.' The advantages of this method should be carefully studied by every one interested in the blind."

In the same way the natural history specimens were examined, the blind were "shown" what an aeroplane, a steam engine and other mechanical objects are like. Small models, such as are sometimes used, are found to be misleading. Two minutes' actual observation of the real object will give the blind a conception that nothing else can.

Mountaineer Summer School.

AFTER twenty-one teachers had each refused in turn to teach the regular school at Irish Creek Hollow, in the mountains of Virginia, two county school teachers and a twelve-year-old assistant invaded the district with a camping outfit and organized a summer school and an evening school that were both better attended than any school in past years had ever been.

The experiment was so successful that other isolated communities in Virginia are to be handled in the same way. Instead of allowing these isolated districts to get along as best they may, State and county officers in Virginia are going to send to the mountains every summer the very best teachers they can obtain in order to provide the educational facilities that are needed.

Irish Creek Hollow is in a mountain valley in Rockbridge county. It is sparsely settled and remote of access. The inhabitants are mountaineers of original stock who have intermarried as much as the law permits. They live in log cabins that are not even good log cabins. There was a school building, but for several years there had been no school. No school teacher would accept the position.

In 1911, after all attempts to get a regular teacher had failed, the county superintendent persuaded two experienced teachers to go to Irish Creek Hollow, after their own schools had closed, and to open a summer school. They carried with them tents to live in, provisions and cooking utensils. School was opened in the old school building and the attendance exceeded all expectations. There were eighty children enrolled in morning classes and thirty to forty adults in afternoon and evening classes. The mountaineers were so appreciative of what was done for them that summer that they built an additional schoolroom and two comfortable living rooms for the teachers.

Public spirit had developed to such an extent the following year that when one of the state inspectors and the secretary of the Virginia Co-operative Education Association visited the place in the summer of 1912 they were able to organize a school and civic league and an athletic association.

Practically all the residents of the community enrolled in the civic league. An interesting feature of the work is that it reaches the adults as well as the children. A Saturday afternoon class in reading and writing for grown ups numbered among its members old men and women with grandchildren in the morning school.

In speaking of the experiment Mr. A. C. Monahan, rural school specialist in the United States Bureau of Education, says:—"In inaugurating this work Virginia has undoubtedly taken a valuable step toward benefiting one of the most deserving and most neglected classes of our country.

"Some of our best American stock is in the mountains, and it should not be allowed to degenerate for lack of educational opportunities. The state Department of Virginia is now making a survey of the mountain sections of Virginia and proposes to conduct many summer schools in the future like this one which has been held for three years in Irish Creek Hollow."

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

WIDOW VS. DEACON

Widow Spicer and Deacon Williams attended the same church, and had known each other for a long time. The widow had known the deacon's wife in life, and was with her when she died.

Now, don't jump to the conclusion that the widow and the deacon had thoughts of marriage as soon as the year of mourning was up, for nothing of that kind was on the boards. She was well satisfied with her situation, and he had said to himself that he wouldn't ever marry again. If it hadn't happened that their church changed ministers after awhile there would have been no story to tell.

The Widow Spicer was a church member, but there were a few things she shied at. For instance, she didn't believe the whale swallowed Jonah. She ought to have believed it, of course, but she didn't and wouldn't.

She was shown pictures of the whale doing it, but they did not convince her. She was argued with by friends and by the old minister, but could not be convinced. At length the matter was dropped. She was such a good woman that folks were willing to make an exception in her case.

Strangely enough Deacon Williams had never heard of the widow's disbelief. It did not come to his ears until he had been a widower for three years, and until a new minister took the pulpit. When he learned of it his surprise was great.

He was so inclined to resent the heresy. He volunteered to call and have a talk with Mrs. Spicer, and the minister thought it might be a good thing, though he added:

"But I hope there won't be no heated argument, Brother Williams. Argue gently. Argue on the large size of the whale and the small size of Jonah. Gentle argument and persistency may accomplish much."

The deacon called and talked about the weather and the 'taterbugs until he had an opportuntty to introduce Jonah. He wanted to introduce Jonah. He wanted to go right in like chopping wood, but he remembered the minister's caution and argued gently.

The widow didn't get fierce over it, but declared that until she saw the thing done with her own eyes she shouldn't believe the whale story.

Deacon Williams left in apparent good humour, but he didn't feel all right just the same. He felt that a duty had been thrust upon him, and that he must be willing to sacrifice to carry it out. In his mind it became a burning question. It overshadowed a presidential election for a new eruption of Vesuvius.

There was Jonah—there was the whale—there was the Widow Spicer—here was he. How were the quartette to be brought into harmony?

"Perhaps we shouldn't be too anxious about it," said the minister when he saw that the matter was being taken very seriously.

"Of course we should be glad to have the widow believe, but if she don't believe and won't believe, I don't see that we can do anything except feel sorry. There are some people who will believe the sooner if let alone."

The deacon had married a woman who firmly believed that the sun moved around the earth. It had taken him three years after marriage to bring her to his way of thinking, but he had won the victory. Why not marry the widow Spicer and bring her to believe the whale story?

That was the starting point. From thence the deacon brought himself to see that Mrs. Spicer had a comfortable home, was said to be a fine housekeeper, and was president of the Ladies' Aid Society and treasurer of the Ladies' Heathen Benevolent Association.

Taken all around it wouldn't be a bad thing. He could have let the minister into the little plan, but he figured to wait and surprise him.

The Widow Spicer thought pretty well of Deacon Williams, as all other folks did. Perhaps her condition was forlorn. Perhaps shef ell in love. No one can tell about these things, and it's no one's business, anyway.

In due time they were married. When the minister congratulated the deacon the latter smiled knowingly and said:

"Ask my wife a month hence whether she believes the whale swallowed Jonah?"

"Ah! The influence of a husband. I shall be very pleased."

But he wasn't. He called one afternoon when the deacon was working in his sawmill and introduced his subject, and it was hardly off his tongue when the ex-widow replied:

"I have had three or four rows with the deacon about it, but I'm doubting more than ever. He says I've got to believe, and I say I won't, and there you are. I guess it'll end in one of us turning the other outdoors."

The good man realized the situation, and he took occasion to say to the deacon that the heathen of Africa had never heard of Jonah and the whale, and yet they were to be saved, and it might be well to let the wife go on believing as she would, but it was too late. The husband had put his foot down as a husband and given his commands.

From thence on, as his neighbours got to know and whispered about, that was a sad house. There was never an hour in the day that some reference was not made to Jonah. It would have been a great relief had they changed off to Daniel in the lion's den, but they never did.

It had become the scandal of the church and the gossip of the village when one day a tin peddlar came along and heard all about it. He was a good man. His mission was to sell tinware and do good to humanity.

It hurt him to know that there was a person living who did not believe the whale story, but it hurt him worse to learn that two good people were living a life of misery on account of it.

Among other houses he called at to exchange his wares for cash or paper rags was that of Deacon Williams. All his talk with the unbelieving wife was not about trade. He threw out a hint or two as to what could be accomplished by a determined woman.

Then he went down to the sawmill and got up a talk with the deacon, and during the conversation managed to announce the fact that when a widower married a widow and there were no children, all her property at her death went to her relatives The deacon hadn't considered this fact and it gave him a start.

When he went home at noon he said nothing about Jonah. The wife seemed to have been weeping. His dignity forbade his asking why. Even when she kissed him he couldn't sacrifice his pride. Jonah or bust was still his watchword.

However, he didn't feel just right, and he started for home an hour earlier than usual. It was to find the wife on the bed, apparently breathing her last, and a note on the stand that she had taken poison.

The deacon hustled for the neighbours. He humped for the doctor. He galloped to the drug store. He called himself names. He kicked himself. He actually swore like a lightning-rod man.

And when all was over, and the doctor said the patient would recover, and the patient said she should stick to her old opinion, the deacon shouted out:

"Hang Jonah! Hang the old whale! You can believe what you want to, and we shall have a happy home after this!"

And the tin peddler drove out of town with a happy smile on his face. He had made good.

LUNCHEON ETIQUETTE.

It is correct when serving a luncheon to use either a tablecloth or to serve the meal on a polished table embellished with lace or embroidery centrepiece and doilies.

At a luncheon given exclusively to ladies the hostess leads the way to the dining room, while at a mixed luncheon—that is, a luncheon composed of an equal number of gentlemen and ladies—the host leads the way to the dining-room with the most distinguished lady guest or lady for whom the luncheon is given on his arm, and is followed by the guests in couples and, last of all, the hostess with the gentleman who is to sit on her right. The lady on the hostess' right should be served first and the guests as they sit, first a lady and then a gentleman.

Keep Hats on.

The servant at the door indicates the dressing rooms for both ladies and gentlemen. The ladies lay aside their wraps, but keep on their hats. The hostess awaits her guests in the drawing-room, greets them cordially, and introduces one to another, if this is necessary. As soon as all have arrived the waitress or butler steps to the drawingroom door and announces that luncheon is served.

It is unnecessary to wait more than fifteen minutes for a guest who is ill-bred or unfortunate enough to be late, for it is not fair either to the hostess or the other guests to let the meal spoil for the sake of one thoughtless individual.

Household Economy

How to Have the Best Cough Syrup and Save $2, by Making It at Home.

Cough medicines, as a rule, contain a large quantity of plain syrup. If you take two cups of granulated sugar, add one cup of warm water and stir about 2 minutes, you have as good syrup as money could buy.

If you will then put 2½ ounces of Pinex (50 cents' worth) in a 16-ounce bottle, and fill it up with the Sugar Syrup, you will have as much cough syrup as you could buy ready made for $1.50. It keeps perfectly. Any housewife can easily prepare it in five minutes.

And you will find it the best cough syrup you ever used—even in whooping cough. You can feel it take hold—usually stops the most severe cough in 24 hours. It is just laxative enough, has a good tonic effect, and taste is pleasant. Take a teaspoonful every one, two or three hours.

It is a splendid remedy, too, for whooping cough, croup, hoarseness, asthma, chest pains, etc.

Pinex is the most valuable concentrated compound of Norway white pine extract, rich in guaiacol and all the healing pine elements. No other preparation will work in this formula.

This recipe for making cough remedy with Pinex and Sugar Syrup is now used and prized in thousands of homes in the United States and Canada. The plan has often been imitated, but never successfully.

A guaranty of absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded goes with this recipe, if the genuine Pinex is used. Your druggist has Pinex, or will get it for you, if you ask him. If not, send to The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

ARTISTS' MISTAKES

Many Laughable Blunders Were Made by Painters of Long Ago

There are mistakes and anachronisms to be found in the pictures hanging in the Royal Academy. Among them, for example, may be found a picture, entitled "Pigs Feeding," which represents a dozen porkers round a trough, and not one of them sufficiently ill-mannered as to put his feet in his food! But the days of real anachronism belong to a past age, when artists of Florence and Venice painted the stable of Bethlehem like a palace, the peasant Virgin like a queen, and the Apostles and martyrs like grand dukes!

In a picture representing the death of "the lying prophet," the dead man wears coat and trousers. In Poussin's great picture "The Deluge" there are quite a number of private boats cruising about, whilst the same artist's "Saint Jerome" shows the saint looking with much interest at an eight-day clock, although such a timepiece was not invented for hundreds of years later.

Albert Dürer, in his picture entitled "The Birth of the Virgin," introduces a tent bedstead, a commodious cooking-range, and an array of china candlesticks, surmounted by modern candles; whilst another transgressor, in a picture entitled "The Expulsion from Paradise," makes a flight of hewn and polished stone steps leading out of the Garden of Eden!

In a Flemish painting several corpulent Boers, with clay pipes in their mouths, are gazing in wonder at David, who is carrying about with him the head of Goliath.

A Spanish artist represents Abraham about to shoot his son Isaac with a pistol instead of using the scriptural knife. But the climax is reached in a picture of St. Anthony of Padua, who is traditionally supposed to have preached to the fishes of the sea. The artist has put among his scaly congregation quite a number of boiled lobsters!

And yet we do not know. Can anything surpass this? The parable of the mote and the beam is the subject of the picture. Evidently the artist confounded "mote" with "moat," for he represented a perfect cascade of water pouring from one of the man's eyes, whilst from the other a huge log of wood protrudes! Another picture of about the same period represents a handsome pair of copper shop-scales falling from St. Paul's eyes to illustrate his recovery from blindness!

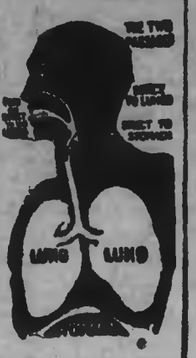
Listen!

Have you heard about Pepe? Pepe is a new scientific preparation put up into tabloid or pastille form, which provides an entirely new and effective treatment for coughs, colds and lung and throat troubles.

There is no connection between the lungs and the stomach.

Suppose something were wrong with your stomach—say indigestion, or ulceration—would you think of taking some medicine which went—not to your stomach, but to your lungs? Certainly not!

Why then, when your lungs and chest are affected, should you dose your stomach—an absolutely separate organ—with medicine? Is it not far better to treat the ailing organ direct?



Pepe provide a direct treatment for coughs, colds, bronchitis, and all lung, chest and throat troubles. Pepe contain highly medicinal essences and pine extracts condensed into tablet form. You put a Pepe on your tongue, and as it slowly dissolves, these volatile essences turn into vapor. You BREATHE the remedy to your sore ailing lungs direct—not swallow it to your stomach, which is not ailing. (See diagram.) The healing fumes, thus breathed down, bathe the delicate, inflamed membranes of your breathing-tubes and pass right on to the tiny passages of the lungs—a course no liquid or solid medicine could possibly take.

Pepe fumes are healing and antiseptic. They heal sore tissue and kill disease germs. Pepe bring pine-forest fumes to your home, instead of you going to the pine forest!

For that cold, that night cough, that touch of bronchitis, don't dose your stomach! The trouble lies in your lungs. Pepe go to the lungs direct and will cure you.

All druggists and stores 50c. box. Write for free sample to Pepe Co., Toronto, or 92 Princess St., Winnipeg. Send only 1c. stamp for postage and enclose this advertisement.

PLEA FOR WOMEN.

Conference Is Held to Abolish the "Sweating" System.

LONDON, Nov. 18.—Led by the Duchess of Marlborough, a great call for the abolition of "sweating" among women workers went forth yesterday from a conference of influential people at her home, Sunderland House, in Mayfair. Representatives of society, of the church, and of every political party united with the workers themselves demanding the abolition of "sweating." There were Mr. Masterman, financial secretary of the Treasury, urging that this was no party question; Lord Lytton condemning this "dry rot sapping the strength of the nation"; J. R. Clynes, a labor M.P., pleading for a place in life for the worst paid worker, and the Bishop of Oxford.

No speech brought home the conditions of "sweating" more forcibly than that of the duchess herself, who said that when it was remembered that two million women and girls are employed in factories and workshops in Great Britain, and at least 100,000 working for wages in their own homes, the question of "sweating" became surely a matter of great importance.

When Mr. Masterman arose to speak he discovered that suffragettes were present. Several women at the back of the room greeted him with cries of "Votes for women." As the interruptions continued the duchess of Marlborough appealed to the suffragette element to desist, with the desired effect.

Cholera Among Hogs.

LONDON, Ont., Nov 18. — Hogs valued at over $25,000, have been killed in the district west of London as a result of the worst epidemic of hog cholera the authorities have yet had to deal with.

To Prevent Mercury Poisoning.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 18.—Ben R. Newcomb of this city has discovered a new method of preparing bichloride of mercury tablets which he contends will prevent accidental deaths from this poison. Mr. Newcomb said: "The new discovery provides a prophylactic manner of preparing poisons such as bichloride of mercury so that when taken internally no harmful results will occur."

Engineer Killed In Strike Riot.

VICTORIA, Texas, Nov. 18.—Strikers returning to work on the Southern Pacific Railway here yesterday clashed with a strike-breaking crew whose places they took on a train that had just arrived from Houston.

George Gillig, a union engineer, was stabbed to death. The alleged assailant, whose name is withheld, and four companions are under arrest.

Alfonso and Queen In Paris.

PARIS, Nov. 18.—King Alfonso and Queen Victoria of Spain, who are on a three weeks' European trip, arrived here yesterday. They will spend a few days in Paris before leaving for Vienna.

The sovereigns were loudly cheered by the crowds gathered in the streets as they drove to a hotel.

SNOWDEN HOWLED DOWN.

Socialist Faces Badly at Hands of Suffragettes.

SHEFFIELD, Eng., Nov. 18. — A wild suffragette disturbance occurred here last night. Philip Snowdon, Socialist member of Parliament for Blackburn, attempted to address a "no conscription" meeting arranged by the Labor party, but was howled down by suffragettes. Stewards promptly took a hand, and in the scrimmage were attacked also by male sympathizers with the Women. Some of the stewards were kicked and badly bruised.

In spite of the fact that many of the disturbers were ejected, the uproar persisted to such an extent that at the end of half an hour the meeting was abandoned. A large section of the audience displayed anger at the chairman for calling the police to his aid, declaring that the working classes had had enough of the police.

"No Rent," Sylvia's Latest.

LONDON, Nov. 18.—Miss Sylvia Pankhurst, addressing an open air meeting in Bow last night, announced that the next suffragist campaign would be a "no rent" strike among the working women of London.

Mormons Contribute $70,000.

CARDSTON, Alta., Nov. 18.—About $70,000 was the amount set by the Canadian president of the Mormon Church here yesterday as representing the tithes of the Mormon residents of Canada. Tithes are paid to headquarters at Salt Lake City, Utah and no questions are asked as to what is done with the money. It is estimated that there are 7,000 Mormons resident in Alberta.

Get a 10-cent box now.

Turn the rascals out—the headache, biliousness, indigestion, the sick, sour stomach and foul gases—turn them out to-night and keep them out with Cascarets.

Millions of men and women take a Cascaret now and then and never know the misery caused by a lazy liver, clogged bowels or an upset stomach.

Don't put in another day of distress. Let Cascarets cleanse your stomach; remove the sour, fermenting food; take the excess bile from your liver and carry out all the constipated waste matter and poison in the bowels. Then you will feel great.

A Cascaret to-night straightens you out by morning. They work while you sleep. A 10-cent box from any drug store means a clear head, sweet stomach and clean, healthy liver and bowel action for months. Children love Cascarets because they never gripe or sicken.

HUGE ROCKSLIDE.

Tracks In Mountains Covered For 300 Feet.

VANCOUVER, B.C., Nov. 18. — A rock slide occurred at Sea Bird Bluff, near Ruby Creek, at five o'clock yesterday morning, completely covering the double track of the Canadian Pacific Railway with rocks, some weighing as much as 100 tons each. The track was buried 60 feet deep for a distance of 300 feet. A large force of workmen was rushed to the scene from Vancouver, and dynamite is being freely used to remove the blockade. No trains were in the vicinity when the slide came down. It was expected a temporary track would be built around the slide by to-night. In the meantime passengers are being transferred afoot.

MONTREAL, Nov. 17.—At the Montreal Stock Yards west end market, offerings today amounted to 2900 cattle, 600 sheep and lambs, 1000 hogs and 500 calves.

A feature of the trade today was the stronger feeling in the market for common cattle, and prices as compared with a week ago show an advance of 20c to 40c per 100 pounds. The better grades of cattle were unchanged in price. Common bulls were active, and sales of round lots were made at $4.40 to $4.60, and canning cows at $3.40 to $3.60 per 100 pounds. A new departure in the trade was the demand from American buyers for milch cows and springers. Butchers' cattle were fairly active, there being a good demand for small lots to fill actual wants.

DOCTORS INDORSE NEWBRO'S HERPICIDE FOR THE HAIR

When a doctor endorses a preparation it means more than an ordinary testimonial. His opinion is always that of the professional man devoted to the welfare of the people.

Dr. J. J. Boyd, Covington, Tenn., says: "I feel it my duty to write this for the benefit of those suffering from dandruff. In the average case a few applications of Newbro's Herpicide will remove all dandruff. It is advisable to continue its use for several weeks."

The words of J. B. Thompson, M.D., No. 2, Burrough Place, Cor. Hollis St., Boston, Mass., are not less enthusiastic: "I can only speak in praise of Newbro's Herpicide. It is all that is claimed and perhaps more. Herpicide not only cleanses the scalp but brightens the hair, gives it life and makes it soft."

Dr. T. A. Moore, Duncan, Ariz., writes of his experience: "My scalp was in places covered by patches of dry, scaly material and the itching was incessant. Since using Herpicide all these evils have disappeared and my hair is soft, smooth and growing. Hair has grown on spots before but thinly covered."

Newbro's Herpicide is "the original remedy to kill the dandruff germ" and stop falling hair. The terrible itching which goes with dandruff is allayed almost at once."

Newbro's Herpicide in 50c. and $1.00 sizes is sold by all dealers who guarantee it to do all that is claimed. If you are not satisfied your money will be refunded.

Applications may be obtained at the leading barber shops. Be sure you get genuine Herpicide. Send 10c. in postage for sample and book to The Herpicide Co., Dept. R., Detroit, Mich. McDermid & Jury, special agents.

Two Doctors Said He Had Consumption.

DR. WOOD'S NORWAY PINE SYRUP CURED HIM.

Mrs. John Elliff, St. John's West, Ont., writes:—"My little boy was very bad with whooping cough and severe cold. I went to two doctors with him, and they said he had Consumption. I could get no relief for him, he would cough all night long, with a dry hacking cough.

I was persuaded to try Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, and was surprised to see the first bottle did him good. I have had five bottles, and they cured him, he rests well at night now, and is well and hearty. If he gets a cold we always give him Pine Syrup and he is soon better. I did not think I could raise him, but I am thankful to say Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup saved him from being a consumptive."

Too much stress cannot be laid upon the admonition to all persons affected by the earlier stages of throat and lung trouble, as failure to take hold at once will cause many years of suffering, and in the end that terrible scourge "Consumption."

Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup is without an equal for all affections of the Throat and Lungs.

Price, 25 and 50 cents.

Fatality of Whooping Cough

Many parents think lightly of whooping cough, and treat it as a necessary evil, not giving the child who has it any special attention.

The seriousness of whooping cough was emphasized by the Medical Health Officer in Toronto a few months ago, when he reported 14 deaths during the month from whooping cough, and only ten from scarlet fever, typhoid fever and measles combined.

So many people write to us about the relief and cure of whooping cough by the use of Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine that we can recommend it with the greatest confidence.

It loosens the cough, aids expectoration, and by its soothing influence prevents the terrible paroxysms of coughing which are so distressing to witness, and which wear away the strength of the child. By using this treatment the disease is held in check, and cured in a few weeks, instead of months. Look for the portrait and signature of A. W. Chase, M.D., on the bottle you buy. There are many imitations.

RIGHT OF GUARDIANSHIP IS BEING CONTESTED

The Future Disposition of Eight-Year-Old Reginald Howson Hangs in the Balance—Norwood Parties Involved.

COURT WILL DECIDE

The final disposition of eight-year-old Reginald Howson will be determined on Monday next, by His Honour Judge Huycke. The right of guardianship is being contested by Harold A. Howson of Toronto, half brother of the child, and George Harding of Dummer township, paternal grandfather. The latter affirms his right to the custody of the orphan child upon the grounds that such action constitutes an obligation arising out of a deathbed promise, made by the child's father, prior to the latter's death. Harold A. Howson has entered an application for the guardianship of the child upon the grounds that such guardianship was conducive to the child's welfare.

The case was tried in the County Court yesterday afternoon before His Honour Judge Huycke. Mr. F. D. Ker appeared for the plaintiff, Howson, and Mr. E. H. D. Hall for the defendant, Harding. At the conclusion of the examination of the witnesses for both sides, His Honour announced his intention of adjourning the case for one week in order to enable the contestants to agree if possible, in the consummation of an arrangement that will provide for the satisfactory disposition of the child, subject to the approval of the court.

A Possible Solution.

His Honour Judge Huycke suggested that the child be consigned to the care of Mrs. Benjamin Howson of Norwood. The latter is the child's aunt, and at present is constituted a trustee for certain monies accruing to the child upon the attainment of his majority. His Honour pointed out that such an arrangement would ensure the child a good home, with excellent school facilities, and would enable both the plaintiff and defendant to visit the child whenever they felt so disposed. It would remove any element of strained relations that might exist between the contesting parties, were either one conceded the guardianship of the child.

Such a course as the latter, said His Honour, involved both advantages and disadvantages. He characterized Reginald as a child of good intelligence, whose future welfare depended to a large extent upon the outcome of the present case.

The Evidence.

Harold A. Howson who was named as plaintiff in the case was put into the witness box. He stated that he resided in Norwood prior to taking up residence in Toronto. Witness implied that he was in a better position to provide a comfortable home for the boy, than George Harding. The latter's home which was situated in Dummer township, was said to be somewhat dilapidated. The furniture was scanty and polished hardwood floors were an unknown quantity.

The Deathbed Promise.

Mr. George Harding, grandfather of the boy, testified that he was able and willing to take care of the boy. The latter had been residing with him for the past seven or eight months, since his mother's death. The child's father died four or five years ago. Witness recalled the promise that he had made to the boy's father concerning the maintenance of the child. He had promised to be a father to the boy as long as he lived. Mr. Harding, examined by Mr. Kerr, said that he was the father of nine children.

"Is that all?" inquired Mr. Kerr.

"Isn't that enough?" countered witness.

Witness, who gave his age as fifty-nine years, said that when he went to school, reading was given preference over writing. Consequently he developed into a very good reader, but was unable to write. He was a regular attendant of the Bethel Methodist Church and had insisted upon Reginald attending Sunday school. He admitted that there were no carpets in the house with the exception of one bedroom, which was carpeted. The farm, which he estimated to be worth between six and seven thousand dollars, was mortgaged to the extent of fifteen hundred dollars. Those who obtained a living from the farm comprised Harding's two sons, their wives and children, Harding and his wife and two granddchildren, including Reginald. He agreed that farming was a good paying business.

Other Witnesse.

C. Darling, ex-Reeve of Dummer township, considered that the guardianship of the boy was well placed in Harding. Mr. Kerr questioned witness regarding the possibility of the Harding vote figuring in the forthcoming elections.

Mr. Joseph Batten of Peterborough, said that he had known Harding for upwards of fifty-four years. He also knew Harding's wife, "who was as fine a woman as one would find any place."

"You were raised in Dummer, Mr. Batten?" interrogated His Honour.

"Yes sir."

"It speaks well for the locality," was the court's comment.

Among other witnesses who were called, were Messrs. J. B. Pearce, J.P., Dr. S. B. Ford, C. Watters, George Garbutt, Richard Dean, Clerk of the Municipality of Dummer and School Inspector Lees.

Boy Broke Down.

Reginald Howson, the eight-year-old orphan, who is the central figure in the case, was present in court. He occupied a seat in the press box, together with his grandfather. It was not until the close of the case that Reginald became conscious of the fact that an attempt was being made to separate him from his adopted parent. He burst into tears and proclaimed his desire to remain with his grandfather, for whom he showed a strong affection. The child is said to be sole heir to his father's estate, amounting to about three thousand dollars.

His Honour Judge Huycke requested that the boy be brought into court on Monday next, when the case will be concluded.

Indeed, the feeling of the dpartmnt is that "All is wll." The department received a telegram from Dr. Anderson, on board the Alaska, near the circle of Alaska, dated as late as November 10th, last.

PLEAD GUILTY TO SEVERAL THEFT CHARGES

Chas. Johnston and Walter Mahaffey Appear in Police Court This Morning to Answer Number of Indictments

EVIDENCE IS TAKEN

Walter Mahaffy and Chas. W. Johnson, alleged to have committed many cases of theft, appeared before Magistrate Dumble this morning

Mahaffy and Johnson pleaded guilty to stealing a raincoat, valued at $7, from Mr. Middleton of this City. They also pleaded guilty to stealing a coat and hat, valued at $2.50.

Charged wih stealing a knee rug, valued at $3.50, Mahaffy pleaded guilty and Johnson, not guilty.

Johnson was charged separately with stealing seventeen hens from Mrs. Turner of North Monaghan. He pleaded not guilty and was tried by Magistrate Dumble this morning.

Crown Attorney Wood conducted the prosecution and Mr. G. N. Gordon the defence.

The prisoner was found guilty of the charge.

Mahaffy was remanded until Monday next for sentence and Johnson was remanded until the same day, when he will be tried on the charge of stealing the knee rug from Lauretta Fitzgerald.

The case of Mahaffy and Johnson is a parallel to that of the Giles brothers, and it is likely that before Monday next a number of other charges will be laid against the men.

In the trial, this morning, Mrs. Annie Pratt, daughter of Mrs. Turner of North Monaghan, from whom Johnson was charged with stealing seventeen hens, was the first Crown witness. Mrs. Pratt said that as her mother was in poor health she visited her very often. On Friday, October 17th, she visited her mother, and there were forty hens and chickens at her place. The witness was very familiar with her mother's hens, as she (Mrs. Pratt) always raised them at her home in the City, and when they were large enough, sent them to her mother's, in North Monaghan.

On Sunday, October 19th, she heard from her mother that some chickens had been stolen. She went down to her home on Monday and found seventeen missing.

She didn't see any of the hens until after the arrest of the two prisoners. She then went to Johnson's place in Smith Township, where she found thirteen of the hens that had disappeared. She took home from Johnson's also two which she thought might be her own, but when she let them out in the yard thirteen of them entered the hen house, but the other two didn't, and the witness was satisfied that those were not her mother's fowl.

"Have you the slightest doubt, but that th other 13 are your mother's hens?" asked Crown Attorney Wood.

CLOSING SESSION OF THE COUNTY COUNCIL

Opened in the Court House This Afternoon—Good Roads Measure Will Be Discussed—Will Await Report of Provincial Commission.

THE WARDEN PRESIDING

The County roads scheme will form one of the chief topics for discussion at the third and last regular meeting of the Peterborough County Council, which opened in the Court House at two o'clock this afternoon. There was a full quota of members present when Warden J. H. Garbutt called the meeting to order. The sessions will continue throughout the week.

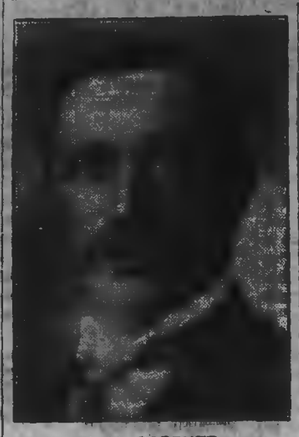
Mr. Garbutt intimated that the Council would defer action respecting the Good Roads scheme until the Provincial Highways Commission present their report to the next session of the Ontario Legislature. The report will embody the findings of the Commission, obtained since the last parliamentary session. Among other things, the Government will be asked to increase the present grant from one-third to two-thirds of the total cost of construction of permanent and approved highways throughout the province.

Committee Will Report.

Warden J. H. Garbutt, Deputy-Reeve McKee of Smith, Reeve W. Tucker of Burleigh, and County Treasurer E. M. Elliott constituted a committee in attendance at the Good Roads meeting, which was held in Belleville on November the fourth. Hastings and Prince Edward Counties were also represented at the meeting. The County Roads system has been in operation in these counties for some years. Hastings County is credited with four hundred miles of approved roads and six hundred miles of permanent roads. At present one-third of the cost of construction is paid by the Government and the remainder by the County. The Commission hope to have this raised to two-thirds.

The committee appointed by the Peterborough County Council to look into the matter will in all probability present their report to-morrow.

Those present at to-day's session were: Warden J. H. Garbutt, Smith; A. Breault, Norwood; H. G. Fitzgerald, Lakefield; Dr. Kindred, Havelock; M. Brown, Asphodel; A. A. Wilde, Belmont; W. Tucker, Burleigh; D. S. Campbell, Chandos; R. Ferguson, Dummer; M. Walsh, Douro; S. Killen, Enniamore; C. Coben, Galway; R. Shaw, Harvey; W. G. Howden, Monaghan; W. A. Anderson, Otonabee; E. Deyell, Deputy-reeve, Otonabee; F. M. McKee, Deputy-reeve of Smith.



J. H. GARBUTT,
Warden of the County of Peterborough, who presided this afternoon at the opening of the November Session.

INQUIRY IS TO BE MADE

Dominion Wreck Commissioner Will Investigate Recent Disaster on Great Lakes

A COMMISSION LIKELY

Examiner Special:

OTTAWA, Nov. 18.—Pending the appointment of a Commission with wider powers of investigation, Capt. Lindsay, the Dominion Wreck Commissioner, will hold an inquiry into the recent terrible shipping disaster on the great lakes. His investigation will b of a general routine character.

Interviewed to-day, Hon. George E. A. Foster, acting Premier, expressed the opinion that a Commission will be appointed by the Department to make a thorough investigation of the disaster. Hon. J. D. Hazen, Minister of Marine, will take the matter up on his return. Mr. Foster stated that he movements of grain has been so facilitated this season, and the elevator capacity was such that it was scarcely likely it would be necessary to extend the season of navigation beyond the usual date.

NEW OFFICE FOR WATER COMMISSIONERS

At the Water Commissioners' meeting last night Mr. W. H. Moore reported that the store now occupied by Mr. Drummond will soon be available for the Water Commissioners, as Mr. Drummond is moving to the premises now occupied by the Peterborough Cereal Company.

The premises would cost the Water Commissioners $700 a year.

RECEIVED ENCOURAGEMENT

TORONTO, Nov. 18.—The advocates of municipal ownership, who have been booming the purchase of the Toronto Street Railway and Electric Light proposition by the City from Mackenzie interests, received decided encouragement to-day, when the report of John McKay, financial expert and auditor, was given to the Mayor. He said he had not the slightest hesitation in recommending the purchase of these monopolies by th City for thirty million dollars, as asked by Mackenzie. McKay was employed by the City Council to make a report.

THE IDEAL AEROPLANE GUN

Examiner Special:

LONDON, ENG., Nov. 18. — Great Britain has acquired what the war office considers the ideal aeroplane gun. It is the latest model of the air cooled, gas operated Lewis rifle already experimented with by the United States' army and firing upward of one thousand shots a minute. It is to be the weapon of offence for aeroplanes in the British service. An unofficial test of the new gun is to be made at the Bisley range on November 27.

SPLENDID ADDRESS BY REV. T. J. MANSELL

Large Audience Heard Him Lecture on "A Trip Through Palestine"

Last night in the Charlotte Street Church, the pastor, the Rev. J. T. Mansell, gave an excellent address on "A Trip Through Palestine."

The audience was large, and gave an attentive hearing to the lecturer, who for a littl aver an hour, talked of the many interesting features of the Holy Land.

A splendid musical programme was given, including a vocal solo by Mr. Neash, and excellent selections by a quartette from the Salvation Army.

Mr. Mansell made the trip to Palestine, a couple of years ago, and just before he came to this city to take charge of the Charlotte Street Methodist Church.

CHATEAUGUAY PROTESTED.

The filing of a protest in the Chateauguay by-election, is what might have been expected. It was a case of the expected happening. The glaring corruption with which Chateauguay fairly reeked during the election is well known. Now to give the people of Chateauguay an opportunity to redeem the county's good name, in another election, four substantial and representative men of the riding have come forward as petitioners against Mr. Morris being permitted to take his seat in the House of Commons. It is hoped that the trial of the petition will be a fight to a finish. We don't want any more pleas of "guilty" as in the Macdonald, Manitoba, election trial, entered in order to prevent removal of the lid and exposure of the seething corruption, evidently existent and committed. The investigation into the charges should be thorough and exhaustive.

FOR WIDOW AND ORPHAN.

The appeal made for help for the widows and orphans and sonless mothers, made by the wrecks of the recent storm should not fall upon deaf ears, nor fail to touch the heart of our common humanity. Widows and orphans and many mothers dependent upon sons are left destitute and without material resources at the edge of winter. We all of us in this ~~time of costly living know how hard~~ it is to make ends meet without storing a reserve of means. Nearly all of us have to live for the moment and the sudden withdrawal of income would be severely felt. Those with children of their own, know how the Christmas season is looked forward to; and should feel for the little orphans for whom no Christmas will dawn in the childhood sense, unless by the help of the kind-hearted.

The concert in St. Paul's Church, on Nov. 24th, is for this worthy object and will permit hundreds to share in the pleasure of doing an act of real charity. But that occasion does not exclude contribution by other means. The Mayor will, as honorary treasurer, of the fund for the lake storm sufferers, be glad to receive contributions. Keep him busy, and at the same time hint to him that the City Council following the example of other bodies might also join in the contributions.

WORKMEN'S COMPENSATION.

The absence from the statute books of Ontario of any adequate law for the compensation of workmen for injuries, or of widows and orphans for the loss of their breadwinners, prevents the families and protegees of those who lost their lives in the storm of last week on the lakes, from receiving the benefit of legal compensation.

This involves a serious charge against the Whitney government, which has trifled with compensation legislation as indifferently as if there were no such thing as death by accident, or injury by accident every day in the year, and collectively many times a day in the year. In many cases the widows and orphans and mothers left without support by the fatalities of the late storm are left destitute and unable to claim compensation as might have been done if adequate compensation had been provided last session, as might and could have been done.

The responsibility of neglect of the Whitney government is heavy. Ever since 1907 the government has been trifling with this matter. In that year a Compensation bill was introduced by a private member and withdrawn on the promise of Sir James Whitney to take action. But of course nothing was done. In 1910, three years later, a compensation bill was introduced and withdrawn on the pledge of the government to appoint a commission; but it was not till the end of the year, when a general election was in sight, that the Commission met.

In 1912 an interim report was made by the commission, and the government definitely promised a bill in 1913. But Sir James was not ready to pass a law to protect workingmen—there wasn't time; though the Liberal Opposition offered to prolong the session in order to secure the much-needed legislation.

But Sir James refused to act, and to this refusal is due the fact that the hundreds of widows, orphans and bereaved mothers, victims of the storm, have no compensation. There was no excuse for delay. The Government had the report of Sir William Meredith, accompanied with a draft bill drawn by the best legal mind in the province. But nothing was done; it didn't matter that in the meantime thousands of workmen and their families must suffer through accident or death, without the compensation that a law passed last session would have provided—a law that would also have provided compensation for the surviving victims of the storm of a week ago.

There is absolutely no excuse for the delay of the Whitney government; for the "final" report, presented yesterday, of Sir William Meredith, was not needed to make possible the enactment of effective and adequate Compensation law. His "final" report is ostentatiously paraded by the Mail and Empire as a promise of "no half measures" in a compensation bill. The "final" report was principally devoted to answering objections to his recommended bill of last session, and the Mail and Empire itself states that these objections little influenced Sir William Meredith as "strikingly shown by the absence of recommended changes in his report. Touching one or two matters he has suggested additions to his draft bill, but they have not affected at all the principle involved."

Sir William Meredith's report, and the accompanying draft bill, is a splendid foundation for a first-rate compensation bill, but it is in no respect better than the report and draft bill of last session. They contain "no recommended changes," according to the Mail and Empire.

This is an admission that deepens the guilt of the Whitney government, in adding to the culpability of years a delay, by neglect to pass a compensation bill last session with all the necessary facts before them and a perfect draft bill made ready to their hands. The Mail and Empire in its intense partizanship, would defend the Whitney government if it were shown to be guilty of murder; and it has been guilty in the matter of all the deaths of workmen and breadwinners, uncompensated in respect of themselves and their widows and orphans, by the absence of an adequate and effective compensation law. In one sense there is blood on the skirts of the Whitney government.

HONEST BY DEGREES.

There was a great deal of talk because the Government sold to a friend of Mr. Rogers for $10 property valued at some $300,000. Evidently Mr. Borden has been warning his associates to be less generous with public lands. The Conservative mayor of the town of Gimli, in Manitoba, has been compelled to pay $752 for land that was not worth more than $15,000. It may be, at this rate of progression, if the Government remained in power long enough, it might become honest. The only fear is that by that time there would be nothing left to steal. —London Advertiser.

TEMPERANCE VS. PARTY.

An increased interest has been imported into the by-election for the legislature now going on in East Middlesex by the nomination of an avowed temperance candidate. The election will be fought, as far as the candidate can ensure such a result, on the temperance question alone. Mr. John W. Laidlaw, who has accepted nomination on the Alliance platform, is a lifelong abstainer, and promises, if elected, to vote with the party giving the fullest measure of prohibition. It is pretty clear, if he carries out his promises (always supposing he gets the chance) Sir James Whitney cannot depend upon his support very often.

On behalf of the Alliance, whose efforts in late by-elections have shown lamentable weakness, it is stated that the candidates selected by the Liberals were not pleasing to them, and that fact accounts for the poor showing the temperance people made at the polls.

In this case such a statement cannot apply. Mr. Laidlaw is the choice of the temperance party, and it is for them to rally to his support. No doubt he will receive the Liberal vote, and if he can also secure the temperance support in full measure he ought to win. Judging by the results of local option contests in the constituency there is a considerable temperance majority, and Mr. Laidlaw's chances should be bright.

This election will afford a good test of the strength of temperance principles over party affiliations.—Ottawa Free Press.

HON. J. J. FOY SLEPT PEACEFULLY WHILE TRUSTS FLOURISHED

By H. F. GADSBY

(By H. F. Gadsby in the Toronto Star.)

"For forty long years," said Sir James with one of his formidable, high-pressure smiles, "I was a county lawyer with nothing much to do but politics, and I think that's the way the Attorney-General's Department ought to be run." The Honourable James Joseph Foy agreed, and that's the way the department has been run ever since Uncle Jim took hold.

When the Proudfoot charges were at their fiercest in the House it was a restful sight to let one's eyes fall on that courtly, pleasant, pink and white old gentleman, the Attorney-General, dozing through it and listening with his eyes shut, snoring ever and anon to show how closely he followed the debate. Once in a while he would wake up and snap at a fly, and then off to bye-bye again, wandering with Alice in Wonderland. Sleep, as Shakespeare says, knits up the ravelled sleeve of care. At all events, the Attorney-General likes a good sleep almost any time of the day or night, and he conducts his department along that line. He has as great a gift of peremptory deep as Napoleon, who, as everybody knows, put the Nap in his own name

A Drowsy Syrup.

Another great gift the Attorney General has is his speaking. The Government does not utilize the Attorney General's infrequent speeches as more oratory. If the Parliament Building has no fire escapes it is because Jim Foy's speeches are such a good substitute. Nothing can empty the House quicker than a few desultory remarks from the Attorney-General. What more, a Foy speech delivered in the soothing monotone which the Attorney-General favours, has a most beneficial and sedative effect on himself. It sends him to sleep again. Often when he is supposed to be talking sense he is asleep on his feet, as anybody will admit who analyzes the arguments.

When Jimmy Foy, as his friends call him, became Attorney-General he had a great chance to throttle the dragon since generally known as The High Cost of Living, but he waved the monster back and would have nothing to do with it. He didn't want to disturb the peace and he didn't want to hurt any of the party supporters, so he said, "Please go way and let me sleep," and rolled over on his back again. In other words he did not go on with the cases against the combines.

Carrying the Combines.

The cases against the combines were a legacy from the Ross Government, which was just starting to do well when the people decided to have nothing more to do with it. Two busy little mergers from Mergerville, Jenkins and Hardy to wit, had been active to the extent of coaxing some forty-one industries to band together in a philanthropic effort to give the public higher prices on almost everything they needed.

The Government brief was handed to J. Walter Curry, then Crown Attorney, and Mr. Curry was just striking his gait, forcing the plumbers to tell what their plums were, and chiding the grocers for their grossness in the matter of profits, when Premier Whitney took office, bringing Attorney-General Foy with him. Crown Attorney Curry was thereupon invited to reports as far as he had gone, and how much further. Crown Attorney Curry, who is not good at taking hints, reported "To the bitter end," or words to that effect. Attorney-General Foy, been keen at repartee, answered, 'So far, no farther," and shortly after that there was a new Crown Attorney who knew nothing about the combine cases and cared less. This was only to be expected, because Crown Attorneys notoriously change with a change of Government, but it need not have applied to the combines, which go on forever.

That was eight years ago. The combine cases weren't exactly killed, but they faded away and gradually died like a flower lacking light and air. The Government's explanation was that the case against the Grocers Guild having failed, it would be cruel to go on with the others. The vested interests saw the logic of this at a glance, and the charges were dropped accordingly. No complaint — everybody satisfied except the consumer.

A Terrible Sentence.

When Crown Attorney Curry drew out there were thirty-nine cases pending against combines. Some had been fined, others had been committed for trial by the Police Magistrate, others had been decorated with true bills by the grand jury, and the rest were in line for brisk investigation. Loking over the list, I find that the tack men had us nailed down; the stamped ware people were tramping on us; the sheet metal fellows had wound us about and about; the washing machine outfit and the clothes wringer boys were mangling us; the cordage captains had us hog tied; the fire bolt brigade had bolted us body and bones; the tarred paper tyrants had tarred and feathered us; the axle autocrats and the wheel manufacturers had us running round in circles; the woodenware people had us blocked out for future operations and the wooden screw people had us screwed down; the lantern makers were looking us over for our last nickel; the lead pipe manufacturers had just that sort of a cinch; the sewer pipe magnates were draining us as far as possible; the mirror plate and plate glass people had evidently see n us coming; the trunk and bag men had us checked through; the emery wheel association was grinding us down; the churn manufacturers were getting our butter; the leather belting people were belting us; the spring association was taking the spring out of us; the lithographers were putting it over us; the soilpipe combine had our noses in the ground; the saw manufacturers had us whipsawed; the paper makers had us rolled out thin; the Canadian Handle Association were handling us how they pleased; the harness manufacturers had us under the collar; the cold rivet makers were coldly riveting more chains; the box board trust had us boarded up and boxed in; the coiled wire people had sprung and bitten; the bobbin manufacturers hit us on the head whenever we bobbed up; the hot water boiler men boiled us till we were tender; the bolt and nut makers tightened our prison bars; the wire nail people scored us with their long wire nails; the wholesale hardware manufacturers were as hard as could be expected; and the Packers' Association had us packed so tight that we looked like a coat of paint.

The sentence which I have just written contains three hundred and fifty words. It is the longest sentence in the English language, but as it is the only sentence the Ontario combines ever got, I'll let it go at that. It's more than Attorney-General Foy ever did. And the worst has yet to come. Combines have multiplied under our kind Attorney-General, who cannot find it in his heart to lift a finger against them. One of the latest is a coffin trust. They have the laugh on us to the last.

Uncle Jim Beats Them All.

A snail is believed—and with reason—to be a slow mover. But a snail is an Arab steed beside Attorney-General Foy. The tortoise bears the palm for suspended progression and infiinite hibernation. But the tortoise trembles for its honours when Uncle Jim competes. Some glaciers advance as little as an inch a year. But no glacier that I have met has anything on James Joseph Foy. He can stand still perhaps better than anybody in the world except Sir James Whitney, his leader and exemplar.

Take the Revision of the Statutes for instance. This has been in hand now for seven years and eight months. It will probably be another year beforeit is finished, and it wil cost over $200,000. The revisioners, becoming alarmed at their expense bill, have asked that some of the items be shifted to another account. The last previous statute revision record, under the Ross Government, was a year and a half, but eight years and a half is considered going some in Attorney-General Foy's bright lexicon.

This Revision of the Statutes lingers on like a touch of bronchitis. There's no telling what form of government Canada will have when the task is finaly completed. Meanwhile, not having any Revised Statutes handy, a lawyer has to look up every amendment since 1897, and this means time and work, which he naturally adds to the client's bill. This makes law more of a luxury than ever.

Humouring Sir William.

One reason the Revision of the Statutes takes so long is that Attorney-General Foy doesn't like to be hurried and the other is that it keeps Chief Justice Sir William Ralph Meredithdith in good humour. Sir William is chairman of the Revision Committee, and a good chairman at that. Next after Providence, the Orange Order, and the Ancient Hibernians, what Premier Whitney and Attorney-General Foy believe in most is Chief Justice Sir William Ralph Meredith. My, the confidence they have in that man! And rightly so. He is the second chamber in camera, so to speak, the extra mural Parliament of Ontario. They not only take him old laws to revise, but also new laws to look over, and he, not to be outdone, sends back laws of his own for the Legislature to ratify before he places them on the statute book which he is revising. At least, that's what people say. The point is that Sir William is making a thorough good job of it, and whenever he can spare time from his roses he takes a whack at the statutes.

It is no more than fair that Sir William should be Premier, sub rosa, because he has a genius for politics which Sir James lacks. When Sir William passed the Opposition leadership over to Sir James—neither of 'em Sirs just then—he did not expect Sir George Ross to blow up for some years to come. When Sir George did explode Sir William was much disappointed, and felt, no doubt, as Elijah might have done if he had ascended ten years too so on. Sir James has always felt that he sort of blundered into Sir William's mantle and has tried to make it up to him ever since. This is why Sir William has been helping Attorney-General Foy to revise the statutes, going on eight years now, and also why he was given the Workmen's Compensation Act to play with for ten years or longer. This little arrangement between good friends, by which the touch of a vanished hand and the sound of a voice that is still—or presumably devoted to obiter dicta—are enabled to linger on, is one of the sweetest things in Ontario politics.

How He Loves Judges.

The Attorney-General rather runs to judges, as does also Sir James, and when they saw a chance to frame up jobs for a couple of their pets they raised a howl for more judges. Sir Allen Aylesworth, then Minister of Justice, was able to withstand this clamour, although he offered to compromise on one judge, that one being the Attorney-General himself. Uncle Jim declined this offer, being convinced that his present position afforded even more opportunities for twenty-four-hours-a-day sound sleeping than a place on the bench. So when Charles Doherty took over the Justice business at Ottawa and found Uncle James and Sir James still yammering for two more High Court Judges, he yielded and Ontario drew Mr. Justice Leitch and Mr. Justice Lennox.

Now, the strange thing was that in the interval the situation had changed entirely, and the judges who were complaining of overwork before now complained that they had nothing to do but twiddle their thumbs. As a good judge would rather wear out than rust out, the kick was reasonably enough. What had happened was that the jurisdiction of the County Court had been increased to the extent of relieving the High Court Judges of about one-third of their work, and naturally they didnt want any more help. Some of the judges, among other Sir Charles Moss, wrote saying as much, but these letters were not flaunted by the Attorney-General, who had made up his mind that now that there was less work to do he would have more judges to do it with.

Giving the Murderers a Chance.

Another bright idea of the Attorney-General's was putting the Provincial constables in uniform so the criminals could see them coming. The object was, doubtless, to ginger up the force by giving the murderers a flying start and making it more difficult for the sleuths to catch up with the footprints and other clues. The only thing needed to round off this reform was to supply Dogberry with a gong or an auto horn to signal his approach. As for the detective department, which has been loaded up with persons possessing third degree glittering eyes and twenty-third degree twittering brains, there is reason to suppose that the villains who ought to be detected regard it as a joke. At all events, the Murder Belt in and around Hamilton flourishes like the wickedest of green bay trees.

Uncle Jim as an Orangeman.

The one flashing episode in Uncle Jim's long eight years' sleep was when a general election moved him up from South Toronto to become the Orange leader in North Toronto. At first it was a hard jolt to the Orangemen, their new sea-green pilot, but when Sir James began to call him his "right arm" they rallied round the standard as if it were King Billy himself. Just to show how broad-minded he could be in a close constituency, Uncle Jim gave it out "if there are any bilingual schools in Ontario they must go." Which not only proved what a staunch Protestant Uncle Jim was when necessary, but incidentally won North Toronto and a number of other constituencies that liked that sort of talk. For such constituencies as might not be stirred by Uncle Jim's appeal, there was the other equally authorized statement by Dr. Reaume that "Mr. Foy speaks off his own bat." The electors took their choice. Both did their work.

All of which goes to show that Uncle Jim may sleep between meals, but he wakes up when the dinner bell rings.

WORTH IT, THEN.

The Grocer — "I think living's getting cheaper. F'r instance, two years ago them eggs would have cost you fifty per cent. more."

The Customer—"Two years ago, when these eggs were fresh, they would have been worth more."

One-quarter cup sugar, one-quarter cup of shortening, one cup of thick sour milk, one teaspoon of soda, a little cinnamon and nutmeg, enough flour to mix soft, a little salt and a cup of chopped raisins. I use about two cups of flour, but as it varies you will have to use your own judgment.

FIFTY KINDS OF POTATOES IN PROVINCE

And That's Too Many, Declares Prof. Zavitz to Carleton Farmers

"WHOLE COUNTRY STARVES"

The high cost of potatoes results fro mthe fact that there are too many different kinds of potatoes. Gardeners who have spent their time evolving new varieties have succeedd only in adding a number which, according to Professor Zavitz of Guelph Agricultural College, is already too large.

"If the growers would confine themselves to one or two varieties they would be able to sell their crops to better advantage," the professor told a gathering of potato growers, who met in Ottawa, recently, for the prize-giving in connection with the potato growing contests for the counties of Russell and Carleton.

Fifty Varieties.

Professor Zavitz added, "there are already over fifty different varieties of potatos being grown in Ontario. This is bad for the potato business; buyers cannot purchase by the carload."

Hon. Martin Burrill declared that the puzzle of how to make agricultural products cheaper without lessening the profits of the producers was solved by the increase of production.

"If the farmers do not do their work well, the whole country starves, he said.

INSURE CITIZENS AND EMPLOYEES

Legal Committee Seeks Relief from the Problems Presented by Claims for Damages—Cover Also Civic Employees.

WILL ASK FOR RATES

Following a recommendation made by Alderman Gordon, the Legal Committee of the City Council will endeavour to arrange with an insurance company to take over the risks of accidents to city employees and also those which citizens may sustain and for which the city would be held liable.

There have been a number of claims for damages during the past year from those who have met with accidents, and the members of the committees feel that the best method of handling these cases is to take out insurance covering them and leave the matter then to the companies.

Alderman Gordon stated that Belleville has followed this practice and Lindsay too. If some arrangement could be arrived at, it would save the committee a great deal of time and enquiry, and also would prove an economical way out of the difficulties that often arise out of some claims.

Alderman Johnston and other members of the committee stated that they believed the suggestion a good one and City Clerk Armstrong was asked to secure the necessary information from insurance companies in order that the committee might be in a position to consider the advisability of adopting this method.

THE SUN RISES ONE MINUTE

Later Each Morning and Sets One Minute Earlier Each Evening —Stars for the Week

At this time of the year the sun rises one minute later each morning and sets one minute earlier each evening.

During the week the moon will rise about an hour later and set about half an hour later than the day before. On Friday the moon rises at midnight and sets at half-past one in the afternoon.

Jupiter is still to be seen in the west in the early evening, and Saturn and Mars in the east.

The moon will be in conjunction with Saturn about 8 o'clock to-night, Saturn appearing a little to the south.

This evening (Tuesday) Mars will be about three degrees south of the moon; a couple of hours later the moon will pass close to the planet Neptune, Neptune then being about four degrees to the south.

On Friday the moon will be at last quarter.

Aries (The Ram).

About midway between the Pleiades and Andromeda, but a little further to the south, is the constellation Aries, through which the sun appears to pass each year. Some three thousand years ago the equator of the heavens cut through the sun's path in Aries, from which place it has shifted since that time some thirty degrees to the west, as shown on the chart in another column. This shift is due to a slow movement of the earth's poles that slowly sway in a circle which takes about 26,000 years to complete. Whilst the stars always remain in the same position relative to each other, the equatorial line and the poles are slowly shifting, so much so that the stars that were o co on the equator, are not there now. This astronomical fact has been of great use in determining the date of certain events in the past history of events that are otherwise uncertain; for as a rule ancient observers of the heavens show these two lines crossing each other and the amount of displacement from the place where they now cross will indicate approximately the date at which the ancient star chart was made. The ancient civilization that gave us the starting point for dividing the heavens from west to east selected this crossing point from which to begin because the sun was then directly over the equator and the day and night are then equal in length "equinox." At this season of the year when Aries held the crossing of the ways, the Egyptians carried the statue of the god Amen in procession to the necropolis with Aries in view. The preparations for the great festival began before the full moon next to the spring equinox, and on the fourteenth day of that moon all Egypt was in joy over the dominion of the Ram. The people crowned the Ram with flowers, carried him with extraordinary pomp in grand procession and are said to have "rejoiced in him to the uttermost." Temples were built to him with a small opening pointing directly over the equator, and when the sun passed this point, which it did but twice in the year, the sunlight fell on an altar placed to receive it and accepted the adoration of the people. The sun still shines through the opening, but not on the altar. The temple and the altar are recognized no more by the Lord of Light; they act now only as marking stones of civilization that have long since crumbled into dust.

ACCIDENTS SHOULD ALL BE REPORTED

Legal Committee to Ask Police Assistance in Securing Information Regarding Mishaps.

The Legal Committee of the City Council met on Monday night with Alderman Gordon presiding. The members present were Mayor Bradburn, Aldermen Gillespie, Johnston, Green and Langford.

A reply was received regarding Alderman Buller's enquiry concerning workingmen's compensation and prison farms.

A. M. Dymond, law clerk of Public Bills, wrote that the final report of the committee is being prepared but has not yet been completed. The report of the commissioner for the committee is out of print.

Mayor Bradburn — Sir William Meredith has apparently the matter out of our hands.

Alderman Gordon—I think he has. We might look into the naval bill now.

Alderman Johnston—The Mexican war is more up to the minute.

Alderman Gordon—And its getting too cold for prison farm work.

These remarks, however, missed fire in the absence of Alderman Buller.

Information Needed.

Mayor Bradburn and Alderman Gordon pointed out that the Police Commissioners should be asked to delegate an officer to secure the information concerning any accident in which the city may become involved as soon as possible after it occurs.

Alderman Johnston moved to this effect and, if the Commissioners acquiesce, that the city's employees report all such accidents to the city clerk as soon as possible after they have happened.

NONE NEEDED.

Tourist—"You have an unusually large acreage of corn under cultivation, don't the crows annoy you a great deal?"

Farmer—"Oh, not to any extent."

Tourist—"That's peculiar considering you have no scarecrows."

Farmer—"Oh, well you see, I'm out here a good part of the time myself."

WOMAN POLICE FOR CALGARY

CALGARY, Alta., Nov. 18.—Calgary is to have women policemen, or rather, special officers. Chief Cuddy has decided this as a result of the arguments advanced in favour of the plan by a delegation from the local Council of Women which waited on him recently.

At first the chief was strongly opposed to the idea, thinking the ladies wanted regular female patrols in uniform. The women officers will be called upon to do special detective and perhaps some rescue work. Immorality cases are to be their speciality as it is felt that women are better able to deal with their own sex in this connection than men.

SEX HYGIENE NOT FOR TORONTO SCHOOLS

Management Committee Objects to Adding to Work —"Peak Load" Now Reached

Chief Inspector in Report Says It Is at Least a Doubtful School Study —Suggestion That Parents Instead of Pupils be Taught.

A report was submitted to the Management Committee of the Toronto Board of Education by the Chief Inspector of Schools dealing with the matter of sex hygiene and the instruction in it in the public schools, and the committee decided to leave the matter alone. The report stated that "It is still the general opinion of school men that sex instruction is, to say the least, a doubtful school duty. There is also an opinion that the greatest responsibility rests on the parents, and that the wisest course is not to relieve them of this responsibility but to adopt means such as suitable evening lecture courses to fit them for this duty." The report also stated that the public schools were carrying the "peak load," and the energies of teachers and pupils, to be employed within their proper spheres, would mean the elimination of subjects rather than the addition of some.

Medical Inspection Again.

For nearly an hour the committee discussed the question of medical inspection. Dr. Noble said that the system could be made much simpler and that there was too much red tape about it. Dr. Hopkins said that there was a possibility of saving $20,000 a year in the present system. The former wanted a special meeting of the Management Committee to inquire into the system, but when a vote was taken upon this Messrs. Hiltz, Jackson, Fairbairn and Lewis voted against it, those in favour being Drs. Noble, Hopkins and Conboy.

A discussion upon the clothing of children in schools, which was stated to be often of such a nature as to produce colds when they left warm rooms, ended with this statement by Mr. Hiltz, "We have no power to do anything in this matter but advise." Several additions in the way of rooms for medical inspection were sanctioned by the committee.—Globe.

Special Services In Knox Curch

The first of the week's services in Knox Church was opened last evening with a good attendance. The Young People's Guild opened in its usual place, but adjourned to the church and swelled the numbers there. Some time was spent in singing of familiar hymns and then Rev. Mr. Woodside took charge of the service. His subject was "Christ the Haven of Rest," based on the passage in Isaiah 26, verse 20. In his message Mr. Woodside unfolded the conditions under which a man becomes a Christian. "Christ," said the speaker, "is the only one who will take a man just as he is. Every other institution has its price and man must pay the price. When every other institution will refuse to take in a man who is down, Christ will take him — not because of what he is so much as because of what he needs and can become." Mr. Woodside is a very forceful speaker, and has the wonderful faculty of making things live before the eyes of his hearers.

The change will be made in June next if the stationing and transfer committee agree to it.

THE FALLIBILITY OF DOCTORS

By RUTH CAMERON

In the middle of a consultation a hurry call penetrated from the outer office. The doctor hurriedly excused himself, sat down at his desk and after a moment's intense thought, wrote a prescription. By the changing expression of his face, it was possible to follow the detachment of his mind from the subject he had been considering, and its refocusing on the new problem. Hurried as he was, he read the prescription over carefully before he handed it to his assistant. As the assistant hastened off with it, the doctor turned to the waiting patient and said, "You know we doctors are the only men in the world who mustn't make mistakes." Then he added, whimsically, "and being men, we can't help it."

This little incident which I happened to witness the other day impressed me deeply. It was such an interesting commentary from the doctor's own view point on the fallibility of doctors.

It is surprising to see how many intelligent people seem to regard doctors as peculiarly infallible.

Now mind you, this is not intended as a reflection upon physicians. Take them by and large, I think there is not a finer class of men living. In what other profession is it common, almost the customary thing, to shade down the fee to the man who cannot afford to pay the full price? Why are there so few rich doctors? In what other profession is there so much pure charity work done? In what other profession are there so many men honest enough to take the bread out of their own mouths by educating their clients not to need them, as most doctors try to educate their patients in preventive medicine?

But, honourable and generous gentlemen though they are, they are human and, therefore, they are fallible, —a thing which many people need to realize more fully.

Let me tell you what a prominent doctor said to me the other day. "I often marvel," he declared, "that so many people will take one doctor's word on such an important matter as a diagnosis involving an operation. A woman will go to every shop in town before she will pick out a suit, but she will let herself be cut up on a single doctor's advice."

And again, another physician, whom I had known since his youth, admitted in a confidential moment. "We doctors don't know half so much as you laymen think we do."

Medicine is still an inexact science, and doctors are only men after all, and as the corollary of these facts has already been stated, I won't bore you by repeating it.

One Cause of Bad Complexion---the Cure

(From Family Physician)

"Look at a section of skin under the microscope and you will readily understand why cosmetics generally injure the complexion," says Dr. H. Robert Mackenzie. "The skin, smooth as it looks to the naked eye, under the glass exhibits a lacework of tiny holes, mouths of myriads of little glands. To keep the skin healthy these holes must be unobstructed, that the perspiration and natural oil can have free outlet. Should the glands be blocked up with irritating gritty particles, a common result of using powders and creams, Nature retaliates by causing sallowness, roughness, blotches or pimples.

"As a substitute for all cosmetics I recommend ordinary mercolized wax. It not only does what the various face preparations are supposed to accomplish, but its peculiar absorbent action frees the pores from the daily accumulation of impurities, also absorbing the devitalized particles of surface skin. This produces a natural, healthy, youthful complexion. One ounce of this wax, to be had at any druggstore, usually suffices to rejuvenate the poorest complexion. It is put on nightly like cold cream and washed off mornings."

Returns For The Last Half Of Year

The second distribution of the license fees has been made to the City Treasurer by License Inspector Stewart, the amount being $1,495. This is for the latter half of the year 1913-14. The amount for the same period last year was $1,600, the difference being accounted for by the absence of the licensed bar at the Oriental Hotel. The total for the year is $2,995. In 1912 the amount for the year was $3,250, and in 1911, it was $3,270.

The ladies of the Mark Street Methodist Church met yesterday afternoon and decided to hold an old-fashioned tea meeting in connection with the anniversary services of the Church.

The anniversary services will be held on Sunday next, and the tea will be given by the ladies on Monday evening. They are now busily preparing for the event, which they intend to make a memorable affair.

A lecture by the Rev. T. J. Mansell will be given also.

WHY SHE STUDIED HEBREW.

A fine old gentlewoman, brought up in all the most strict traditions, announced to a friend one day that she had begun the study of Hebrew. As the student was close upon four-score, the statement produced surprise.

"Why, Miss Blank," the friend asked, "what good in this world will Hebrew do you?"

The old lady, who has a wit still nimble, replied with demure swiftness: "It may not do me much good in this world; but when I get to heaven and meet my Maker, I should like to be able to address Him in His own language."

Lost Hound On First Day And Shot Nothing

However Mr. Wm. Morris and Did Not Become Peeved But Had Real Enjoyable Outing

Mr. Wm. Morris is looking for a perfectly good hound that cost him five dollars and a great deal of disappointment. Mr. Morris took him back to Squaw River to hunt deer, and the first time out the hound showed his worth. He struck a deer's trail, yelped a couple of times and bounded away into the woods. Mr. Morris is trying to find out whether he is still hounding or whether some other party picked him up. The dog was altogether too good. If he had not been so persistent he might have dropped the trail and returned to take up another, for the woods were alive with the antlered quadrupeds. That dog was too industrious. Mr. Morris thought he would have him nosing around for the ten days in the woods. Instead, he disappeared the very first day, and considering the fact that five dollars were interchanged for him, the hound proved costly enough.

It is a sad story the Morris-Howden party brought home with them, but as least they did bring a few yarns for their friends. Morris was asked how many deer the party secured and he replied "not one." They saw them and heard them, but that was the limit of their exploits. The game wardens could be dispensed with if every party was as considerate of the forest animals as these gentlemen were.

"I didn't hit a feather," said Mr. Morris. "No, sir, neither a deer, nor rabbit nor partridge did I tumble over, but several of us did great execution upon a tin can at one hundred yards. If the dog hadn't left us we would have been tempted to trifle with the game law, but it frisked away with its tail registering excitement and determination and that's the last we saw of it.

However, our outing was not without interesting features. One morning I thought I saw a big buck that I had fired at several times before. He was about one hundred yards away and sniffing around looking for us. Possibly he thought he was safer in close where he could watch the direction in which we pointed out guns. I said to George McClelland, "Is that a deer over there, George?"

Thought it a Horse.

He looked out carefully and replied, "No, that's one of the farmer's horses." We had seen three horses in a field not long before and the deer was then in a loose clearing. He was behind a tree that had fallen at an angle of 45 degrees, and you can imagine how big he was when all we could see was his legs. We could have riddled him with our "Savages" for on the previous days we had tested our sights on the tin can targets, an dwe were going in great shape. Well, just as we decided that the deer was a horse, he jumped over a log and was off down the hill.. We followed him for three quarters of an hour and came across nests that indicated he had been lying down. We were both pretty well puffed about that time and George took a philosophical view of the situation. We had been out since eight o'clock and it was then nearly two in the afternoon. "If we had some cold tea and a loaf of bread with us we might stay with it," he said. "But supposing we did land him, what would we do then. We couldn't lug him back, nor his antlers nor saddle."

An Appetite Anyway.

So we struck back to camp with a fine sample of appetite. That is one thing about the hunting season in the woods. You can eat almost anything, and you feel that way all the time. It must be fierce when hunting interferes with meal hours. In that respect the dog probably did us a service, for if he had stayed around he would have chased the deer right up to our lodge."

Mr. Morris thinks that the dog went through and joined a Kinmount party at Wolf Lake, and he is anxious to get him back. The members of the Howden-Morris party were Messrs. J. F. Thornton, George McClelland and Howden Morris, who went back in one auto, and Messrs. J. J. Howden, W. D. Morris and Mr. Kitney, who travelled in a second. The cars went right into the bush, and Mr. Morris is now regretting that he did not follow the trails in one of the machines. He believes it would be a good idea, especially with a capable wheelsman like Mr. J. J. Howden guiding it. Mr. Morris is sorry that he has no venison for his friends this year, but next season he promises to take with him a second string of hounds and a couple of partridge dogs to make sure of filling the game bag.

ANNUAL MEETING OF GOLF CLUB

The ninth annual meeting of the shareholders of the Peterborough Golf and Country Club was held Saturday evening at the Bank of Montreal Chambers.

There was a fair attendance of shareholders present. The following shareholders were elected directors for the 1914 season: Mr. P. Campbell, Mr. A. H. Stratton, Mr. H. Ritchie, Mr. T. F. Matthews, and Mr. Mulholland. The reports of the various committees were very favourable and showed the progress the club was making. It is expected that a considerable change will be made in the club house to meet the growing demand for more accommodation.

The year has been a most successful one in every branch of the club's interests, and promises even better for next season.

CIVIC ELECTIONS HAVE NOT AROUSED GENERAL INTEREST

The under-current of interest in civic politics is beginning to show a little movement, but it is so light one can scarcely notice it. There is only one more regular meeting of th Council and with the close of the year there are five aldermen who will have to present themselves for re-election. They are Aldermen Gillespie, Anderson, Duffus, Buller and Johnston.

Enquiry around the City indicates that it is a little premature to endeavour to find out the direction in which gossip is turning. Ald. Buller's name has been mentioned for the Mayoralite. and Ald. Gordon and Ald. Gillespie have been named for the same position. The principal point, however, is whether Mayor Bradburn is to be chosen for a third term or not. Public opinion has not chrysalized on this point, as yet, but in the general conversations some believe he should be given another year to carry out the work which has been begun. Others point to a tradition that two years in a row is the limit for occupants of the Mayor's chair. Neither Mayor Bradburn or any of the Aldermen have expressed their intentions as yet, although it is generally understood that all of the latter will again toe some mark or other.

Mayor Bradburn casually stated that if the citizens want him to occupy his present position for another year he will do so, bu he has given no definite statement in rgard to the situation.

Some there are who claim that Ald. Buller is in training for the Mayoralty race, and some believe that there may be a contest this year.

In regard to the vacancies around the table it is believed that ex-Ald. Morgan may enter the field again. Ex-Ald. Brown has been approached, but he has nothing to say yet. Another dark horse is spoken of in the West Ward, and his name may be announced in a few days. This would indicate that Ald. Anderson and Ald. Duffus will be given a run. There is nothing definite from Ald. Johnston's stamping ground. So far, only a few vague rumours have been passed around, but the question should open up a little interest during the next few weeks.

Archbishop Aids In Fight With Tuberculosis

The National Sanitarium Association has just secured a new and powerful ally in its crusade against Tuberculosis in Ontario in the person of Most Rev. Neil McNeil, Archbishop of Toronto. The new prelate, who has been only a few months in his present charge, has shown in an energetic and tangible fashion his friendship for the consumptive. He has included in his letter to the clergy of his jurisdiction a special request that they extend every co-operation in their power to the observance of Tuberculosis Sunday in their churches The result will be a more extensive and effective movement than ever before in the Roman Catholic churches of his, and probably of other Bishoprics in Ontario.

His appearance before the Separate School Board of Toronto the other day, to urge that the pupils be provided with Christmas seals to distribute was a far-reaching step, but the action which gave a personal side to these official activities came this week when he sent to the secretary of the Association his personal cheque for $200, and with it this letter:

"I send herewith $250.00 to endow one bed for a year in one of your Free Hospitals for Consumptives, and trust the coming Christmas season will bring you many generous contributions for the great work."

Memorial Service Was Held

Special Cable to The Examiner.

LONDON, Nov. 18.—St. Mark's Church, North Audley street, was filled to-day at the memorial service to Lady Strathcona. The church is close to Lord Strathcona's residence in Hanover Square, and large crowds gathered in the neighbourhood. The assembly included representatives of the whole diplomatic life of the Empire at large, and practically every member of the Canadian community now in London. Major General Sir Henry Ewart represented the King, and Hon. G. H. Perley represented the Dominion Government.

Plead Guilty, etc.

"No, not the slightest," replied Mrs. Pratt.

"How much were the hens worth?"

"A dollar each, at the least," replied Mrs. Pratt.

The stolen hens were Plymouth Rocks, and her mother identified them as the ones she lost. The witness had raised them and could not make any mistake about them. Mrs. Pratt resides at 302 Park Street.

Walter Mahaffy, in the witness box, said he lived on Dublin Street, and that he commenced to work for Johnson on Thanksgiving Day. He went to Johnson's about 6.45 a.m., Thanksgiving Day, and about that time Johnson came driving in from the City, his horse steaming, with a crate of hens on the rig. There were seventeen, mostly Plymouth Rocks, in the crate. That evening they were moved to Johnson's new place and it was there the police found them.

Cross-questioned by Mr. Gordon, Mahaffy maintained that no one had hinted to him that his sentence would be lighter if he gave evidence against Johnson.

Mr. Gordon—"How many times have you been convicted of theft?"

Witness—"Three or four times."

Mr. Gordon—"How many charges of theft are there against you now?"

Witness—"Two, that I know of."

Mr. Wood—"When did you know you were going to be called as a witness?"

Witness—"Not until I was called out of the prisoner's box."

Detective Newhall was the next witness. He said that he received a message on Thanksgiving Day, in consequence of which he went to Mrs. Turnr's. There he found that seventeen hens had been stolen. On the 6th of November he went out to Johnson's house with Mr. Pratt. There were 61 hens there, but Mrs. Pratt picked out 13 without hesitation.

Detective Newhall said that Mahaffay made the same statement in the cells to Johnson as he made in the Police Court, this morning." Johnson said to Newhall, in the cells: "If the chickens were found at my house I must have taken them. I can't remember any more." But Johnson claimed he was drunk at the time. "It's easy to find out whose hens they are, for we had only four hens about the place, that we bought from Mitchell's."

Questioned by Mr. Gordon as to Mahaffy's veracity, he replied that ... very hard to get the truth out ...

"Well, on how many occasions be... this morning have you known him to tell the truth?"

"I don't know whether he told the truth this morning or not," was the answer.

The first witness for the defence was Mrs. Johnson, the defendants wife. She had two children. Her husband worked for Mrs. Lowe. She bought a dozen hens from Mrs. Wilson, four old Plymouth Rocks and eighteen Plymouth Rock chickens from Mrs. Harper, and ten hens from Mr. Lundy. She traded hens with her brother and should have had about a hundred altogether. She hadn't seen any strange hens in their hen house about Thanksgiving Day.

The witness said that her husband was not away from home on the night before Thanksgiving Day. She said that the birds the policeman took were her own.

Chas. W. Johnson, the defendant, was the next witness. He said that he was employed by Mr. Lowe.

"Were you ever convicted before?" asked Crown Attorney Wood.

"Yes."

"Where was that?"

"In St. Catharines; I was charged with stealing $15."

"Did you serve your time for it."

"Yes, sir."

Simple Home Treatment For Superfluous Hairs

(Beauty Culture)

A very effective and simple home treatment for superfluous haire is as follows: Mix into a paste enough powdered delatone and water to cover the hairy surface, apply and after 2 or 3 minutes rub off, wash the skin and every trace of hair has disappeared. This method is devoid of pain or danger and leaves the skin free from spot or blemish. Best results naturally follow when the delatone is purchased in an original package because its strength and purity are then assured.

IN THE WORLD OF SPORT

CRYSTAL PALACE HAD A RUNAWAY VICTORY

Defeated Reading by a Score of 5-1--Additional Comment on Saturday's Soccer Results--League Tables Compiled Up to Date.

Swindon's winning streak has been broken. They lost their first game in twelve on Saturday to Southend United, the Southern League leaders failing to even notch a single tally, while their opponents score no less than two goals. The most curious fact is that although Southend had the advantage of playing on their own grounds, this team have not performed at all well this season, the Thames Estuary club having won but five out of the fourteen games they have engaged in, lost seven and drawn two. Although they lost on Saturday, Swindon have still a glorious record. They will head the Southern League, having played twelve games, of which they have won ten, drawn one and lost one, which gives them 21 points, the highest average of any club in the four major leagues. Crystal Palace, who follow Swindon, had a runaway victory on Saturday, when they were at home at Reading. The "biscuit" club lost by 5 goals to 1.

Blackburn Lose Again.

Rovers have lost another game. West Bromwich Albion took them into camp by a 2-0 score. Despite this defeat Blackburn still retain the leadership of the First Division of the English League, as Manchester United, who are second, lost to Middlesboro by a score of one goal to nil. But one point, however, divides the teams. Bolton Wanderers, by virtue of a 3-0 victory over Manchester United, come third with 17 points to their credit, being tied by Sunderland, the league champions, who have the same number of points. The latter secured a smashing victory over Everton on the latter's ground by 5 goals to 1.

Poor old Everton are having hard times these days. West Bromwich, Rovers' conquerors, follow Sunderland and Bolton with 16 points. Chelsea beat Derby County 2-1, while Tottenham visited Newcastle, where they were defeated by two goals to nil.

Notts County Strengthen Lead.

Notts County added another couple of points to their lead in the Second Division of the English League when they handed a 2-0 defeat to Wolverhampton. Bradford beat Hull City by two goals to nil, the former team thus retaining second place with sixteen points to their credit, being three points behind the leaders. Three teams, Leeds City, Bury and Woolwich Arsenal, dispute third place with 15 points apiece. Of these three clubs Leeds won over Lincoln City, 1-0, Woolwich drew with Grimsby, 1-1, while Bury lost to Glossop by 2 goals to 1.

Hearts Beat St. Mirren.

Hearts had a little of their own back on Saturday when they swamped St. Mirren by six goals to nothing. The latter team, it must be remembered, are the only club that have secured a victory over Hearts this season. So that Hearts must be exceedingly pleased with their convincing win. Celtic still head the Scottish League, their latest victory being one over Dumbarton by four goals to nil. Celtic lead with 25 points to their credit, Hearts coming second with twenty-four. Rangers, the league champions, and Morton, dispute third position with 23 points each. Both teams won, Rangers beating Airdrie by two goals to nil, while the Greenock aggregation defeated Dundee by two goals to one. Three teams, Kilmarnock, Hamilton and Aberdeen, are tied for the cellar championship with 7 points each.

"BILLY THE KID"

That popular young actor, Johnnie Erwin, is being featured this season in what is generally believed to be one of the best plays of its kind that the stage has seen in years, "Billy, The Kid." Little did the feared and famous outlaw think that some day there would be a melodramatic play written about some of his misdeeds. But there has been, for the authors of "Billy, The Kid" have taken some of the incidents in the life of the outlaw and have woven them into a play which has proved to be one of the most popular melowramas that has even been written by an American author. The story is a strong one and is said to be told with a due regard to sequence. There are strong situations, the dialogue is bright and there is comedy a-plenty. The production is said to be a handsome one and the company in the support of the star an exceptionally strong one. "Billy The Kid," with Mr. Erwin in the title role is to come to the Grand next Saturday, Nov. 22, for two performances.

Curlers Are Getting Ready

Curling like all other lines of business has to be thought of ahead of time, so a meeting of the committee of management was held a short time ago, and notice sent out to all of last year's members asking them whether or not they wished to curl this coming winter, at the same time stating that the membership would be limited to 112 old members, and 28 new members. Already nearly 100 applications have been sent in, showing the interest that is taken in curling, so that no doubt the Roarin' game will be as popular this coming winter as ever before.

MR. H. B. COWAN IS HONOURED

Word was received in the City this morning that the three farmers' organizations of Western Canada, with their 52,000 members, which are affiliated with the Dominion Grange in Eastern Canada and the Canadian Council of Agriculture, at their recent annual meeting in Winnipeg, appointed H. B. Cowan, of Farm and Dairy, Peterborough, Ont., G. F. Chipman of The Grain Growers' Guide, Winnipeg, Man., and W. L. Smith of the Farmer's Sun, Toronto, honorary members of the Canadian Council of Agriculture in recognition of their services on behalf of the farmers of Canada. This entitles these three newspaper men to attend meetings of the Council, act on delegations and take part in any other function of the councils of these organizations.

THE HAMMER AND THE HAMMERING.

Johnnie rushed into the dining room, his voice lifted to a long, quavering wail. He was giving a star exhibition of the art of separating himself from tears and thrills.

"What's the matter?" asked mother.

Johnnie removed both fists from his eyes and explained mournfully: "Papa was out on the back porch nailing down a plank and he had a big hammer, an awful big hammer. Then he missed the nail and hit his thumb."

"Then what are you crying about?" asked mother. "Why don't you laugh?"

Then Johnnie told the whole story thus: "I did."

DEATH RATE DROPPING.

Clergymen aiding by the preparation of addresses for Tuberculosis Sunday, on November 30th, should know many figures which will open the eyes of Canadians who are not aware to what extent the Anti-Tuberculosis movement is checking the white plague.

Statistics compiled from the records for the past thirteen years show that the gross death rate from consumption in Ontario has dropped from 3,405 in 1899, to 2,150 last year. If the population had remained fixed this would have represented an actual annual saving of 1,155 lives. The population of Ontario has increased largely and the influx is of the class which is most prone to catch and spread the disease. Such an advance would have been deemed impossible fifteen years ago, when the National Sanitarium Association began its work. In that time it has treated over 7,000 patients of all stages and has enabled upwards of 4,000 of them to return to their homes much improved, and some were actually cured. Of these patients nearly three thousand were maintained absolutely free, by the generosity of the supporters of the movement.

Mr. Samuel Carter, Mayor of Guelph, and President of the Guelph Co-operative Society, will address the Peterborough Co-operative Society at their concert and social to be held in the Woodmen of the World Hall on Wednesday evening.

The Child's Toilet.

Do not let children become lax in toilet niceties. Cleaning the teeth, manicuring, proper care of the hair and complexion should all be insisted upon from earliest childhood until such matters are inculcated as habits and are practiced voluntarily.

A point which falls upon the mother to attend to, unless she has a competent nurse, is the question of towels, face cloths and toothbrushes for the individual members of the family.

As soon as the child needs toilet articles—that is, from the day of its birth—it should have a separate supply. A scarcity of towels and face cloths is inexcusable, but many mothers are thoughtless in the matter of towels and face cloths. It is a good idea to have initialed towels for each child, the girl being taught to do the letters in cross-stitch as a pleasant task.

OLD ROMAN BATHERS.

It was not left to modern doctors to associate the decline of the Roman empire with luxurious warm bathing. Roman writers are full of moralizing on the subject. Seneca, glancing back at the good old times, recalled that the old Romans, though they washed their arms and legs daily, bathed their whole bodies once a week. Even when Scipio introduced a warm bath into his villa the bath room was "small and dark, after the manner of the ancients," with no pretensions to luxury, and the earlier public baths were so simple that the ædile merely tested the temperature with his hand. Things had moved on terribly by Seneca's time, and later came such emperors as Commodus, who bathed seven or eight times a day and took his meals in the bath.

Stock Markets

A. H. Stratton & Co., Brokers, report the following:

At the opening the market was quiet but very firm. Fractional gains being made on the initial transactions and increased on succeeding sales. Careful observers say that the market is oversold and a moderate rally is looked for.

To-morrow will likely reflect a waiting development in the market as it did to-day. As long as there are no important changes recorded in the Mexican situation in which the street is concentrating its speculative attention. There is no pressure of stock except in specific instances, and these are offset to a great extent by the tendency to specialize improvement in certain issues. The trading attitude for the daily operators is the best under existing circumstances but we would decidedly watch for buying opportunities of bull pool operating. These stocks may be bought for a turn when made active. During the rallies when stocks are strong throughout the market, the daily trader may find it advisable to sell such issues as U.S., Rdg., L.V. and A.R., provided he does so for small profits and not with the intention to hold for a big decline which we do not think likely. The underlying influences in S.P., B.O., U.P., G.Q., N.P., and St. Paul is very strong according to the best information we get.

The street talk of a message from President Wilson on the Mexican situation, but Mr. Wilson's messages heretofore have not been such as to excite apprehension.

WAITING ONCE MORE

U. S. Settles Down to Endurance Contest With Huerta

REBEL FORCES ARE GAINING

WASHINGTON, Nov. 19.—Absence of any evidence that fresh instructions had gone forward from Washington to John Lind or Charge O'Shaughnessy was understood in official circles here yesterday to mark the advent of another period of patient waiting for some decisive development in Mexico.

In spite of all the rumors of blockades and intervention coming from Havana and Vera Cruz there has been no sign of such activity at the Navy or War Departments, as might be expected to precede adoption of any such radical steps by the administration. Moreover, it has been intimated in official quarters that only by direction of Congress would such a step be taken.

Officials still decline to furnish information as to what has been accomplished by Wm. Bayard Hayle in his conference at Nogales with Gen. Carranza and his constitutionalist Cabinet.

State Department advices made public yesterday indicated that the insurrectionary movement is spreading rapidly not only in the north of Mexico, but to the south and east. This last development is regarded here as very important, because the success of the constitutionalists in obtaining possession of the rich oil fields in the east and some deep water port on the gulf coast would enormously strengthen them from a military point of view, the former insuring them a full treasury, and the latter an easy means of supplying themselves with munitions of war from Europeans in the West Indies.

To Use Official Residence.

MEXICO CITY, Nov. 19.—The announcement that a diplomatic reception would be given by Senora Emilia Aguila De Huerta, the wife of the Provisional President, at Chapultepec Castle to-day, gave rise to a story that Gen. Huerta yesterday had taken up his residence there. It was explained that Senora Huerta had decided to hold the reception at the castle because of the inadequate accommodations of the private home of the Huertas.

Chapultepec Castle is the official residence of the Mexican President. Since the late President Madero vacated the historic palace it has been undergoing renovation at the hands of painters and decorators.

German Sentiment Veering.

BERLIN, Nov. 19—The retirement of Gen. Huerta from the Provisional Presidency of Mexico is now the surest way to restore order in that country where German interests are so great, according to an editorial article in The Tageblatt, which heretofore had steadily attacked the policy of the United States in Mexico.

TWO ASPHYXIATED.

Brothers Are Found Dead In Their Beds In Toronto.

TORONTO, Nov. 19. — Two more victims of gas poisoning were discovered yesterday morning, when Archibald and Neil McFarlane, brothers, 23 and 21 years of age, were found dead in the same bed in their room at the residence of Mrs. Eliza Evans, 165 Duchess street.

The discovery was made by Wm. Chandler, another roomer, who knocked at the door to arouse the men for work, and receiving no response, entered. He immediately threw open all the windows and summoned a physician, but both men were beyond aid, apparently having been dead some hours.

The theory of the police is that one of them turned out the gas and turned it on again, and although the occurrence is evidently purely accidental, investigations are being made and an inquest will be held.

ST. CATHARINES, Nov. 19.—Four rural mail delivery routes are now being operated out of St. Catharines, the fourth going yesterday.

These Numerous Rigs Bear Further Testimony to Rural School Fair Popularity
From a photo by an editor of Farm and Dairy outside the grounds of the Cavan School, when the fair was in progress.

STOCK SHOW OPENS.

Toronto's New Fair Venture Gets Away to Good Start.

TORONTO, Nov. 19.—This city's new winter fair was opened yesterday afternoon at the Exhibition grounds, when Mayor Hocken pressed the button that officially opened the first National Live Stock, Horticultural and Dairy Show of Canada. Present indications are that the fair will, in a few years, compete with and outrival the great Live Stock and Dairy Show held annually at Chicago.

Even at the commencement the show has outgrown its name and is now an international show, because there are entries in the horse and cattle shows from places in the United States as far west as Michigan and Wisconsin, and also from the western provinces of Canada, as well as from the many fine breeding farms in the Province of Ontario.

Yesterday was Children's Day, but owing to the threatening weather and to the fact that the school trustees would not allow the children a half holiday to take in the exhibition, only a small crowd was present in the afternoon, and at night the attendance dropped off even more, because of the rain.

East Indians Rioting.

LADYSMITH, Natal, Nov. 19.—About a thousand East Indians started rioting here yesterday afternoon and claiming as British subjects, equal rights with the white men. The mounted police finally dispersed the mob, but the East Indians appeared to be dangerously inflamed. The disaffection was regarded here as so grave that a force of armed townsmen was enrolled and the police provided with revolvers.

The Indians returned last night to Elandslaagte, one hour's distance from Ladysmith. Fears of a renewal of the outbreak were so far dissipated that the volunteer police disbanded.

RHEUMATIC PAINS PROMPTLY DISAPPEAR

Relief Comes After Taking Few Doses of Croxone

It is needless to suffer with rheumatism, and be all crippled up, and bent out of shape with its heart-wrenching pains, when you can avoid it.

Rheumatism comes from weak, inactive kidneys that fail to filter from the blood the poisonous waste matter and uric acid; and the only way to overcome it is to remove the cause.

Croxone does this because it neutralizes and dissolves the poisonous substances and uric acid that lodge in the joints and muscles, to scratch and irritate and cause rheumatism, and cleans out and strengthens the stopped up, inactive kidneys, so they can filter the poison from the blood, and drive it on and out of the system.

Croxone is a truly remarkable medicine for rheumatism, kidney troubles and bladder disorders. You will find it differs from other remedies. There is nothing else just like it. It matters not how old you are, or how long you have suffered, it is practically impossible to take it without results. Relief follows the first few doses, and you will be surprised how quickly all misery and suffering will end.

An original package of Croxone costs but a trifle and all druggists are authorized to sell it on a positive money back guarantee. Three doses a day for a few days is often all that is ever needed to overcome the worst backache or urinary disorders.

Rev. Dr. Ross Dead

London Clergyman Killed by Auto in New York

WAS CROSSING THE STREET

NEW YORK, Nov. 19.—Rev. Dr. James Ross, a leading scholar and educator of Canada, was struck and fatally injured by an automobile in a city street late yesterday. He died from a fractured skull an hour later He had stepped from behind a trolley car into the path of the automobile. Several women who witnessed the accident, tore their dresses into strips and bandaged Dr. Ross' head before the arrival of an ambulance.

The accident occurred at the rush hour and at a time when the traffic at Twenty-third street and Fourth avenue is particularly heavy. L. T Stowe, an undertaker, was operating his auto north on Twenty-third street He said that Dr. Ross stepped from the shadow of a southbound vehicle directly in the path of his machine and that it was impossible to avoid hitting him. Dr. Ross was hurled several feet in the air and landed on his head on the asphalt, fracturing his skull. The police after hearing an account of the accident from witnesses declared that the undertaker was not to blame.

Several letters from Andrew Carnegie, found in Dr. Ross' possession, indicated that the clergyman came here to seek Mr. Carnegie's aid for the public library at London, Ont., Dr. Ross' home. Dr. Ross was pastor of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, Montreal, and a professor in the Presbyterian College, Montreal. He was 60 years old.

According to A. O. Jeffery, of London, Ont., who identified the body, he and Dr. Ross came here Monday to buy books for the library in London. They were to have returned to Canada to-day.

TO INVESTIGATE OIL.

British Navy May Rely Largely on Canadian Resources.

OTTAWA, Nov. 19.—The recent statement of Rt. Hon. Winston Churchill, First Lord of the Admiralty, that oil would be the fuel of the future for the British navy, and that the supply would be to a large extent have to be obtained from the overseas dominions, has not been lost upon the Dominion Government, and a corps of experts have been set to work to conduct a thorough investigation of the petroleum and natural gas resources of the country.

This investigation will be the most complete and extensive ever attempted in Canada. Experts are of opinion that in the production of oil for the needs of modern civilization Canada will take a leading place, and the Government has decided that immediate steps towards a realization of the commercial value of the Dominion oil resources are in the interest, not only of Canada, but perhaps of the Empire.

It is further announced that the Department of Mines is about to send experts to investigate the great "tar sand" deposits of Northern Alberta.

COUNTER CHARGES MADE.

Conservatives Will Fight Protest In Chateauguay.

MONTREAL, Nov. 19. — Counter charges of corruption against Liberal workers are expected to form the answer Conservatives will make to the petition filed Monday by five supporters of Hon. Sydney Fisher, defeated by James Morris in the recent Chateauguay bye-election, who are contesting its result.

It is announced authoritatively that the contestation will be fought out to the bitter end, Mr. Morris and his friends being confident that they will be able to disprove what they term the "trumped up" accusations made by those backing the contestation.

MUST RETAIN FOSSILS.

Mammoths of Western Prairies Will Be Retained For Canadians.

OTTAWA, Nov. 19.—Hon. Louis Coderre, Secretary of State, has lost no time in taking action to prevent a recurrence of such an incident as the recent acquisition by the American Museum of Natural History of New York, of a complete skeleton of the pre-historic creature, the horned Dinosaur, which was unearthed in Red River district of Alberta. This skeleton of the Monoclonius, as it is scientifically termed, is the first complete specimen of this mammoth which has ever been secured. The creature stood about five feet high and was fifteen feet long. It flourished in the Red River region some three million years ago.

Mr. Coderre takes the view that there should have been legislation here to prevent this valuable specimen going outside of Canada.

The Legislature of Alberta takes the same view and Hon. J. R. Boie, Provincial Minister of Education, has asked the Secretary of State to take steps to conserve to Canada further finds of a similar character. Mr. R. E. Bennett, M.P., of Calgary, has also exerted his influence to put a stop to what many regard as depredations by the American Museum.

Mr. Coderre has referred the matter to Mr. Brock, chief of the Geological Survey of Canada, for an opinion, and acting under the latter's advice, legislation will be enacted at the next session of Parliament to render it impossible to take such finds out of the country without official sanction.

Brotherhood To Buy Hotel.

BRANTFORD, Nov. 19.—The City Brotherhood Association, at a meeting last night, decided to organize a stock company for the purchase of a local hoted in the event of local option carrying in Brantford. The brotherhood recognize the fact that the weakness of present legislation was that hotel accommodation in local option districts was neglected. It is proposed to have a vote in Brantford in January, 1915.

STEFANSSON LOST?

No Word of Explorer Received Since August 14

HAS MET HEAVY WEATHER

NEW YORK, Nov. 19.—The New York Sun publishes the following special from Seattle, Wash.:

Vilhaljmar Stefansson, Arctic explorer and discoverer of the white Eskimo, who was aboard the steamship Karluk when the vessel was last sighted off Flaxman Island on Aug. 14, possibly is lost, as is the vessel and all her people.

Nothing has been heard or seen of the Karluk since that date, despite the fact that extensive search has been made for her. Whalers say there is little hope of her ever being discovered, as she is known to have encountered the heavy weather which prevailed off the Alaskan coast early in October.

This is the opinion of members of the Canadian Arctic exploration party at Colinson Point, according to a despatch received from Fairbanks yesterday.

Stefansson left Victoria last summer with an expedition outfitted by the Canadian Government to make explorations and scientific research along the northern coast of the American continent.

The last word the Naval Department at Ottawa had of the whereabouts of the Karluk was in a telegram from R. M. Anderson, commander of the southern party, who reported that the Karluk did not reach Herschell Island and was last seen off Flaxman Island about Aug. 11. This telegram was dated Nov. 10 and 11 and was sent from Colinson Point, Alaska.

It was as follows:—

"Canadian Arctic Expedition.—Schooners Alaska and Mary Sashs wintering at Colinson Point, Alaska. Heaviest ice conditions in recent years prevent further advance eastward. Scientific staff: R. M. Anderson, commander; Chipman, Cox, Johanson, O'Neill. Balance of southern party on board Karluk. Karluk did not reach Herschell Island. Last seen off Flaxman Island about Aug. 14. No ships able to get east of demarcation point this year. Whaler Elvira crushed and sank off Humphrey's Point Sept. 23. Belvadore caught off icy reef, but apparently safe. A letter follows.

(Signed) "R. M. Anderson."

So far this letter has not reached the Department. The last word to be received from Stefansson was early in August. It was a telegram from Nome, Alaska, giving an account of his sailing from Port Clarence. On July 27 the Karluk got separated in a storm the companion ship Sashs at Keotzebue. The whereabouts of the Sashs was unknown. Stefansson stated that the Karluk had behaved well in a heavy storm and rounded Point Hope on July 31. They met ice near Icy Cape. The Karluk worked satisfactorily. The whole day of Aug. 1 they set fast in the ice. Early on Aug. 2 they were six miles from land, thirty miles west of Barrow. They worked out within the next few days and reached Barrow, the northernmost point of Alaska.

Report Not Credited.

VANCOUVER, B.C., Nov. 19.—The reported loss of the Stefansson party is not credited here. There is no reason for believing that disaster occurred except the absence of news, which really means nothing. The party was well equipped in every way, and its commander and lieutenants were all experienced in Arctic exploration, while their craft was a staunch ship, well suited to any and all ice conditions that might be encountered.

Dog Team To Take Mail.

EDMONTON, Alta., Nov. 19.—All the mail consigned to Vilhjalmar Stefansson and members of his party lies at the Edmonton postoffice. A dog team will receive the mail at Athabasca Landing and from there convey it to Herschell Island, the farthest point north, arriving about Feb. 24, 1914. There are several packages and they are addressed "The Vilhjalmar Stefansson Exploration Party, Herschell Island."

Settlement Reached.

HALIFAX, Nov. 19.—An agreement involving 10,000 men employed by the Dominion Coal Co., and represented by the Provincial Workmen's Association, was reached here yesterday.

The agreement renews the present understanding for three years, or until Dec. 31, 1916. The company has granted an increase of six per cent. to all workmen in and about the mines working under $2 per day, making a minimum rate for mine laborers of $1.70, instead of $1.60 per day, and an increase in the minimum rate of the shift men from $1.75 per day to $1.85 per day.

Technical Re-arrest of Thaw.

CONCORD, N.H., Nov. 19.—Judge Aldrich in the Federal Court yesterday ordered the re-arrest of Harry K. Thaw on the strength of the extradition warrant issued recently by Governer Felker. This was done to clear the record, but counsel immediately engaged in an argument over the custody of the prisoner, and the new arrest was delayed pending the decision of the court on certain technicalities.

EXPLOSION IN MINE.

Death List In Alabama Colliery May Reach Forty.

ACTON, Ala., Nov. 19.—An explosion in No. 2 coal mine of the Alabama Fuel & Iron Co. here at 3.45 o'clock yesterday afternoon entombed between 25 and 40 miners, according to estimates of company officials.

Up to nine o'clock last night seven bodies had been removed from the mine. The list of the dead: L. L. Patterson, E. Bright, John Langston, Henry Childers, Boss Driver Burns Kitrell, two unidentified negroes.

Of the victims, some are white and some are negroes, as the mine employed miners of both races. The normal quota of employes is seventy men, but Monday was pay day at this mine, and some did not report for work yesterday. Twenty-three diggers entered the working yesterday morning and early last night it was not known how many others reported during the day.

The first rescue parties who entered the mine last evening searching for any who might be alive, reported that they had passed several dead bodies lying beside the tramway of the sloping entrance shaft.

Mine officials hurried here from Birmingham, 24 miles away. They brought State Mine Inspector C. H. Nesbitt and an automobile load of surgeons.

Acton Mine No. 2, which lies in Shelby County, on a branch of the Louisville & Nashville Railroad, has been considered one of the best equipped in the district. It has a single track slope and uses an 18-foot fan with the split air system. So far as ascertained the mine workings were not much damaged by the explosion, the cause of which has not yet been determined, and it is expected that the work of removing the living, if any, and the dead, will be speedily accomplished

The man who invented Kryptok Invisible Bifocals came very near discovering an equivalent to the Fountain of Youth.

It is the Eyes that make a healthy person feel old, nothing else.

If you wear distant glasses and lower your eyes to read, the page is blurred. If you are wearing reading glasses and raise the eyes to look around, everything is blurred.

You meet a friend who tells you he is wearing bifocal glasses at that moment but to all appearance they are plain glasses. He reads through the reading part and sees his car two blocks through the distant part with equal facility. He is wearing Fowler's Kryptok Invisible Bifocal Glasses.

"That Affair Next Door"

By ANNA KATHARINE GREEN

The felt hat which had been discovered under the body was now produced and the one hole made by a similar pin examined. Then Mr. Gryce was asked if any other pin had been picked up from the floor of the room, and he replied, no; and the fact was established in the minds of all present that the young woman had been killed by a pin taken from her own hat.

"A subtle and cruel crime; the work of a calculating intellect," was the Coroner's comment as he allowed the detective to sit down. Which expression of opinion I thought reprehensible, as tending to prejudice the jury against the only person at present suspected.

The inquiry now took a turn. The name of Miss Ferguson was called. Who was Miss Ferguson? It was a new name to most of us, and her face when she rose only added to the general curiosity. It was the plainest face imaginable, yet it was neither a bad nor unintelligent one. As I studied it and noted the nervous contraction that disfigured her lip, I could not but be sensible of my blessings. I am not handsome myself, though there have been persons who have called me so, but neither am I ugly, and in contrast to this woman—well, I will say nothing. I only know that, after seeing her, I felt profoundly grateful to a kind Providence.

As for the poor woman herself, she knew she was no beauty, but she had become so accustomed to seeing the eyes of other people turn away from her face, that beyond the nervous twitching of which I have spoken, she showed no feeling.

"What is your full name, and where do you live?" asked the Coroner.

"My name is Susan Ferguson, and I live in Haddam, Connecticut," was her reply, uttered in such soft and beautiful tones that every one was astonished. It was like a stream of limpid water flowing from a most unsightly looking rock. Excuse the metaphor; I do not often indulge.

"Do you keep boarders?"

"I do; a few, sir; such as my house will accommodate."

"Whom have you had with you this summer?"

I knew what her answer would be before she uttered it; so did a hundred others, but they showed their knowledge in different ways. I did not show mine at all.

"I have had with me," said she, "a Mr. and Mrs. Van Burnam from New York. Mr. Howard Van Burnam is his full name, if you wish me to be explicit."

"Any one else?"

"A Mr. Hull, also from New York, and a young couple from Hartford. My house accommodates no more."

"How long have the first mentioned couple been with you?"

"Three months. They came in June."

"Are they with you still?"

"Virtually, sir. They have not moved their trunks; but neither of them is in Haddam at present. Mrs. Van Burnham came to New York last Monday morning, and in the afternoon her husband also left, presumably for New York. I have seen nothing of either of them since."

(It was on Tuesday night the murder occurred.)

"Did either of them take a trunk?"

"No, sir."

"A hand-bag?"

"Yes; Mrs. Van Burnam carried a bag, but it was a very small one."

"Large enough to hold a dress?"

"O no, sir."

"And Mr. Van Burnam?"

"He carried an umbrella; I saw nothing else."

"Why did they not leave together? Did you hear any one say?"

"Yes; I heard them say Mrs. Van Burnam came against her husband's wishes. He did not want her to leave Haddam, but she would, and he was none too pleased at it. Indeed they had words about it, and as both our rooms overlook the same verandah, I could not help hearing some of their talk."

"Will you tell us what you heard?"

'It does not seem right" (thus the honest woman spoke), "but if it's the law, I must not go against it. I heard him say these words: 'I have changed my mind, Louise. The more I think of it, the more disinclined I am to have you meddle in the matter. Besides, it will do no good. You will only add to the prejudice against you, and our life will become more unbearable than it is now.'"

"Of what were they speaking?"

"I do not know."

"And what did she reply?"

"O, she uttered a torernt of words that had less sense in them than feeling. She wanted to go, she would go, she had not changed her mind, and considered that her impulses were as well worth following as his cool judgment. She was not happy, had never been happy, and meant there should be a change, even if were for the worse. But she did not believe it would be for the worse. Was she not pretty? Was she not very pretty when in distress, and looking up thus? And I heard her fall on her knees, a movement which called out a grunt from her husband, but whether this was an expression of approval or disapproval I cannot say. A silence followed, during which I caught the sound of his steady tramping up and down the room. Then he spoke again in a petulant way. 'It may seem foolish to you,' she cried, 'knowing me as you do, and being used to seeing me in all my moods. But to him it will be a surprise, and I will so manage it that it will effect all we want, and more, too, perhaps. I — I have a genius for some things, Howard; and my better angel tells me I shall succeed.'"

"And what did he reply to that?"

"That the name of her better angel was Vanity; that his father would see through her blandishments; that he forbade her to prosecute her schemes; and much more to the same effect. To all of which she answered by a vigorous stamp of her foot, and the declaration that she was going to do what she thought best in spite of all opposition; that it was a lover, and not a tyrant that she had married, and that if he did not know what was good for himself, she did, and that when he received an intimation from his father that the breach in the family was closed, then he would acknowledge that if she had no fortune and no connections, she had at least a plentiful supply of wit. Upon which he remarked: 'A poor qualification when it verges upon folly!' which seemed to close the conversation, for I heard no more till the sound of her skirts rustling past my door assured me she had carried her point and was leaving the house. But this was not done without great discomfiture to her husband, if one may judge from the few brief but emphatic words that escaped him before he closed his own door and followed her down the hall."

"Do you remember those words?"

"They were swear words, sir; I am sorry to say it, but he certainly cursed her and his own folly. Yet I always thought he loved her."

"Did you see her after she passed your door?"

"Yes, sir, on the walk outside."

"Was she then on the way to the train?"

"Yes, sir."

"Carrying the bag of which you have spoken?"

"Yes, sir; another proof of the state of feeling between them, for he was very considerate in his treatment of ladies, and I never saw him do anything ungallant before."

"You say you watched her as she went down the walk?"

"Yes, sir; it is human nature, sir; I have no other excuse to offer."

It was an apology I myself might have made. I conceived a liking for this homely matter-of-fact woman.

"Did you note her dress?"

"Yes, sir; that is human nature also, or, rather, woman's nature."

"Particularly, madam; so that you can describe it to the jury before you?"

"I think so."

"Will you, then, be good enough to tell us what sort of a dress Mrs. Van Burnam wore when she left your house for the city?"

"It was a black and white plaid silk, very rich——"

Why, what did this mean? We had all expected a very different description.

"It was made fashionably, and the sleeves—well, it is impossible to describe the sleeves. She wore no wrap, which seemed foolish to me, for we have very sudden changes sometimes in September."

"A plaid dress! And did you notice her hat?"

"O, I have seen the hat often. It was of every conceivable colour. It would have been called bad taste at one time, but now-a-days——"

The pause was significant. More than one man in the room chuckled, but the women kept a discreet silence.

"Would you know that hat if you saw it?"

"I should think I would!"

The emphasis was that of a countrywoman, and amused some people notwithstanding the melodious tone in which it was uttered. But it did not amuse me; my thoughts had flown to the hat which Mr. Gryce had found in the third room of Mr. Van Burnam's house, and which was of every colour of the rainbow.

The Coroner asked two other questions, one in regard to the gloves worn by Mrs. Van Burnam, and the other in regard to her shoes. To the first, Miss Ferguson replied that she did not notice her gloves, and to the other that Mrs. Van Burnam was very fashionable, and as pointed shoes were the fashion, in cities at least, she probably wore pointed shoes.

The discovery that Mrs. Van Burnam had been differently dressed on that day from the young woman found dead in the Van Burnam parlours, had acted as a shock upon most of the spectators. They were just beginning to recover from it when Miss Ferguson sat down. The Coroner was the only one who had not seemed at a loss. Why, we were soon destined to know.

XI.

THE ORDER CLERK.

A lady well known in New York society was the next person summoned. She was a friend of the Van Burnam family, and had known Howard from childhood. She had not liked his marriage; indeed, she rather participated in the family feeling against it, but when young Mrs. Van Burnam came to her house on the preceding Monday, and begged the privilege of remaining with her for one night, she had not had the heart to refuse her. Mrs. Van Burnam had therefore slept in her house on Monday night.

Questioned in regard to that lady's appearance and manner, she answered that her guest was unnaturally cheerful, laughing much and showing a great vivacity; that she gave no reason for her good spirits, nor did she mention her own affairs in any way, —rather took pains not to do so.

"How long did she stay?"

"Till the next morning."

"And how was she dressed?"

"Just as Miss Ferguson has described."

"Did she bring her hand-bag to your house?"

"Yes, and left it there. We found it in her room after she was gone."

"Indeed! And how do you account for that?"

"She was preoccupied. I saw it in her cheerfulness, which was forced and not always well timed."

"And where is that bag now?"

"Mr. Van Burnam has it. We kept it for a day and as she did not call for it, sent it down to the office on Wednesday morning."

"Before you had heard of the murder?"

"O yes, before I had heard anything about the murder."

"As she was your guest, you probably accompanied her to the door?"

"I did, sir."

"Did you nottice her hands? Can you say what was the colour of her gloves?"

"I do not think she wore any gloves on leaving; it was very warm, and she held them in her hand. I remembered this, for I noticed the sparkle of her rings as she turned to say goodbye."

"Ah, you saw her rings!"

"Distinctly."

"So that when she left you she was dressed in a black and white plaid silk, had a large hat covered with flowers on her head, and wore rings?"

"Yes, sir."

And with these words ringing in the ears of the jury, the witness sat down.

What was coming? Something important, or the Coroner would not look so satisfied, or the faces of the officials about him so expectant. I waited with great but subdued eagerness for the testimony of the next witness, who was a young man by the name of Callahan.

I don't like young men in general. They are either over-suave and polite, as if they condescended to remember that you are elderly and that it is their duty to make you forget it, or else they are pert and shallow and disgust you with their egotism. But this young man looked sensible and business-like, and I took to him at once, though what connection he could have with this affair I could not imagine.

His first words, however, settled all questions as to his personality: He was the order clerk at Altman's.

As he acknowledged this, I seemed to have some faint premonition of what was coming. Perhaps I had not been without some vague idea of the truth ever since I had put my mind to work on this matter; perhaps my wits only received their real spur then; but certainly I know what he was going to say as soon as he opened his lips, which gave me quite a good opinion of myself, whether rightfully or not, I leave you to judge.

His evidence was short, but very much to the point. On the seventeenth of September, as could be verified by the books, the firm had received an order for a woman's complete outfit, to be sent, C.O.D., to Mrs. James Pope at the Hotel D——, on Broadway. Sizes and measures and some particulars were stated, and as the order bore the words In haste underlined upon it, several clerks had assisted him in filling this order, which when filled had been sent by special messenger to the place designated.

Had he this order with him?

He had.

And could he identify the articles sent to fill it?

He could.

At which the Coroner motioned to an officer and a pile of clothing was brought forward from some mysterious corner and laid before the witness.

Immediately expectation rose to a high pitch, for every one recognized, or thought he did, the apparel which had been taken from the victim.

The young man, who was of the alert, nervous type, took up the articles one by one and examined them closely.

As he did so, the whole assembled crowd surged forward and lightning like glances from a hundred eyes followed his every movement and expression.

"Are they the same?" inquired the Coroner.

The witness did not hesitate. With one quick glance at the blue serge dress, black cape, and battered hat, he answered in a firm tone:

"They are."

And a clue was given at last to the dreadful mystery absorbing us.

(To be continued)

Are your hands chapped, cracked or sore? Have you "cold cracks" which open and bleed when the skin is drawn tight? Have you a cold sore, frost bite, chilblains, or a "raw" place, which at times makes it agony for you to go about your household duties? If so, Zam-Buk will give you relief, and will heal the frost-damaged skin. Anoint the sore places at night, Zam-Buk's rich healing essences will sink into the wounds, end the smarting, and will heal quickly.

Mrs. Yellen, of Portland, says: "My hands were so sore and cracked that it was agony to put them near water. When I did so they would smart and burn as if I had scalded them. I seemed quite unable to get relief from anything I put on them until I tried Zam-Buk, and it succeeded when all else had failed. It closed the big cracks, gave me ease, soothed the inflammation, and in a very short time healed my hands."

The Spanish onion is preferable to others for this purpose; but all onions will do, three large or six small, peeled, and sliced. Put two ounces of butter in the frying pan and when hot add the onions and stir until browned. Then put the contents of the pan in a saucepan with two quarts of good stock.

Boil slowly for half an hour or so and add pepper and salt. Do not strain if you wish to hold the substantial qualities of the soup. In each plate place a trimmed slice of fried bread and serve with grated Parmesan cheese.

Fried onions served with steak make one of the homely dishes that do not answer so well for formal feasts, but are always in favor of hearty appetites. They are best when cooked crisp and brown rather than in the soft fashion which serves as fried with so many cooks.

This method will always turn them out properly if followed exactly. Peel and slice evenly and thin, four medium sized onions. Put them in milk, then drain and roll, or dredge them with flour and have the fat very plentiful and very hot. Fry them for eight or ten minutes, stirring them to see that they all get even cooking. Then drain them on brown paper and pour over the steak. The meat gravy, should be served separately.

The onion cannot be excelled as an addition to most of the foods that come to the table. It has even been added to a dressing for raw oysters, a combination that will always be questioned by those who prefer the oyster flavour with lemon only.

The leek is used chiefly as a soup vegetable, but the Italian chef cuts it in inch bits, boils it in two waters, simmers it in butter, cream and chicken broth, beats in the yolk of an egg and some Parmesan cheese, and produces a dish appetising and very dainty.

Onion soup, which has become a standard favourite with the patrons of the restaurants that make it a specialty on certain days of the week, is supposed by many to be a French invention, but it really is an Italian dish. It can be made at home quite easily. It is simple and economical, and can always be made ready in half an hour if the soup stock is used, which every good housekeeper has on hand.

THE LAST THING.

"It's curious," said Brown, "how coming events cast their shadows before them. I'll wager a fiver none of you gentlemen can guess what was the last thing played on the organ at the time of the fire."

"The Last Chord," suggested Smith.

Brown shook his head.

"Dies Irae," said the classical gentleman.

Brown shook his head again.

"What was it, then?" asked the practical member.

Brown got up, reached for his hat, and went to the door. Then he replied:

"The hose!"

At the Summit of St. Paul's

The ball and cross on the summit of St. Paul's Cathedral have only occupied their present high position since 1821. Up to that time the originals, put there by Wren himself, still looked down on the heart of the Empire. But it was then found that the old ball and cross had become so rusted that they were unsafe, and it was decided to remove them. Taking down the cross proved quite easy, but the removal of the ancient ball was found to be not only difficult but dangerous. When at last it was safely lowered to the ground it was rolled down Ludgate Hill, in the presence of a huge crowd, to the warehouse of the brassfounder who was making a new cross and ball.

St. Paul's comes fifth in size among the great cathedrals of Europe. Its height may be easily remembered, as there are just as many feet from the floor of the cathedral to the top of the cross as there are days in the year.

London Prices Years Ago

When Nicholas Decremps visited London in 1788 he found the cost of living by no means high. In "Le Parisien a Londres" he quoted figures showing that many articles were cheaper there than in Paris. Beef was obtainable for 7c and mutton for 10c a pound, and other food prices were on a similar scale. Thirst was not an expensive luxury for small beer was sold at 1c a pint, the best beer at 7c a quart, and a bowl of punch cost only 25c. But Decremps found his laundry bill excessive, the charge for washing a shirt being 9c. "And," he adds, pathetically, "shirts are changed every day in London. Such is the general custom, due no doubt to the griminess of the atmosphere."

WHY PAINT BRUSHES CURL

Perhaps the most frequent trouble with brushes, for which the manufacturer is often blamed, is the bristles curling. In many instances this is no doubt the maker's fault, the bristles not having been cured properly. In good brushes the most common cause for curling is the manner in which the brush is wiped and the way it is put away for the night. If the brush is wiped across the points of the hair, the outside hairs are bound to straggle. A brush should be wiped just to the ends of the bristles and not so that the edge of the bucket will catch the outside bristles constantly bending them outward until they assume a contrary position from that intended. If ends of brushes curl up while painting blinds, grille or fretwork, dip the ends in hot water. This will straighten them.

ENVELOPE SEALER

Handy Device Which Facilitates the Handling of the Office Mail

In the days not so long ago, the salivary secretions of the office boy were entirely sufficient for the purpose of moistening all the letters which had been written during the day and which were entrusted to him at the end of the day to mail. Such is not the case to-day, when the facilities for turning out letters and for doing business by mail are so great as to make the sealing and stamping of mail matter a serious problem.

The device shown herewith will apply just the right amount of moisture to the gummed flap of the envelope, and the inventor has also made provision that when once charged with water the supply will last a considerable time and not dry out by evaporation.

MOISTENS THE ENVELOPE FLAP.

It consists of a moisture-proof box with a hinged lid, the latter having a spring, the action of which is to hold the lid open. Under the lid is one moistening pad, which comes in contact with the envelope flap and this is maintained at the proper degree of moisture by automatically coming in contact with an auxiliary moistener. The envelope is placed on the lid with the flap overhanging, and as the lid is pressed down the water is applied. As the envelope is removed the parts are pressed together and the sealing effected. The moisture-proof qualities of the box prevent the evaporation of the water, which, when not in use is simply closed.

GROWTH OF HEADS

The Heads of Prominent Men Often Grow After the Age of Forty

This is not a facetious matter, but one which is the outcome of phrenological examination, on the "before and after" principle of the heads of men who stir the public. As a matter of fact, it is contended that while a man stops growing, generally speaking, at the age of twenty-five his head, particularly if he is a thinker, continues to grow and increase in size often after he is forty years of age. Indeed, experts say that a man's brain does not become fully developed until he is forty or fifty years of age, and a well known London phrenologist, who has measured the heads of many prominent people from time to time, has discovered by means of these measurements that the head continues to grow at a considerably greater age than is generally believed.

Mr. Lloyd George's head, according to this authority, increased in size from being nearly 23 inches in circumferential measurement to 23¼ inches from the time he was forty to forty-eight years of age. In other words, after forty years of age his head grew a quarter of an inch larger in eight years.

A remarkable instance is that of Mr. Bart Kennedy, whose head measured at thirty-four years of age 23¼ inches. Twelve years later it measured 24 inches, showing that his head actually grew ¾ inch larger in twelve years. He had written eleven books during those twelve years, and so kept his brain vigorously at work. The late Mr. W. T. Stead's head increased in circumference from 23 inches, when he was forty-six years old to 23⅝ inches when he was sixty-two.

This growth of the head, declares the expert, means that the brain has also been growing and developing, and that as long as the mind is active the brain and head both grow and develop. While it may seem impossible for so soft a substance as the brain to make the skull grow larger, it should be remembered that the skull is for protecting the brain, not for hindering its growth.

HAD TO STOP WORK FROM THE PAIN

Suffered Ten Years Until "Fruit-a-tives" Cured Him

ST. THOMAS, ONT., May 22nd. 1913.

"I was troubled for ten years with the most distressing Constipation and Indigestion of the worst form.

No one could have been worse with these troubles than I was for this long time.

The pain from Indigestion was so severe that many times, I have had to stop work and lie down until the acute spasms passed away.

I took a lot of medicine—in fact, I guess I took about everything that was advertised—and gave them all a fair test—but got no relief. About a year ago, however, I was advised to try "Fruit-a-tives". I am mighty glad I did so for they seem to be made exactly for me.

They gave results in a very short time and I am now free from these diseases and enjoying perfect health.

My wife also used "Fruit-a-tives" and we both think they are the best medicine ever made."

THEIR NAMES.

Not long ago there was a run-in between a scion of the British Nobility and the Irish doorkeeper of an art gallery in Washington. On certain days of the week the institution admits visitors free; on other days an admission fee is charged. It appears that the Briton tried to enter without paying on one of the last mentioned days; whereupon, of course, he was held up by he Cerberus at the door.

"I fear, my good man," said the Britisher, "that you don't know who I am. For your enlightenment I may advise you that I am Sir Thomas Smith, Knight of the Garter, Knight of the Bath, Knight of the Double Eagle, Knight of the Golden Fleece and Knight of the Iron Cross."

"My name," responded the doorkeeper, as if pleased to communicate the information, "is Patrick Clancy, night before last, to-night, and every night, Patrick Clancy. You Mr. Knight, pays to git in here!"

VALUE OF RHEUMA FROM THE COURT

Judge Barhorst Was Relieved of Rheumatism After Doctors Failed

If you have tried many other remedies and doctors' treatments for Rheumatism and found they failed, do not be skeptical about trying RHEUMA. Read the testimony of Judge John Barhorst of Fort Loraine, O.:

"After treatment by three doctors without result, I have been cured of a very bad case of Rheumatism by using two bottles of RHEUMA. It is now two years since I used the remedy, and I am still as well as ever. Previously, I was a cripple, walking with crutches."

Such testimony should be convincing. 50 cents of Warne Drug Co., guaranteed.

WHERE?

Where are the cooks of yesterday?
Those jolly matrons that would take
"A pinch of this," "a dust" of that,"
"Sweeten to taste"—their tastes were pat—
"Just flour enough for batter, dear;"
And make the most goloptious cake!
Where are the cooks of yesteryear,
Who used their "judgment" not a rule?
Their toothsome cookies haunt us yet,
Their pies and doughnuts, too, you bet,
Were works of art! Alas, I fear
Those cooks can ne'er be made in school.

FLYING THE FLAG

All Flags May Not be Hoisted by the General Public

There are quite a number of people whom an excess of enthusiasm may lead into committing an offence against the law. On red-letter days many a flag is hoisted which ought not to be, and comparatively few people are aware of the restrictions on this point. The whole matter was laid down by an Order in Council dated November 5th, 1800. This still remains in force. The most important point to be remembered is that the Royal Standard is the personal flag of the Sovereign. It is hoisted where the Sovereign is residing, and nowhere else, with a few exceptions, such as certain fortresses on Royal anniversaries or State occasions, as laid down in the Royal Regulations. The Union Jack is the flag of the whole nation, and anyone may fly it.

For over two centuries the British Fleet consisted of three divisions—the red, the white and the blue—and each division flew an "Ensign" of a corresponding color, the white ensign being incorporated with the "St. George's Cross." These divisions were abolished in 1864, but the White Ensign was still retained for the fleet. It is exclusively the flag of the Royal Navy and the Royal Yacht Squadron, and it is a punishable offence for anyone else to use it, however innocent their intention. The Blue Ensign is the flag of the Royal Naval Reserve; it is also flown by certain yacht clubs. The flag which is most commonly in use among civilians is the Red Ensign, the flag of the Merchant Service. No loyal citizen with a flagstaff on his house or in his back garden will transgress any regulation if he runs up the Red Ensign when the spirit moves him to proclaim his loyalty.

ARTIFICIAL PEARLS

Most of Them Merely Glass Balls With Lustrous Coating Inside

The industry of manufacturing artificial pearls has developed enormously of late years, both in extent and in the remarkable degree of perfection which these imitations of the natural gem have attained, some of them almost defying detection save under the close scrutiny of the keenest experts.

The simplest forms are uniformly spherical and are merely glass balls blown by means of tubes of varying sizes. More ingenious and more natural-looking are the irregular pearls or perles goitgenses. To produce these the workman sometimes merely touches the ball momentarily with the end of a redhot tube, thus melting the glass at the point of contact and drawing it out irregularly. In other cases he touches one spot or another of the ball to a flame, at the same time blowing gently in the tube. The ball is pierced by two holes, one of which is caused by the breath of the workman, and the other by the hollow in the tube at the moment when this is detached from the pearl by means of a slight tap.

These balls are then merely coated inside with a preparation known as "essence of the Orient." This, despite its elaborate title, consists merely of pure water holding in solution the scales of the little fish known as the bleak-fish. The operation consists in the sucking of the liquid into a tube drawn out to a fine point and then blowing it into the glass bead, which is then given a rotary motion to spread the coating evenly.

The beads when coated are placed in a sieve whose bottom is covered with parchment and shaken incessantly till dry. Finally they are filled with wax so as to be less fragile and a little heavier.

CONQUERS AIR POCKETS

French Aviator Brought Model of New Machine to Canada

Romin Garros, brother of Paul Garros, the famous French airman, exhibited an interesting object to some Montreal newspapermen. It was the model of his brother's new aeroplane, said to be able to defy air pockets, one of the most fatal dangers to airmen. Garros explained the technical points of the machine.

"I am on my way to visit at the Bleriot farm in the west," said he, "and I take with me this little model. It does not look much, but it may prove the means of saving thousands of airmen's lives. It does what we call increasing the inherent stability of the plane, and this little apparatus which you see on the sides acts as a defence against sudden air currents, that is, they enable the airman to regain his balance after being tipped over. We are experimenting with this new plane in France, and are working it to a high stage of perfection. We are not saying much about it until we perfect it, but since you saw the model under my arm I have told you something about it."

Natural Timepiece

There is no need for clocks on the Ægean Sea any day when the sun is shining. There nature has arranged her only timepiece, one that does not vary through the centuries. This natural time-marker is the largest sundial in the world. Projecting into the blue waters of the sea is a large promontory, which lifts its head three thousand feet above the waves. As the sun swings round, the pointed shadow of the mountain just touches one after the other, a number of small islands, which are at exact distances apart, and act as hour marks on the great dial.

TALKING TO BABY

Words Should be Properly Pronounced When Child is Four

Is "baby talk" bad for babies, and are fond parents who indulge in it when dandling their latest born in their arms committing themselves to a harmful as well as foolish habit?

"Baby talk" has existed ever since there were babies and is the result of two distinct things. First, articulation never reaches full development until the age of five or six, and that causes distortion of words, such as "lickle" for "little," and "sing" for "thing." Secondly, the baby mind receives an impression of the character of a thing by what it does, and so describes a train, for example, as a "puff-puff" or "toot-toot."

It naturally follows that a baby when very young more easily comprehends "baby" talk than it would plain English terms.

At a kindergarten babies are taught to speak English properly by encouraging them to imitate the teacher, and parents would certainly help in the education of their little ones if they dropped "baby talk" after a certain period—at about four years of age.

An authority on the education of very young children stoutly defends talking "baby talk" to babies up to a certain period, which she places at four years of age. "After that," she says, "I think it would be distinctly harmful to the baby and foolish in the parent.

"Banish 'baby talk'!" she exclaimed. "Never! We should have dumb babies if that could be accomplished. It is very, very often the baby's aid to speech when the mother talks 'baby talk' to it, and it is all very charming and sweet."

AVERAGE MILK YIELDS

Could be Greatly Increased by Proper Testing of Cows

A common question in the country is, "How are the cows doing?" What a volume of thought that suggests! If they are doing well is it because of good feed and careful attention, or may it be despite the feed and care they deserve, but do not get? Leaving aside the questions of weather, breed, heredity and persistency of flow of milk, is it possible to account for the remarkable differences in yield that are to be found? For instance, the dairy division at Ottawa found in one locality 100 cows that gave 3,000 pounds of fat in one month, but 100 cows close by in the same county gave only 2,500 pounds of fat. Another lot of 100 cows in a nearby county gave only 2,200 pounds.

Is the ordinary herd keyed up to the pitch of creditable performance, or is it just jogging along in the old rut of "average yields?" Suppose the farmer ascertains his herd is doing "about as well" as his neighbor's, does it not seem a great pity that his ambition should end there?

Cow testing has helped many communities to far larger banking business, because it shows that scores of cows and average herds can be made to produce far more than they do at present. Make each cow pay a good profit.

A potato poultice is a good cure for toothache. Bake three or four nice-sized potatoes in their skins, and when done break them into a flannel bag and hold it to the face while very hot.

Little Ghostess Discovered

Mysterious noises in an apartment house in the Avenue de Clichy, Paris, reacted on the nerves of the tenants to such an extent that some of them gave notice to leave.

Finally the landlord, sceptical of ghosts, got three police officers to spend a night in the house. At midnight the muffled beats began as usual. Revolvers in hand, the detectives searched every room until at last they found a little girl of thirteen, sitting in her nightdress on the side of her bed and kicking the shaft conveying the water and gas pipes through the building.

She said she liked to hear the neighbors in the morning talking about the ghosts of the night before. The metal carried the sound to every room in the house.

SIGNS OF KIDNEY TROUBLE

In the early stages kidney troubles are known by backache and urinary disorders. Later come dropsy, stone rheumatic pains, and perhaps diabetes. But don't wait for these. Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills will help you in a few hours. Their thorough action on the liver, kidneys, and bowels will clear away the pains and aches and make you well again.

Full Many a Gem.

Many interesting curios have been raised by the big dredge at work at the foot of James street, in Hamilton recently. They are two sewing machines and a yacht cannon.

The sewing machines evidently fell into the bay while being unloaded from or loaded on a freight boat, and despite their many years' immersion, were said to be in fair condition.

The yacht cannon was the property of Judge Monck, who stated that it was lost there more than eighteen years ago.

Every boat engaged in the Jamaican sponge industry has a water glass or pane of glass inserted in the bottom of a box or bucket, through which the sponges are readily detected.

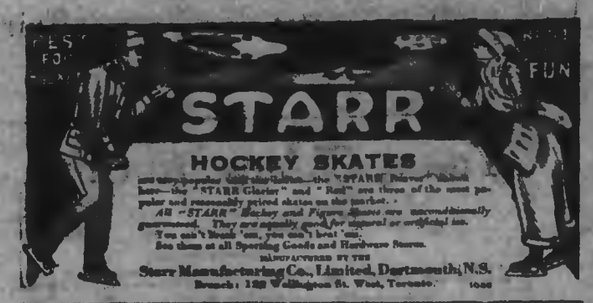
SHILOH CURES COUGHS & COLDS



THE LIGHTHOUSE.

Lighting the Coast Line Dates Back To Days of Thalleys.

Ever since man began to navigate the waters he has endeavored to light them at night. The father of lighthouses, of course, was the ancient Pharos of Alexandria, in Egypt. It was built by Ptolemy Philadelphus, about 720 B.C., on a small island at the entrance to the harbor, connected by a causeway with the mainland. The Pharos cost 800 talents; if these were silver talents — as most likely they were—that would be equal to $850,000; the largest sum ever expended upon a single lighthouse. The structure had a base of some 400 feet, and towered 450 feet above sea level. As the whole was built of white marble, the edifice must have been at once elegant and impressive. At the summit, fires were kept burning to direct the mariner through the tortuous entrance to the bay. It is recorded by some of the ancients that the flame of the Pharos could be discerned 100 miles at sea. This, of course, is an exaggeration, as the most up-to-date light of modern times, with all the latest inventions for increasing its intensity, is only visible 30 miles out. It is doubtful if the smoky gleam of the ancient Pharos was seen 20 or 25 miles on a clear night. The Romans built many lighthouses, and it is said that several exceeded in splendor and magnificence the famous Pharos, but none of them now remain.

The earliest example extant of a lighthouse is the famous Tower of Cordouan on the west coast of France. It was built by the great French architect, M. Louis de Foix, in 1584, and still stands to-day a monument to his skill; and it is certainly one of the most remarkable edifices in the world. This lighthouse is a beacon, a church, and a royal residence all in one. First there is a circular stone platform, 135 feet in diameter, around which an elegant parapet runs. From this platform the tower rises in four stages, each smaller than that beneath, and ornamented outside with beautiful columns and engravings. The first floor is the entrance hall, and the one above the King's apartments. Above this is the chapel, and then comes the lantern. The French monarchs often stayed at this novel residence, and are recorded to have "enjoyed the ocean palace full of fresh sea air and free from all the bustle and worry of Parisian life." Originally the lantern stood 94 feet above the sea. About a hundred years ago the height of the tower was increased, and to-day a handsome lamp, throwing changing colors, adorns its summit, 189 feet above high water mark.

Right down to the time of John Smeaton, who invented the stone tower, lighthouses were built of wood. It was Smeaton's success in placing a stone edifice on the dreaded Eddystone rocks, in the Eighteenth Century, which really gave an impetus to lighthouse building; and since that time the sea-builder has been busy erecting lights on dangerous islands and pinnacles in all parts of the globe.

English Etchings.

The Bank of England destroys about 350,000 of its notes every week.

The traffic over London bridge averages daily 100,000 pedestrians and 20,000 vehicles.

More than 40 per cent of the people of Great Britain could not write their names when Queen Victoria ascended the throne.

Bronchitis is the most fatal disease in England; next comes consumption and then heart disease, pneumonia and scarlatina.

According to an English publisher, there are at least 2,000 plays licensed every year in England by the lord chamberlain. Of these only a small proportion—perhaps 200—are actually produced.

ELEVATORS IN EUROPE.

Except in First Class Hotels They Are Crude Affairs.

The use of passenger elevators is not nearly so general in Europe as it is in the United States. In Germany and France most hotels of the very highest class, catering to wealthy foreign travelers, are equipped with elevators much like the American type, and intended to be freely used both up and down. The cheapest hotels and many very good ones at moderate prices, though four or five stories high, are not provided with elevators.

The almost universal type for medium priced hotels has a wooden cage 3 by 5 feet, intended for five persons. It is driven by a four horse-power electric motor and controlled by a series of push buttons on the outside at the bottom. A person desiring to go to the third floor enters the car, and the attendant (or, rather, any servant, for there is no elevator boy) pushes button No. 3, the car stops at the third floor, and the passenger steps out and calls down the shaft that the car is free.

Sometimes the button control is inside, in which case the attendant accompanies the passenger. Sometimes there is an annunciator, but not often, because the car is not supposed to be called to an upper floor to carry passengers down. Stairs are for that purpose. As the French have it, this institution is an "ascenseur" and not by any chance a "descenseur." In any case, it is a privilege to use it.

A few office buildings are equipped with the same type elevator; but, as a rule, none except the most pretentious offices have elevators.—Indianapolis News.

Kingston Trebles Exports.

As a result of the reduction of the American tariff, the amount of exports from the Kingston district to the United States during October nearly trebled. The total exports for the month were $119,353, chiefly hay, lumber, grain, cattle, cream and feldspar.

BREEZY NOTES FROM THE ENGLISH CAPITAL FLASHED BY CABLE

Yuan, Chinese to Core, Is No Preacher of Theories

Without Veneer of Foreign "Civilization," the Man of the Hour in China Has Little Use for Economics as Evolved by Latter Day School.

MANDARIN EXPECTED TO RESUME OLD STATUS

(Special Dispatch.)

PEKIN, Nov. 15.

IF the election of Yuan Shih-kai to the Presidency of the Republic of China and the recognition of that republic by the Powers of the world will have an influence for good upon the chaos at present existing in the country the advocates of that optimistic theory will be justified.

Since the election of Yuan Shih-kai as President all of the Powers have signified their willingness to give to China the privilege of speaking to them in their front parlors rather than in the metaphorical back rooms which have been utilized during the last nineteen or twenty months.

For some reason that is difficult to ascertain the pessimists in China have ascribed the lack of control in the provinces, the mutinous character of soldiers, the bungling of financial affairs, the mismanagement of foreign questions and the muddled state of all departments to the refusal of the Powers to recognize the Republic as a fit and proper State to associate with them in the diplomatic playground and to the delay in securing the formal election of Yuan Shih-kai as President. To the close observer there would appear to be little to support the theory. Rather has the chaos been fostered by the misfit of republican principles upon a country which for centuries has been better ruled by an absolute monarch than it can be by a "constitutional" President; in short, the emancipation was too precipitate for a people so ill-prepared for the responsibilities which accrue to the individual citizen in the "free" State.

The Manchu Uniform Missing.

China's trouble can be summed up in a few words. Liberty has been misunderstood to be license, equality has been construed to mean that laws are only for the amusement of those who make them, and fraternity has been regarded as recognition that Jack the coolie is a good as his master, the literati and the official.

For these reasons there has been disregard of authority among the civil classes and payment of taxes has been refused by those who hitherto cheerfully paid their dole to the mandarin, because the old Manchu headgear and uniform of the tax collector has been replaced by a shoddy hat or cap from Japan and a cloth suit of alleged European cut from the village tailor. What self-respecting land or property owner could be expected to pay money suit to a vagabond looking person who arrives without a vestige of authority and who is no whit differently clad than the taxpayer's cook can be if he so wishes?

As for the military element, they quickly learned that the silver dollar was the attraction which mostly lured the official classes to place and power, and rapidly they developed like tendencies to succumb to its seductiveness. They found there were buyers in two camps, and they were ready to sell alleged service to either. The highest bidder took the support.

Loyalty, if ever such a thing existed in China, seems to have died a natural death with the inauguration of the new time.

Yuan Chinese to the Core.

Among observers of the kaleidoscopic changes which are taking place in this newest of republics, there are those who believe that to master such a situation as this Yuan Shih-kai is the man par excellence. He is Chinese to the core. There is no veneer of foreign "civilization" about him. He knows the old Chinese methods, and has the old Chinese men at his hand to carry them out if he obtains the chance. He is not influenced by what Mill or Ruskin, or any of the later day school say on economics, political or otherwise, and really he doesn't care a snap of his fingers for all the degrees of all the universities of the world rolled into one. He simply knows Chinese trend of thought, and characteristics. He knows the methods that best govern them and how to apply them, and he knows that the great bulk of the people do not know of, or care a fig about, "constitutional government," or any other new fangled political notion garnered in the outer world.

For this reason, and for the reason that he has had great administrative experience, Yuan Shih-kai is believed by many to be the best man to take the reins of government in this country. He is not the ideal ruler from the point of view of the American or European educated student. He is crude, and without the polish of the graduate, but he cannot be called reactionary. He is conservative, with a progressive tendency—a man likely to listen to advice of trusted counsellors. Unhappily, much of this advice does not savor of modernism, and for that reason Yuan Shih-kai is mostly blamed. His chief henchman is the astute Cantonese, Liang Shih-yi; a man who keeps out of the lime light and pulls whatever strings he can get hold of.

The Long Hand of Liang Shih-yi.

In most of the political movements that have developed of late in the interests of President Yuan Shih-kai the hand of Liang Shih-yi has been in control, and the continuation of talent found in the heads of the President and his Chief Secretary, as Liang is called, is responsible for whatever success has been attained by Yuan Shih-kai in holding China together in spite of itself during the last two years.

As Yuan Shih-Kai is, then, imbued with ideas contrary to those held by the returned students, his rule is likely to conflict with their notions of what should be in a republic. He is already introducing and gradually he is accumulating his old colleagues in office to help him govern the provinces. Old style officials will be placed in power in the northern provinces, and gradually they will try to control the southern ones. The military forces will be placed upon a different basis, and the returned student from Japan—the "revolutionist"—will be restricted in his scope. The army will not be so easy to buy in the future as it has been in the past.

Throughout what is the equivalent of the civil service there will be reorganization as time goes on, and the indications are that time will disclose that China is again being run by the mandarin, or rather a modified mandarin.

The foreign educated student stands aghast at the prospect of such a thing, but Yuan Shih-kai reasons that it is time that peace came to the country and breathing space be permitted for a revival of commerce and industry, and that he deems impossible while pseudo legislators are experimenting with ill digested laws.

SHATTERED ROMANCES COME WITH AUTUMN

London Psychologist Advances Interesting Theory for Epidemic of Broken Engagements.

(Special Dispatch.)

LONDON, Nov. 15.

"THE marriage will not take place." This stereotyped announcement, which tells so bluntly of a shattered romance and sets the fashionable world talking, has appeared with extraordinary frequency during the last few weeks. In one week alone eight couples who were to have been married this month have broken their engagements. They are Mr. William Fraser, of the Gordon Highlanders, son of Lord and Lady Saltoun, and Miss Yvonne Palmer, youngest daughter of the late Sir Elwin Palmer; Mr. Frank O'Brien Wilson, son of the late Colonel Wilson and Mrs. Wilson, and Miss Margaret Chaloner, daughter of Colonel Richard Chaloner, M. P.; Mr. Kenneth McDonall, a Scottish laird, and Miss Alma Stopford, daughter of Lord and Lady Stopford; Mr. Humphrey Adderley, son of Lord and Lady Norton, and Miss Beatrice Moore, daughter of the late Mr. Robert Moore, of Dublin; Captain Edric Weld Forester, youngest of the six sons of Lord and Lady Forester, and Miss Constance Combe, second daughter of Mr. Richard and Lady Constance Combe; Mr. Frederick Ryan andd Miss Gladys Boynton, daughter of Lady Boynton; Mr. Henry Hector MacColl and Miss Stella Collins, Mr. W. L. McEwen and Miss C. I. Brass and a number of others less known in society circles.

But there have been many more this year, including that of Mr. Harold Boulton and Miss Anne Dalberg Acton, sister of Lord Acton, whose marriage was to have taken place at Darmstadt in June. Then there was that of Lord Hertford and Mrs. Moscockle, which aroused a great amount of interest, whose engagement was announced in May and broken off two months later. Earlier in the year the engagement of the Hon. Frances Fitzalan Howard and Mr. Arthur Leigh-Bennett was terminated a few days before that fixed for the wedding.

Dr. Charles H. Heydemann, the well known psychologist, being asked what he thought of this remarkable "epidemic," advanced a rather interesting theory.

"The spring," he said, "is the time for love and the making of engagements. It is the psychological moment of the quickening of universal life, the result of an overplus of vitality—hence the general friendliness of families, arrangements for the future and engagements.

"Though the almost simultaneous announcements of so many broken off engagements in society are probably a coincidence, there is no doubt that the end of summer and the change of season finds one in a state of lower vitality and consequent depression and irritability which may quite likely be the cause of the breaking off of engagements.

"Engagements to-day are so much of a probationary order and are entered into in such a non-committal fashion that a great many couples fail to stand the test of being continually together and are content to cry off when the leaves are falling.

"That the epidemic of broken engagements has anything to do with a heat wave I doubt. There may be some magnetic storm in the atmosphere, but I incline more to the opinion that the broken engagements are probably a startling series of coincidences which go to prove that the general tendency of to-day is for girls to be more exacting in the choice of their husbands than they used to be and that men are slacker in their devotion.

"To-day marriage is not the Alpha and Omega of women's existence. The breaking off of an engagement in England does not cast an indelible slur on a girl, as it does in Germany, for instance, where they take things far more seriously."

LONDON FINDS REAL USE FOR MOTORCYCLE

(Special Dispatch.)

LONDON, Nov. 15.

WHEN the automobile taxicab appeared and gradually swept the old hansom from the streets many were the lamentations of old clubmen at the disappearance of their beloved "London gondola," which had served them so well ever since they could remember.

The bodies of old Londoners, who mourned the passing of the hansom, would turn in their graves if they could see the "novel autocab" which is now appearing on the streets of London. It is a weird looking thing, like an old fashioned Sedan chair, hitched on to the side of a bicycle, and is the invention of Mr. W. Williamson, of the Williamson Motor Company, of Coventry. It runs on three wheels, and is driven from the saddle of the attached cycle.

Hooded like a taxicab, it can seat three persons, two on the back seat, and one on a pivot seat. As it consumes little petrol, the fare will be only half that of the taxicab.

PERSONS WELL KNOWN IN ANGLO-AMERICAN SOCIETY PLAY LEADING PARTS IN THE GAY LIFE OF LONDON

Races and Pheasant Shooting Are the Features of the Present Time.

MRS. PAGE HAS WON WITH HER CHARMS

American Embassy Now Has a Mascot in Ping Pong, a Clever Little Pekinese.

(Special Dispatch.)

LONDON, Nov. 15.

WITH so many away at the Liverpool races and with pheasant shooting becoming more general with the commencement of the hunting season, the last week has not been particularly eventful in London. It is all the more remarkable therefore that the five weeks opera season which was begun a week ago at Covent Garden has been so well attended. In fact several tiaras have been seen every night, a most unusual thing at the opera in autumn.

Princess Henry of Battenberg and one of Princess Christian's daughters have been the chief occupants of the royal box.

Favored with fine weather, there was a good attendance at Aintree, particularly on Liverpool Cup day, but Aintree is so exposed to winds that there was no imposing display of costumes, the women mostly wearing heavy coats trimmed with fur or composed entirely of fur. A few wore smart tailormade costumes of duvetyn and the new material called glacé cloth.

There was also a good sprinkling of persons well known in the Anglo-American circle. Colonel and Mrs. Hall Walker had in their box Grand Duke Nichaylovitch and Countess Torby, well wrapped in furs. Lady Curzon was there dressed in mourning for her aunt, Lady Evelyn Eyre, and wearing a very becoming black dress and hat.

King Has Good Sport.

Lady Essex, Mrs. Rochfort Maguire, Miss Frewen, Lady Mar and Kellie also were there.

After Aintree comes the Derby, and then so far as the social world is concerned the racing season ends.

Shooting parties are assembling everywhere. These, of course, will be continued until January.

King George has been having good sport with Lord Iveagh's party at Elveden since Monday. The weather has been so fine that the ladies from Elveden Hall have been able to join the guns at luncheon nearly every day.

Lord and Lady Londesborough have had one or two parties already at Blankney.

Lord and Lady Leicester, the latter one of London's most energetic American hostesses when in town, have a large party stopping at Holkham.

Cora Lady Strafford also is entertaining for the shooting, and so too are Lord and Lady Hastings, Mme. Edwards, wife of the Chilian Minister, and Sir Sigismund and Lady Newmann.

Lord and Lady Craven, the latter still in very deep mourning for Mr. Bradley Martin, Lady Craven's father, are stopping in London for a week or two longer, when they will go to Combe Abbey, where they will have a few small shooting parties. Lady Craven is not likely to remain in mourning a very long time, for the English have grown less strict in such matters than Americans. For a very near relative an American woman wears as a rule unrelieved black for twelve months, while an English woman nowadays, except for her husband or parent, seldom wears deep mourning longer than three months. Whereas it once was thought correct to wear crêpe for six months for a parent and then black dresses without crêpe for another three months and at the end of twelve months black and white, or gray crêpe, now very little is used in England. Even widows' weeds have gone out of fashion and a widow's cap seldom is seen. Widows now wear a medium sized hat with a floating veil of lisse.

The New Automobiles.

The opening of the automobile show at Olympia of course brought a great many persons to London who are interested in such matters, but it is not regarded as a social event. It is noticed that no very drastic changes of design are seen in the models for 1914. Nearly all the makers now are experimenting with a view to obtaining increased efficiency and increasing the power of their output without increasing either the size or the weight of the power plant. The result is that more power and efficiency are obtainable for less money, and in the evident desire to compete with the cheaper American cars the custom is growing among British makers of giving with each car a number of accessories, which, to purchase independently, would cost easily another $200 or $250.

But the event which interested society most in London was the Queen acting as godmother to Mr. and Mrs. Robert Balfour's infant son, who was christened in the Chapel Royal, Savoy. Many are not aware that Queen Mary is Mrs. Balfour's cousin, the exact relationship being first cousin once removed. Before her marriage Mrs. Robert Balfour was Miss Ivy FitzGeorge, daughter of the late Colonel FitzGeorge, of the Twentieth Hussars, and he was a son of the late Duke of Cambridge, whose sister, Princess Mary Adelaide, Duchess of Teck, was the Queen's mother.

Mrs. Page Charm London.

Very few dances are announced for November, in marked contrast to a few years ago, when hostesses tumbled over one another in entertaining in November and December. That given by Mrs. Page, wife of the American Ambassador, to introduce her daughter, though not more than one hundred persons were present, was very enjoyable. Mrs. Page proving a delightful hostess. In fact, Mrs. Page is running her husband very close in popularity both at home and in public. It was a sympathetic little speech she made on the occasion of the opening of the exhibition of arts and handicrafts in the Maddox Street Galleries, telling how the women's art and crafts movement was doing very valuable work in the United States as well as in England in raising the standard of popular taste. Women of both countries, she said, should be united in keeping their ideals high and carry them out.

The American Embassy has a mascot in a baby Pekinese, registered at the Kennel Club under the name Ping Pong. Its age is three months and it was presented to Mr. Harold Fowler, private secretary to the Ambassador, by Mrs. Atmstrong, wife of Dr. Armstrong as a mascot just before she left for India. Ping Pong's first act in the diplomatic service was to apply for a short leave of absence to call on some relatives among the Pekinese in America. The application was granted on the promise that the mascot would return at the end of the year. Ping Pong left on board the Amerika with Mr. Fowler and his sister.

Jimmie Is Ousted.

At the Embassy it is said that Ping Pong completely puts in the shade the pretensions of Jimmie, Mr. Joseph Clark Grew's bull terrier, who, claims to be the star dog in the American diplomatic service. Jimmie, it is explained, hangs around the American Embassy in Berlin, boasting of his ancestors. He has had such masters as Mr. Basil Miles and Mr. Spencer Eddy, but Ping Pong's family helped to guard the Imperial palace at Pekin long before any of Jimmie's family tree was known in respectable society.

Maxine Elliott as the beautiful wife of Potiphar in the Tree production of "Joseph and His Brethren" is doing much to keep matters lively. Her Sundays at her estate near Bushey are becoming famous. She provides her guests with golf, tennis and automobiling and regales them with enthusiastic descriptions of her experiences as a farmer, for she maintains a herd of nearly seventy cows. Maxine Elliott always has been a successful hostess in England and few actresses are more warmly welcomed in aristocratic circles. She has been a frequent guest at Trentham, with the Sutherlands at Dalmeny, at Warwick Castle and at Blenheim.

The American circle of the Lyceum Club had a somewhat premature celebration of Thanksgiving Day last Monday because it was the only date near the actual one when it was possible to get the entire club premises. The Ambassador was unable to be present, but Colonel Squier, the Military Attaché of the Embassy, came, and it was a very happy gathering, mostly of women and nearly as many English women as Americans. The chairman was Representative Foss, of Illinois.

Lord Grey is circulating a long letter on the subject of the British-American peace centenary, his purpose being to organize a great fancy dress ball in Albert Hall next June. The idea looks as if it is being taken up with great enthusiasm.

Autumn Exhibition of the British Artists' Society

Last of the Series of Shows Arranged Under the Direct Influence of Sir Alfred East Has Pathetic Interest, Containing Portrait of Late President.

(Special Dispatch.)

LONDON, Nov. 15.

THE autumn exhibition of the Royal Society of British Artists has a certain pathetic interest as the last of the series of shows arranged under the direct influence of Sir Alfred East. The effects of this influence have been very marked in the collections brought together by the society during the last few years. Whoever is chosen to fill the vacant presidency will find the British artists in a state very unlike that in which they were when Sir Alfred East undertook the direction of their affairs, but there will lie upon the new occupant of the post a very serious responsibility if he is to carry on efficiently the work of his predecessor.

The late president is represented in the exhibition by a landscape, "Glowing October," which shows quite at its best his noble sense of decorative arrangement and proves, too, what a wonderful instinct he had for the management of rich color harmonies and for the right application of technical devices. There is exhibited as well the portrait of himself recently painted for the Uffizi Gallery, a robust and characteristic piece of work which does much credit to his great capacities.

One of the most remarkable of the other canvases which give the show its special claim to attention is "The Forsland," by Mr. J. A. Mease Lomas, a picture extraordinarily arresting in its d[illegible] of design and its vivid suggestion of reality. It is wonderful in its brilliancy of illumination, its power of statement and its emphatic originality of manner, and it makes a claim for attention which cannot be resisted. Memorable, again, is the poetically arranged composition—a magnificent piece of color combination—"The Glory of the Day," by Mr F. I' Footitt; and of especial interest are the largely treated landscape, "The Wood Between the Vale and the Hill," by Mr. Alfred Hartley; the serious and expressive picture, "The Avenue, Rous Common," by Mr Burroughs-Fowler, "The Trysting Tree" by Mr. W. Graham Robertson; "In Sardonia," by Mr. W. [illegible]y Manning, and "The Weald of Sussex," by Mr. D. Murray Smith.

Mr. R. Gutekunst's winter exhibition, at No. 10 Grafton street, contains splendid examples of seven brilliant etchers—three of them alive, masters still in the making—Messrs. Zorn, Muirhead Bone and D. Y. Cameron. The past masters are Meryon, Whistler, Legros and Seymour Haden, and they are represented by some of their rarer and most important plates. Meryon by superb first states of "Tourelle, rue de la Tixeranderie," "La Pompe Notre Dame," "Le Pont au Change" and "St. Etienne du Mont."

There is a remarkable impression of "Les Bûcherons," by Legros, and strong prints of Seymour Haden's "Mounta Bay," "A Sunset in Ireland," first state, and a second state of "Battersea Bridge."

By Whistler there are early plates like the charming "Liverdun," "La Mère Gerard," "The Music Room," with its suggestion of Zorn, and "Annie," the very scarce first state, and of a later and more perfect period are "The Trachetio" and "The Mast." Two of the finest lithographs, "Lady Haden" and "The Long Gallery," help greatly to an appreciation of his genius.

Few unrecorded plates stand in the name of the living men, who, meantime, have nothing new in thought or execution to communicate. They are at their very best, however, in what they do offer. Mr. Zorn's "The Seaward Skerries" admirably displays his massive sense of form under the influence of light and air; Mr. Bone's "Ayr Beach" is distinguished in austerity of line and feeling, and Mr. Cameron's "Nithsdale" adds one more notable plate to his work.

Duke of Grafton, Equerry to Three Sovereigns, a Wonderful Man in Peerage.

(Special Dispatch.)

LONDON, Nov. 15.

ONE of the most wonderful men in the peerage is the Duke of Grafton, who despite his ninety-two years gets about the country in remarkable fashion. He has just taken to automobiling. He has been equerry (active and honorary) to three sovereigns, Queen Victoria, King Edward VII and King George. His memories would form an interesting light on the early days of the nineteenth century.

Ragtime Craze Seizes London

America Furnishes Much of the Supply, but English Composers Are Now Writing It.

(Special Dispatch.)

LONDON, Nov. 15.

RAGTIME is far from being dead in London. In fact, the craze, as it is called, looks as if it were only beginning. Pantomime producers are now busy preparing their annuals for Boxing Day, now less than two months distant, and they are to carry on the ragtime craze in pretty active fashion. So say the principal song publishers of London, at any rate.

"Ragtime will certainly be rampant," was the remark of Mr. Lester Barrett, who looks to the pantomime department at Messrs. Francis, Day & Hunter's. "I think that English writers have come out fairly well against American competition, but I have to admit that our chief song is an importation from America.

"The principal numbers in pantomime are taken each year from the 'winners,' or successes, of the music hall stage, and the particular number to which I refer, 'You Made Me Love You,' is a winner of no ordinary sort. It has been sung everywhere by all the 'topliners.'

"Our fairy-love ballad is, 'If I Could Only Make You Care,' a typical composition of very well sweetened sentiment, such as the masses love. A promising number as a 'feature' or 'picture' song—that is, a song which lends itself to spectacular setting—is 'Oh, I Do Love You, My Orange Girl.' Another that lends itself to all sorts of exploitation—darkened scenes and Mexican atmospheres—is 'The Trail of the Lonesome Pine.' In the ragtime department is 'Down in Dear Old Orleans,' which I should describe as a very near relation of 'Waiting for the Robert E. Lee.'"

The tale at Messrs. B. Feldman & Co.'s establishment was more of ragtime than any other, if 'Wintertime' is excepted.

"Many of the pantomime numbers will be taken from the popular revues, such as 'The Wedding Glide,' in which Miss Shirley Kellogg and Mr. O. P. Heggie made so great a success at the Hippodrome, and from the London Opera House we have obtained, to our profit, 'Take Me in Your Arms.' 'The Midnight Choo-Choo' and 'My Little Persian Rose,' the pretty boat song, sung by Oscar Schwarz and Miss Perle Barti, all of which are being snapped up by the leading pantomime [illegible]. 'Snooky-Ookums' is another of our lucky acquisitions, while there is a very big demand for Mark Sheridan's 'What a Game it Is—Wow-Wow!'"

Science Detects Art Forgeries

Dr. A. P. Laurie Reveals Fraudulent "Old Masters" by Means of Micro-Photography.

(Special Dispatch.)

LONDON, Nov. 15.

DR. A. P. LAURIE, president of the Heriot-Watt College, Edinburgh, and Professor of Chemistry to the Royal Academy, is in London in connection with the researches he has been conducting into the authenticity of pictures by old masters by means of micro-photography.

His investigations into the history of pigments led him to the belief that forgeries of old masters might be detected by the identification of character in brush work as revealed by the microscope.

He has designed a special camera called the micro-camera, with which he has been to the principal galleries in London, Edinburgh, Amsterdam and The Hague, and has photographed portions of famous pictures magnified in size up to six diameters. He believes that just as the fraudulent signature on a check can be detected by magnifying and photographing it, so the brush work of a copyist of some great painting can be revealed in the same way.

The picture in the National Gallery called "The Old Grey Hunter," by Paul Potter, has recently had doubts cast upon it by Dr Bredius, who is inclined to ascribe it to Verbeecque. Dr. Laurie has photographed the horse's head in this picture and has compared the result with photographs he has taken of pictures by Paul Potter in Amsterdam and at The Hague, of which there is no doubt.

His conclusion is that the main part of "The Old Grey Hunter" is by Verbeecque, but that the horse was put in by another artist copying Paul Potter.

"In order to be quite certain of the character of brush work," he says, "a very large number of micro-photographs must be taken on one artist's work covering various periods of his career. I have obtained records from the 'Spanish Admiral' and 'Philip of Spain' in the National Gallery, and the unconscious character of the brush work in both cases leaves no doubt whatever that both are by Velasques.

"I have photographed in the Edinburgh National Gallery the 'Fête Champêtre,' by Watteau, side by side with a splendid copy of the picture by a modern artist. Under the searching eye of the micro-camera the copy, which could scarcely be detected from the original by the naked eye, fell all to pieces and showed itself for what it was.

"Just as the forger of a check must build up a signature laboriously, so the copyist of a picture must proceed, and it is just the difference between the halting steps of the plagiarist and the free movements of the master that the photographs reveal."

Dr. Laurie has obtained records of brush work from pictures by Mabuse, Titian, Vandyck, Hals, Rembrandt, Teniers, Watteau, Paul Potter, Crome, Constable, Velasques (real or supposed), and many painters of the modern school of landscape art.

"I have come to the conclusion," went on Dr. Laurie, "that the hand of a master puts in more than the eye can see. He puts in touches more accurately than he knows. The copyist cannot do this, and under the microscope he is exposed at once. I have photographed a set of eyes, the eyes painted by Rembrandt, Titian, Vandyck and Hals, and all reveal character—not merely small, inessential details—which could not be seen by the naked eye."

Already the new method has been instrumental in proving a forgery of a Teniers and another of a Wouverman, in a private collection. The professor intends visiting Amsterdam and Madrid shortly in pursuit of other records. Artists whose work is detailed and the draughtsmanship definite are the best subjects in micro-photographic methods of examination, and Dr. Laurie thinks that parts of the pictures which show casual touches are the best for exemplification of character.

A micro-photograph of the brush work of a picture of doubtful authenticity laid on a table with half a dozen others of which no doubt exists would, Dr. Laurie thinks, be too great an ordeal for the most skilful forgery to endure.

LEARN TO PLAY GOLF IN SIX MONTHS

Member of Well Known Club Can Drive 270 Yards and Has Score of 84.

(Special Dispatch.)

LONDON, Nov. 15.

HOW long does it take to become a golfer? is a question often asked these days, when about a quarter of the English middle classes is applying itself to that form of exercise. It has been answered in a very remarkable manner by a member of a well known club near London, who in six months has worked down to a handicap of ten.

His progress is exciting a great deal of discussion among London golfers, for it had many unusual points. He began golf with a month's hard practice of swings, without going out on the course at all. When he started to play he returned cards in the first fortnight which gave him an 18 handicap. After a month this was reduced to 16. He has since been brought down to 10. He frequently drives over 270 yards, and goes around the course (which has a bogey of 75) in 84. His success is making many professionals reconsider their method of teaching golf.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

Dr. Burleson Arrives

A Very Natural Mistake

By CLARISSA MACKIE

Dr. Allen came into the living room, drawing on his driving gloves. He was an elderly man, hard driven by an extensive country practice, which he was about to share with an assistant from the city.

"I am called over to Ridgewood, Molly," he said to his plump little wife. "There's to be a consultation on the Travers case. Brown has telephoned for me. I may not return until late this evening."

"Oh, dear!" sighed Mrs. Allen. "That is awkward—just when you are expecting Dr. Burleson. But he may not come today."

"I'm expecting a telegram any moment. He said he would wire just before he left. You have a room for him, dear?"

"Oh, yes, the chimney room. It's so cozy on these October evenings."

Della Allen looked up from her sewing with a mischievous smile crinkling her lips.

"Mother is spoiling him, dad, dear. She has hung new curtains in the chimney room, and she has picked out all the prettiest worked slippers and necktie holders and shaving paper

"THEY TELL ME YOU ARE FROM ALLEN'S."

bulls that your lady invalids shower on you at Christmas and has adorned his room with them. Now, mother, you know you have!"

Father and daughter laughed tenderly at the embarrassment of the dear little woman, who murmured something about "refined young men far away from their homes."

"Here comes Peter with the carriage," announced Della from the window, and she flew to tuck his medicine case into the buggy and receive his farewell kiss.

It was an hour later that the expected telegram arrived.

Della smoothed out the message and read scornfully:

Meet me at 3:12 train. Save best room for me. BURLESON.

"Why—why, what a singular message!" faltered Mrs. Allen, all her exalted ideas of the new assistant crumbling to dust.

Della laughed. "Well, mother, of course I will meet him. He must be rather amusing, to say the least. We won't worry father about Dr. Burleson's eccentricities. He will be disappointed."

Della Allen, very straight and slim in her scarlet coat and gray skirt, with scarlet feather in her gray hat, drove Dandy to the railroad station to meet the 3:12 train. As the rubber tired runabout wheeled around to a standstill at the platform the train rushed in with a roar of escaping steam and a thunder of wheels on the rails.

Then a high pitched, rather disagreeable voice sounded at Della's elbow.

"They tell me you are from Allen's," said the voice sharply.

"Dr. Burleson?" she asked crisply.

"Yes."

Della turned the carriage, and Dr. Burleson tossed a heavy suit case in the back and climbed to a seat beside her.

They drove in silence for some time.

"How's the old man?" he asked after awhile.

Della stiffened.

"You mean my father, of course," she said coldly. "He is very well, thank you. He was called to Ridgewood this morning. Otherwise he would have met you himself."

"Every cloud has a silver lining," he said with a laugh that was extremely unpleasant to Della Allen.

Della thought of the dainty chimney room, and she wondered what her mother would think of the guest for whom she had made such thoughtful preparations.

Dandy turned in at the open gateway and stopped before the door of the wing where her father's office was situated.

Mrs. Allen came into the porch, cordially smiling.

"Here is Dr. Burleson, mother," said Della dryly as the new assistant went up the steps with his suit case in hand.

"I am very glad to see you," said Mrs. Allen, holding out her hand.

The physician gripped it in a large red paw.

"Pleased to meet you," he said rather awkwardly, and Della stared as he added in a businesslike tone: "I hope you saved a decent room for me. I wired Allen to that effect."

"I trust you will find it entirely comfortable," said Mrs. Allen haughtily, and she called Peter from the flower beds to conduct the doctor to his room.

Alone, the two women stared at each other.

"Mother, he will never do!" whispered Della.

"He is impossible," said Mrs. Allen with flashing eyes.

Della drove Dandy around to the barn and then returned to the house to find black Peter in earnest conversation with her mother. The old servitor was rubbing his woolly head in perplexity.

"Sho, Miss Molly, he am de contraptedest I eber seen," grumbled Peter. "Sez he, 'Bring me ice water, boy, an' is dey a drink in de house or am dis a temp'rance hotel?' an' when I tells him it ain't a saloon he asks, 'What kinds ranch am dis anyway?'"

Mrs. Allen's face was pale and red by turns.

"Is there anything else that Dr. Burleson wishes?" she asked.

"Yas'm, Miss Molly. Sez he, 'Take all dese yere dinglebats outer dis yere room,' an', yas'm, he flang all dese t'ings at my haid." Peter brought his hand from behind his back and displayed an orange colored shaving ball, a beribboned necktie holder, a fancy pincushion and a pair of worsted slippers.

"The man is intoxicated," said Della from the doorway, and just then Dr. Burleson's heavy step was heard in the hall. In a moment he appeared, looking at his watch.

"It's after 4, and I had a light lunch," he said briskly. "Just have cook fix up a steak for me. Some onions with it would go well. And a piece of apple pie, the kind mother used to make, eh? I'll go out to the stables and take a look at the horse." He nodded toward them, clapped his green hat on his head and left the house, sauntering slowly toward the barn.

Peter followed him, grumbling.

Mrs. Allen looked at Della and was about to speak when there came a ring at the doorbell.

Della answered it, looking singularly handsome, for her cheeks were flushed with anger and her eyes shining like stars.

On the doorstep stood a tall, slightly built young man, with eyeglasses astride his handsome nose. He was immaculately attired, and beside him on the porch were a leather suit case and a traveling bag.

"Dr. Allen?" he inquired, baring his head.

"I am sorry, but my father is away. He may not return until late this evening," returned Della. "Is there anything?"—

"I am Dr. Burleson," explained the newcomer calmly.

"Dr. Burleson!" shrieked Della. "Why—why, pardon me, but we have been entertaining Dr. Burleson. Oh, there must be some mistake. Do come in and see mother."

So Della hustled the astonished young man into the living room and introduced him to her mother.

"I knew there was some awful mistake," said Mrs. Allen quietly as she shook hands with him.

The new Dr. Burleson displayed a letter from Dr. Allen, which fully identified him as the new assistant. Still, there was the man at the barn whom Peter reported as making a careful examination of Dandy and who was behaving in a very rude manner.

"Suppose I go out and interview this gentleman," suggested Dr. Burleson.

When Dr. Burleson returned from the barn it was with a smiling request for the first Dr. Burleson's baggage.

"He asks me to apologize for a mistake," said the young doctor.

"Now, do tell us all about it," said Mrs. Allen after the new assistant had returned for the second time, having escorted Dr. Burleson to the top of the hill and directed him to his proper destination.

Dr. Burleson laughed pleasantly.

"It appears that your visitor has a right to his professional title, but he happens to be a veterinary surgeon. He was called here to treat an animal belonging to Hosea Allen, proprietor of some big boarding house. Perhaps you know of the place?"

"Oh, yes—over near the bay," responded Mrs. Allen.

"He had never been here before and was surprised to find the boarding house conducted on such a small scale it seems he wired Hosea Allen to have a room reserved for him, and at the station I believed he asked if there was a conveyance for Allen's, and they evidently pointed out your daughter."

"But your telegram?"

"My telegram? Oh, I never sent any, after all."

So the new assistant had a very informal introduction into his wife's family. Oh, yes, he fell in love with Della and married her, much to the delight of Dr. Allen and his wife. And Mrs. Allen often shudders and says:

"Just suppose the other Dr. Burleson had been the right one, Della!"

But Della only laughs and answers:

"Then you couldn't indulge in dingbats, mother, dear!"

WAS TROUBLED WITH BOILS AND CARBUNCLES.

There is no more frequent source of illness than that arising from bad blood, for when the blood becomes impure, it is only natural that boils, pimples or some other indication of bad blood should break out of the system.

Boils in themselves are not a dangerous trouble, but still at the same time are very painful, and the only way to get rid of them is to cleanse the blood of the impurities. Cleanse it thoroughly by the use of Burdock Blood Bitters, that old and reliable blood medicine that has been on the market for nearly forty years.

Mr. James Wilds, Plaster Rock, N.B., writes:—"I was greatly troubled, a few years ago, with boils and carbuncles, and the doctor told me I was in a bad condition. My appetite failed me, I began to lose strength, and was pretty well run down when one of my friends recommended Burdock Blood Bitters. After using three bottles I began to feel like another man. My troubles soon left me, and to-day I can certainly give Burdock Blood Bitters a high recommendation to my friends."

Stormy Cape Horn.

The waters of Cape Horn have never been unvisited by storms for more than a week or two at a stretch within the memory of man. Standing on the outposts of the world, Cape Horn is the meeting place of ocean currents of very different temperature, from the icy cold waters of the Antarctic drift to the warmth of the Brazilian and Peruvian return currents. The prevailing winds are from the northwest and west, and these, coming from the warm regions of the Pacific, condense into fogs, which the sailors call "Cape Horn blankets" and which are the forerunners of storms. The extremely low level to which the glaciers of Tierra del Fuego descend, the perpetual congelation of the subsoil, the meeting of conflicting winds at very different temperatures, are all direct or indirect causes combining to make this the most constantly stormy region of the world.

Old Age on the Stage.

Old age has often been most successfully represented on the stage by very youthful actors. Zabathiel Pary, a boy who died in his thirteenth year, was so admirable an actor of old men that Ben Jonson, in writing his epitaph, said, "The fates thought him one and therefore cut the thread of life." William Farren, who commenced his stage career at nineteen, gained the nickname of "Old Farren" on account of his specialization in the parts of the doting and decrepit. Miss Kate Terry, too, made her first stage appearance at the age of three to sing a character song as an old lady of ninety-five.—London Chronicle.

Darken Grey Hair, Look Young, Pretty

Sage Tea and Sulphur Darkens so Naturally That Nobody Can Tell

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural colour and lustre to the hair when faded, streaked or grey; also ends dandruff, itching scalp and stops falling hair. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is mussy and troublesome. Nowadays, by asking at any drug store for Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy," you will get a large bottle of this famous old recipe for about 50 cents.

Don't stay grey! Try it! No one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair taking one small strand at a time; by morning the grey hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, thick and glossy.

ESCAPED OPERATION FOR PILES

It is most disheartening to be told by your physician that nothing short of an operation will cure you of piles. The expense, the suffering, the risk, is too great, and so you endure the misery of this wretched ailment.

But why not be cured by Dr. Chase's Ointment. Relief is prompt, cure certain and lasting, when you use persistently this great soothing, healing ointment.

Mr. Mawer

Mr. J. Mawer, Roden, Man., writes: "Dr. Chase's Ointment is a wonderful preparation. I had itching piles for five or six years and though I tried two doctors' prescriptions and used many other preparations could not obtain much benefit. The doctor told me there was no cure for me, and that I would have to undergo an operation.

"I bought a box of Dr. Chase's Ointment and was completely cured in one week. As this was six months ago and there has been no return of the old trouble, I believe that the cure is a permanent one."

Dr. Chase's Ointment has a truly wonderful record of cures to back it up. Many cases of 10, 20, 30 years' standing have been cured by its use. 60 cents a box; all dealers. Sample box free, if you mention this paper. Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

WILD SHEEP OF NOVA SCOTIA.

As Sure Footed as Antelopes and as Vigilant as Chamois.

Was the ordinary domestic sheep the original beach comber? Was it intended to browse upon seaweeds and the tangled flotsam of the ocean? These questions are suggested by conditions on the east coast of the Province of Nova Scotia.

Here is an archipelago of thousands of isles, wooded and rocky, their vegetation telling of the warmth the waters of the sea have snatched from the Gulf Stream. Four hundred years ago the hardy French voyagers who first settled this part of Canada hailed these pretty islands with delight. They settled there before they would trust themselves upon the mainland, and there they turned out their live stock—Shaggy Breton ponies, hardy little Jersey-like cows and lanky sheep.

The sheep thrived where the cattle and the horses found the problem of existing difficult. Soon they paddled in the shallow waters of the outgoing tide in their desire to catch at the floating eel grass and bulbous kelp. Then the discovery came that swimming was not beyond their powers, and they need not remain prisoners on single islands when there were scores of others for them to visit.

So it came about that they peopled numbers of the islands, and straggling along the whole coast line became no man's flocks, having returned to a pristine wildness. Their former owners drifted inland and after some years the islands were left to their old-time solitude. The sheep could not be reclaimed and were left to their own devices.

So it comes about that in Nova Scotia, especially in Guysboro county, there is to-day a breed of big sheep loaded down with heavy wool of as many years' growth as they are old, perfectly wild, living on the sea coast. Swift on their feet they are as alert to danger as their cousins, the mountain sheep of the Pacific coast. They jump from cliffs to considerable height, trusting to their heavy fleece to save their bones from harm. They are ready on the instant to plunge into the waves and swim off to safety.

They are sure-footed as antelopes, vigilant as chamois. This, too, despite the fact that they are always rolling in fat.

They are partly carnivorous, these sheep of the sea coast. At least an observant watcher will notice that they nose away at the soft spots of the beach after eel worms and mussels, and chewed clam shells are commonly to be met with on their pastures. But their regular food is dulse, eel grass and kelp.

In the winter they are apt to suffer. The spray dashes into the fleece and freezes there in cold weather. All along the high water mark the sea walls of ice form. Many sheep are drowned here while feeding on sea weed. Were it not for the dangers of the winter season the sheep would become exceedingly numerous, for they breed quickly and not very many of them fall before the hunters.

Wagner's Second Marriage.

The Paris Weekly Revue related from letters hitherto unpublished the exciting story of Wagner's second marriage. All the world knows that he married, after the necessary divorce, the wife of Hans von Bulow, but all the world does not know that there was a rival applicant for his heart and hand. This was Malwine Schnorr, the singer who had just created the part of Isolde in his "Tristan," and the cause of Malwine Schnorr was championed by another artiste named Isidore de Reuter, who announced herself as a prophetess, charged with a divine message to the musician. The message was to the effect that Wagner must marry Malwine and must at the same time persuade the king of Bavaria to marry Isidore herself. Wagner tells the story of his embarrassment in a letter to his friend, Auguste Roecker, and it appears that he only succeeded in peacefully marrying the lady of his choice after the king had, at her request, expelled the two other ladies from his dominions.

How Potatoes Can Multiply.

A lady in Oakville has been conducting some interesting experiments with potatoes. The year before last she discovered a large potato weighing a pound, which boasted 13 good eyes. The next winter she cut the eyes out and planted them in strawberry quart baskets, keeping watch over them. In the spring time these were planted, being enough to make five hills, which, when cultivated, brought forth enough seed to plant 26 hills this spring. The 26 hills finally produced 208 potatoes, weighing 56 pounds.

An Absolute Vacuum.

Q.—When a bottle of milk is emptied it contains air; when the air is pumped out there is a vacuum. My friends cannot tell what is in the bottle. Can you explain?

A.—But the air cannot be entirely pumped out. Humane so far have not secured an absolute vacuum. If they could, then the bottle by some is supposed to contain ether. But the existence of ether has not been proved. And then the bottle might contain three or four septillions free electrons, all beyond human research to discover.—Edgar Lucien Larkin in New York American.

TO DEMAND RENEGADES.

U. S. Sends General Scott To Deal With the Navajos.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 19.—In the hope that the excited Navajo Indians who are now defying the Government authorities at Beautiful Mountain, New Mexico, may be induced to yield peaceably and surrender the eight renegades whose arrest is sought, the War Department yesterday ordered Gen. Hugh L. Scott, commanding the second cavalry brigade, at Fort Bliss, Texas, to proceed in haste to the Navajo agency to confer with the Indian chiefs.

Gen. Scott is singularly influential with the Navajos, whose language he speaks. He has always been regarded by them as their best friend and it is believed that he will be able to placate them.

The general's instructions are to confer with Major McLaughlin, the Indian agent, before beginning his conference. In order to make a show of force orders were despatched to Fort Robinson, Neb., to entrain and despatch to the Navajo agency a full squadron of the 12th Cavalry to serve as Gen. Scott's escort.

Schmidt on Trial To-day.

NEW YORK, Nov. 19. — Hans Schmidt, the priest who confessed to killing Anna Aumuller, a young German girl he had married by a self-performed ceremony, and afterwards dismembering her body and throwing it into the Hudson river, was placed on trial to-day before Judge Foster in the General Sessions Court. Insanity will be Schmidt's defence.

Turns Flips With a Passenger.

BUC, France, Nov. 19.—Maurice Chevillard, a French aviator, established a new record yesterday for turning somersaults in the air by carrying a passenger in his machine. He accomplished an aerial loop twice in brilliant fashion, going through the performance apparently with as much ease as if he were alone.

Britain Has Aeroplane Gun.

NEW YORK, Nov. 19.—A cable from London to The Herald says:—Great Britain has acquired what the War Office considers the ideal aeroplane gun. It is the latest model of the air, the cooled, gas-operated Lewis rifle, already experimented with by the United States army.

Firing upward of one thousand shots a minute, it is to be made a weapon of offence for aeroplanes in the British service. An unofficial test of the new gun is to be made at Bisley range on Nov. 27.

Then if you overeat, or eat something that disagrees with you as the most careful person will sometimes, one or two of these tablets will restore normal conditions in your stomach in a very few minutes.

"I Am Going to Enjoy This Meal For I Have a Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablet in My Vest Pocket."

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are nothing more than a concentrated form of the natural secretions which the stomach employs in digesting food. And Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets merely step in when the stomach is too tired or too sluggish to perform its functions properly and supply a sufficient quantity of these digestive ferments to digest completely all food, under either acid or alkaline conditions, in the stomach.

It has long been known that the various digestive ferments could be produced as perfectly in the laboratory as in the stomach, but Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are the first attempt outside of certain hospitals, to utilize these discoveries for the benefit of sufferers from indigestion and kindred complaints.

The perfect freedom to eat what you please and as much as you please which Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets gives, has won it thousands of friends who make it a constant, vest pocket companion. Join to-day the vast army of people who have declared their independence of stomach worries. You can get a 50c box of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets from any druggist.

Up to Date Milkman.

"What are you giving your cows now in the way of galactagogues?" asked the Irvington professor of the milkman.

"Oh," said the milkman, who has just been graduated from Purdue and is not to be stumped by any Butler college pedagogue, "their sustenance is chiefly of vegetable origin, rich in chlorophyl and opulent in butyraceous qualities."

"A pint, if you please," said the professor.

"Git up," said the milkman.—Indianapolis News.

The Speaker.

It was his power of protesting that in the first place gave the speaker of the British house of commons his name. For the early members were not great at oratory and soon realized the desirability of choosing a spokesman with a ready tongue and the courage to argue with the king. Hence came the title of "speaker," which was first given to Sir Thomas Hungerford in 1376.

Fairies.

'PHONED ACROSS OCEAN?

Story of Marconi's Feat Is Denied a Loudburg.

LONDON, Nov. 19. — Guglielmo Marconi, wizard of the wireless, talked by wireless telephony for half an hour across the Atlantic from Ireland to Cape Breton, approximately 3,100 miles, according to yesterday's Daily Mail.

Story Discredited.

She Saw Sir John.

It is told of Sir John A. Macdonald that in 1878 he was holding a campaign rally in the village of Gorrie, Ont. Of course a great crowd was present to hear the Conservative leader, and when he entered the building there was a terrific crush of people trying to see him. In the throng was a woman with an infant. She was struggling desperately to get to the front, and in her excitement she cried out:

"I will see Sir John!"

In a moment he was at her side and the pride of the mother can be better imagined than described when he seized the baby and held it in his arms like a fond uncle.

It was incidents such as these that accounted for the tremendous hold upon the affections of the people possessed by Sir John A Macdonald.

Perjury Penalties.

Perjury, besides being one of the oldest of offenses in the catalogue of crime, has always been very severely punished. In the days of the Roman empire any one who committed perjury was thrown from a precipice, while the Greeks branded their false swearers. It is interesting to note that when the latter embraced the Christian religion the punishment was altered to that of having the tongue cut out, a sort of punishment which was considered to fit the crime in the early centuries. In the middle ages some countries adopted the system of giving the perjurer the punishment for the crime he falsely accused another of. Thus if he swore a neighbor had committed murder and the charge was disproved the perjurer would be sentenced to death, and the other penalties of the penal code were exacted for the particular crime alleged.

WHAT DYSPEPTICS SHOULD EAT

A PHYSICIAN'S ADVICE.

"Indigestion and practically all forms of stomach trouble are, nine times out of ten, due to acidity; therefore stomach sufferers should, whenever possible, avoid eating food that is acid in its nature, or which by chemical action in the stomach develops acidity. Unfortunately, such a rule eliminates most foods which are pleasant to the taste as well as those which are rich in blood, flesh and nerve building properties. This is the reason why dyspeptics and stomach sufferers are usually so thin, emaciated and looking in that vitel energy which can only come from a well-fed body. For the benefit of those sufferers who have been obliged to exclude from their diet all starchy, sweet or fatty food, and are trying to keep up a miserable existence on gluten products I would suggest that you should try a meal of any food or foods which you may like, in moderate amount, taking immediately afterwards a teaspoonful of bisurated magnesia in a little hot or cold water. This will neutralise any acid which may be present, or which may be formed, and instead of the usual feeling of uneasiness and fullness, you will find that your food agrees with you perfectly. Bisurated magnesia is doubtless the best food corrective and antacid known. It is not a medicine, and has no direct action on the stomach; but by neutralising the acidity of the food contents, and thus removing the source of the acid irritation which inflames the delicate stomach lining, it does more than could possibly be done by any drug or medicine. As a physician I believe in the use of medicine whenever necessary, but I must admit that I cannot see the sense of dosing an inflamed and irritated stomach with drugs instead of getting rid of the acid—the cause of all the trouble. Get a little bisurated magnesia from your druggist, eat what you want at your next meal, take some of the bisurated magnesia as directed above, and see if I'm not right."

D. D. D. IN HOSPITALS STANDARD SKIN CURE

How many hospital patients, suffering the frightful itch, the raw scorching pain of skin disease, have been soothed to sleep by a soothing fluid washed in by the nurse's hands?

That fluid is the famous D. D. D. prescription for eczema.

THE SUPERVISING NURSE of one of our prominent Catholic institutions (name of nurse and institute on application), writes regarding a patient. "The disease had eaten her eyebrows away. Her nose and lips had become disfigured. Since the use of D. D. D. her eyebrows are growing, her nose and face have assumed their natural expression."

How many eczema sufferers are paying their doctors for regular treatment and are being treated with this same soothing fluid?

DR. GEO. T. RICHARDSON frankly writes "D. D. D. is superior to anything I have ever found. Soft and soothing, yet a powerful agent."

To do the work, D. D. D. Prescription must be applied according to directions given in the pamphlet around every bottle. Follow these directions—and see!

And it certainly takes away the itch at once—the moment the liquid is applied. The skin is soothed—delightfully cooled.

All druggists of standing have the famous specific as well as the efficient D. D. D. Skin Soap.

But we are so confident of the merits of this prescription that we will refund the purchase price of the first full size bottle if it fails to reach your case. You alone are to judge. McDermid & Jury, E. L. Payne, Peterborough.

CREW OF SUPER-DREADNOUGHT "IRON DUKE" RESCUE TWENTY-SEVEN FROM BURNING SHIP

Alarm Was Given by Wireless and Gallant Tars Put Out in Boats in a Raging Sea, Arriving Just in Time.

ANOTHER RESCUE MADE

Special to the Examiner.

PORTSMOUTH, Eng., Nov. 19.—Another brilliant rescue as the result of wireless was accomplished when the British super-Dreadnought, Iron Duke, arrived here to-day with twenty-seven survivors of the Glasgow steamer Scotsdyke, which burned to water's edge in the English Channel shortly after midnight. The British tars put out in boats in the raging sea and took the crew off the Scotsdyke just before she went down.

Another Rescue.

NEW YORK, N.Y., Nov. 19.—The Cunard liner "Pannancau" this morning arrived here with a hundred passengers from the Spanish liner Balmes which was burned at sea. The Cunard line, which also rescued passengers from the Titanic and Vulturno is beginning to be known as the "Rescue line."

"The Pretty Little Beggar"

"Experience" Calls Attention of Women's Council to an Editorial

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Dear Sir,—Having regard to recent discussions on the immoral condition of our City and the causes leading to it, I ask the Examiner to kindly publish the following editorial article, taken from the Ladies' Home Journal of November:

An every-day American father, whose business kept him home a great deal, overheard his pretty seventeen-year-old daughter consenting to give a solo dance at a charity kermis. He had been worried, in his infrequent glimpses of her during the last year, to note a growing restlessness and craving for excitement, and he now ventured to remonstrate with his wife for her easy permission, on the grounds of the girl's youth and school work. He learned that "charity" had been the magic blinding word.

He learned some other things, too. He heard for the first time of the distinctly "progressive" method of the various women's organizations devoted to the cultural and charitable welfare of their up-to-date little city. There had been "tag day" for the library; and his pretty little daughter had been much in demand. There was the day the young girls, in their jaunty autumn suits, had sold chrysanthemums on the streets for the hospital; and his pretty little daughter had won the prize for the largest sales. There was the woman's edition of the evening paper for the benefit of the Settlement; and it was the young girls who had been detailed to solicit advertisements, block by block; his pretty little daughter had been given a congested block, and for her successful efforts had won the expansive approval of THE Mrs. White, the acknowledged social leader. And it was THE Mrs. White who had "so depended on" his pretty little daughter to make a financial triumph of the candy booth at the bazaar held recently for the tuberculosis fund.

Then, from another source, he heard his little daughter spoken of as "that pretty little beggar." The father's foot came peremptorily down, and from that time on he saw to it that she was kept away from the wiles of the criminally thoughtless women who, in the name of charity, publicly exploit the charm and freshness of the unsophisticated young girl. Isn't it time for mothers frankly to realize that this is just what it means?

Frequent participation in public entertainments by children tends to restlessness and conceit, rather than good manners or culture. It furthermore interferes with the success of school work, injures their health and breaks up the evening family circle. Late hours, excitement and impure air are inseparable from rehearsals and performances.

We are told that the local Council of Women has a membership of 500, and that the aim of the Society is the further advancement of the higher interests of women and children. I beg leave to commend the foregoing article to the consideration of women, especially those of the Council. With this important matter women can deal without votes, laws, deputations or platform efforts, or any fear of adverse criticism.

Yours truly,

Experience.

PROBABILITIES.

WERE FINED FIVE DOLLARS

Men Alleged to be Transient Traders Convicted by County Police Magistrate Edmison

BREACH OF THE BY-LAW

Charles Calder and George Barr were each fined five dollars and costs by County Police Magistrate Edmison, for a breach of the transient trades by-law, No. 329, as adopted in Norwood. The costs in each case will amount to a little over three dollars. It is alleged that the defendants were transient traders without a license, and they had purchased baled hay at wholesale prices and retailed it in Norwood, contrary to the by-law.

Were Non-Residents.

The defendants admitted that they were non-residents of the village. The information was served by County Constable Puffer.

It is understood that the Retail Merchants Association will press for the prosecution of a number of parties, who are said to be committing a similar offence in Peterborough and County.

HAD GRAND TIME GOT MANY DEER

Shawanaga Camp Proved a Most Enjoyable One and Members Returned Delighted With Their Outing and Its Results.

GOT TWENTY DEER.

Talking about hunting parties, there is one group who claim to have had the happiest family that was ever gathered together, the best line of good clean fund, and unexcelled luck on the trails. That's the Shawanaga party who returned a few days ago from the Parry Sound district with twenty deer, the limit allowed by the law.

During the first week out the deer market was at its lowest level. There were but few animals in sight and the luck was breaking badly, but during the second week stocks soared away up, and everybody was elated. The weather was fine except for a week ago Sunday, when the big storm hit the camp about noon and waged fiercely throughout the day. No one was out on that day, however, and it made but little difference.

One of the members of the party was Mr. Larry Steele of Lakefield, the oldest boy in the gathering. Mr. Steele is about 80 years, and none of his juniors had more of "the old pepper," to use a baseball expression, than he. Mr. Jas. Connal conducted himself like a veteran, and was as cool as any of the party. Mr. Leger Letellier and Mr. J. B. O'Dette added fun and good spirits, and Mr. Charlie Gladman, captain, was always on the job. Among the members were Messrs. Gladman, Connal, Dickson Best, Martin McFadden, Larry Steele, J. A. Morrow, of Perry Sound, J. B. O'Dette, Leger Letellier, Jack Loucks, John Bradley, Norman Bradley, Arthur Carpenter, Peter A. Kerr, B. Lillia, of Toronto, George Metcalf, Chas and Albert Curtis, J. M. Brooks, Jos. Pentland and Ben. Wilson. Mr. Wilson performed the duties of chef in fine style. It is stated that Mr. Brooks was the best still hunter of the camp. His methods would make the aborigines envious.

Nine of the deer were brought home, eight were left in Toronto and three eaten in camp.

The Nichols hunting party have returned from Deer Lake, at the head of Eagle Lake. There were six in the party, and they secured as a trophy of the hunt six fine deer. They went north for the opening of the season and returned to the City on Monday.

BRITISH MEN-OF-WAR LEAVE FOR VERA CRUZ

Special Wire to The Examiner.

LONDON, Eng., Nov. 19.—Under orders from the British Admiralty at midnight, three British cruisers, the Berwick, Suffolk and Lancaster, stationed at Barbadoes, West Indies, left at daybreak for Vera Cruez, Mexico, under Rear Admiral Sir Christopher Cradock. It is understood, here, that the wholesale execution of the government supporters by the Constitutionalists, under Carranza, have developed serious complications and the despatch of British ships is the result of a conference between the British and United States Governments.

Knew Rev. Dr. Ross Intimately

Rev. H. J. Keith was greatly shocked to-day when he read of the tragic death in New York of Rev. Dr. Ross, Pastor of the St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, London. Rev. Dr. Ross was knocked down and killed by an automobile. He was formerly Professor of Practical Theology at the Presbyterian College in Montreal which Rev. Mr. Keith attended.

MRS. WELLS' LECTURE ON THURSDAY NIGHT

His Worship Mayor Bradburn will preside at the lecture to be given in the Assembly Hall of the Collegiate Institute on Thursday evening of this week, by Mrs. Alice Stebbins Wells, police woman of Los Angeles. The Chancellor of Pittsburg has the following to say respecting an address given by Mrs. Wells in that city in January last:

University of Pittsburg, Jan., 1913.

My Dear Mrs. Wells,—I wish to express my appreciation of the address you delivered last night. It was most able, forceful, effective and convincing. The audience was delighted and instructed. The subject you presented is fundamental to the social well being. You presented it in such a way, as at once to disarm criticism and compel attention. The address cannot fail to bring forth good results in Pittsburg, and I hope you may be able to sow seed in a great number of municipalities before you return to your home. With kindest regards.

Yours very sincerely,

S. B. McCORMICK,

Chancellor.

TORONTO STOCK MARKET

Special Cable to The Examiner:

TORONTO, Nov. 19.—Market was steady, receipts fair, and prices upwards. Export cattle and sheep steady, spring lambs, $7.85 to $8.15. Hogs, fed and watered, $8.75; off cars $9.

WILL BE TRIED MONDAY MORNING

The four young men, who, the police charge, were playing a game of poker on Sunday afternoon last, will come up for trial on Monday next.

The young men in question will be charged with a breach of the Lord's Day Act. It will be remembered that P. C. Reid and Sills raided a George Street office last Sunday, because a number of young men inside were suspected of playing poker. Their names were taken and the case will be thrashed out on Monday net.

DEMANDS REFUSED

Special Cable to The Examiner:

LONDON, Nov. 19.—The demand of one hundred thousand employees of the British post office for higher pay was rejected to-day by the Right Hon. Herbert Samuel, Postmaster-General. He pointed out that their demand for an increase of fifteen per cent. on their wages meant the expenditure by the British Govrnment of $12,000,000 more each year, and would necessitate the imposition of new taxation. The members of the deputation who were clearly dissatisfied, said they would have to refer th Postmaster General's decision to the Men's Union. A general strike is threatened.

Beautiful Audrey Maple With "The Dream Maiden" at the Grand To-night

"Jim" Larkin, leader of Dublin strikers.—As he is now and before he shaved his moustache. The most distressful country is at the present moment living up to its reputation in a very terrible way, and widespread distress in Dublin's fair city is bringing ruin and starvation to a thousand homes. Above we see the man whose fiery eloquence and dominating personality have held the mob together in some sort of order. Larkin has hitherto held a wonderful ascendancy over the men, and his prosecution and seven months' sentence for incitement and sedition is likely to cause some stirring scenes, notwithstanding the fact that he has detached the sympathy of the Irish priests. The Government has now freed Larkin, and he will likely be heard from with renewed vigour.

PRESENTATION OF PRIZES TO BOWLERS

Brinton Carpet Company Bowlers Held a Concert to Commemorate the Close of Bowling Season

THE CUP WINNERS

The Lawn Bowlers of the Brinton Carpet Company concluded a most successful and enjoyable season with a concert on Tuesday evening, during which three silver cups were presented to the winners of the singles, doubles and fours competitions. The latter were contested during the summer on the green prepared by the Company for its employees.

The extent to which the members entered into the game was shown by the fact that sixteen rinks played off for the President's Cup, which means that sixty-four men entered into the sport. The men showed their appreciation of the Company's interest by taking full advantage of the green, the cost being borne by the Company.

The concert was held in the shipping department of the Brinton Carpet Company. The room was beautifully decorated for the occasion and Mr. A. Barton presided. The eleven-piece orchestra, which provided the music, rendered excellent service.

The presentation of the trophies was made by Miss Lillian Hall, in the absence of Mr. G. R. Copping, of Toronto, President of the Company.

The Prizewinners.

The three cups are handsome trophies and are indicative of the general equipment provided for the employees in their athletic departments. Mr. G. R. Copping donated the Cup for the fours, composed of Messrs. H. G. Rew, T. Williams, T. Carrol and R. Black. The Managers' Cup, donated by Mr. Ivor Brock, is for the doubles, and goes to Mr. E. Stansfield, and the singles was won by Mr. J. W. Cooper, who won the Directors' Cup, donated by Mr. C. B. Gordon of Montreal.

An enjoyable musical programme was rendered, after which refreshments were served. Among those who contributed to the evening's entertainment were the Misses L. D. Hanson, Messrs. I. Brock, T. Williamson, W. Fair, E. Bartley, Mr. Customs, F. Yarrington, G. Lee, H. Bayes and others.

Mr. Ivor Brock was unavoidably absent. The evening was brought to a conclusion by the rendition of the National Anthem.

TWO HARVEY TOWNSHIP MEN WERE FINED

By County Police Magistrate Edmison for Common Assault

COSTS EXCEED FINE

Peter Graham and George Brownlow, farmer and hired man, respectively, of Harvey Township, were each fined five dollars and costs for common assault. The men were convicted by County Police Magistrate Edmison.

Charles Krager, who instituted the prosecution, charged the defendants with assaulting him, and using abusive language.

Second Charge Dismissed.

The alleged offence which occurred on Thanksgiving Day, arose out of a dispute concerning a couple of colts, which were impounded by Krager. Thed efendant at the time of the alleged assault, was driving a milk-waggon, when it is alleged that the defendants attacked him. The row terminated at the Harvey cheese factory. A second charge of using grossly insulting language in a public place was also preferred against Graham, but was dismissed by Magistrate Edmison.

The costs in each case will exceed the fine. Brownlow is assessed with costs amounting to $13.36, making a total with fine of $18.36. Graham's fine and costs total $24.71.

Special Services In Knox Curch

This in brief is the experience of Miss Jessie McNab, who is assisting in the special services in Knox Church this week. Trained in Toronto and New York, she spent many years in concert tours and operatic singing. But as time went on she felt the desire to lift up her audiences instead of merely pleasing them. Dissatisfaction with her efforts reached a climax when she listened one evening to a brief message in Yonge Street Mission. She went to her home to fight the question out, and after a sleepless night left the stage and concert hall to give herself to evangelistic singing.

She has felt a special attraction for work in the prisons and asylums, and has had some wonderful experiences in these institutions. She opened her grounds last summer and fall to open air services, and these were largely attended. She is looking forward to a round the-world trip for services of Gospel song. She has a very powerful voice, but behind it is a whole souled person in love with her work anxious to be of service.

COLD STORAGE CO. CLAIM CONTRACT WAS BROKEN

Local Company Plaintiffs in Non-Jury Action With Toronto Commission Man—1500 Cases of Eggs Contracted For But Only 900 Accepted.

LOST MONEY ON RE-SALE

Defendant Claims Eggs Were Not of Good Quality and He Lost Customers.

COUNTER CLAIM OF $2,500

The Peterborough Cold Storage Company, Limited, are plaintiffs in a case that will be heard by Mr. Justice Middleton in the non-jury sittings of the High Court on Tuesday next. John Hawley, wholesale provision and commission merchant, of Toronto, is the defendant.

The plaintiff, Mr. Scott, proprietor of the company, claims that on October 4, 1912, following a request from Hawley, he offered to sell him 1,500 cases of best selected eggs, candled out of storage and shipped as required up to the 15th of January at 27½c a doz., f.o.b. on cars at Peterborough, the empty cases to be returned at the plaintiff's expense, the offer to remain open until the following Monday, and to be accepted by telegram.

900 CASES SHIPPED.

On October 7, defendant accepted by telegram, and between October 18, 912, and February 26, 1913, received from the plaintiff 900 cases at a total cost of $7,424.16. Defendant paid for the same by cheques and drafts up to March 8th.

REFUSED REMAINDER.

Hawley refused to accept the remaining 600 cases and pay the amount of $4,950 for them. Plaintiff was always ready and willing to deliver them. Plaintiff then resold them and received $2,970.23 as follows:—

75 cases (2,250 doz.) at 24c a doz. ..... $ 540 00
525 cases (15,750 doz.) at 16c a doz. $2430 00

and therefore lost $1,979.77 on the resale.

Plaintiff claims this amount with interest from March 28, 1913, at 5 per cent., and costs of the action.

STATEMENT OF DEFENCE.

Mr. Hawley admits the acceptance of the original offer, and the delivery of 850 cases. He claims that the eggs were musty and not fit for resale. A representative of the plaintiff called upon defendant and arranged that the plaintiff would see that further shipments were in accordance with the terms of the contract, that the eggs would be properly candled and the bad ones removed.

Defendant claims that additional shipments proved no better, and that owing to the condition of the eggs he lost a number of old customers. He therefore claims $2,500 from plaintiff.

Johnston, McKay, Dods and Grant are acting for the defendant, and Bennet and Goodwill for the plaintiff.

When the eggs were placed in the cars at Peterborough, it is claimed that they became the property of defendant, and if their quality was affected it was while they were the property of Hawley. The late fall and early winter a year ago was decidedly mild, and it may have been that they deteriorated in transit. The case presents fine legal points.

NO MORE ARRIVALS FROM OLD COUNTRY

One lone immigrant from England arrived in the city this morning, and was taken out to Ennismore, where Immigration Officer Miller had secured a place for him, with a farmer.

This is the only arrival in two months that Mr. Miller has had to place, and it is not expected that any more will arrive until next spring.

According to Mr. Miller there are still places on farms in the surrounding district, that are waiting to be filled. Some of the men who refused to take positions on the farms in the summer when they were most needed (and when the work was heavier) are applying for places, at this season. But in the majority of cases they have been turned down as being unwilling to work.

To Address The County Council

Mr. Wm. A. Tookey, representing the Canada Cement Company, of Montreal, will address the County Council on Thursday night at 7.30 o'clock. The address will be delivered in the County Council Chambers, and the subject will be "Concrete Roads." Everyone interested is invited to attend, and hear Mr. Tookey's explanation of how to secure and maintain concrete roads.

DRILL HALL NEARLY READY.

Norwood's New Military Building Will Soon be Opened—Now Being Painted.

Examiner Special:

NORWOOD, Nov. 19.—The new drill hall is almost completed, and men are now engaged in painting it. Practically all the other work has been finished and the village possesses a military centre that would do justice to a much larger community. It is expected that a formal opening will be arranged, although nothing definite in this respect has been announced yet.

FORECASTING FOR CHRISTMAS

Our merchants are away behind with their Christmas announcements.

Notwithstanding the fact that it is against all the traditions of Christmas to undo the wrappings of a Christmas package before the happy day arrives, we find ourselves so much in the holiday spirit that it is quite impossible to refrain from anticipating what the stores are likely to show for Christmas shoppers.

But very little preparation is as yet apparent in many of our stores for the Xmas festival. Why keep early buyers guessing what they will have to select? "Shop early" is a good slogan, but very little use when the displays are delayed.

The city papers are teeming with interesting Christmas announcements, and have been ready for early buyers weeks ago. "Speed up!" See to it that you do not furnish an excuse for shopping out of town.

Professor Drummond said there was no happiness in having, or in getting, but only in Giving.

LOSSES FROM FIRE.

In another place in this issue is printed a statement showing that the losses from fires in Canada, for the month of October, amount to the large sum of $1,383,000; or at the rate of nearly 17 million dollars per year. This statement of loss only shows the amounts paid out by insurance companies, and by no means represents the total of loss to the sufferers. Thus, judging from the rate of insurance, the actual value would amount to perhaps 25 millions of dollars—a quarter of the revenue of the Dominion going up every year in smoke. When we reflect that nearly all fires result from carelessness in the construction or occupation of buildings, we can easily see that the great daily and annual loss from fires, is preventable. Peterborough has a low rate of fire loss, due in large part to the excellent efficiency of our fire department, but also due perhaps in part to the good character of our buildings generally in regard to providing immunity from fire. We should, therefore, encourage good building, and have stringent regulations in this regard; but there is little good in such regulations, if the city authorities themselves set the example of neglect by relieving favoured persons of responsibility in respect of building restrictions.

HELPING OURSELVES.

Our local contemporary reproves the Globe of inconsistency. It charges that one cannot tell whether or not the Globe is in favour of a Canadian navy. One day it advocates "two fleet units" for Canada, and the next day it will "condemn the criminal waste of navy building in Europe." There is nothing inconsistent in this. Not only the Globe, but all Liberal journals advocate the self-respecting establishment of a self-defending Canadian navy. All Liberals and all Conservatives—before their leaders sold their loyalty to the Nationalists—advocated and voted for a Canadian navy.

There's a mighty difference between the construction and maintenance of one or two naval units, such as proposed for Canada, and a mad haste in building naval armaments to the extent of exhaustion of national resources—building, not for self defence but from aggression and mutual distrust and rivalry. A man is perfectly justified in building himself a sufficient house to shelter him from the elements, but it would be folly for him to expend all his resources in building houses he did not need; to be used only for show.

Canada needs a small navy to defend her great and constantly growing commerce and to police her magnificent expanse of costal waters. We should build this navy as Mr. Borden once advocated, "of our own material, by our own workmen and our own skill." By so doing we should be developing our natural resources, which are lying ready for the process in unlimited abundance; we should be developing our own self reliance—helping ourselves—and thereby adding to the strength of the empire, composed of national units, as the imperial navy is composed of fleet units. We should be devloping a great ship-building industry in this country. We should, if we built our own navy, have to have shipyards, and after they had served their purpose in that regard they could be used for commercial shipbuilding, for which there is limitless demand. Churchill and Borden tell us we cannot build ships in Canada. We have given the lie to both defamers. We have a ship-building plant at Collingwood—a private enterprise—that lays down, and completes the largest steel ships that sail our lakes; and in the Mail and Empire yesterday, we are told that a two-million dollar ship plant will be erected at Sault Ste Marie, and thus round out the magnificent processes of development of our natural resources of which it is a centre. The indomitable Clergue says that within two years the plant will be completed and two ships will be built. These instances are cited, not as finalities, but to show our capability of the highest class of ship-building. With a national ship-building plant in operation we should be preparing for our naval defence, and incidentally contributing to the naval strength of the Empire, and we should be developing our own resources in numerous ways.

Canada can do what Australia has done and is doing, what little New Zealand is preparing to do—build, man and maintain their own navies in conjunction with the imperial naval forces. Canada can, and should, do the same. That would be better than adopting the cast-off policy of naval contribution, abandoned by the self-respecting dominions of New Zealand and Australia—a policy adopted by Mr. Borden, and through him by the Conservative party; not because it was the right one, but because it was the policy dictated by the Nationalists as the price of their support. A naval policy pleasing to the anti-imperial and disloyal Nationalist faction bears upon its face condemnation from all self-respecting, self-reliant Canadians, and all real, heart imperialists who believe that the logical way of strengthening the Empire is to strengthen, by development, the dominion units of the Empire; who believe in the spirit of the saying: "Heaven helps them who help themselves."

OLD MEN THE LEADERS.

The great work of the world is being done and always has been done by men of middle life and more, Four-fifths of the business failures are made by young men. It is ripened experience and judgment that count in the business world, as in any work. In physical work the older man may be outclassed by the young ones, but in lines of work calling for skill, steadiness and reliability, the older man had the advantage. There is something seriously wrong with an economic system that finds a man useless at 50.—Montreal Daily Mail.

DISTRIBUTION OF SEED GRAIN.

By instructions of the Hon. Minister of Agriculture a distribution of superior sorts of grain and potatoes will be made during the coming winter and spring to Canadian farmers. The samples for general distribution will consist of spring wheat (5 lbs.), white oats (4 lbs.), barley (5 lbs.), and field peas (5lbs.). These will be sent out from Ottawa. A distribution of potatoes (in 3 lb.) samples will be carried on from several of the experimental farms, the Central Farm at Ottawa supplying only the provinces of Ontario and Quebec. All samples will be sent free, by mail.

Applicants must give particulars in regard to the soil on their farms, and some account of their experience with such kinds of grain (or potatoes) as they have grown, so that a promising sort for their conditions may be selected.

Each application must be separate and must be signed by the applicant. Only one sample of grain and one of potatoes can be sent to each farm. Applications on any kind of printed form cannot be accepted. If two or more samples are asked for in the same letter only one will be sent.

As the supply of seed is limited, farmers are advised to apply early; but the applications will not necessarily be filled in the exact order in which they are received. Preference wil always be given to the most thoughtful and explicit requests. Applications received after the end of January will be too late.

All applications for grain (and applications from the provinces of Ontario and Quebec for potatoes) should be addressed to the Dominion Cerealist, Central Experimental Farm, Ottawa. Such applications require no postage. If otherwise addressed delay and disappointment may occur.

Applications for potatoes, from farmers in any other province should be addressed (postage prepaid) to the Superintendent of the nearest Branch Experimental Farm in that province. —J. H. Grisdale, Director, Dominion Experimental Farms.

Prices Of Staple Foods Are Very Much Lower Than One Year Ago

The Canadian Grocer Gives a Comprehensive Review of the Market Conditions and Shows That Staple Foods Have Reached a Low Level — Some Cheering Items.

PRICES TO THE RETAILER

In Saturday's issue of the Examiner appeared an interview with a local grocer on the prices of foodstuffs to the consumer. It was shown that many articles were lower in price than a year ago, and on this point, the "Canadian Grocer" delves into the question at length, showing the reductions to the retailer. This should be of interest to every householder in the city. The article is as follows:

"Did anyone say the cost of living was still on the incline? Where did the news come from, and from whence the proof?

"If it is going up, what part do staple foods play in the rise? Is it to be taken for granted that they are ALL higher than this time a year ago, or shall we 'stop, look, and listen,' and determine the truth of the matter? Coal, we know, is higher and there are no appreciable declines in dry goods, boots, and millinery. Neither have fishing rods, guns, automobiles ,or pianos shown many signs of reaching lower depths, but what about staple foods that everybody uses every day at every meal!

An Extensive Drop.

Just take a glance at the following list of groceries—staple groceries, please remember—that are not as high to-day as they were in November, 1912:

Butter, beans, cheese, cornmeal, currants, flour, honey, lard, lemons, potatoes rice, rolled oats, rolled wheat, raisins (Valencia), sago, sugar, syrup, tapioca; Canned goods—Corn, peas, tomatoes, salmon, cherries, peaches, plums, pears, raspberries, strawberries.

At the end of this article is a table showing the entire list and giving the comparisons with prices existing a year ago. These figures are, of course, from wholesaler to retailer (Toronto market), but at least 95 per cent. of the goods quoted can be bought more cheaply by the consumer to-day than at the corresponding period in November, 1912.

Read this list over once again. Now, what has the consumer—that is the one complaining of the high cost of living—got to complain about? Can he not buy sugar, rice, beans, flour, rolled oats, potatoes, lard, honey, butter, cheese, canned tomatoes, peas, beans, salmon, strawberries, raspberries, peaches, pears, cherries, and plums, etc., cheaper than a year ago? Here is a variety of wholesome fare that will surely keep him alive for a considerable period. Several, too, of these goods are now lower in price than they have been for years, so that, evidently, if the poor or oppressed seek to live more cheaply this winter than last, or for several winters past, they should make a clear study of the goods that have declined in prices. He can surely 'lower the living cost' and still consume healthy and wholesome foods, the quality of which has not been impaired.

Sugar Market Much Lower.

Coming to a consideration of these items one by one, sugar may be considered as ranking well up among the most important of staple groceries, and being probably without a rival as the one used most universally. In a comparative list which appeared on 10th October, it was shown that sugar was over $2 per cwt. lower than in 1900. The comparison given in this article shows it is 35 cents lower per cwt. than one year ago, and $1.45 below the quotation of two years ago. At that period sugar had reached the highest point in twenty-two years owing to the scarcity of raws. Since that time the situation has been growing better gradually.

Butter Below Last Year.

Butter is a close second to sugar for everyday use. The advantage over last year is not so pronounced—one cent for creamery and two cents for dairy (both prints and solids), but it is quite appreciable. This fall, owing to the open weather, the supply has been very plentiful, and Western Canada has gone farther in looking after itself, so that outside demand has been unable to firm up the market as it did in the fall of 1912. In addition, stocks have continued heavy.

Rice, Tapioca, and Sago.

Rice is cheaper owing to favourable crop conditions chiefly. Last year Far East reports were not optimistic. Sago, brown, is 1 to 2 cents lower, and tapioca, usually classed with it, is cheaper for medium pearl by 1½ cents per pound. Seed pearl is also 1 cent cheaper, but flake 1½ cents higher this year.

Record for Beans.

Beans are 40 per cent. lower this year, and hold the record for the whole list. Conditions are reversed compared with last year. At this time Canadian beans were just beginning to come in, and were of such poor quality that nearly all buying had to be of Austrians, and this continued throughout the year. This year the Ontario crop is the best for years, so far is quality goes, and quantity seems pretty good. Austrians have taken a back seat, and few, if any, importations have been made, nor are likely to be. Primes are $1.85, compared with $3.10 one year ago, and hand-picked at $2.15, instead of $3.25. Low prices are likely to rule for months.

Reversal in Raisins.

Raisins also are in a reversed position compared with last year. Then Valencias were scarce and high; while Californians were plentiful, and so low that an amalgamation of growers was formed after the season was well advanced, the claim being made that prices were lower than cost of produtiou. There is no danger of a similar claim being made this year; promptly two cents were added to last year's, with the result that buyers are not backward in declaring they will wait for more reasonable figures.' Valencias, as had been known for months, started in at lower quotation than last year, and promise to remain there.

Other Dried Fruits Lower.

"Currants were not affected by the Balkan War, and it looks as if present reduction of 1 cent a pound over 1912 will continue. This applies to nearly all grades—Filiatras, Patras, Vostizzas, etc.

So far as dates are concerned, comparison is a little difficult, as new crops are just arriving and prices are apt to fluctuate for a few weeks, according to size of shipments. Indications, however, are that the finer figs will remain about 1 cent a pound lower, though taps may be somewhat higher, as indeed they are for new shipments.

Lemons Promise to be Cheaper.

Lemons will be in much more favourable position, as was stated in last week's issue. Sicilian crop is better than last year, and Californian shows no signs yet of scarcity, which last year, combined with frosts, not only kept it entirely out of Canada, but caused Sicilians to advance prices sharply. At present, on the eve of new crop arrivals, prices are nearly one-third lower.

Corn syrup is a trifle lower (5 cents) in spite of high price for corn, which caused an advance a few weeks ago. As that situation is gradually improving, price is not likely to go higher at any rate. Other syrups, maple and molasses, are same price.

An Old Friend of Everybody.

Coming to potatoes, although present position is only 5 cents lower than year ago, the likelihood is that the high prices of 1912-1913 will not be repeated, for later on they advanced nearly to $2 a bag. American demand, stimulated by tariff changes, is causing a scarcity in New Brunswick, and already has advanced the prices, both for Ontarios and Eastern, from 10 to 20 cents, and this may be repeated at least to the extent of 10 or 15 cents, but even then the margin will be big in favour of lower 1913-1914 prices. Ontario potatoes this year are excellent crop, unlike last year, and running Eastern close. Sweet potatoes have become big sellers in this province, and with a plentiful crop are now $1 per barrel lower than one year ago.

Advantage in This Year's Flour.

Flour, following a bumper wheat crop, early cut, threshed, and milled, is much below 1912, and taking into account rate-cutting that is going on, the margin is still more pronounced. Flour, both Manitoba and Ontario, gives indications of remaining much lower for many months at least.

Rolled oats, by no means a contemptible article of diet, either in quantity or total price, are much lower, as the crop is heavier than last year, and rolled wheat even with advance, through greater cost of barrels, is 20 cents a barrel lower. Cornmeal is 5 cents a bag below 1912.

Pure lard has half a cent advantage, in spite of last week's Toronto rise. Considering the fact that live hogs f.o.b. are fully 50 cents higher than one year ago, lard is below what might be expected.

Cheese is about ¼ cent lower, due in large measure to poor export demand in presence of competition.

The Honey Bee Has Helped.

Honey is likely to continue 1 to 2 cents below last year owing to larger crop and the fact that buyers mostly held off in face of what they considered bee men's excessive schedule of rates, until later were forced to tumble their goods on the market. Buckwheat, unlike clover, is about the same as last year.

A Conspicuous Reduction.

Canned goods can be described almost en bloc, as far below last year's prices. This, probably, is the most conspicuous of all reductions, as it covers scores of articles that form a considerable part of fall, winter, and spring menus.

Salmon, with an excellent pack, this being the year of the "run" (once every four years), led the way, and the reductions ranged from one-third to nearly one-half. The canned fruit and vegetables followed, and particularly pleasing to grocers was the possibility of selling peas at 3 for a quarter and tomatoes at 10 cents flat after the high prices of last year had greatly retarded sales. All reports to date agree that the output over the grocers' counters will be enormous, and the pack will be hard put to supply the demand.

Neither Up Nor Down.

It must not be implied that all the other articles in the grocer's list have gone up. There is quite a respectable list that may be said to remain "on the fence," unchanged. Among these coffee will be considered as an important item. Rice and Sextee are indeed somewhat lower, but the most on the list are stationary. However, all are due for an advance of 2 or 3 cents at least, according to the importers, owing to the drought in Brazil. Standard package teas are same price.

Hallowe'en figs opened about the same as last year, and spices show little change except cream of tartar and black pepper, both of which are several cents higher.

Among miscellaneous articles are: Maple syrup, molasses, peels, bananas, and cranberries. These are no higher than a year ago.

Suggests Third Term For Mayor

To the Editor, The Examiner:

In view of the very efficient services rendered to our city by our present Mayor, Mr. W. H. Bradburn, and the unfinished condition of some very valuable works now in progress and in which he has taken a very active and intelligent interest, it would be of great advantage to our city if he could be induced to continue to serve the city as Mayor for another term.

While there are others who have served the city faithfully and would no doubt fill that honourable position with credit to themselves and satisfaction to our citizens, yet under the present circumstances steps should be taken to induce Mr. Bradburn to deviate from the usual custom and continue for another year, and he should be elected by acclamation again.

Yours truly,
J. C. Shook.

AN EFFICIENCY FIEND.

The general manager of an eastern railroad had a dreaded reputation for laying off men whenever he found the slightest excuse.

He appeared in the yard one day and two switchmen discussed him.

"He doesn't look like tho man we hear he is," said one.

"What do you hear?" the other asked.

"Why, they say when he was at the funeral of Flannery's wife, and the six pall-bearers came out carrying the coffin he raised his hand and said: 'Hold on, boys! You can get along without two of them.'"

Good Entertainment Was Very Poorly Patronized

Benefit Concert for Peterborough Hockey Club Last Night Was an Artistic Success But Was Slimly Attended.

A SPLENDID PROGRAMME

The benefit concert by the Royal Concert Company of Toronto in the Grand Opera House last night was a great success artistically, but a sad failure financially, and the Peterborough Hockey Club, for whose benefit the concert was given, will not find its coffers enriched to any appreciable extent.

The attendance indicated that the people of Peterborough do not care for high-class entertainment or take any ante-season interest in hockey.

From the viewpoint of enjoyment last evening's entertainment left nothing to be desired. The programme was varied and interesting, and the audience showed its appreciation by demanding frequent encores.

Miss Mabel Farrance, the elocutionist, won great favour in her different numbers. She was beautifully attired in an elaborate costume, and presented a refined and animated personality. Her number, "How Some Women Act in a Dry Goods Store," was very cleverly given, and her versatility was demonstrated by the pleasing manner in which she sang several duets with Mr. J. Alfred Hubbard.

The latter has a pure, well controlled tenor voice, which he displayed to advantage in several numbers, his best being probably a splendid rendition of Tosti's "Good-bye," to which as an encore he sang very effectively "The Rosary" and "Somewhere a Voice is Calling."

Miss Henrietta Walmsley, a gifted contralto, sang several numbers in charming fashion, her second offering, "His Lullaby," being especially delightful.

That funny little man, Eddie Pigott, proved a comedian par excellence, his amusing numbers being responsible for gales of laughter. He called upon his extensive repertoire for some of his best numbers, and the result was a series of hits. His impersonations of great personages, past and present, were decidedly clever, and wee warmly received.

Miss Margaret Campbell not only showed herself a very clever pianist and accompanist, but also played several delightful violin solos.

The following was the programme:

Opening selection, pianoforte, Margaret Campbell.

Song — "Canada Ever" (Laura Lemon), J. Alfred Hubbard.

Sketch song—"She's the Lass for me," Eddie Pigott.

Song—"Melisande of the woods" (Goets), Henrietta Walmsley.

Recitation—"Dawn on the Hills of Ireland," Mabel Farrance.

Violin solo—"Annie Laurie," Margaret Campbell.

Duet—"Down the Vale" (Moir), Henrietta Walmsley and J. Alfred Hubbard.

Song and sketch—"Breaking up the Home," Eddie Pigott.

Song—"His Lullaby," Henrietta Walmsley.

Sketch—"How some women act in a Dry Goods Store," Mabel Farrance.

Song—"Good-bye" (Tosti), J. Alfred Hubbard.

Impersonations, Eddie Pigott.

Violin solo, "Berceuse" (Jocelyn). Margaret Campbell.

Duet—"Sympathy" (The Firefly), Mabel Farrance and J. Alfred Hubbard.

Song and sketch, Eddie Pigott.

G. C. McBain's Suit Re The Cavan Drain

Claims Damages From Cavan Township For Obstructions in the Long Swamp.

One of the cases to go before Mr. Justice Middleton in the non-jury sittings of the Supreme Court of Ontario, which opens on Tuesday next at the Court House, is Mr. Geo. C. Bain's suit against the Cavan township Council for damage to his pasture lands as the result of the diversion of a creek which circled through his property.

Mr. McBain owns the east half of lot 19, concession 13, in Cavan, and through the northerly portion of it flowed the Long Swamp creek. In 1907 the Cavan township council constructed a ditch along the northerly limits of the McBain property crossing the stream where it entered and left the plaintiff's land.

Cut Off From Land.

Previously the stream had kept its water course clear by the flow of the water, but when the ditch was built a connection was formed with it and a culvert which the township built under the road became filled up with sediment during the spring freshets, and blocked the channel of the stream into the McBain property. In January 1911, the Council offered to open up the water course and to keep it open by placing gates on the culvert, the plaintiff to close the gates at the proper time to protect the channel. Mr. McBain accepted. The defendants removed the obstructing sediment carried down by the freshets, but they did not erect the gates, and shortly afterwards there came a heavy storm which filled up the culverts and cut off the use of water in the creek during 1911. In the fall of 1911 the course was opened up again and the Council erected gates. Mr. McBain closed them in the fall of 1911, but the freshets in the spring of 1912 carried the gates away and the course was again obstructed.

Claims Damages.

Mr. McBain claims damages for a breach of agreement and asks for a mandatory order directing the Council to carry out the terms of its agreement respecting the keeping of the course of the stream clear.

The Council claims that the ditch drains the plaintiff's land as well as those of other persons, and that the culvert was requested by Mr. McBain, who failed to work in harmony with defendants.

The whole matter appears to revolve around the agreement concerning the protection to be afforded the watercourse through the plaintiff's property, the Council emphasizing the fact that their offer accepted by Mr. McBain, was made without prejudice.

Bennet and Goodwill are acting for Mr. McBain and Ruddy and Burnham for the Cavan Council.

Local People Attend Supper At Springville

The annual services of the Springville Presbyterian Church were held on Sunday and were conducted by the Rev. Geo. Yule, B.A., of Oshawa. Mr. Yule was formerly pastor of the Springville Church and was heartily received. His inspiring sermons, the excellent music and large congregations combined to make the services memorable ones.

Last night the annual fowl supper was held, and the accommodation was overtaxed to a remarkable degree. It was impossible for all who attended to get into the Church, and the horses and outfits of those who came from a distance were tied for several hundred yards along the road leading to the Church.

About forty local people attended the affair, and they, as well as all of the other guests, pronounced the supper a most enjoyable one. The array of victuals was splendidly prepared and served, and every number of the excellent programme presented was heartily received. The following artists took part in the programme:

Quartette—Miss Tindell, Miss Graham, Mr. Peters and Mr. Paul; Miss Fick, of the Peterborough Conservatory, solist.

Miss Mertin Colin—Reading.
Mr. E. V. Morphet—Solo.
Miss Jackson—Elocutionist.
Mr. John Marsh—Soloist.
Duet—Mrs. Young, Mr. Peters.

Addresses were given last night by the Rev. T. W. Wickett, and the Rev. Mr. Yule.

The Rev. Dr. Marsh presided at the very large gathering.

INFAMOUS ENDING OF THE MACDONALD ELECTION INFAMY

How Hon. Robt. Rogers Won Macdonald By-election, and Surrendered it Before Court to Save Exposure

On November 4th last, Hon. Robert Rogers threw up his hands, admitted that the evidence against his methods of winning the infamous Macdonald by-election was overwhelming. The court at Winnipeg automatically deposed Alex. Morrison, the man elected by the Roblin-Rogers combination, and declared the election void by reason of corruption. Thus ended the most shameful travesty of election proceedings ever perpetrated in Canada. Unfortunately it ended in an unsatisfactory manner to the outraged people, since Hon. Mr. Rogers had taken the necessary steps to prevent the election court from exposing the crimes of the Macdonald by-election and the punishment of the criminals.

The hand of Hon. Mr. Rogers was as clearly indicated in this as it had been throughout the proceedings, since a few days before the case up, he paid an emergency visit to Winnipeg. He evidently found that all efforts to call off the case of delay it had failed. The "Minister of Buy-Elections" saw the game was up and busied himself to prevent exposure.

Story of the Outrage.

The story of this conspiracy to defeat the will of the people, so far successful that for over a year the riding of Macdonald was misrepresented by a man known throughout the Dominion to have been elected by notoriously illegal methods, is worth recalling as an instance of the unscrupulous methods of Hon. Mr. Rogers and the manner in which Premier Borden neglects his erstwhile promises of purity of elections which prompt exposure and punishment of electoral wrongdoing.

On April 10th, 1912, the riding of Macdonald was opened by the partisan appointment of W. D. Staples, the sitting member, to the Dominion Grain Commission. The riding was carefully nursed by the Roblin-Rogers election combination, and on September 20th, the writs were issued On September 25th, Alex. Morrison was chosen the government candidate. On October 5th, nominations resulted in a contest between R. L. Richardson, Independent Liberal, and Alex. Morrison, the government candidate.

Carnival of Corruption.

Immediately a carnival of corruption and violence set in. The campaign was personally directed by Hon. Robert Rogers, and hordes of the most vicious election workers were imported. Not only were the familiar Tory arguments of money and whiskey there, but even the machinery of the law was prostituted. Liberal workers were dogged by real or bogus detectives and police. Their baggage was searched in their hotels by gumshoe men. They were threatened with arrest, ill-treated, starved, hidden from their friends, spirited from one part of the riding to another, and after being given "Third Degree" treatment were offered their freedom if they would perjure themselves by confessing imaginary crimes. Four men in particular were thus treated, D. H. Walkinshaw, R. J. A. Prince, J. J. Sullivan, and W. B. Sifton, while several Liberal members of Parliament were shadowed and insulted by detectives, and themselves threatened with arrest if they did not leave the riding.

Magistrate Helped.

Magistrate McMicken of Winnipeg was named as a leader in this work. It was declared in parliament subsequently that he had issued blank warrants for the arrest of Liberal workers and that men had actually been arrested on the lettres-de-cachet" In one case it was stated that documents had been stolen from a Liberal workers' grip, his diary forged to make it appear that he had committed bribery, and violent efforts were made to bully him into admitting that these forgeries were genuine.

As a result of these highly Conservative methods, Mr. Morrison was elected by a large majority.

Immediately afterwards, on October 18th, proceedings were instituted against Magistrate McMicken, who was charged with conspiracy to defeat the ends of justice. Mr. McMicken has since resigned from the bench.

On November 18th the election was protested, the petition reciting serious charges against Sir Rodmond Roblin and Hon. Robert Rogers, that they had instructed peace officers, detectives and constables to conspire for the arrest and illegal imprisonment of Liberal workers, with many other election crimes. The Tory organization was untiring to prevent exposure in the courts. On December 20th, "preliminary objections" were dismissed. Immediately appeal was taken in the effort to indefinitely delay trial. These appeals were carried through the courts to the Supreme Court of Canada and were successively dismissed.

Surrender to Save Exposure.

Finally, after every device had been used to defeat the ends of justice, the Supreme Court on May 22nd last dismissed the Tory contentions without even the formality of hearing the Liberal side of the argument. Even then the Conservative efforts to dodge the law continued. On July 30th, so persistent was the determination of the Rogers element to keep Mr. Morrison out of court and hide incriminating documents, that Judge Cameron of Winnipeg made an order that unless Mr. Morrison appeared and produced the necessary papers within three days he must be committed to jail to contempt of court. This broke up the combination. The usual preliminaries of trial were gone through with, and the case set for third month. On October 29th Hon. Robert Rogers hurriedly left Ottawa for Winnipeg. A few days later the fact became known that the Conservative would attempt no defence in the Macdonald election trial. On November 11th, Mr. Morrison filed an affidavit admitting that his agents had been guilty of corrupt practices. No further evidence could be taken on this admission, which was designed to prevent the exposure of the Rogers by-election methods and protect his gang from criminal proceedings. The case closed with the order of the court voiding the election. Before he Macdonald will have the opportunity of vindicating its honour.

There's A New Hat Coming To Mayor

Ald. Gordon Has Placed Order With N. E. McWilliams for the Wager Regarding Street Pavement.

THE BEST IN THE CITY.

When Mayor Bradburn wants a new hat, all he has to do is to walk into N. E. McWilliam's store and demand the best in the shop, and it won't cost him a nickel. Readers of The Examiner may remember a certain bet that was jokingly entered into between the Mayor and Alderman Gordon regarding the commencement of the street paving work. The occasion was away back in September when the details of procedure seemed to be clogged with obstacles.

Alderman Gordon asked Mayor Bradburn if he expected to see any of the work done this year.

The Mayor replied that it simply had to be done and Alderman Gordon wagered him a new hat that the first of the new year would find the streets still untouched.

The alderman asked His Worship if he had called for his "lid," and Mayor Bradburn replied that he did not need one yet. One of the last he purchased was a New York nation in keeping with the Mayor's sartorial fancies. In this respect he and Reggie Geary, ex-Mayor of Toronto, were in the same class.

YOUTHS CHARGED WITH VAGRANCY

Two young fellows, aged 16 and 19 years, respectively, and answering to the names of Clarence Rickett and Herman Little, came before acting Magistrate H. Rush, this morning, charged with vagrancy. Both of them pleaded not guilty. They said they came from Belleville and were looking for work in Peterborough.

Mr. Rush told them to get out of the City as fast as possible. Rickett and Little were arrested last night by P. C. Reid, who saw them and two other young fellows stealing their way on the G.T.R. train.

Wm. Torrence was fined $2 for being drunk in a public place.

THE coats that generally bear a price mark of $22 and $25 are the kind that have made up this assortment at $14.75.

They are made of splendid Tweeds, Zebelines, Chinchillas, Boucles and Brocaded Matelasse, in a pleasing range of colours which includes greys, browns, blues, black and soft green mixtures.

Like the illustration on the left many of these coats boast the smart collar and facings of velvet, and others there are with the handy covertible collar, while most of them are lined in the sleeves and yoke only.

The medium cutaway front is very evident, as is also the bat wing, and kimona sleeve effects. And in marking these at $14.75 we are positively assured, that a better, more useful, more satisfactory coat, could not be obtained for the money.

They make a splendid showing in our centre window, and at the first glance, one cannot help being convinced of the superior value of these coats at the reduced price.

Store Hours—8.15 a.m to 5.45 p.m.

The GRESSMAN Limited

The Store of Superior Service.

At $9.75

THIS price ranges over a number of smartly made garments, the Johnny Coats being quite conspicuous in some good looking Brown and White and Black and White Checks.

Then there is a storm coat 50 in. long, and a general utility coat; the materials being heavy tweeds, etc.; while some styles have trimmed back and others a belted effect.

One will find many with fancy collars, and a large number with the convertible collar that is so comfortable to the wearer. There is also the straight and cutaway fronts, and on every hand at this price you will see coats that in the ordinary way sell from $15 to $18.

They are shown in the South Window.

At $19.75

STYLE, Cloth and Tailoring are of a high-class order in this better selection of coats, that in some instances are really worth $35.00, while none would sell for less than $25.00.

Particularly attractive are those of Reversible Golf Cloth with collar and cuffs of velvet, and the thick warm tweeds are of a very fine texture indeed.

Coats that are made of Boucles, show a heavy, glossy curl, every line and seam expressing the tailors care and skill.

They are mostly half lined with satin, are cut with the roomy armhole and long shoulder, and here and there in the number, is the belted back, or the smartly trimmed effect.

For $19.75, or roughly speaking, twenty dollars, one can secure a Coat unexcelled in beauty of appearance and make up at the price, the possession of which would be a lasting memory of a most economical purchase.

These are shown in the North Window.

AND WHILE WE ARE SPEAKING OF GOOD COATS

It will not be out of place to mention something else that is good. Therefore a word about these Bed Spreads.

They are of pure white cotton, in Marseilles weave of raised attractive patterns, and are large, double bed size.

The quality is above criticism and the texture heavy. Just the kind that look well and wear well.

Their price is only $2.38 and they are worth every cent of it.

MASSIVE TELESCOPE TO BE ERECTED IN OTTAWA

Dominion Government Has Given Cleveland Firm Contract for Biggest and "Most Far Reaching" Affair of Its Kind Ever Built

OTTAWA, Nov. 19.—The Government has let the contract to Walter S. Swasey Company, of Cleveland, for what is the largest telescope in the world. The price is $91,000, and it will take a year and a half to mount it. At present Dr. King, head of the Canadian Astronomical Service, is making an investigation as to the best place to mount it. There was some feeling that a western location would be better on a high elevation and with a clearer atmosphere than could be found in the east. Alberta, the sunny Province, was regarded as probably the most suitable. However, investigations so far have not been satisfactory. Medicine Hat was tried, but the high winds were such that it would be impossible for the careful observations which are necessary for astronomical work. Banff, also, was tested, but the air currents, a matter which must be taken into consideration, preclude it as a possibility. The result is that the new observatory will probably be erected at Ottawa. Peterborough has been considered as a probable location for the instrument.

There are two types of teleseopes, refractory and reflecting. The newly-ordered Canadian telescope is of the reflecting type, and is not only the largest in the world. It is no less than six feet across or a foot wider than the next largest, the big telescope at Mt Wilson Observatory, California.

This great engine of science, weighing fully fifty tones, resting upon massive piers of concrete, will have a tube thirty feet long and seven feet in diameter, which will weigh ten tons.

At the lower end of the tube will be located the principal speculum, composed of a disc of glass seventy-three inches in diameter, ten inches in thickness and weighing approximately two tons.

When used as a Cassegrainian instrument, a secondary convex reflector, nineteen inches in diameter, will be placed near the upper end of the tube for reflecting the rays back through a hole in the speculum to the great spectroscope attached to the lower end of the tube.

As a Newtonian instrument, a flat mirror will be provided for reflecting the cone of rays at right angles into the photographic apparatus at the upper edge of the tube.

As a direct vision instrument, both secondary mirrors will be removed and appliances for visual, photographic and spectroscopic work will be attached at the prime focus.

The tube and the declination and polar axes, with their attachments, weigh thirty-five tons, and so nicely is each part balanced and adjusted that the powerful driving clock revolves this immense weight with such accuracy and uniformity that the spiderline in the eyepiece of the pointing telescope attached to the great tube can be kept exactly on the centre of the star under observation.

Vaccination Not Cause Of Death

Is Opinion of Dr. Roberts in Cases of Two Former Peterborough Women

ANALYSIS OF STOMACH

HAMILTON, Nov. 18.—Discussing the strange deaths of Miss Etta Forsyth and her sister, Mrs. Alice Griffin, as reported yesterday, Dr. Roberts, M.H.O., who is perhaps one of the best authorities on vaccination in the city, having given this particular question much special attention and study, said this morning that the deaths of these two women, in his opinion, were not due to vaccine poisoning.

"Is it possible for vaccine poisoning to cause death so many months after vaccination?" was asked.

"Absolutely impossible," was the reply of Dr. Roberts. "In cases where death occurs from vaccination, it is always shortly after. I never knew of such a thing as vaccine poisoning, but there have been cases where foreign substances have come in contact with the vaccine and caused death. There are more deaths from vaccination because of foreign substance getting into the vaccination wound, after the vaccine has been applied, than from direct vaccine poisoning. In the cases of Miss Forsyth and Mrs. Griffin, I examined their arms at the time they were vaccinated, and never looked at a cleaner or more successful vaccination than them. It would also be impossible for wound infection from foreign substances in these cases and death not result until so long after. Had either Miss Forsyth or Mrs. Griffin suffered from vaccine poisoning, they would either have recovered or died long before they did."

Coroner Dr. Parry yesterday sent the stomach of Mrs. Griffin to Toronto for analysis. When asked if the body of Miss Forsyth would be exhumed for examination, he said he did not think so, but this would depend largely on the result of the anlysis of Mrs. Griffin's stomach. In the meantime, there are no new developments, and until the inquest is resumed on Monday night, there are not likely to be.

SHOT HIS BRIDE THEN TURNED THE GUN ON HIMSELF

Special Wire to The Examiner.

ROCHESTER, N.Y., Nov. 19. — The dead bodies of Jno Angell and his wife of ten days were found in their room this morning with revolver bullet wounds in the abdomen of each, evidently fired by the young husband with murder and suicide intent. The young couple retired in best of spirits last night, and relatives advance the theory that Angell was insanely jealous as a result of some confession made by the young woman.

W. O. W. "AT HOME" TO-MORROW NIGHT

To-morrow night the Sherwood Forest Camp. Woodmen of the World, will hold an "At Home" in their hall on George Street. Dr. W. S. Harrison, head Council Commander, of Toronto, will be present, and will deliver an address.

Arrangements have been made to accommodate a very large gathering, and a pleasant evening is assured all who attend.

A CHANCE TO LEARN TO PLAY IN BAND

There is a golden opportunity for three local young men who wish to learn to play band instruments to do so at no cost to themselves. The 57th Regiment Band would like to secure the services of three who are anxious to learn to play the soprano saxophone, the alto clarinet and the oboe respectively. These instruments will be provided, and there will be no charge for tuition. Those who have some knowledge of music will be preferred. Applications should be made at the Band Hall to-morrow (Thursday) night.

BREACH OF LIQUOR LAW.

Reported That Mr. D. King, of Norwood is to Appear in County Court.

It was learned to-day that an information had been laid against Mr. D. King of Norwood for a breach of the Local Option law on Fair day. Magistrate Edmison said he understood the case was to come before the County Court, but Magistrate Mattieson of Hastings may have charge of the case. It was stated that the hearing was to be given on Thursday.

Demand Is Weak On Local Market

Butter Receipts Are Falling Off Very Materially

The Peterborough produce market is inclined to bearishness. The offerings are fairly large, but the market lacks snap. This condition will doubtless rectify itself when the Christmas sentiment becomes rampant. The regular Saturday market is usually productive of a fair amount of trade. The consumptive demand appears at present to be the weakest feature connected with the local market.

The appended extracts refer to conditions generally:

The market, says the Trade Bulletin, is firm with a steady advancing tendency. The receipts of butter are falling off very materially, whilst the local demand is increasing so that a considerable reduction in stocks held here will be shown when the next stocks are officially declared. Receipts during the past week ending Nov. 12 were 4,870 packages against 5,990 packages for the week previous and 7,771 packages for the same week last year.

New York Butter Market.

In New York on Saturday, creamery first sold up to 35c., an advance of two cents over the previous week. It is, however, according to the New York Commercial, the general opinion in the trade that selling values have been forced too high, and, as buyers are shifting to hold stock, supplies of fresh are fully ample for all requirements. The quality is running poor, few lots showing high scores. Storage extras are offered at 31c. to 32c. Fine dairy is in light supply. Process is meeting with increased demand but prices show no improvement. In Peterborough prices range from 30c. to 32c. a pound.

Cheese Markets.

Cheese, like butter, has scored an advance in all the chief markets. This again is due to American competition under the new tariff conditions. A New York firm has bid a Montreal house 15 1-2c. for a line of Canadian cheese laid down in New York duty paid. In Montreal itself, stocks are estimated to have been reduced to about 90,000 boxes, and at the close of navigation they are expected to be down to about 40,000 or 50,000 boxes, which will, it is said, be the lowest in the last 20 years at the close of navigation. In England, too, according to mail advices from Weddell's, dated the 31st, there was then an improvement in prices with better consumptive demand.

Stocks are also light in the Old Country. The stocks of Canadian and States cheese on hand on November 1st at London, Liverpool and Bristol were estimated at only 306,000 boxes, compared with 351,000 boxes at the corresponding period last year, and 340,000 boxes in the drought year of 1911.

SAFE WON'T OPEN.

London's Civic Treasury Is Being Drilled Open by Locksmiths.

LONDON, Ont., Nov. 19. — With over $100,000 city bonds, delivery of which was contracted for last Saturday, and with several thousand dollars in cash locked away in its innermost recesses, the huge five-ton safe in the office of the City Treasurer has defied the efforts of Treasurer Bell, his assistants, and a corps of locksmiths to open. For four days a gang of men from the works of the manufacturers have been drilling the burglar proof doors. Sixteen drills have been broken in an effort to open the safe and it still defies the efforts of the mechanics to open.

It was Saturday morning when the combinations of the safe went wrong. Over $100,000 in City of London bonds, purchased by a Toronto bond house, were locked in an inner drawer. The contract for their sale called for delivery Saturday afternoon.

QUAKER OATS.

Business Has Decreased and Larger Dividend Is Unlikely.

CHICAGO, Nov. 19.—Extra dividend talk on Quaker Oats is not taken seriously, as the company's recent business has shown some decrease, although the year to date has been quite satisfactory.

During July and August shipments were very heavy on account of the drought, the company's principal output being feedstuffs, but subsequently the shipments declined as the trade had stocked up rather heavily and prices had advanced quite sharply.

The Quaker Oats always seems to give a good account of itself, especially in dull or hard times.

High meat prices diverted a good deal of consumptive demand to its food products.

PART OF NORTH MONAGHAN MAY BECOME A VILLAGE

Section Adjacent to the City is Beginning to Present Numerous Problems.

WHAT ABOUT ANNEXATION?

A resident of North Monaghan intimately associated with the affairs of the township recently admitted, although not seriously, that it may not be long until Peterborough has an incorporated village across its southern boundary.

The conversation with an Examiner reporter began with a reference to the report recently published in the Examiner to the effect that the township had expended its appropriations for the present year. A by-law fixed the amount that could be borrowed and to meet unforseen expenses, some of the councillors made up a loan to meet the existing demands.

During the past summer there have been a number of permanent improvements carried out, and in nearly every case the estimated cost was exceeded. Quite a number of new streets were opened up, and they had to be put in good condition. A new school was erected and the concrete bridge near Crawford's Grove cost more than was expected.

In other words, that part of the township on the City's fringe has been forced to carry out improvements that were really overdue, and there is every indication that next year will produce additional demands that will have to be provided for. The greater part of these improvements will be in the thickly populated section adjacent to the City. At the same time the outlying parts of the township must not be neglected.

The reason for suggesting the incorporation as a village of the district near the City is found in its steady and rapid development; and with encouraging promise of the continuation of the City's growth is bound to fill up and expand.

And as this development materializes, the township Council will be confronted with new problems, new expenditures and possibly a few new troubles. Growing pains they may be called. Hence would arise the advisability of a separation from the township and the establishment of a village.

The extra-mural residents appear to be firmly opposed to placing themselves beneath the City's sheltering wing. They will reach out for every advantage that is easily obtainable, but they draw back from the tax rate and assessment. That is the trump card in the township's hand. It is about all, the rural districts offers, but say the suburbanites, "it is sufficient."

The facilities of this City to which the township people help themselves might be enumerated if they were not generally known. It is true that May's school has taken many who formerly attended the King Edward school, but where are the children from east of Park and south of Lansdowne Street securing their education.

Of course the township will have to guide its own destinies and there may be a few shoals encountered during the next few years. The transformation of the south end during a single year, even, is decidedly appreciable, and all the township offers is something in the form of tax advantages. Material they undoubtedly are. Furthermore, the residents are content with this condition—as long as it lasts.

The question is how long is it going to last. There is one big rural block, as thickly covered with residences and other buildings as the average City territory of the same size. The Board of Health has ordered sewer accommodation for sections not three hundred yards away, and it is possible that the Provincial Department might take the same view of a certain suburb. City residents a short distance away would be justified in declaring this particular locality a menace to them—if the township people overloow themselves — since the Board of Health saw fit to protect the public health within the City where conditions were identical.

This is only a problem that is almost certain to arise. And there are bound to be others. The point hinted at is that the consideration of village incorporation may be regarded as a futile move. The suburbanites may be determined, just now, that they will not join with Peterborough, but what they wish to avoid appears to be inevitably approaching.

North Monaghan people know they are facing new problems. They feel the growth of the section near the City. They may be able to cope with present conditions, but the necessity of, and demand for, modern facilities and improvements are bound to be presented, and to that situation there seems to be but one answer and the word village is not found in it.

Chateauguay By-election Is Protested

Petition to Have James Morris Unseated and Disqualified—Bribery by Self, Agents on All Sorts of Corrupt Grounds Charged—Startling Revelations Expected.

VALLEYFIELD, Nov. 17. — The election of Mr. James Morris as M.P. for the County of Chateauguay, was protested to-day. Bribery by himself and bribery by agents, are charged against him, and the proceedings begun to-day are for the purpose of not only unseating Mr. Morris, but disqualifying him from being an elector of the constituency for the next seven years.

Startling Revelations Anticipated.

It is said startling revelations will be made at the trial, and the people of Canada will be amazed at the boldness and effrontery of the crowd of election workers now known far and near as "The Chateauguay Gang." While only the general charges are known as yet, these give indications of what may be looked for when the whole sordid story is related in the courts.

The four petitioners are: Mr. Alexander Mills, brickmaker, of Ormstown; Mr. James Robertson, a farmer, of North Georgetown; Mr. Robert McFarlane, farmer, of Howick Station, and Mr. Philorum Mallette, artist, of Chateauguay village. They are electors of Chateauguay County. Their petitions, praying that Mr. Morris be unseated, and also disqualified as an elector for seven years, were deposited in the office of the Superior Court here to-day at one o'clock.

The petitions are supported by the affidavits of the four gentlemen in question to the effect that they have good reason to believe that the charges, that Mr. Morris was elected through corrupt practices, and that he and his agents should be found guilty of corrupt practices and disqualified for seven years, alleged in the election petitions are true.

The election in question took place on October 11, when Mr. James Morris, farmer, of Ashgrove post office, Chateauguay County, "defeated" Hon. Sydney Fisher, the Liberal candidate, by a majority of [illegible].

Four Petitioners Father Charges.

The four petitions in connection with the election protest, together with other documents, also the statutory bonds to guarantee the costs in the trial, were deposited in the Superior Court office in the presence of the petitioners, Messrs. Mills, Robertson, McFarlane, and Mallette. They were accompanied by Mr. W. K. McKeown, one of the Montreal counsel for the petitioners, who will have active charge of the case, and Mr. Ludger Codebecq, the Crown Prosecutor for the district of Beauharnois. The Crown Prosecutor appeared as attorney of record in the case. Besides Mr. McKeown, three other eminent counsel have been retained in the case: Mr. R. C. Smith, K.C.; Mr. J. L. Perron, K.C., and Mr. Amie Geoffrion, K.C. of Montreal.

The documents in connection with the election protest will be sent on to ther espondent at once. In this case the ordinary course has been departed from, and instead of waiting until the last minute to file the protest the petitioners have anticipated the date of expiry, which is November 20. The papers in the proceedings have been in the course of preparation for several days past.

Electors Constrained by Corrupt Practices.

The chief allegation made by the petitioners is as follows:

"That the said election cannot be considered as the free and spontaneous expression of opinion of the electors of the said electoral district of Chateauguay, but, on the contrary, many of the electors who voted for the respondent were constrained and controlled by the fraudulent manoeuvres and corrupt practices which were freely indulged in by the respondent himself, by the agent named and appointed by him to superintend and control the election expenses authorized by law, by his other agents, and by divers other persons acting in his name and in his interests."

The petitioners charge the respondent, Mr. Morris, and his agents with numerous forms of corrupt practices, by paying of money, promises of public offices, undue influence, advancing money for bribery and corruption, defraying transportation and other expenses to the nomination proceedings and to the polls, treating on nomination and polling day, intimidation and furnishing vehicles illegally to convey voters to the polls, personation, inducing unqualified persons to vote, and corrupt practices generally as defined by the Election Act.

Election Irregularly Conducted, Also Said.

The petitioners further charge that the election was irregularly conducted in many instances, and that the formalities of the Election law were ignored by several deputy-returning officers. They charge that there was a general system of corrupt and fraudulent manoeuvres practiced by the respondent and his agents throughout the election, and that a general corruption fund was raised and used for the purpose of bribery and corruption.

Among the charges are these: That the respondent, Mr. Morris, directly and indirectly, by himself or by his agents and other persons on his behalf, gave and lent money, or agreed to do so, also other valuable considerations to induce electors either to vote or refrain from voting; promised employment, as well as offices for votes; gave or caused to be given "expenses incurred for meat, drink and other refreshment and provision, in order to be elected and for being elected"; gave meat, drink and refreshments to voters on nomination day and on polling day, and, money [illegible] to enable such voters to [illegible] refreshments, and engaged, personally and by agents, men to commit the offence of personation on election day.

Manchester City Directors Are Dissatisfied With Players

They Have Decided to Strengthen the Team at Any Cost ---Players Who Are Still on the Sick List---A Glossop Gem for Derby--The Pot Pourri of Football.

The directors of Manchester City have not been satisfied with the play of their team, and though it may mean prolonging the prospective improvements at the ground which it had been expected to commence at the end of the year, they have decided to strengthen the side at any cost. For some weeks now they have ebn in search of half-backs and forwards, and they secured the transfer of Tom Browell, the well known centre forward, from Everton. His signature was obtained in time to permit of him playing in the League match at West Bromwich on Saturday, November 1st, but Browell was stated to be suffering from an injury to his ankle, and has been spending the week-end at his home on the North-east Coast. It is not at all improbable there will be another new player on view, for the city manager and some of his directors were present at the match between Woolwich Arsenal and Nottingham Forest where, according to our correspond. "The Mate," they were attracted by Mercer, the Forest half-back, and probably a wing forward.

Wynn, Head, and Dorsett are still on the sick and injured list, but some of the players have not been giving satisfaction, and it is quite possible there may be changes.

Rutherford's Removal.

I have reason to believe that the transfer of John Rutherford, of Newcastle United, to Woolwich Arsenal came as much a surprise to the parties immediately concerned as it did to the football world in general (writes "Tynesider"). A month ago Middlesbrough made inquiry at St. Jame's Park, but Rutherford remained—on the transfer list. Then, according to entirely unofficial but fairly authentic information, Manchester City and Chelsea were inquirers after the Percy Main forward, but still the barometer indicated that Rutherford was unlikely to leave the north. When Rutherford was in the Metropolis a short time ago, on which occasion the Newcastle club hoped to exchange their English international for Chelsea's Scottish International, Douglas, Rntherford still hesitated, and his return to the Newcastle fold was anticipated almost hourly. Then—Woolwich Arsenal stepped in.

A Glossop Gem For Derby.

Amongst several notable transfers was the removal of James Moore, the clever Glossop inside forward, to Derby County. The transfer did not cause a great sensation in the North Derbyshire town, for it was a well-known fact that a great many of the First and Second Division clubs have been anxious to secure his services for several weeks past. It was, however, a little surprising when it became known that Mr. J. Metuen had brought off the coup at a transfer fee of £1,500, and it is quite evident that he had outbid his rivals from the Yorkshire clubs, and those of the far northh. Although rather on the small side, Moore was one of the cleverest forwards in the Second League. He can take any of the inside positions, but it has been at inside left where he has shown his best work for Glossop. He stands 5 ft. 7 in., and weighs 10st. 10lb. He is very speedy, with splendid control over the ball, while it is really surprising the amount of power he can put into his shooting. Last season he scored eighteen goals for Glossop.

Moore is a native of Handsworth, but he went from Cradley Heath to Glossop two seasons ago. It was while playing with the Birmingham League Club that he sent an application for a trial with Glossop. He then came under the eye of M. J. M'Ewan, who soon pronounced him a diamond in the rough, and it was not long before he signed a professional form. Moore is only 23 years of age, and the County have undoubtedly got a player destined for higher honours. Since the beginning of the last season, Glossop have now transferred five players, including Hodkinson to Blackburn Rovers, and Cooper to Newcastle United, and they have received in transfer fees a total sum of £5.076.

Another Recruit For Burnley.

The directors of the Burnley club evidently mean to pursue a progressive policy, and they secured the transfer of Robert Kelly, from St. Helens Town. Kelly, who is an inside left, will be 19 years of age on November 15. He stands 5 ft. 8 in. and weighs 10st. 6lbs., and though he has only been a professional for two months, his services have been sought by quite a number of League clubs. Kelly was only discovered in the August practice games by the St. Helens club, and Burnley have only secured him after paying a stiff transfer fee. Earlier in the week the Burnley club had obtained the transfer of Thorpe the right half-back from Blackpool, Bell, from Beddington United, and Shaw from Great Harwood.

R. Holmes Leaves the Rovers.

There was much surprise expressed in Blackburn football circles, when it became known that Robert Holmes had found it necessary to send in his resignation as the Rovers' trainer. In his day, Holmes was one of the finest full-backs in the game. He was a member of the famous Preston North End team, and succeeded Bob Haworth as the partner of Nicholas John Ross. He played for England on several occasions, and after retiring from the game he became trainer to Bradford City, from which club he went in a similar capacity to the Blackburn Rovers. His long acquaintance with the pastime, and his experience in preparing athletes, made him an excellent trainer, and it is a pity that circumstances arose which necessitated his retirement from the post.

Multum in Parvo.

Bradford have lost Herbert Dainty, their centre half-back, who joined the club towards the end of the season in 1911. The directors have put in a generous act to their credit by letting him go to Ayr United.

Bradford City have again been to that happy hunting ground of theirs, the St. Bernard's Club, Edinburgh, and they have signed on Peter Currie as an outside left.

Newcastle United have signed a new centre-forward in Ralph Shields, of the Choppington (Northern Alliance) club. Shields is 20 years of age, stands 5ft. 9in. and weighs 12st. 8lb. He is a youth of fine physique, and the Newcastle officials think a great deal of his possibilities.

Mr. J. R. Schumacher, who refereed the match between Austria and Hungary at Budapesth on October 26, informs us that 50,000 people were present at the game, and the takings amounted to £2,000. Hungary, after holding a 4—0 lead a quarter of an hour from time, just managed to win by the odd goal of seven.

Dawson, who made his first appearance in the Liverpool League team at inside left at Old Trafford a few weeks ago, was secured last season from Leith. He gave a capital display against Everton in the Liverpool Senior Cup semi-final, and in conjunction with M'Kinley, showed signs of promise. Standing 5ft. 11 1-2in. and weighing 11st. 6lb., this sturdy Scot is well equipped physically for the important position that he has been called upon to occupy.

It is the custom nowdays—and a very pleasing one—for League and Associations to present long-service medals for those of their officials who have rendered 21 years' service. The Manchester County Association have in the past so honoured their secretary, treasurer, and a vice-president, Messrs. Sinclair, Chew, and Nall respectively, and Messrs. W. A. Duckworth (president), and J. J. Bentley (hon. president) received tokens in recognition for their continuous work for Manchester and district football.

RUGBY

The following open letter on "The Evolution of Canadian Rugby" to Canadian Rugby football authorities has been received by The Toronto Star from John M. Lyle, 14 Leader Lane, Toronto:

Gentlemen: There has of late been much discussion as to the merits and demerits of the Canadian and American Rugby games. That our game has not changed materially in the past few years goes without saying. Could it not be improved?

The Canadian game now played is a cross between the old English Rugby game and the modern American game. It would seem that both the American and Canadian games would profit if an exchange in certain rules were effected. In our game there are twenty eight men on the field; in the American, twenty-two. Would it not be a distinct gain to the Canadian game to have the smaller number — twenty-two men? It would tend to open the game up.

How often do we see in our game when a ball is kicked, that the opposing back who is receiving the ball is surrounded and simply downed in his tracks. Everybody yells "yards" — and then there is a dispute. How different in the old scrimmage days—the days of Osgoode Hall and Ottawa College. Then the backs had a chance to get in action. Now it is a rarety.

If we are going to have the American line formation, let us have eleven men and the snap back. Why could the ball not be snapped directly back to the man who is going to carry it, so putting the play in direct action?

The writer had the privilege of watching the game between Michigan and the University of Pennsylvania on Saturday last, and was much impressed with several features of the game. There was absolutely no rough or dirty work. I understand that the rules governing offences of this character are very severe, and that if a player has been warned twice, on a third offence he is ruled off, and not allowed to play again during the whole season. There was nobody hurt—one man only, going off for a minor injury.

The forward pass is a most interesting play, and one that could be adopted in the Canadian game. It was tried some fifteen times and each time the whole grand stand rose "en masse" and yelled, showing that it is an interesting play from the public point of view. It helps to break the monotony of the two bucks and a kick game. There are several clever variations of this play, which keeps one guessing.

Why should we not retain all the essentials of our game penalising offside interference, keep all our rules to encourage the open kicking game, but adopt the eleven men a side, the snap back and the forward pass? Should we not then have a more open spectacular game as a result?

In conclusion, it might possibly be arranged this season to have two good teams meet under the above amended rules, when the public would have an opportunity of judging for themselves.

PREPARING FOR THE WINTER SPORTS

C. R. Banks Getting Busy for Skaters and Hockey Clubs—The Store Treated to "A Good Trimming"

Right in line with the approaching holiday and winter season, Mr. C. E. Banks has been busy, the past few weeks, reforming everything that needed reform in his sporting goods store. The remodelling has, in addition to utilizing the spare room overhead for a smart real estate office, created a very convenient business office about the centre of the store, where a young saleslady, Miss Kincaid, has been installed as cashier, etc.

Other changes have been effected which will greatly facilitate the business, as well as classify the different departments of repairing, oils, gasoline, bicycles, skates, etc. Already the first shipment of skates and hockey boots have arrived and are being opened up, so that when the first snow falls all the boys have to do will be to call up Banks'. It may also be mentioned "on the side" that Mr. Banks' name is being freely mentioned as a prospective alderman.

Benedicts Easily Beat Bachelors

Can married men play football? Ask Tommy Moffat's team of Bachelors who got well licked by Harry Smith's team of Benedicts, with the result that the latter team had to pay for a supper at Coleman's. It wasn't the money they minded, not at all; it was the disgrace of being beaten by a lot of old men. The married men say that it is conclusive proof that a man gets better-fed at home than he does in lodgings. Anyhow they finished stronger and better than the Bachelors started. Four goals to nil was the result, in favour of the Benedicts, and but for Packwood's really fine display between the sticks, the score would have been doubled. French and Paget both had hard luck early in the game, and Jack Williams looked like scoring, but he shot wide. Wilson lived up to his reputation by bringing Curtis down. Previous to this little mix-up, Moriaty had to retire, and things looked bad for the Benedicts but with Reuben off the field and Curtis limping, they easily held their own, and at half time had one goal to their credit, being the result of a combined rush by Messrs. French, Paget and Mason.

The second half was a repetition of the first, the superior stamina of the Benedicts (poor old men) wearing the Bachelors down, and towards the finish these strong young men could hardly raise a canter. Paget helped himself to three goals in the second half, and had the Bachelors' defence guessing. Mason, Harris and Milburn easily held the powerful forwards of the Batchelors, so Dick Evans had no chance to show off the stunts he had learned from his beloved "Villa." Ridley had a few shots to stop, but none got past him. Tagen throughout the Benedicts were a well balanced team. Bartley, Butters and Hotston were the best of the Batchelors' attack, and Packwood, Pullen and Knight deserved great credit for their defence, but the rest were poor. There is some talk of another match when Paget, Mason and Harris retire from football.

WONDERFUL OPERATIONS AT THE CHICAGO CONVENTION

Some of the Marvellous Surgery Which Peterboro' Physicians Saw During the Recent Gathering in the Windy City.

UNUSUAL METHODS

The Clinical Congress of the Surgeons of North America, held in Chicago, which was attended by local physicians, has been possibly the most notable gathering of surgeons ever held in the world, and by far the largest, above five thousand surgeons having registered. So large is it that it has become almost unmanageable, requiring somewhat strenuous efforts for the members to witness the great surgical events exploited. Operations requiring the most delicate of skill, most of them accompanied by discussions in explanation and demonstrations of new features introduced in the handling, were performed daily by Chicago's most distinguished surgeons.

In addition to all the noted surgeons from the United States and Canada there were several in the city for the occasion from abroad. Among the prominent guests at the Congress from England were Sir Rickman Godlee, President of the Royal College of Surgeons of England, Sir Arbuthnot Lane, of Guy's Hospital, London, who operated so successfully on the Duchess of Connaught this summer. Prof. Tuffier, of Paris, the man reputed to be the owner of more radium than any other person in the world, and several noted German surgeons.

The most popular clinic was that of Dr. John B. Murphy, the King Bee surgeon of Chicago, who invented the celebrated Murphy button for joining together severed bowel. His amphi-theatre will hold about one thousand, and it was filled daily. The seats are numbered as in an Opera House, and to get a ticket one had to reserve his seat the day previous. This performance was not unlike that of obtaining seats to hear a popular actor. You had to line up in rows. He performed over one hundred operations during the clinic.

Dr. Lane, the Duchess of Connaught's surgeon, demonstrated his methods at several of the hospitals. He is a most beautiful and brilliant operator, distinguished in many fields of surgery. One of his specialties is that of fractures. He cuts down upon all fractures, secures the broken ends with steel splints, held in place with silver screws. As a result the bones unite much more quickly and the patient is enabled to get about in a much shorter period than with the old treatment.

Ether still holds its own as the safest and most efficient anaesthetic used for general anaesthesia, although Dr. Crile's Anoci Association and local anaesthesia for nerve blockings are becoming more popular every year. These local anaesthetics are injected into the roots of the nerves in the vicinity of the incision, causing absolute painlessness over the region operated upon, the patient remaining perfectly conscious and normal in every respect. The patient, if he wishes, may thus practically watch his own operation. This however, is rarely done. At one of the Clinics a huge tumour weighing over twenty-five pounds, was removed from a woman by this means (Local Anaesthesia). The woman had heart disease and was unable to take a general anaesthetic. Her pulse during the time of the operation running from 140 to 160, and the respirations between 40 and 50. Her condition was much better after the operation than before: She suffered no pain, discomfort, or shock from the operation.

Another direful disease somewhat uncommon, known as Hodgkins Disease, a malignant disease, formerly incurable, has apparently been taken out of that category, and in future may be a curable affliction. Not by means of the surgeon's knife but through a serum.

Great interest was taken in the cancer symposium. Prof. Dr. Kronig of the University of Freiburg, Germany, and Dr. Kelly of John's Hopkin Hospital, Baltimore, gave lectures and demonstrations upon the radium and meso thorium treatment of tumours, benign and cancerous. Under the radium treatment many benign tumours melted away like snow before the rays of the sun, and superficial cancers, skin cancers, cancers of the nose, eyes and lips, where surgery would mutilate and disfigure these remedies have been used apparently with excellent results both temporarily and permanently. Dr. Kelly has the largest quantity of radium in America. He stated that in small quantities it often irritated and augmented the activities of the growth. When used boldly and in comparatively large quantities it had a beneficial result in the forms of cancer mentioned. Dr. Kelly owns a gramme of radium which cost him $120,000. He showed an exact representation of this precious gramme, and standing only a few feet from him I could not see it. Meso Thorium possesses some of the qualities of radium, and is not so valuable. Radium, however, retains its actinic energy for a period of five hundred years, whilst meso thorium lasts only fifteen or twenty years.

Dr. Cullin, of Baltimore, who was chairman of the cancer meeting, summed up the cancer situation briefly by stating that it had become a very frequent disease, a common heritage of all mankind, that with the exception of superficial cancers, which were apparently benefited by radium, its only cure was in early operations, that all suspicious-looking growths should be examined early and frequently by a surgeon, that in too many instances surgery was delayed too long, when the disease become inoperable and incurable.

Dr. Pattrson, the distinguished surgeon from London, England, read an article on ulcer of the stomach, and stated that notwithstanding what the Mayos of Rochester had said about cancer of the stomach being frequently engrafted upon ulcer of that organ, he regarded the evidence on that question is insufficient and made a splendid impression upon his audience of some three hundred members.

Among rarer operations performed, a New York surgeon transferred blood from a mother to her baby, who was suffering from loss of blood.

A successful operation was on a 4-year-old child who had been blind from birth, from cataracts in each eye.

Opening the chest near the heart, viewing the heart's action and shoving ten feet of small silver wire into the dilated (Aneurism) aorta, the big artery that sends the blood coursing through the body. Aneurism is a dilation of an artery which unless an operation is performed grows until it bursts, resulting in instant death.

At one of the clinics an assistant was observed looking very ill, evidently uffering great pain. After the operation he was assisting at, was concluded he was placed upon the table, examined, appendicitis diagnosed, immediate operation performed, and a diseased appendix removed.

Dr. W. T. Grenfell, of Labrador, was an interested visitor at many of the clinics. He came down from Labrador to be best man for Dr. Sayer, a former assistant of his, who is to marry shortly a daughter of President Wilson.

One of the interesting clinics was that held at the House of Correction. The surgeons there demonstrated by certain operation both upon men and women what had been done to help correct the morals of the inmates. Several operations had been successful in curing patients from sick criminals into good citizens with healthy bodies.

ANNUAL MEMBERSHIP DINNER

Mr. J. H. Connal, president of the local branch of the Y.M.C.A., presided at the annual senior membership dinner, held in the gymnasium last night. Between 175 and 200 enthusiastic members were gathered round the tables, which had been laden with good things by the ladies of the Ladies' Auxiliary.

Mr. Connal expressed the pleasure of the Board at the large number present. The officers had been working hard to secure the interest of the young men during the past year. The membership was now 700. It was aimed to raise it to 1,000, and in that endeavour the assistance of every one present was needed. The board was very proud of the staff of officers. One thing that was very pleasing to see was that young men were making the association the centre of activity in sports, and other branches of life.

Ald. G. A. Gillespie, the financial secretary of the Y.M.C.A. Board, explained that he was glad to see the older men out. "We have had in the past year one of the most successful years we have ever had." Mr. Hainsworth had been very effective in increasing the membership of the Y.M.C.A. since he took hold.

Mr. Gillespie extended the thanks of the board to the ladies who prepared and served the banquet.

W. J. HOPKINS.

"I feel to-night that my first word should be one of greeting — from the Central Y.M.C.A. of Toronto. And my second word should be one of congratulation," said Mr. W. J. Hopkins, general secretary of the Toronto Central Y.M.C.A. He was very much pleased to hear reports from Peterborough, showing the progress of the local Y.M.C.A.

The speaker said that many years ago, when he first contemplated entering the Y.M.C.A. work, Peterborough was the first place mentioned to him as needing a secretary — an opportunity of serving the nation. It had taken years of service, sacrifice and self-denial for the Y.M.C.A. to establish its present state of development. It had only been accomplished in the face of great opposition.

The Y.M.C.A. had been brought up through all the years to meet the present-day need — the present-day crisis. The young man who thought the Y.M.C.A. was a cure for all social ills was taking a wrong view of it. But the Young Men's Christian Association had a mission to the young men.

There is a challenge in the City of Peterborough to-day. A challenge should bring out the best that is in a man. The challenge of the community brought out the best that was in the Y.M.C.A.

"The Challenge of the Friendless Man." This was one of the challenges the association was called upon to meet. Oh! The tragedy of a lonely man in a City like this! One of the saddest things in the world is the case of a man who finds the City has not opened up proper associations.

He told the story of a young man whose life was ruined because he came to a place where there was no Y.M.C.A., and fell among bad associates. The Y.M.C.A. should reach out a friendly hand, a helping hand, to the friendless man. The world's greatest need at the present moment was friendliness of the right kind.

If the Y.M.C.A. could demonstrate a friendliness toward man, it justified its existence in the City of Peterborough, and would become a growing factor for good.

"The Challenge of the Unfit." How many handicapped men there were in Peterborough to-night, looking forward to an impossible future. If there is a call for a man to-day it was for the man who was ready, the man who knew the work to which he went. There were men who went out to-day, handicapped because they were unfit for the work they undertook. The man who trained — who made himself fit—was the one to overcome the handicap of life.

A Toronto man was told by a physician that he could not live long. That was three years ago. To-day the young man was a physical giant, because he had adapted himself to the Y.M.C.A. and trained in the gymnasium, and overcome the physical handicap. The Y.M.C.A. was accepting the challenge of the unfit, and aiding man after man to overcome what looked to be an impossible future.

"The Challenge of a Wasted Life." This was another challenge to the Y.M.C.A. It opened the door to service to co-operative effort, to help some other man. No man could calculate what the aggregate influence of the men present, would be on the future of the City of Peterborough. When one brought their talents to the Master they were multiplied and magnified until his efforts were made fruitful in the community. It was the life of service that counted. And just in the proportion that the members acted in the spirit of service, would the Y.M.C.A. assume the power in the community that it should. If the Y.M.C.A. lost the spirit of service the "vision of the Master" would go out of the association.

"If the association is going to have the power in this community that it should have—that it might have, it is because you men who are present tonight will stand behind Mr. Hainsworth, the other officers and the Board of Directors of the Y.M.C.A., a thousand members would be a mighty factor for good in this community," concluded the speaker.

Mr. J. H. Connal told of a "Strangers' Club" that used to be in connection with the Y.M.C.A. It was their duty to report any stranger who came into the City, and a club of that nature was needed more now than ever. A word of encouragement to a man at the right time might mean the difference between success and failure—the taking of the upgrade or downgrade in his life.

During the evening a number of selections were rendered by a Victrola.

An excellent violin solo was given by Mr. Leader. The skill with which he reproduced the expression of the composer in the difficult parts made his selection doubly enjoyable.

A reading by Mr. R. J. Soden of Dr. Drummond's "Les Vieux Temps," was greatly enjoyed by the guests. As a reader of French Canadian poems, Mr. Soden is well known in this City, and it is putting it mildly to say that last night his popularity in that connection rose considerably. Mr. Soden's dialect was enjoyable, and the selection of Dr. Drummond's was a splendid vehicle for his talent.

Those who sat at the head table were: Messrs. A. A. Hainsworth, J. H. Connal, B. Shortly, A. A. Fowler, W. A. Logan, W. Might, J. J. Turner, Wm. Peirce, E. A. Peak, M.P.P., D. Walmsley, G. R. Hall, Rev. R. G. Peever, G. A. Gillespie, M. J. McCarrol, W. H. Collier, G. N. Baker, Fred Cressman, and the speaker of the evening, Mr. W. J. Hopkins, of Toronto.

A friend is a person who is "for you" always, under any suspicion.

He never investigates you.

When charges are made against you he does not ask proof. He asks the accuser to clear out.

He likes you just as you are. He does not want to alter you.

Whatever kind of coat you are wearing suits him. Whether you have on a dress suit or a hickory shirt with no collar, he thinks it's fine.

He likes your moods and enjoys your pessimism as much as your optimism.

He likes your success. And your failure endears you to him the more.

He is better than a lover, because he is never jealous.

He wants nothing from you, except that you be yourself.

He is the one being with whom you can feel safe. With him you can utter your heart, its badness and its goodness. You don't have to be careful.

In his presence you can be indiscreet; which means you can rest.

There are many faithful wives and husbands; there are few faithful friends.

Friendship is the most admirable, amazing, and rare article among human beings.

Anybody may stand by you when you are right; a friend stands by you even when you are wrong.

The highest known form of friendship is that of the dog to his master. You are in luck if you can find one man or woman on earth who has that kind of affection for you and fidelity to you.

Like the shade of a great tree in the noonday heat, is a friend.

A friend is an impregnable citadel of refuge in the strife of existence.

It is he that keeps alive your faith in human nature, that makes you believe it is a good universe.

He is the antidote to despair, the elixir of hope, the tonic for depression, the medicine to cure suicide.

When you are vigorous and spirited you like to take your pleasure with him; when you are in trouble you want to tell him; when you are sick you want to see him; when you are dying you want him near.

You give to him without reluctance and borrow from him without embarrassment.

If you can live 50 years and find one absolute friend you are fortunate. For of the thousands of human creatures that crawl the earth, few are such stuff as friends are made of.

Stock Markets

A. H. Stratton & Co., Brokers, report the following:

The stock market opened higher, advanced fractionally further, and then lost most of the improvement. There was, however, conspicuous strength in these stocks whose purchase I had advised recently, and they were the only ones that sold higher than they did last week. Pacific mail is one of these we continue to advise its purchase in any set back for a further advance.

B.R.T. got up to 87, and remains a purchase on any little dip. It should sell at 95 before 85. As to the rest of the market, our best information is still bearish for the next few points.

TO REDUCE RATES

Hydro Board Authorizes Cut in Toronto, Ottawa and London

ALL PRESENT SURPLUSES

TORONTO, Nov. 20.—The Hydro-Electric Commission at its meeting yesterday authorized a reduction of 10 and 15 per cent. in the rates now obtaining in Toronto, London and Ottawa. Toronto and Ottawa are advised of a justified reduction of 10 and 15 per cent. respectively on all light and power rates, whereas London can cut off 15 per cent. on light and 18 per cent. on power charges.

Every one of the 46 municipalities in Ontario now using Hydro showed a surplus for the past nine months. The smallest surplus is 10 per cent. and they soar in some instances to 45 and 50. None of the larger cities falls below 20 per cent. profit.

The fifth railway contract in the history of the commission thus far was completed when Hon. Adam Beck signed for the power supply of the London Street Railway. It is estimated that the amount of energy to be used in this way will slightly exceed 1,000 horsepower.

Toronto shows a surplus of 25 per cent. above the total cost; Ottawa returns 25 per cent.; London, 20 per cent.; St. Thomas, 45 per cent.; Port Arthur, 52 per cent.; Berlin, 35 per cent.; Guelph, 35 per cent.; Stratford, 40 per cent.; Galt, regardless of a 15 per cent. reduction recently on power and light rates, returns now a 30 per cent. surplus.

Waterloo, in the same district, shows a 45 per cent. surplus; Penetang, 45 per cent.; Baden, 35 per cent., and Weston, 35 per cent.

In the three cities of Toronto, London and Ottawa, the commission takes the opportunity of forwarding to the local commissions the recommendation that their surplus admits of a reduction at this time in accordance with the policy of the Government body that the surplus be used in this way. Notifications to this effect are being issued to these cities unless there should be some serious objection on the part of the local commissioners.

The commission also authorized the closing of the contract with Owen Sound, and ordered the commission's engineers to set about the plans and tenders for the work in hand at once. This stroke involves the expenditure of $650,000 in the development of power at Eugenia Falls, and the supply of the string of towns round about. In addition the proposed line will tie with the Collingwood connection, now serving Midland, Penetang and Barrie. It is thought that at least 1,200 horsepower will be used.

GETS FIFTEEN YEARS.

Indian Escapes Death Penalty For Triple Murder.

VANCOUVER, Nov. 20—Imprisonment for fifteen years was the sentence passed by Justice Morrison yesterday on George Wilson, the Kimsquit Indian, who was found guilty of manslaughter in connection with the deaths of Chas. Wilson, Emma Wilson and George Paul on the night of Sept. 10. The convicted man had only five weeks before been released from the penitentiary on a charge of wounding Emma Wilson, when he was arrested for shooting her.

Stikine Joe, an accomplice of Wilson, who was found guilty of manslaughter of Watchy Gus and recommended to mercy by the jury, was sentenced to five years in jail.

Carried Off Hotel Cash Box.

SARNIA, Nov. 20.—The police are making a search for the thieves who rifled the telephone box at the Hotel Northern. The phone connections were cut and the instrument, as well as the cash box, was carried off by the thieves. The Hotel Northern is next door to the police station and not more than twenty feet away from the police cells. No trace of the guilty parties has so far been found.

STUDENTS RAISE RIOT.

Organized Attempt Made To Disturb Larkin's Meeting.

LONDON, Nov. 20.—The first appearance as an orator in London of James Larkin, head of the Transport Workers' Union of Dublin, or King Larkin, as he is now dubbed by his adherents here, led to wild scenes of disorder at Albert Hall last night, where several thousand people had gathered to hear him.

When Larkin was liberated a week ago from Mountjoy Prison, where he was serving a seven-months' term for sedition, he announced that he was going to England "to raise the fiery cross," and he predicted a general strike throughout Great Britain. There was much interest therefore in what he might say last night.

A large body of students from the colleges connected with London University made an organized attempt to upset the meeting, and fierce rioting both outside and inside the hall occurred.

A large force of police was requisitioned, and free fights occurred.

Many persons were injured before the meeting was able to proceed, for the students successfully stormed the entrance and gained admission to the floor of the hall. There, further fighting took place, and sticks and umbrellas were freely used. Fireworks were let off amid scenes of pandemonium, and for a time there was danger of panic. The organist continued playing, however, and the audience began singing socialist songs, to which the students responded by singing "God Save the King" and "Rule Britannia."

When order was partially restored, Larkin went on with his speech, which was mainly devoted to a denunciation of the Government in connection with the Dublin strike. The leader of the Transport Workers showed himself to be master of a rough discursive style of eloquence.

CLUB HOUSE ATTACKED.

New York Gunmen Engage In Battle on the Street.

NEW YORK, Nov. 20.—One of the most spectacular gun battles among gangsters in this city in recent years was fought at the doors of a club house on the lower East Side late Tuesday night. Three men were seriously shot, many others were wounded, and seven were arrested after the police reserves finally dared to break up the fight.

Gangsters crouching behind trees, ash barrels, and other obstructions, opened fire on the club house. Men within sprang to the doors and windows and answered the attack. Fifty shots were exchanged, while detectives blew their whistles for aid. When the revolvers were emptied the police charged the club house. They met with no resistance. The gangsters in the street fled.

The Double Work of the Blood

The circulation of the blood is one of the most perfect pieces of mechanism in the universe. Besides carrying nourishment to every part of the body, the blood collects the waste products and passes through the kidneys in order that these poisons may be eliminated.

Hence you see the tremendous importance of keeping the kidneys in healthful working order so that they free the blood of these impurities before they find lodgment in some weak spot and set up serious disease.

Aching back and aching head, troubles with the digestion, deposits in the urine, constipation and biliousness—such are the symptoms which indicate the need of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. The liver is awakened to action, the bowels regulated, and the kidneys made vigorous in their work of purifying the blood.

In the great majority of homes Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills are kept at hand for use in just such cases. They save many doctor bills, and by keeping the digestive and excretive systems in health do much to prolong life and bring comfort in old age.

WALKS HOME ALIVE

Sailor's Family Were About to Bury Wrong Body

RESEMBLANCE IS AMAZING

HAMILTON, Nov. 20.—To walk into his home where the members of his family were gathered about a casket that was supposed to contain his dead body, which had been cast up by the waters of Lake Huron, following the storm of last week, was the remarkable experience that befell John Thompson, 422 North John street, last evening. His appearance turned the house of mourning into one of joy, and it was quickly rid of the stranger's remains and the emblems of death which were in the room along with the body that was brought back from Goderich by the father Tuesday. The living son's entrance into the house where he was mourned as dead was a great shock, as the members of the family were unprepared for such a happening, but it was such a shock as they could easily bear.

On Monday Thomas Thompson received a message from his daughter at Sarnia that her brother John was aboard the steamer James Carruthers when it sank last week on Lake Huron. He at once left for Goderich, where a number of bodies from the Carruthers had been washed ashore and were in the morgue. He reached that place late at night, and was at once shown a number of bodies that lay there awaiting identification. He noticed that the toes on the foot of one of the corpses were crossed, as were his son's, and decided to further examine it. On the arm was a tattoo mark with the initials "J. T." This was identical with one on his son's arm. On the nose was a mark similar to one his son bore, and besides this there was a similarity in the teeth; his son has lost one eye tooth and two lower teeth, and these teeth were also missing from the mouth of the corpse. Lastly there was on the leg of the corpse a scar from a burn similar to a mark on his son.

With so many remarkable points of resemblance, in addition to the general appearance of the body, both in stature and features, he was convinced that it was his son. The only difference was in the hair, his son's being very dark, and that of the corpse inclined to a brown shade, but it was explained that the action of the water might cause this, and in view of all the other points of resemblance this was not seriously regarded.

Mr. Thompson made arrangements for the conveyance of the body to this city, and it arrived yesterday. After being prepared for burial it was taken home, and arrangements were made for its burial this morning. Many floral tokens were sent by friends of the family, and a number of spiritual bouquets were laid on the coffin for prayers for the repose of his soul.

About five o'clock last evening John Thompson walked into his home after having read that he was dead, and looked at the remains that were supposed to be his. The resemblance between his face and that of the corpse was striking even then, and it was not difficult to understand how the father and other members of the family were deceived. The son informed the members of his family that he had read while in Toronto that he was reported dead, and did not reach this city till yesterday, not having in the meantime sent word to the family that he was alive.

He explained that he did not sail on the Carruthers, but left here on the Canada, which he left when it reached the Welland Canal. From there he made his way to Montreal, and then went back to Toronto, where he read the report of his death.

Rebels Have Control of Nearly Three-Quarters Now

BRITISH WARSHIP SENT

WASHINGTON, Nov. 20. — With the fall yesterday of Victoria, the capital of Tamaulipas, the Mexican rebels, though not concertedly, now control or dominate fifteen out of thirty states and territories in the troubled Republic of Mexico. The states dominated by the rebels, however, cover nearly three-fourths of the entire area of the country and contain over two-thirds of the nation's population. Among the states controlled by the rebels are the richest of the republic.

It is impossible, of course, to enumerate accurately the status of each state, but those now dominated by the Constitutionalists, as the rebels call themselves, follow: Sonora, Chihuahua, Coahuila, Tamaulipas, San Luis Potosi, Durango, Lower California (Territory), Sinaloa, Zacatecas, Queretaro, Michoacan, Puebla, Lower Vera Cruz, Tabasco, Chiapas.

Gen. Zapata, who refuses to have himself considered as a part of any revolutionary movement other than his own, holds forth in Pueblo and Lower Vera Cruz. Gen. Villa, after his riotous success in the capture of Juarez and the capture of Victoria, displays evidence of independence of Carranza, but Villa has not yet announced himself openly as favoring a break with Carranza.

News that three big British cruisers had been ordered to proceed from West Indian ports to Vera Cruz created some comment in official circles, where it was recalled that recent London despatches had indicated that the British Government would entrust the interests of their subjects in Mexico to the United States. It was pointed out, however, that the Washington Government had welcomed the appearance of foreign warships in Mexican waters, and that the gathering of British, German, Japanese, and French vessels off the coast might indicate to Gen. Huerta a growing lack of confidence on the part of the powers in his ability longer to maintain himself and insure the safety of foreigners in Mexico.

Foreigners Planning for Defence.

MEXICO CITY, Nov. 20.—Speculation as to what President Wilson intends to do in the face of the Mexican difficulty was increased yesterday by the knowledge that the American charge d'affaires, Nelson O'Shaughnessy, had received new instructions from Washington to wait at his post for further instructions and that important matters were under consideration.

The foreign colonies in the Mexican capital are preparing to defend themselves in the event of disturbances in the city. Both Sir Lionel Carden and Admiral Von Hintze, the British and German Ministers, respectively, have suggested to their nationals the advisability of perfecting some sort of defence organization.

No such advice has been given to the Americans, but committees are quietly working out a plan of defence, embracing the American, British, German and Austrian residents.

Britain Sends Warships.

BRIDGETOWN, Barbados, Nov. 20.—The British cruiser squadron in West Indian waters Tuesday night received peremptory orders to proceed to Vera Cruz, and the vessels sailed at midnight.

The British cruiser squadron consists of the three armored cruisers Suffolk, Berwick, and Lancaster, and is commanded by Rear Admiral Sir Christopher Cradock, whose flagship is the Suffolk. The three vessels are of the same type, displacing 9,800 tons. They each carry an armament of fourteen 6-inch, eight 12-pounder, and three 3-pounder guns.

Great Britain decided to send the warships to Mexican waters from Barbados in order to protect British subjects should the necessity arise. The decision was arrived at by the British Government as a result of the general news published in the press of the United States as to conditions prevailing in Mexico, and of the advance of the Constitutionalists in the vicinity of the Vera Cruz Railway.

STILL AT THE SOO.

Most of the Damaged Steamers Getting Ready to Sail.

SAULT STE. MARIE, Mich., Nov. 20.—In the heavy fog Tuesday night the steamer Mapleton, upbound, went ashore on Drummond Island. Word was sent to the owners from Detour yesterday morning and a tug was ordered from the Soo. The Mapleton is loaded with cement for Fort William. She will have to be lightered.

Nearly all steamers recently released from groundings in this vicinity are still here. The Hartwell is lying at the Algoma Steel Co.'s dock, unloading her cargo of ore. The Hutchison expects to get away to-day. The Nottingham will also leave today, if steamers can be procured to tow her down.

The Pontiac left yesterday afternoon for Duluth.

It is probable that the Major will be abandoned by her owners as soon as her cargo of coal is discharged. Examination reveals that her injuries are too serious to consider repairing.

RESCUED FROM DEATH.

Warship Takes Thirty Persons From Burning Steamer.

LONDON, Nov. 20.—The British battleship Iron Duke effected a timely rescue of the thirty passengers and crew of the steamer Scotsdyke while the steamer was burning in the English Channel early yesterday.

The steamer, bound from Mediterranean ports for Sunderland, caught fire off the Isle of Wight shortly after midnight. The blaze started in a deck cargo of grass and spread so rapidly through this inflammable material that the crew was unable to stay its progress and it attacked the ship's bridge and a number of lifeboats, which were destroyed.

Owing to the heavy sea it was impossible to launch the few remaining lifeboats. The panic-stricken passengers and the crew were forced to retire to the stern of the steamer.

The battleship Iron Duke was fortunately carrying out trials in the channel during the night, and when the burning steamer was sighted, sailors from the warship put off in boats to the rescue.

The forepart of the steamer was a mass of flames when the boats reached the scene, and the helpless persons aboard were huddled together aft.

The Iron Duke played her searchlights upon the stern of the doomed ship while the rescue crew took all hands safely off.

RIBBONS FOR CANADIANS.

Sifton's Horses Carry Off Prizes at New York Show.

NEW YORK, Nov. 20.—The Sifton entries were the principal winners in the feature event of the afternoon at the horse show, the class for hunters or jumpers over four successive jumps of five feet. Capt. J. W. Sifton's Mayfair won the blue ribbon in this event, while the fourth prize went to Lieut. W. B. Sifton's Skyscraper. Both mounts were handled by Jack Hamilton. Captain Paul Rodzanko of the Russian Guards took the second prize handily with his mare Genza.

Kryptok Lenses

The man who invented Kryptok Invisible Bifocals came very near discovering an equivalent to the Fountain of Youth.

It is the Eyes that make a healthy person feel old, nothing else.

If you wear distant glasses and lower your eyes to read, the page is blurred. If you are wearing reading glasses and raise the eyes to look around, everything is blurred.

You meet a friend who tells you he is wearing bifocal glasses at that moment but to all appearance they are plain glasses. He reads through the reading part and sees his car two blocks through the distant part with equal facility. He is wearing Fowler's Kryptok Invisible Bifocal Glasses.

"That Affair Next Door"

By ANNA KATHARINE GREEN

The deep-drawn sigh which swept through the room testified to the universal satisfaction; then our attention became fixed again, for the Coroner, pointing to the under-garments accompanying the articles already mentioned, demanded if they had been included in the order.

There was as little hesitation in the reply given to this question as to the former. He recognized each piece as having come from his establishment. "You will note, said he, "that they have never been washed, and that the pencil marks are still on them."

"Very good," observed the Coroner, "and you will note that one article there is torn down the back. Was it in that condition when sent?"

"It was not, sir."

"All were in perfect order?"

"Most assuredly, sir."

"Very good, again. The jury will take cognizance of this fact, which may be useful to them in their future conclusions. And now, Mr. Callahan, do you notice anything lacking here from the list of articles forwarded by you?"

"No, sir."

"Yet there is one very necessary adjunct to a woman's outfit which is not to be found here."

"Yes, sir, the shoes; but I am not surprised at that. We sent shoes, but they were not satisfactory, and they were returned."

"Ah, I see. Officer, show the witness the shoes that were taken from the deceased."

This was done, and when Mr. Callahan had examined them, the Coroner inquired if they came from his store. He replied no.

Whereupon they were held up to the jury, and attention called to the fact that, while rather new than old, they gave signs of having been worn more than once; which was not true of anything else taken from the victim.

This matter settled, the Coroner proceeded with his questions:

"Who carried the articles ordered, to the address given?"

"A man in our employ, named Clapp."

"Did he bring back the amount of the bill?"

"Yes, sir; less the five dollars charged for the shoes."

"What was the amount, may I ask?"

"Here is our cash-book, sir. The amount received from Mrs. James Pope, Hotel D——, on the seventeenth of September, is, as you see, seventy-five dollars and fifty-eight cents."

"Let the jury see the book; also the order."

They were both handed to the jury, and if ever I wished myself in any one's shoes, save my own very substantial ones, it was at that moment. I did so want a peep at that order.

It seemed to interest the jury also, for their heads drew together very eagerly over it, and some whispers and a few knowing looks passed between them. Finally one of them spoke:

"It is written in a very odd hand. Do you call this a woman's writing or a man's?"

"I have no opinion to give on the subject," rejoined the witness. "It is intelligible writing and that is all that comes within my province."

The twelve men shifted on their seats and surveyed the Coroner eagerly. Why did he not proceed? Evidently he was not quick enough to suit them.

"Have you any further questions for this witness?" asked that gentleman after a short delay.

Their nervousness increased, but no one ventured to follow the Coroner's suggestion. A poor lot, I call them, a very poor lot! I would have found plenty of questions to put to him.

I expected to see the man Clapp called next, but I was disappointed in this. The name uttered was Henshaw, and the person who rose in answer to it was a tall, burly man with a shock of curly black hair. He was the clerk of the Hotel D——, and we all forgot Clapp in our eagerness to hear what this man had to say.

His testimony amounted to this:

That a person by the name of Pope was registered on his books. That she came to his house on the seventeenth of September, some time near noon. That she was not alone; that a person she called her husband accompanied her, and that they had been given a room, at her request, on the second floor overlooking Broadway.

"Did you see the husband? Was it his handwriting we see in your register?"

"No, sir. He came into the office, but he did not approach the desk. It was she who registered for them both, and who did all the business in fact. I thought it queer, but took it for granted he was ill, for he held his head very much down, and acted as if he felt disturbed or anxious."

"Did you notice him closely? Would you be able to identify him on sight?"

"No, sir, I should not. He looked like a hundred other men I see every day: medium in height and build, with brown hair and brown moustache. Not noticeable in any way, sir, except for his hang-dog air and evident desire not to be noticed."

"But you saw him later?"

"No, sir. After he went to his room he stayed there, and no one saw him. I did not even see him when he left the house. His wife paid the bill and he did not come into the office."

"But you saw her well; you would know her again?"

"Perhaps, sir; but I doubt it. She wore a thick veil when she came in, and though I might remember her voice, I have no recollection of her features for I did not see them."

"You can give a description of her dress, though; surely you must have looked long enough at a woman who wrote her own and her husband's name in your register, for you to remember her clothes."

"Yes for they were very simple. She had on what is called a gossamer, which covered her from neck to toe, and on her head a hat wrapped all about with a blue veil."

"So that she might have worn any dress under that gossamer?"

"Yes, sir."

"And any hat under that veil?"

"Any one that was large enough, sir."

"Very good. Now, did you see her hands?"

"Not to remember them."

"Did she have gloves on?"

"I cannot say. I did not stand and watch her, sir."

"That is a pity. But you say you heard her voice."

"Yes, sir."

"Was it a lady's voice? Was her tone refined and her language good?"

"They were, sir."

"When did they leave? How long did they remain in your house?"

"They left in the evening; after tea, I should say."

"How? On foot or in a carriage?"

"In a carriage; one of the hacks that stand in front of the door."

"Did they bring any baggage with them?"

"No, sir."

"Did they take any away?"

"The lady carried a parcel."

"What kind of a parcel?"

"A brown-paper parcel, like clothing done up."

"And the gentleman?"

"I did not see him."

"Was she dressed the same in going as in coming?"

"To all appearance, except her hat. That was smaller."

"She had the gossamer on still, then?"

"Yes, sir."

"And a veil?"

"Yes, sir."

"Only that the hat it covered was smaller?"

"Yes, sir."

"And now, how did you account to yourself for the parcel and the change of hat?"

"I didn't account for them. I did not think anything about them at the time; but since I have had the subject brought to mind, I find it easy enough. She had a package delivered to her while she was in our house, or rather packages; they were quite numerous, I believe."

"Can you recall the circumstances of their delivery?"

"Yes, sir; the man who brought the packages said that they had not been paid for, so I allowed him to carry them to Mrs. James Pope's room. When he went away, he had but one small parcel with him; the rest he had left."

"And this is all you can tell us about this singular couple? Had they no meals in your house?"

"No, sir; the gentleman—or I suppose I should say the lady, sir, for the order was given in her voice—sent for two dozen oysters and a bottle of ale, which were furnished to them in their rooms; but they didn't come to the dining-room."

"Is the boy here who carried up those articles?"

"He is, sir."

"And the chambermaid who attended to their rooms?"

"Yes, sir."

"Then you may answer this question, and we will excuse you. How was the gentlemen dressed when you saw him?"

"In a linen duster and a felt hat."

"Let the jury remember that. And the cuff he had seen on the man's hand when it was thrust through the doorway had a button in it.

The answer was disappointing. The witness had not noticed any.

The juror, somewhat abashed, sank into silence, at which another of the precious twelve, inspired no doubt by the other's example, blurted out:

"Then what was the colour of the coat sleeve? You surely can remember that."

But another disappointment awaited us.

"He did not wear any coat. It was a shirt sleeve I saw."

A shirt sleeve! There was no clue in that. A visible look of dejection spread through the room, which was not dissipated till another witness stood up.

This time it was the bell-boy of the hotel who had been on duty that day. His testimony was brief, and added but little to the general knowledge. He had been summoned more than once by these mysterious parties, but only to receive his orders through a closed door. He had not entered the room at al.

He was followed by the chambermaid who testified that she was in the room once while they were there; that she saw them both then, but did not catch a glimpse of their faces; Mr. Pope was standing in the window almost entirely shielded by the curtains, and Mrs. Pope was busy hanging up something in the wardrobe. The gentleman had on his duster and the lady her gossamer; it was but a few minutes after their arrival.

Questioned in regard to the state of the room after they left it, she said that there was a lot of brown paper lying about, marked B. Altman, but nothing else that did not belong there.

"Not a tag, nor a hat-pin, nor a bit of memorandum, lying on the bureau or table?"

"Nothing, sir, so far as I mind. I wasn't on the look-out for anything, sir. They were a queer couple, but we have lots of queer couples at our house, and the most I notices, sir is those what remember the chambermaid and those what don't. This couple was of the kind what don't."

"Did you sweep the room after their departure?"

"I always does. They went late, so I swept the room the next morning."

WOMAN IN TERRIBLE STATE

Finds Help in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Cape Wolfe, Canada.—"Last March I was a complete wreck. I had given up all hope of getting better or living any length of time, as I was such a sufferer from female troubles. But I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and today I am in good health and have a pair of twin boys two months old and growing finely. I surprised doctors and neighbors for they all know what a wreck I was.

"Now I am healthy, happy and hearty, and owe it all to Lydia E. Pinkham's remedies. You may publish this letter if you like. I think if more women used your remedies they would have better health."—Mrs. J. T. Cook, Lot No. 7, Cape Wolfe, P.E.I., Canada.

Because your case is a difficult one, and doctors having done you no good, do not continue to suffer without giving Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial. It surely has remedied many cases of female ills, such as inflammation, ulceration, displacements, tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, and it may be exactly what you need.

The Pinkham record is a proud and peerless one. It is a record of constant victory over the obstinate ills of women—ills that deal out despair. It is an established fact that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has restored health to thousands of such suffering women. Why don't you try it if you need such a medicine?

now let us hear from Richard Clapp. Is Richard Clapp in the room?"

"I am, sir," answered a cheery voice; and a lively young man with a shrewd eye and a wide-awake manner popped up from behind a portly woman on a side seat and rapidly came forward.

He was asked several questions before the leading one which we all expected; but I will not record them here. The question which brought the reply most eagerly anticipated was this:

"Do you remember being sent to the Hotel D— with several packages for a Mrs. James Pope?"

"I do sir."

"Did you deliver them in person? Did you see the lady?"

A peculiar look crossed his face, and we all leaned forward. But his answer brought a shock of disappointment with it.

"No, I didn't, sir. She wouldn't let me in. She bade me lay the things down by the door and wait in the rear hall till she called me."

"And you did this?"

"Yes, sir."

"But you kept your eye on the door, of course?"

"Naturally, sir."

"And saw—"

"A hand steal out and take in the things."

"A woman's hand?"

"No; a man's. I saw the white cuff."

"And how long was it before they called you?"

"Fifteen minutes, I should say. I heard a voice cry 'Here!' and seeing their door open, I went toward it. But by the time I reached it, it was shut again, and I only heard the lady say that all the articles but the shoes were satisfactory, and would I thrust the bill in under the door. I did so, and they were some minutes counting out the change, but presently the door opened slightly, and I saw a man's hand holding out the money, which was correct to the cent. 'You need not receipt the bill,' cried the lady from somewhere in the room. 'Give him the shoes and let him go.' So I received the shoes in the same mysterious way I had the money, pocketed the bills and returned to the store."

"Has the jury any further questions to ask the witness?"

Of course not. They were ninnies, all of them, and— But, contrary to my expectation, one of them did perk up courage and, wriggling very much on his seat, ventured to ask if

This recipe makes 16 ounces of better cough syrup than you could buy ready made for $2.50. A few doses usually conquer the most obstinate cough—stops even whooping cough quickly. Simple as it is, no better remedy can be had at any price.

Mix two cups of granulated sugar with one cup of warm water, and stir for 2 minutes. Put 2½ ounces of Pinex (fifty cents' worth) in a 16-ounce bottle; then add the Sugar Syrup. It has a pleasant taste and lasts a family a long time. Take a teaspoonful every one, two or three hours.

You can feel this take hold of a cough in a way that means business. Has a good tonic effect, braces up the appetite, and is slightly laxative, too, which is helpful. A handy remedy for hoarseness, croup, bronchitis, asthma and all throat and lung troubles.

The effect of pine on the membranes is well known. Pinex is the most valuable concentrated compound of Norwegian white pine extract, and is rich in guaiacol and all the natural healing pine elements. Other preparations will not work in this formula.

This Pinex and Sugar Syrup recipe has attained great popularity throughout the United States and Canada. It has often been imitated, though never successfully.

Just One Application And the Hairs Vanish

(Helps to Beauty)

Here is a very simple and effective way to banish objectionable hairs or fuss: Mix into a stiff paste enough powdered delatone and water to cover the undesirable hairs, apply and after about 2 or 3 minutes remove the paste, wash the skin and every trace of hair will have vanished. This method is quite harmless and leaves the skin soft and spotless. Be sure, however, to get the delatone in an original package, otherwise it may not be of the desired strength and purity.

New Use for a Church.

With the reopening a few nights ago of the Georgetown, Ont., Congregational Church as a municipally-owned institution, combining library and recreation rooms, the problem of a superfluity of Protestant churches in that town was solved. The fine stone structure was built over thirty years ago at a cost of $40,000. The town found it rather difficult to support five Protestant churches. The idea of using the church building as a library and recreation institution was mooted early this year, and the council of the congregation endorsed it and voluntarily handed over the property to the town council. Half of the main auditorium will be used as a library, while the other half has been reconstructed into a small lecture room, containing 100 chairs.

By means of public subscription and funds derived from garden parties and like entertainments, a women's organization raised money to create a rest room and reading room for ladies, which occupies half the basement. Here the Women's Institute will endeavor to provide a comfortable room where farmers' wives may rest when they drive into town.

The remaining portion of the basement has been equipped as a recreation room for the young men of the town, and it is expected that it will solve to a large degree the problem of keeping the young men off the streets at night.

Somewhat Crude, This.

Art is long, sings the poet, and it must needs also be long-suffering to endure the critical comments of some people who boast more cash than culture.

Which is apropos of a little incident in the Princess Theatre, Toronto, at the conclusion of a recent performance of "The Garden of Allah," that tragic drama of the renegade monk who married a woman, and by her was sent back to the monastery to spend the rest of his life there.

Just as the big monastery gate had closed, and the noise of the shot bolt was heard, Dominie, the woman, was left alone on the stage.

At this point a newly-rich society bud turned to her escort, and remarked quite audibly, "Well, she is a grass widow now."

Sunken Walnut Logs.

On the bottom of Gull lake, in Michigan, lies a small fortune in walnut logs, which were once considered of so little value that they were towed out into deep water and sunk. As the lake is 300 feet deep in places the logs are likely to remain a dead loss. The logs are really the butt ends of fine walnut trees which were cut down years ago. Later the stumps were pulled out, hauled into the lake and let go.

Handicapped.

Lady—All your marine pictures represent the sea as calm. Why don't you paint a storm once in a while? Artist—We painters in oil can't do that, madam. We may outline a storm on the canvas; but, you see, as soon as we begin to spread on the oil colors the waves subside and the sea becomes as calm as a duck pond.—Boston Transcript.

Aristocratic Glassmakers.

Glassmaking used at one time to be the most aristocratic of all industries. A French law passed under Louis IX. allowed none but men of noble birth to set up glass blowing establishments or even to work therein. For many centuries this was the only trade no blemen could venture to work in without any danger of losing caste. The art of glassmaking reached England through France, and in its early days those engaged in it styled themselves "gentlemen glass blowers."

BEDOUIN JUSTICE

These People Prefer Tests by Fire or Water to Trial by Jury

Despite the efforts of the British Government to put a stop to witchcraft and similar barbaric usages among the many savage tribes over which the Union Jack waves, there are still corners of the Empire where extraordinary customs prevail amongst the people. In the Sinai Peninsula, for instance, the Bedouins still administer justice according to their old and very primitive tribal laws. The Bedouin suspect is taken before a judge, who places an iron pan on the fire, and when it is red hot the accused has to touch it three times with his tongue. If the tongue shows signs of being burned after this, the accused is pronounced guilty, for it is gravely contended that if not guilty the moisture on the tongue of the accused would prevent it from being seared.

Murder, as might be expected in this wild country, is not a capital offence, but it is punished in a variety of ways. The killing of a man can be avenged up to the fifth generation, but the crime can also be pardoned by the receipt of blood money during a similar period. Forty-one camels are considered sufficient recompense for one murder.

It must be admitted, however, in favor of the Bedouins that the price of a murder is high in proportion to that paid for other luxuries, for forty-one, camels are required to overlook blood-letting, whilst the cost of a bride is only five camels.

WAS TROUBLED WITH

Weak and Dizzy Spells.

Heart Would Beat Something Awful.

Those feelings of weakness, those dizzy spells which come over people from time to time, are warnings that must not go unheeded.

They indicate an extremely weakened condition of the heart and a disordered state of the nerves. One dizzy spell may pass off, but eventually they will come frequently, and at the same time more serious.

Those who are wise will start taking Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills before their case becomes hopeless, for they have no equal for restoring the heart to its usual strength, and making the nerves firm and steady.

Mrs. Len. Kinney, Moose Mountain, N.B., writes:—"I was troubled with weak and dizzy spells, and my heart would beat something awful. I got so I had those spells every day. I got so I would try one medicine, and then another, but nothing did me any good until I got Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills. I can safely say they did me more good than anything I ever took, for I feel like a very different woman. My friends often ask me what I have been taking, and I always say 'Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills.' I tell all my friends who say their heart troubles them, to take your pills."

ENTER THE OYSTER.

There's an R in the Month That's Good For Bivalves.

For scalloped oysters prepare a pint of oysters and season them with half a teaspoonful of salt and half a salt spoonful of pepper. Into one-third cup of melted butter stir a cup of cracker crumbs. Butter a shallow dish, put in one-fourth of the crumbs, then half of the oysters, then one-fourth more of the crumbs, the remaining oysters and a thick layer of crumbs on the top. Bake twenty minutes or until the crumbs are brown and the juice bubbles up on the edges. In doubling the rule half as many cracker crumbs more will be sufficient.

Cream Oysters on the Half Shell.

Pour into a saucepan a cupful of hot water, one of milk and one of cream, with a little salt. Set into a kettle of hot water until it boils; then stir in two tablespoonfuls of butter and a little salt, with white pepper. Take from the fire and add two heaping tablespoonfuls of corn starch wet with cold milk. By this time your shells should be washed and buttered and a fine oyster laid within each. Range the shells closely together in a large baking pan. Stir the cream very hard and fill up each shell with a spoon. Bake five or six minutes in a hot oven after the shells become warm.

Oysters in Cream (German Fashion).

Drain twenty-four oysters, add the juice of a lemon, one ounce of butter, salt and pepper and bring to a boil. Melt one ounce of butter, add two teaspoonfuls of flour, one-half pint of white stock, a spoonful of mushroom ketchup and cook and stir five minutes. Blend the yolks of two eggs with one-half cupful of cream or milk, add to the sauce and pour over the oysters.

To Insure Success in Preserving Fruit.

Success in preserving, as in other branches of the culinary art, depends largely on a strict adherence to rules.

For instance, it is well to avoid tin or metal utensils, as fruit acids attack metals and occasion a disagreeable and unwholesome flavor, and a dull off color is frequently the finished product. White lined utensils are preferable.

The shape of the pans may seem an unimportant matter, but it is well to bear in mind that broad rather than deep pans are advantageous, since the weight of fruit is apt to crush that below.

It is a vast help to have the necessary utensils, which include scales, measuring cups, jelly bag, wooden spoons, a wooden pestle, a colander of agate or similar ware, earthen bowls, a large mouthed funnel, silver plated knives and forks, a skimmer, a ladle, a pitcher with long, narrow pointed lip, a new sieve and two or three pans.

Fruit for preserving in any form should be fresh picked or gathered and slightly underripe. Such fruit insures more perfect shape in the finished product and eliminates the possibility of fermented fruit or the loss of pectin or jelly making property.

Handle soft fruit (peaches, berries, etc.) as little as possible. If it is to be canned in jars put it into the jars at once on hulling or otherwise preparing it.

If berries must be washed put them a few at a time into a colander, pour cold water over them and turn at once upon a large sieve to drain, then hull.

Large hard fruit, as apples, pears and quinces, should be washed and wiped dry before paring.

Cut apples and other hard fruit for jelly into quarters, removing all wormy places or imperfections. Retain the skin and cores. The cores of quinces should be discarded, as the excess of gummy properties does not improve jelly.

Aunt Sally's Advice To Beauty Seekers

Red Nose. The nose is a more delicate organ than most people imagine. It should be touched as little as possible. For undue redness the treatment recommended in following paragraph will be found effective. Apply without rubbing.

Muddy Skin. The surest, safest and surest method of giving a clear, healthy, transparent appearance to the complexion is to apply ordinary marcolised wax every night for from one to two weeks. This wax, obtainable at any drug store (one ounce is sufficient), actually takes off a bad complexion by gently and gradually absorbing the thin veil of surface skin. The new skin then in evidence is as fresh and velvety as a young girl's. The wax is applied like cold cream and washed off mornings.

Wrinkles. A harmless lotion made as follows has been found very effective in cases of wrinkles and crow's feet: Powdered saxolite, 1 oz., dissolved in witch hazel, ½ pt. Bathe the face in this daily for awhile.—Woman's Realm.

Spiced Grapes.

Remove the skins from grapes, put the pulp over the fire and stew gently until it can be rubbed through a coarse strainer that will not allow the seeds to pass. Weigh the pulp and to every five pounds of this add a pint of cider vinegar, four pounds of brown sugar, three tablespoonfuls of ground cinnamon and two of ground cloves. Stew all together until very thick. Pour into jelly glasses and cover with closely fitting tops.

Kitchen Help.

"What Do We Require Today?" is a help to the cook or the housekeeper. It is a new sort of ordering board. On each side the usual list of groceries is written. There is a central panel made up of little crosswise wires, each containing two coral colored beads. These beads are pushed to the right or the left, to stand next to the supplies wanted. The boards are priced at $1.

Undeveloped Canada.

It has been estimated that British Columbia has an area of abou. 252,000,000 acres, of which about 1,500,000 acres is composed of lakes in the interior. There are over 100,000,000 acr of timber land of no value for farming other than for stock purposes, and while it is estimated that 3,000,000 acres is either under cultivation or partly so, statistics show that the actual yielding acreage, other than for grazing purposes, is no more than 250,000 acres.

New Hats Commonplace Enough In the Hand, but the Pose!

FRUITS, FURS AND FEATHERS.

Trimming Decorations Were Never More Bizarre — Although Medium Sized Shapes Are the Favorites, High Adornments and Feathery Halos.

The new hats are almost commonplace in the hand, but the minute that they are posed correctly on the head their style is apparent. It requires some knack to arrange them at the most telling and becoming angle, and one must have an intimate acquaintance with the mirror to perform the feat successfully, for unless the hat sits just right on the head the beauty of the outline is lost, and the new hats owe much to the outline.

The majority are squashed down over one eye, generally the right one, and are raised high on the other side, showing a wide expanse of the hair. This gives a very jaunty air to the hat, which is accentuated by the curve of the brim and the trimming. The effect is rakish—that fact must be admitted—but these hats are universally becoming, for the large features of the average American require this slanting line across the front, with the height at the side, tending toward the back. Whether the hats flare on one side or not, they sit low on the head.

Much to the surprise of many of the millinery authorities, the fall hats thus far have been small and medium. Not any stretch of the imagination can make these medium hats large, though it is possible that a little later in the winter, when there is more demand for the dressy hats, the large hat may return to favor. As the average American woman looks her best in a large picture hat, it is to be hoped that the longings of the milliners may be realized soon. The vogue for ostrich plumes may bring back the large hat, for ostrich plumes are certainly shown to the best advantage on large velvet hats, which, by the way, are here in abundance, but in the medium size and in the draped turbans.

There is very little novelty among the materials for hats. The one novelty, duvetyn, threatens to lose its exclusiveness through overpopularity, more's the pity, for it is an admirable fabric for hats. Composed, as is the millinery duvetyn, of silk and cotton, it drapes delightfully, is light in weight and blends well with velvet and the imitation fur cloths. The manufacturers of the moderate priced hats immediately recognized the advantages of this fabric and are using it extensively; hence the hesitancy of the milliners who supply the exclusive trade. Outside of duvetyn, velvet is the favorite material, with velours, plush, taffeta and the imitation fur cloths as close seconds. The hat pictured owes its charm to the daringly posed wings, which are bright green and blue colorings. The hat itself is of dark blue velours.

Thrilling Chase and Capture of Reynolds Forsbrey, Slayer of Three

By JOSEPH A. FAUROT.

THE police of New York never had a bolder, more resourceful or more desperate criminal to deal with than Reynolds Forsbrey, a burglar, a slayer, and, more remarkable still, for his thrilling escape from his solitary cell in the Tombs prison. He is doing a long term in Sing Sing now, and perhaps only those of us in close touch with police secrets know that but for his finger print records in our possession he might still be at large. He was identified solely and alone through his prints, and this made it possible for Second Deputy Commissioner Dougherty and his aids to finally run him to his lair, where they at the risk of their lives disarmed, overpowered and captured him.

There is no more interesting case recorded in our files than that of Forsbrey, as this narrative, correct in every detail, will prove. The record of his offences, as chronicled with us, covers many typewritten pages, for Forsbrey is a celebrity in criminal annals and well worthy of a chapter to himself.

At about noon on February 24, 1912, Welter Meserita, proprietor of a haberdashery at No. 779 Flatbush avenue, Brooklyn, was shot and killed in his store. His body was discovered by a clerk who had been absent for a few minutes. There apparently was no clew to the murderer, for no person living in the neighborhood could tell the police of a single incident bearing on the murder. None had seen or heard of anything unusual in the Meserita store. None had seen any person enter or leave the store in the absence of the clerk.

The Detective Bureau got busy at once. We learned that neckties, razors and $25 in cash had been stolen, while the watch and chain of the burglar's victim also was lifted. We searched for telltale finger prints, found some and duly preserved them. We located the watch and safety razors in a pawnshop an hour or two after the murder. A full description of the persons who pawned the articles was obtained from the pawnbroker, and an hour later he viewed photographs at Police Headquarters and identified those of James Cassidy and Frank Redmond as the men who had pawned the articles.

They were arrested the following day. Cassidy was wearing a necktie identified as having been taken from Meserita's store. Another man, known as John Clark, we sought as a possible confederate in the murder and robbery. Two of the stolen razors had been located in a Smith street (Brooklyn) pawnshop, while the watch and still other razors were found in a shop a block or two distant. Cassidy was arrested in State street, Brooklyn, while Redmond was picked up at a house in Clinton street.

Now the scene shifts and includes still another tragedy. On the morning of July 29 a man entered the jewelry store of Morris Schwartzkopf, at No. 8 Delancey street, New York city, ostensibly for the purpose of selling a diamond pin. Without warning, it seems, Schwartzkopf was shot down, his assailant escaping. The same day Max Katz, a clerk in the United cigar store at No. 23 Cooper square waited upon a man who called to purchase tobacco. Katz turned his back on his customer to get the tobacco, and as he faced about toward the counter it was to look into the muzzle of a revolver levelled at his head. Katz, undaunted, lunged over the counter and seized his armed assailant, and in the struggle that followed he was shot twice in the face, the man doing the shooting fleeing to the street.

The fugitive plunged down the street and endeavored to make good his escape through the tenement house at Seventh street and Hall place. The pursuit attracted the attention of the police and the fugitive was apprehended in the basement of the tenement. He was brought to Police Headquarters, and after looking through the Rogues' Gallery we failed to find a photograph by which we could positively identify him.

Then we finger printed our prisoner and I knew that if he had ever been in our custody before we would soon nail him.

As soon as we had the impressions from his digits he was positively identified as Reynolds Forsbrey, alias Clark, alias Robertson, and it was further learned he was the third man we wanted for the murder of the haberdasher. We also learned that Forsbrey had made all arrangements to go to Montreal, and in order to replenish his depleted purse had staged the robbery of Schwartzkopf, the jeweller, and Max Katz, the cigar clerk.

Forsbrey was taken to Gouverneur Hospital, where Schwartzkopf unhesitatingly identified him as the man who had shot him. An hour or so after this identification Schwartzkopf died. When again brought to detective headquarters and quizzed by Commissioner Dougherty and myself Forsbrey made admissions which implicated him in the Meserita murder. Cassidy and Redmond both were indicted and tried for this murder, but both were acquitted.

While in the Tombs awaiting trial Forsbrey frequently was visited by a young woman known as Margaret Ryan, who described herself as a stenographer and engaged to marry the prisoner. Shortly after one of these visits Forsbrey attempted to escape from the prison, but his well laid scheme was frustrated. A search of his cell revealed the presence of a phial of muriatic acid and several small, fine saws. Investigation showed that this acid and the saws had been smuggled in to Forsbrey by his sweetheart. The saws she had concealed in the thick coils of her hair, while the little bottle containing the acid had been hidden in her shirt waist.

In an Instant Riley Hurled Himself at His Man.

REYNOLDS FORSBREY AND MARGARET RYAN

The Tombs officials decided they would take no more chances with Forsbrey. He was removed from his cell and placed in solitary confinement in a remote portion of the prison, far removed from other prisoners and so situated that a constant watch, day and night, could be kept over him. All visitors were denied access to him, and it was intended that he should be as effectually caged as a wild beast until the day of his trial arrived. He was known as a desperate criminal and he had demonstrated it. He was resourceful, and this he proved by the presence of the acid and tools that were to be employed in effecting his escape.

So eager was Warden Fallon to guard his prisoner that he issued orders that Forsbrey was not to be left unguarded a minute through day or night. Prison keepers and trusties were detailed to maintain this vigil, and these were changed at frequent intervals so as to guard against the prisoner ingratiating himself into the good graces of his watchers.

In less than a week after Forsbrey's attempt to break from the Tombs the keepers of that institution awoke one bright Sunday morning to find his cell empty and their prisoner flown. A hysterical and frenzied search was at once instituted, and, while it was easy to trace his every movement from the moment one of his guards had permitted himself the luxury of a nap, that trail led through divers and subterranean passages to the outer prison wall, which he scaled and then jauntily dropped from into Centre street and to liberty.

Just how this escape was effected eclipses anything in the history of prison escapes in the country. My contentions of his nerve and daring are amply borne out when his methods are related.

When Forsbrey's guard lapsed into the luxury of a post-midnight nap Forsbrey ripped his cot to pieces. Using the underpinning or bars, one on top of the other, as a platform, he climbed to its top, and seizing the iron ventilator plate he wrenched it from its position on the wall. He climbed or wormed himself up to this opening, his wiry stature permitting him to squirm head first through it. This air shaft dropped sheer to the basement, thirty feet below, and this agile chap climbed or fell to the bottom. He emerged into a subcellar and made his way to the carpenter shop, into which he forced an entrance. Once in the shop Forsbrey had the choice of four iron barred windows from which he could emerge through if he wished to reach the court. He chose the window overlooking Centre street, and with a big joist, nail studded, he pried the bars apart and crawled through, dragging the long joist with him.

He knew if he was to scale the prison wall dividing the court yard from the street he would need the joist to aid him in reaching the top of the wall.

It was out a few steps from the point where Forsbrey dropped from the carpenter shop to the wall, and using the joist as a scaling ladder he climbed the wall, dropped down into Centre street and was off. The hue and cry that was raised over his escape, the investigation that followed and the dismissal of the nodding keeper are all history now. Suffice it to say that as soon as we learned of it at Headquarters we knew it was up to us to get him back, and this we must do at all hazards.

Adopting the tenets of the old French proverb, "Find the woman," we knew that Margaret Ryan, once located, would prove the clew by which we might be able to trace Forsbrey. We knew he was short of funds, and no information had come to us which indicated that the Ryan girl was any too plentifully supplied. Of course, Forsbrey would get in instant communication with the girl who was so madly infatuated with him, or perhaps she had already prepared the haven into which he would creep and hide until he deemed it safe to venture forth to attempt to make tracks out of the city.

In looking for Margaret Ryan we found she had left her earlier home in Brooklyn, and after tracing her to one or two addresses in Manhattan we lost all track of her. She held the key to the whole situation, and every detective and policeman in the city was instructed to keep a constant lookout for her.

Circulars and information bulletins containing a portrait and a full description of Forsbrey were sent broadcast over this country as well as the Old World. They told that he had served terms in the New York House of Refuge, Albany County Penitentiary, Fort Payne (Ala.) jail, Elmira (N. Y.) Reformatory, Sing Sing and Auburn.

Forsbrey could be classed, and without fear of contradiction, as the most desperate criminal, operating as slayer, burglar, gunman, holdup man and sneak thief, the police ever had to cope with, and every man in the department was on his mettle to apprehend him. This, we knew, had to be done at any cost.

This man at large was a menace to any community. He had proved to us that where it was necessary to gain any point he desired he was not averse to resorting to his revolver, and we knew he always shot to kill. It was a case of locating Margaret Ryan, and that in a hurry. Her sudden disappearance from Brooklyn only added to our troubles, and we were worked to the highest tension in our blind chase for this slayer-fugitive. We knew that Forsbrey was a cocaine fiend, so that left us another clew to follow up. Every vendor of this drug in the city who was known to us was shadowed. Every drug store where cocaine could be had by its victims was watched. We also knew he was a plumber by trade, and we realized that if he was in desperate straits for money he might procure a job at his old trade, and to this end all plumbers were warned to be on the lookout for him.

Three weeks from the day Forsbrey fled so sensationally from the Tombs we got our first clew. A detective learned that a man answering in every detail to Forsbrey's description had called at the Bronx office of a newspaper in response to an advertisement for a janitor. We concluded he was hiding somewhere in the Bronx, so we concentrated all our efforts to thoroughly combing this district. Two days after the first clew came to us we learned that a man closely resembling Forsbrey had hired a top floor furnished apartment at No. 1,176 Fox street, the Bronx.

A young woman answering in a way the description of Margaret Ryan was living there as this new tenant's wife. The discrepancies in the descriptions of the fugitives and dwellers in this apartment pertained to their hair. But this was a mere detail and we knew hair dye was cheap and easily procurable.

On the night of September 24 a squad, led by Commissioner Dougherty, surrounded the house. The front and rear entrances were covered and detectives were stationed on the roof to cut off any attempted escape through this avenue. Detective Lieutenants Dominick Riley and James Flynn, with Mr. Dougherty at their head, burst into the suspected flat.

Screams and curses greeted their unceremonious entry and instantly the lights were extinguished. Shuffling of feet and whispering in a back room indicated that their quarry had taken refuge there. Mr. Dougherty struck a match as he groped his way to the door leading to the rear, and as he opened the door, there, cowering in a corner, grasping his revolver, stood Forsbrey, while a girl stood before him shielding him as it were from impending danger.

In an instant Riley hurled himself at his man, and in the struggle that followed Forsbrey dropped his gun. Mr. Dougherty grabbed this, and as the lights were flashed on Flynn came forward and seized the girl. One glance was sufficient to prove that both Forsbrey and his sweetheart had dyed hair.

Forsbrey had put up a desperate fight, but he was in our hands once more and it was our purpose that he should be brought to a speedy trial and no precaution toward safeguarding him until he was taken to court would be overlooked.

The trial of Forsbrey is doubtless still fresh in the minds of every one who reads the newspapers. It was short, crisp, but decisive. When brought up for sentence following his conviction he was given a term of not less than twenty years nor more than his natural life.

The one pathetic feature of Forsbrey's conviction was the blind devotion of Margaret Ryan. She loved him with all the intensity of a woman who has given up home, honor, liberty and everything else in his interests. To him she was no more than the dust under his feet. She was useful to him—a means to an end—and there his interest ceased. As he was being sent away to Sing Sing in the Sheriff's custody this girl wept, raved and pleaded for the privilege of a parting kiss.

This was denied her, and as she saw the last of her lover she staggered from the court room, her frame convulsed by sobs, her piteous outcry like that of a wounded animal, touching the hearts of all who heard and saw her.

That was the last of Forsbrey, and we, the police at New York, sincerely hope he will round out his life behind Sing Sing's grim walls.

NEXT WEEK

Inspector Faurot will describe the capture of a Tombs fugitive, known as New York's most desperate burglar. His method was to enter the home and, clapping a pistol to his victim's head, loot the place.

Cleaning Up a City to the Tune of Ragtime

LIVING by ragtime seems a remarkable enough standard, but apparently this is one of the objects of a local health service.

As is well known, in more than one centre many ingenious methods have been adopted to fasten public attention upon sanitary rules.

But, according to the medical officer the sanitary department of Chicago has sought to improve on more conventional methods by circulating a ragtime song for use during their annual "clean up week" by the inhabitants within its jurisdiction.

The Health Commissioner is said to insist upon a special week in each year for the removal of all refuse and insanitary collections that may have accumulated in back yards, vacant places, cellars and other spots, while, at the same time, householders are persuaded to go in for a thorough "spring cleaning."

Adventures of Harry Tuthill, Who Turned Bandit and Whose Trail Led to the Gallows

THE lure of new lands, the call of the trail to adventure, is always in the blood of youth. In the spring it glows and makes the heart to beat faster with the thought of what might hap. It makes the feet of youth restless and the home roads and ways seem stale and little worth.

When to a dilettante in romance comes the spring with its call, and with its call comes freedom from restraint, with the wherewithal to satisfy all the dreams of travel, it is but a matter of a few weeks at the most before the new trail, the out trail, knows vagrant feet and the ways are followed that lead to death or to adventure.

This was the case of Harry Tuthill, the mystery of whose disappearance has recently been cleared up by friends, who went over the trail he travelled in the early 80's and found that, in his case, the trail led to the gallows tree.

To be exact, in the spring of 1883 Harry Tuthill was bequeathed $50,000 by his parents, who died late in February that year. He attained his majority in March and the small fortune was given into his keeping.

He had been born in New York, was reared in New York and like many other New Yorkers thought a trip to Buffalo was a trip to the West, as in those days it was. Shortly before his parents' death an old friend of his, a few years older than he, returned from a trip to Dakota. He told Tuthill tales of the wild country and the wilder ways of the men who occupied the land. He told of the Indians, of the soldiers who kept them in order, of the outlaws who infested the land and, while steering clear of the United States troops, made life interesting for the settlers and for the storekeepers of Dakota, as North and South Dakota were then known.

The name of Billy the Kid was often mentioned by this friend. The deeds of the famous outlaw, whose real name was William McArthur, were elaborated upon and the merest border brawl in which the bandit participated was painted into a Robin Hood adventure for the benefit of the city youth. His band and the stage holdups which they had made were told of. The holding up of a saloon and gambling dive and the robbery of the patrons was the subject of an epic.

Harry Tuthill felt that his friend was living the life of a man. He did not want to be a bandit, but he did want to be on the border among the pioneers, where he could see redskin and cowboy, where he could mix with bandit and with gambler, where he could feel life pulsing in the raw and think himself a man among men. He asked permission of his parents to go to Dakota. He set forth his case, but his parents, staid and respectable, could not understand where their son had obtained his roving desires and told him that he must remain at home and fit himself for the law, instead of being the friend and associate of lawbreakers.

The friend who had turned his mind to the land of Dakota returned to the Black Hills, where he was going out with a prospecting party. He wrote Harry from Deadwood and told him that he was on his way into the hills.

Tuthill felt grief at his parents' death, but when the estate was settled and he found himself in possession of $50,000 he decided that he would set out on the adventure trail. He left New York early in May, 1883, and landed in Dakota just as the snows were melting from the Black Hills and the sombre mountains towered into the mellowed spring sky. He felt the pulsing touch of spring and entered into his new life with the zest of a city man taking his first plunge in a new and untried field. He was a tenderfoot, with plenty of easy to the gamblers and to the storekeepers of Deadwood. He had luck at the gambling table and little of his patrimony of $50,000 was touched, after he had outfitted in true Western style with bronco and guns and had found comfortable quarters in which to live.

His cup was filled to the brim when Billy the Kid was pointed out to him in a gambling house in Deadwood late in the summer of his advent in search of adventure. With the famous bandit were John Campbell, Charles Brown, better known as Bronco Charlie; Sandy Grady, Tim O'Fallon, Red Wilson, all fellow members of the band in which William McArthur, or Billy the Kid, and George Ladbee shared the command.

Tuthill found Billy the Kid a slight, boyish individual, seemingly little older than himself in years, but centuries old in iniquity and in the accomplishment of bold, dashing deeds. The bandits were paying a chivalry and told him many tales of impossible achievements, which he believed.

Tuthill Was Found in the Cabin with His Arm Shattered by a Bullet.

That fall he was out on a hunting trip with new found friends. When the trail of the hunting party crossed that of the bandit band the hunting party was minus one member, as Tuthill decided to spend the winter with some of the outlaws in a protected valley in the Black Hills.

Before going into winter quarters, however, the band decided to visit the Indian reservation on the Missouri River and steal a herd of ponies from the Indians. The youth from the East was told the wards of the government were being watched by United States troopers, and that it would be a gallant adventure to slip onto the reservation, gather up the herd of ponies and rush them over the border of the redman's land, where they could not be followed by Indian trailers.

What the New Yorker was not told was that Uncle Sam's troopers, while acting as guardians of the Indians, were also acting as police, to see that marauding white settlers did not steal property from the Indians.

The outlaw band obtained about five hundred head of horses in their raid, but before their trail got cold United States troopers, led by dog soldiers, Indian scouts, were on that trail. Also a warrant for their arrest was sworn out and placed in the hands of the then United States Marshal at Deadwood, James Raymond. He summoned several posses of frontiersmen and set forth to gather in the band of Billy the Kid.

With the soldiers and the posses driving them, the band was forced to abandon their loot. They struck out for Montana, with one posse, composed of Captain A. M. Willard, of Deadwood; his brother, Fred Willard, and Jack O'Hara, of Spearfish, after them. The bandits separated, and the posse trailed after John Campbell and Bronco Charlie, with whom Tuthill elected to cast his lot.

The posse, led by Captain Willard, came up with these bandits at Somerville, Mont., and in the battle that ensued Jack O'Hara, of the posse, was killed and the three bandits were slightly wounded. Campbell and Tuthill had their horses killed under them and they were left to their fate by Bronco Charlie. They took refuge in an abandoned cabin. Next day the cabin was attacked, and when Campbell went to the door to parley with the officers he was killed. Tuthill was found in the cabin with his arm shattered by a bullet.

He was taken back to Spearfish, Dak., then a rude frontier settlement, and a hospital was improvised in a room over one of the saloons of which the town boasted.

He was here when the news of the death of John O'Hara became known to his fellow townsmen. The second night after his capture a band of masked men entered his room. Taking the wounded boy to a gully near the town, they lynched him and left his body hanging to the tree as a warning to outlaws.

The details of Tuthill's fate were learned recently by the Rev. Henry Case, of Hot Springs, S. D., a foster brother of Tuthill, who had been trying for years to get trace of the youth. He learned it from one of his parishioners, a pioneer of Dakota, and from the details given of the young man named Tuthill, who was lynched as a bandit there is no doubt in the minister's mind that it was his friend who was hanged.

What became of the $50,000 Tuthill had with him when he went to Deadwood is another mystery that Dr. Case is trying to solve. Tuthill had no close relatives, according to the minister, but the fact that the boy could drop out of sight with that sum of money about him or to his credit in some of the frontier banks without comment has caused him to wonder whether some of the lynching party were not aware of this wealth and that in addition to acting as a vigilante committee did a little bandit work of their own on the side.

He merely wanted to ride out to a ranch in the direction they were going. He went to the ranch for a visit, but on the hill elected to cast his lot.

Only a fleeting visit to Deadwood, and when they left with them was Harry Tuthill. He was not a member of the band and did not intend to become a member.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

A Gamin's Romance

It Illustrates the Adage "A Bad Beginning Makes a Good Ending."

By ELIZABETH WEED

Little Tim Cosgrove was a newspaper boy. Tim had a very indistinct memory of his antecedents—a vague picture of a comfortable home with a woman who cared for him, putting him to bed, dressing and undressing him and now and again lulling him to sleep in her arms. But by the time he was ten years old all remembrance of her features had passed away from him, and there was no well defined link between that period and his selling papers whereby to make a living.

One day when the weather was hot Tim succumbed to the heat and fell on the sidewalk. There he lay, his newspapers scattered about him, till a policeman came along and, calling for an ambulance, sent him to a children's hospital. Tim came out of his collapse and one day was put on a steamer with a lot of other invalid children and sent off on the water. Beside him on the boat sat a little girl about his own age who fell to talking with him. Like Tim, she could remember a pleasant home, and more distinctly. She could recall an old fashioned house, with four pillars before it, in the center of beautiful grounds. One thing was indelibly stamped on her mind—her father being carried out to a cemetery. She did not know the reason why, but she and her mother left the big house, and then her mother was carried to a cemetery too. Later transitions came so rapidly that she could not remember them all, but her clothes were wearing out, and she did not get new ones. She was often hungry and did not have pennies to spend for candy. She was now living at an orphan asylum, but she longed to get away from it, for she was kept shut in most of the time, she said, and she pined for freedom.

Presently the boat landed at an island, and the children were put ashore and permitted to wander in a wood, or, better still, on the shore. At noon a luncheon was served on tables under the trees. Tim and his new found friend—Alice, she said her name was—played together, both preferring the shore.

In the afternoon the steamer with its load of children returned to the city. Tim told Alice of the life he led and said that if she would like to join him and sell papers as he did he would give her some of his stock. He made his home with a woman named Murphy, to whom he paid what he could for his board. She was a kind woman, and he thought she would take in Alice too. The little girl, dreading to go back to the asylum, agreed when they made a landing to slip away with Tim and cast her fortunes with him as a newsgirl.

Alice was received under protest by the woman with whom Tim made his home. She strongly advised the child to return to the asylum, but Alice begged to be kept and said she would sell papers like Tim to pay for her keeping. So Mrs. Murphy consented. Being a pretty child, Alice readily gained customers and soon sold more papers than Tim. But Tim looked after the finances, and soon the two, besides paying for their necessities, were laying up money. The accumulative principle was strong in the boy, and he was destined to become rich.

One day while Tim and Alice were on a much frequented street corner selling papers a man across the street beckoned to Alice to come over to him with a paper. Several other gamins started to get ahead of her. She became reckless in the race, was knocked down by a wagon and lay insensible. Tim saw her and, throwing down his papers, ran to her, took her up in his arms and carried her to the sidewalk.

Alice was taken home—that is, to the only home she knew. The day ended, and she did not recover consciousness. Another day and another, a week, a month, went by, and still she did not awaken, for her condition seemed rather that of sleep than what is called comatose. There is recorded a case of a person lying eleven years in such a condition, and the next longest case is that of little Alice, who lay nine years in constant slumber.

Let us pass over this gap in her life as she passed it, without taking cognizance of it, to the awakening. It occurred in the morning about 10 o'clock. For some time previous, so she has said, she felt a semiconsciousness, but rather as a dream than a reality. Some one was moving about her, opening blinds, arranging things in the room, rubbing furniture with a cloth. This person, though indistinct, seemed to be a woman, a maid, though Alice then did not know the meaning of the word. Then for a time all was silent.

The awakening came by degrees. Alice remembers trying to throw off sleep, realizing that she must get up and be at her post selling papers. Finally she opened her eyes and was surprised to find herself, instead of in the little wooden box she called her room, in a large, well furnished chamber. She could not grasp the situation or, rather, the connection between it and the past. Her first idea—that natural to a child—was that a fairy had taken her out of her bed and carried her to another, perhaps in a palace.

What confused her most was a faint memory of having been in that same chamber before. She attempted to sit up in bed, but found it so difficult that she desisted. But she managed to turn on her side and looked straight into a mirror in the door of a wardrobe.

What did it mean? That reflection was not her own. It was the reflection of a young woman. She glanced at her body as it appeared under the bedclothes and saw that it was not the body of a child. It extended from the headboard nearly to the footboard. Turning again to the image in the mirror, she looked at the features. She opened and shut her eyes, moved her lips, to determine if it were her own reflection. It certainly was the reflection of the person lying on the bed, but that person could not possibly be herself, the child Alice. She was becoming frightened at these incongruities when the door opened and a maid stepped into the room. She looked at Alice with surprise depicted on every feature. Alice looked at her as one bewildered. The maid turned and ran out of the room.

She was gone only a few moments when she returned with a woman who looked for all the world like Mrs. Murphy, though Mrs. Murphy's hair was brown and this woman's was a grizzly gray. Nevertheless she ran to the bed and folded Alice in her arms. But, seeing the bewildered expression on the girl's face, she said quickly:

"Don't excite yourself. There's been a great change, but it's all well. You have made us all happy by awakening."

"Have I been long asleep? What does it all mean? Who am I? I'm not a little girl any more."

The woman soothed her and little by little gave her enough of the story to make her aware of the fact that long before she had been knocked down by a wagon in the street and had remained unconscious for a number of years.

"But what means this other change?" asked Alice. "Where am I? This room seems familiar to me. How did I come here?"

"Tim will tell you about that. You must remember that Tim is not now a little boy any more than you are a little girl. He has grown to be a fine young man. But no more at present. The doctor told us recently that you were showing signs of awakening and said that if you did awake you must be handled very carefully."

"Where is Tim?"

"He has been sent for and will be here directly."

"Does he still sell papers?"

A smile came and went quickly over the woman's features as she replied: "Oh, no. Tim hasn't sold papers for a long time. He owns a newspaper himself. Few men of his age have ever succeeded as he has succeeded. But you must hear that from him."

There was a tap at the door, and it was pushed open, and a man who looked to be nearly thirty, though he was but twenty-two, entered the room with an expression of intense happiness on his face, which, when he saw the sleeper awakened, broke into a joyful smile.

"Alice!" he exclaimed.

She lay looking at him in wonder for awhile, then asked:

"Can you be Tim?"

"I am Tim."

"Then tell me," she added presently, "how I came here."

"It is a long story, and I have been warned to condense it. You remember the money we had saved before you were injured?"

"It was $37.42."

"It is now as many thousands. But I must be brief. I went to the asylum you left to come with me and learned there all about you, including your former home. I resolved to buy it for you and succeeded in doing so only a few months ago. You are in the home where you were born and lived till misfortune overtook your family. The second happiest day in my life was when I received the deed for it made out in your name. The happiest day is this at seeing you awakened."

She found strength to put out her hand, and as Tim grasped it he knew the love that had been growing within him for years would be returned.

WOULD COUGH SO HARD

Would Turn Black In The Face.

A cough cold is one of the most dangerous kind. It leaves the throat or lungs, and sometimes both, affected if not taken care of immediately.

Obstinate coughs and colds yield to the grateful soothing action of Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, containing as it does all the lung healing virtues of the Norway pine tree.

Mrs. C. J. Selig, Dartmouth, N.S., writes:—"My little boy, six years old, had a dreadful, hard cough. At night time he would cough so hard he would turn black in the face, and at times he would cough nearly an hour before he would stop. I tried different cough syrups, but they did him no good. The little fellow was wasting away, as he could not eat or sleep, the cough troubled him so. I got a bottle of Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, and it did him so much good I got another. Now I am only too glad to be able to write this to tell how thankful I am, and to tell every mother to use nothing else."

THE ROAD TO THE RIGHT.

YOU'VE met at least one of those few good old souls, who are constantly getting the worst of it when shopping, who don't believe in advertising. A hundred disappointing and instructive experiences have failed to teach him their plain lesson.

When he bought his first watch he was beguiled into buying one without a known name or a trustworthy guarantee. That watch—a poor timekeeper—cost him dearly by reason of missed appointments and missed trains, and for frequent repairs. Yet he paid the price of a good watch.

It is the same story with regard to his underwear, his shoes, and his fountain pen.

This good old soul's case is not unique. Many of us, if the truth be confessed, resemble him; we allow ourselves to be sold merchandise with an unknown brand or trade mark instead of buying merchandise which is well known to us through the medium of advertising. In slang language, we get "stung" pretty often.

In most of these cases we have ourselves to blame, for "the road to the right" thing to buy has been made plain by advertising.

There is no good reason for passing by the known thing, soundly guaranteed, to buy a dubious article; which, quality for quality, cannot be cheaper than the known, branded article.

"It is better to be sure than sorry."

CALLED IT TOLEDO.

Story of How an Ohio City Came to Gets Its Name.

About 100 years ago a little settlement existed at the mouth of the Maumee river. Its name, Port Lawrence, was given in honor of the great naval commander. The little town was not prosperous, and five years later Major Stickney, an enthusiastic but eccentric man, founded another settlement right next to Port Lawrence and called his village Vistula. Both settlements were stimulated somewhat by the competition, but neither prospered sufficiently, and one year later it was proposed to unite the towns.

Everything was easily arranged except the name, and here trouble arose. Major Stickney insisted that the new community accept the name of his part, Vistula, but the citizens were not prepared to have a name thrust upon them by one whose peculiarities led him to name his two children "No. 1" and "No. 2." This fact in the major's family life was enough to cause any suggestion from him to be received skeptically.

The discussions were many and heated when Willard Daniels, a merchant of Vistula, suggested that they adopt the name of Toledo, the ancient capital of Spain. He explained that the word originally was "Toledoth," from the Hebrew, meaning "Mother of People," and Mr. Daniels said they ought to be able to come together under such a little of peace. Another reason was the remarkable nearness in latitudes of both places, in Spain and in Ohio, the actual difference being only a little more than one degree. Further arguments were that it was pleasant in sound, easy to pronounce and that no city of the western continent as yet bore the name.

His reasoning prevailed, and the united towns assumed the name Toledo. That they remained true to it is shown in the fact that their first permanent newspaper was called the Toledo Blade, in recognition of the fact that Toledo, Spain, was famed all over the world for the quality of the sword blades which it produced.—Ladies' Home Journal.

THEY WOULDN'T WORK.

So Captain Returns to Port With His Mutinous Sailors.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 20.—The British freighter Santa Rosalie of the Maple Leaf Line, which cleared on Tuesday night for Swansea and Dunkirk, returned to port yesterday with 13 of the crew of 41 locked in the forecastle and nine armed men from the U. S. revenue cutters Golden Gate and McCullough on guard at the hatchways.

Capt. Thomas Pritchard said that shortly after he had put to sea nine of his firemen threw down their shovels, asserting that when they signed in England they had agreed to work shifts of four hours with 20 hours off, but in point of fact had sometimes been on duty 16 hours at a stretch. Capt. Pritchard anchored for the night eight miles out.

Yesterday morning the engineers and oilers got up steam enough to get back to port, but when the captain ordered the anchor weighed three of the sailors joined the mutinous firemen. The captain and his officers got up the anchor.

YOU'RE BILIOUS AND COSTIVE!—CASCARETS

Sick Headache, Bad Breath, Sour Stomach, Mean Liver and Bowels Clogged—Clean Up To-night

Get a 10-cent box now.

Furred Tongue, Bad Taste, Indigestion, Sallow Skin and Miserable Headaches come from a torpid liver, and clogged bowels, which cause your stomach to become filled with undigested food, which sours and ferments like garbage in a swill barrel. That's the first step to untold misery—indigestion, foul gases, bad breath, yellow skin, mental fears, everything that is horrible and nauseating. A Cascaret to-night will give your constipated bowels a thorough cleansing and straighten you out by morning. They work while you sleep—a 10-cent box from your druggist will keep you feeling good for months. Millions of men and women take a Cascaret now and then to keep their stomach, liver and bowels regulated and never know a miserable moment. Don't forget the children — their little insides need a good, gentle cleansing, too.

GLASS OF SALTS CLEANS KIDNEYS

If Your Back Hurts or Bladder Bothers You, Drink Lots of Water

When your kidneys hurt and your back feels sore, don't get scared and proceed to load your stomach with a lot of drugs that excite the kidneys and irritate the entire urinary tract. Keep your kidneys clean like you keep your bowels clean, by flushing them with a mild, harmless salts which removes the body's urinous waste and stimulates them to their normal activity. The function of the kidneys is to filter the blood. In 24 hours they strain from it 50 grains of acid and waste, so we can readily understand the vital importance of keeping the kidneys active.

Drink lots of water—you can't drink too much; also get from any pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast each morning for a few days and your kidneys will get fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate clogged kidneys; also to neutralize the acids in urine so it no longer is a source of irritation, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everyone should take now and then to keep their kidneys clean and active. Try this, also keep up the water drinking, and no doubt you will wonder what became of your kidney trouble and backache.

THE MARKETS

CHICAGO, Nov. 19.—Report that Argentine owners of wheat are holding it above parity was a strong influence today in a net gain of 3-8 to 3-4c made here; prospects of small corn shipments from Argentine helped to give that grain a net rise of 1-4 to 1-3c. Locally selling sent oats off a shade. Aggressive bull leaders sent provisions up 10 to 35c.

Liverpool close: Wheat, unchanged; corn, 1⅛ to 1⅜ up.

Antwerp closed ¼c lower; Berlin, holiday; Paris, wheat closed unchanged; Budapest, ¼ higher.

MONTREAL LIVE STOCK.

MONTREAL, Nov. 19.—At the C.P.R. live stock market offerings this morning were 2100 cattle, 2000 sheep and lambs, 2300 hogs and 500 calves. A firm feeling prevailed in the market for all grades of cattle owing to the continued good demand for shipping cattle from American buyers. Bulls sold at from $4.25 to $4.50 and cows at $3.40 to $3.50 per 100 pounds for canning. Local buyers took butchers' stock freely at prices ranging from $7.25 to $7.50 for best, while fairly good stock brought $6.50 to $7, and the lower grades $5 to $6 per 100 pounds. Butchers' cows brought from $4 to $5.50, and bulls from $4.75 to $6 per 100 pounds.

There was no further change in the condition of the market for small meats. The supply of sheep and lambs was somewhat larger than on Monday, and the demand was good. Prices were firmly maintained at the recent advance, with trading active. Western lambs sold at $7.50 to $7.75 and eastern at $7 to $7.25, while sheep brought from $4.50 to $5 per 100 pounds. The trade in calves was quieter than it has been lately, owing to the smaller receipts. Grass-fed stock for shipment to the United States sold freely at 3 3-4 to 4 1-4c, and milk-fed for local consumption at from 5 1-2 to 7 1-2c per pound. In spite of the stronger advices from Toronto on hogs an easier feeling developed in the local market today on account of the increased offerings and sales of selected lots were made at $9.50 to $9.60, and straight lots including rough stock at $9 to $9.25 per 100 pounds weighed off cars.

"Farm and Dairy" Live Stock, Produce and Grain Market Report

Toronto, Nov. 17.—Wholesale dealers differ in their estimates as to the value of seasonable weather on the trade. It would seem, however, that orders are not coming in as freely as in former years, and that there is a most decided tightness characteristic of business as well as of money. Slow orders and slow payment are characteristic of both East and West. It would seem that the big wheat crop of the West is not improving conditions materially. Farmers of the section of Canada complain that the prices they receive after shipping bills are accounted for hardly pay for the expense of producing the crops.

Trade in agricultural products has been brisk in some lines. Choice cattle have firmed considerably. Trade in grain is brisker than for some weeks.

WHEAT

Recent unfavorable weather in the Argentine has done damage to their crop to an extent estimated at 1- per cent. This unfavorable report has brought bids from the other side up to the prices that our exporters are selling, and an active trade has been done. A considerable amount of wheat too is going to the United States for blending purposes. Ontario wheat is not active and farmers show no disposition to sell. Quotations are as follows: No. 1 Northern, 87½c; No. 2, 85½c; feed wheat, 65c to 70c; Ontario No. 2, 85c to 86c; outside, 85c to 86c.

COARSE GRAINS

A good export market in the United States has had a healthy effect on the coarse grain market. Both oats and barley are pouring over in considerable quantities. The volume of business is the largest for some time. Quotations here are: Oats, C.W. No. 2, 38c; No. 3, 36c; Ontario No. 2, 36c to 36½ outside; No to 37½c here; corn, 70c to 70½c; rye, 68c to 69c; malting barley, 55c to 56c peas, 86c to 87c to 88c; local oats, 36c to 36½c; corn, 70c; barley, 70c to 72c; peas, $1.80 to $1.85; buckwheat, 66c; rye, 72c to 75c.

MILL FEEDS

United States demand affords an outlet for all surplus bran, and consequently quotations are firm. Bran, $21 to $22.50; shorts, $23 to $24.50; middlings, $25 to $26. Montreal quotations are: Bran, $20 to $21; shorts, $22 to $23; middlings, $25 to $26.

EGGS AND POULTRY

Fresh eggs are a luxury. They are now selling at 70c to 80c, with every prospect of them going higher in the near future. The bulk of the trade is being met with storage eggs at 30c to 32c. These are wholesale prices. Consumers are paying 45c to 50c for new laid eggs. Montreal dealers report an exceedingly good demand from grocers for new laids at 42c. Other quotations are: No. 1 stock, 27½c; selects, 29c to 30½c.

Receipts of dressed poultry are large and generally the quality is anything but satisfactory. Wholesale quotations are: Dressed fowl, 13c to 14c; live, 9c to 11c; spring chickens, 17c to 22c; live, 14c to 16c; geese, 11c to 17c and 10c to 12c; ducks, 20c to 24c and 12c to 13c; turkeys, No. 1 22c to 25c and 20c to 22c; No. 2, 15c to 20c and 13c to 15c.

POTATOES AND BEANS

Maritime province potatoes are finding their way to the nearest market across the line in very considerable quantities, and receipts here have been diminished accordingly. Prices have not advanced, but the market is very firm at $1.65 to $1.10 a bag out of store and 90c in car lots. Montreal reports sales of Green Mountains at 85c to 90c a bag car lots, and local grades at 75c.

Beans here are quoted at $1.75 to $2 for primes; $2.10 to $2.20 for hand picked. At Montreal three-pound pickers bring $1.85 to $1.90.

SEEDS

Local merchants are buying from farmers at the following prices: Alsike No. 1, $7.75 to $8.25; No. 2, $6.50 to $7.50; No. 3, $5 to $6.50; red clover, No. 1, $6 to $7; timothy, No. 1, $2.25; No. 2, $2.

DAIRY PRODUCE

Fresh creamery butter is as a premium. Wholesale dealers are asking 32c to 33c, while dairy prints command 30c to 31c. Choice dairy is easy to get here, 24c to 25c. Cheese is firm at the old levels: New, large, 14½c to 14¾c; twins, 14¾c to 15c; old, large, 15c to 15½c; twins, 15½c to 15¾c.

LIVE STOCK

Runs of stock have been fairly large for the last week, with prices firmly maintained throughout. Heavy steers and well finished butchers' cattle have jumped in price 25c to 40c. In fact, one well finished lot this week sold for $8.35 which constitutes almost a record.

The common complaint is that stock is not well finished. In fact, little of it is finished at all. Farmers not having the feed either to hold their stock or fit it. The United States demand, however, has held prices firm on an unusually long run of inferior stock.

A few stockers are still crossing the line. There is little difference in prices on the two markets, but do local farmers are not willing to pay the high prices demanded, what stockers arrive have to go to Buffalo or direct to United States farms. Quotations average as follows: Export cattle, choice, $7.35 to $7.75; medium, $7 to $7.25; butchers, choice, $7.15 to $7.75; com. to good, $6.25 to $7.15; heifers, $6.50 to $7.10; choice cows $6.75 to $6.90; com. to good, $5 to $6.75; butcher bulls, $6 to $7; feeders, $6.25 to $6.50; feeding bulls, $5.25 to $6.25; stockers, $4 to $5.50; canners and cutters, $2.25 to $3.25.

There is a splendid demand for all kinds of dairy cattle. A few extra choice cows have sold for $65 to $100 and from that down to $45. Springers go at $60 to $80. Veal calves are $9 to $10.50; inferior, $4.50 to $7.

Mutton seems to be in strong demand. Small quantities of wether lambs have come at $7.75 to $8; spring lambs $9 to $9.50; sows, $4.50 to $5.50; bucks and culls, $3 to $4.50.

MONTREAL HOG MARKET

Montreal, Saturday, Nov. 15.—The closing quotations at the abattoir, which were held this week, showed a great variety of prices paid at country points; in Eastern Ontario 12½c to 13½c seemed to be the prevailing price for white and colored sheep, but at Picton on Friday the few hundred hogs offered were sold to local dealers at 13 1-16c a pound. Probably this high price was paid because the goods were not for export, but for local requirements or for shipment West. Demand from the other side this week was fairly good, but was not any more than sufficient to absorb the receipts from the country, which are rapidly falling off and will soon reach the disappearing point.

Market for butter is very firm with an active demand from local dealers, and prices are steadily advancing. Finest Eastern Townships September make being quoted at 30c a pound and fresh receipts at 29½c to 29¾c, finest stored goods, June and July's, are quoted at 30c to 30c.

District No. 4—Harry Edmondson, $150; north of Sherbrooke, west of Bethune, east of Monaghan road, south of Weller and Brock.

District No. 5—Alfred Cummings, $130; north of Lansdowne, west of Bethune, south of Sherbrooke, east of Monaghan road.

District No. 6—John Kelleher, $145; north of Lansdowne Street, east of Bethune and Park Street, south of Romaine; south of Sherbroke, west of river.

District No. 7—John O'Brien, $104; East City south of Douro Street.

District No. 8—J. P. Francis, $115; East City north of Douro Street.

Many Applied.

The applications received were more numerous than for many years past, and the Board accepted the lowest tender for each district. Applications for the work were received from the following:

District No. 2—J. P. Francis, $205; Ed. Fisherty, $170; Russel Whatman, $190.

District No. 3—E. J. Ferguson, $187; Alphonse F. Fontaine, $325; Justice Blodgett, $190.

District No. 4—Norman Harper $160; Harry Edmondson, $150; S. R. Dancy, $200.

District No. 5—Alf. Cummings, $130; M. Flaherty, $150; Robt. J. Manley, $147.50.

District No. 6—R. Nicholls, $162; John Kelleher, $145; John Coombes, $150.

District No. 7—John O'Brien, $104; J. P. Francis, $130.

District No. 8—J. P. Francis, $115; Benj. Revoy, $120; Jas. A. Butler, $225.

Question of Capability.

The equipment of some of the successful tenderers was discussed, because some of them were not well known to the Board. Ald. Johnston stated that a few dollars should not be considered if the higher man was known to be more competent. However, it was decided by the motion to accept the lowest figures and nothing further was said.

"TWISTERS" 14 CENTS A DOZEN

High Price of Lard and Butter Has Made Necessary an Increase in Cost of Old Favourite.

One of the items that enter into the present cost of living is the old reliable "twister" of the doughnut family. For generations, perhaps, they have sold at 10 cents a dozen, but with lard around 18 cents a pound, as compared with nine cents of not so long ago, and butter and other materials more expensive, an advance was imperative. Mr. L. Potvin states that the cost of making "twisters" has more than doubled, and the advance to the consumer is only four cents a dozen. Hence in the face of the higher price the consumer is getting a good bargain. "I use "Matthews' Pure Leaf lard," said Mr. Potvin, "and it alone is up to 18 cents. Other articles are correspondingly high, and we simply had to increase the retail price or cease making them."

SOLD LIQUOR IN NORWOOD

Joseph Levasseur, of This City, Fined $100 and Costs for Selling Liquor in Local Option District

KING CASE ADJOURNED

In County Police Court this afternoon, Joseph Levasseur, a local man, was charged with selling liquor without a license at the Norwood Fair. He pleaded guilty.

As Norwood is a local option village, the minimum fine for the offence is $100 and costs, or three months in gaol. This was the fine imposed by Magistrate Edmison. Mr. W. H. Moore, K.C., conducted the prosecution, and Mr. G. N. Gordon appeared for the defendant.

The case of the King vs. King, in which Mr. D. N. King is charged with selling liquor in Norwood without a license, also came before the Magistrate this afternoon.

Mr. King is the proprietor of the King's Hotel, Norwood. On Fair Day a couple of Provincial detectives visited the village, and as a result of their operations, Mr. King is charged with selling liquor over the bar of his hotel.

As the information did not specifically state who sold the liquor, Mr. Gordon did not have his witnesses for the defence present, and the case was adjourned till Friday, November 28th, at 2 o'clock.

Through his counsel, the defendant pleaded not guilty to the charge.

PLEAD GUILTY TO BREACH OF LORD'S DAY ACT

Four Local Young Men Sign Their Names to Statement, Admitting They Gambled on Sunday

FINE NOT YET NAMED

The four young men who were charged with gambling on Sunday, and who were to come before Magistrate Dumble on Monday next, have entered a plea of guilty to the charge against them. This will obviate the usual court proceedings, and the Magistrate has now merely to fix the fine and the case will be concluded. It is understood that a nominal fine is going to be imposed, although the maximum fine is $40.

The charge laid against the young men is the result of a raid made by P. C. Sills and P. C. Reid on a George Street Office, last Sunday afternoon. The policemen found the four young men in question, in the office, with three decks of cards and a stack of money, all in twenty-five cent pieces. As it is a breach of the Lord's Day Act to gamble on Sunday the information was laid.

KEEP SILENT ABOUT CRISIS IN MEXICO

President Wilson and Members of the Cabinet Decline to Discuss Actions of British Government

COMPLETE UNDERSTANDING

Special Wire to The Examiner.

WASHINGTON, D.C., Nov. 20. — Impenetrable silence marked the Mexican situation to-day, so far as official Washington is concerned. President Wilson and the members of the Cabinet all declined to comment or discuss the action of the British government in sending a squadron to Vera Cruz. It is stated semi-officially here, however, that there is a complete understanding between the two Anglo-Saxon nations concerning the situation. The New York Tribune, however, says that while Britain is undoubtedly entirely friendly to the United States in this matter, it does not appear that it has entire confidence in President Wilson to take the lead. There is a growing feeling among very careful talking United States papers that the United States should take definite steps to-day to end the carnival of bloodshed in Mexico.

MEXICO CITY, Nov. 20. — Gen. Huerta's newspapers are to-day out with special editions intimating that the despatch of the British warships to Vera Cruz is an indication that Great Britain and European nations are prepared to resist the interference of the United States into Mexican affairs. They are even publishing tables showing the strength of Britain's navy besides the United States navy.

LECTURE IS FREE

Mrs. Alice Stebbins Wells to Address Women's Council To-night

There promises to be a large audience at the Collegiate Assembly Hall to-night when Mrs. Alice Stebbins Wells, police woman of Los Angeles will deliver an address under the auspices of the Women's Council. The lecture is free to the public. Mrs. Wells arrived this morning and met the local Council at 4 o'clock this afternoon.

In connection with Mrs. Wells' address the following letter received by the speaker, will be of interest:

Dear Mrs. Wells.—I wish to express to you my sincere appreciation of your address last evening in Association Hall.

Not in many years of social work and interest in social problems have I heard an address so comprehensive, so intelligent and so full of 1913 common sense as that to which we listened last evening.

There is in this day no lack of speakers who criticize and complain of present day social conditions, but there is a dearth of speakers who are willing to be students first and speakers next, and who are able to suggest as you did, preventative and educational measures which are practical.

I know from the comments which I heard after your address that you had an appreciative audience and I am sure tht your visit will prove of much benefit to our city.

Faithfully yours,
J. O. McCARTHY, Controller.

BREACH OF PROMISE CASE LACKS DEFENCE

Interesting Judgment Has Been Entered For the Plaintiff With Damages to be Assessed by the Court

PARTIES INVOLVED

A breach of promise case has been entered for trial at the non-jury sittings of the High Court, which opens on Tuesday before Mr. Justice Middleton. The parties involved are Ellen E. Smart and Charles E. Jarrett.

During the summer and autumn of 1912 and subsequent winter and spring, plaintiff was employed by a farmer named Sanderson. The latter resided in Cavan Township. Jarrett was also employed on the Sanderson farm. Plaintiff claims damages to the amount of $1000 and costs for breach of promise. No defence having been offered interlocutory judgment has been duly entered with damages to be assessed by the Court. Mr. R. E. Wood is acting for the plaintiff.

To The Patrons Of The Grand Opera House

We wish to tender an apology and at the same time offer an explanation to our patrons for the extremely poor performance put on at The Grand last evening.

The Dream Maiden Co. was highly recommended to us and at the time it was booked there is no doubt but that it was an excellent organization. The company was formed on an extravagant scale in regards scenery, costumes and talent, but when ready to start out it was found that all the best New York theatres were booked considerably ahead and consequently in order to keep the company together it was found necessary to make a tour of the one night stands, until it could be placed in a suitable New York theatre. However, the play being brand new and unknown, it was a difficult matter to finance the big production, especially when playing the one night stands, when the railroading and advertising made the expenses run so high. Consequently during the seven weeks the company have been out the management lost some $12,000. The business through Michigan where the company toured before striking Hamilton was extremely bad and the performers had considerable money for back salaries coming to them on arrival there. The climax was, however, reached in Ottawa, where they played last Friday and Saturday. There Miss Audrey Maple, the leading lady, quit the company as well as seven of the ten extra musicians the company carried. Other members dropped out in quick succession until only forty-six of the original company of seventy-one remained, and some of these refused to go on last night. All this was unknown to us until yesterday evening at five o'clock when we secured the information over the long distance 'phone. In the meantime in order to land the company here we were obliged to put up their railroad fares with the Grand Trunk, and also pay their hotel bill in Ottawa. It was now too late to attempt to cancel the show as it meant the company would have been left without anything and our patrons disappointed.

When we issued a special letter to our patrons we sincerely believed that we were going to give them something extra good and sincerely regret that it turned out the reverse.

We would not knowingly recommend an attraction which we knew was not of a meritorious character.

J. J. TURNER & SONS.

ACTION TO RECOVER THE SUM OF $2,334

Thomas Brightman, of This City, Is Named as Plaintiff in an Important Civil Action to be Tried at the Non-Jury Sittings.

A THIRD PARTY

Thomas Brightman, the well known leather dealer of this City, is plaintiff in an action to recover the sum of $2,334.00 from M. J. Quigley, of Toronto. The case will be tried before Mr. Justice Middleton at the non-jury sittings of the High Court which will commence on Tuesday next.

The plaintiff claims that the defendant through one John Welsh applied for a loan of $2,344.00 and that the said John Welsh informed the plaintiff that the defendant would shortly be entitled to that amount of money out of the estate of the defendant's deceased father, and that Quigley in case he had not previously repaid the loan, would on receiving such money out of said estate, repay the money loaned the defendant by plaintiff. The latter demands from the defendant the sum of $2,334.00 and interest, together with the costs of the action.

Statement of defence.

The defendant in his statement of defence, denies that he applied to the plaintiff through John Welsh or in any way at any time for a loan or that he received from the plaintiff the sum of $2,334.00.

The plaintiff further alleges that the said John Welsh acted solely for the defendant in arranging for the loan.

Hall, Medd and Davidson are appearing for the plaintiff, and Henderson and McGuire of Toronto, for the defendant.

BISHOP O'BRIEN WILL BE HONOURED

Will Preside at the Ceremonies in Connection With the Feast of the Presentation in the Grand Seminary.

WAS ONCE A STUDENT HERE

Bishop O'Brien left on Wednesday night for Montreal where he will assist in the ceremonies connected with the Feast of the Presentation which is one of the important festal days on the calendar of the Grand Seminary. It is understood that this visit is the result of an invitation extended by Archbishop Bruchesi, of Montreal, during a congratulatory address at the conclusion of the banquet on the day of Bishop O'Brien's consecration. His studiousness, ability and piety won for the present Bishop of Peterborough the esteem and friendship of Father Lecoq, provincial of the seminary, who always regarded him as one of his best students. Archbishop Bruchesi mentioned this fact and in addition invited Bishop O'Brien to preside during the important ceremonies connected with the Feast of the Presentation. His duties will be to receive the vows of the seminarians and the renewals made by the priests of the city and from outside points. This is at once a signal honour for Bishop O'Brien, and it will undoubtedly be a happy event for him to preside where he himself was once a student in theology.

DISPUTE ABOUT POSSESSION OF DEER WHEN SHOT

Question Arising Out of Incident In Recent Hunting—Does it Belong to the Owner of Dogs.

OR TO MAN WHO SHOOTS IT.

Who has first claim on a deer The man who shoots it, or the owner of the first dog to run it down?

This is a point raised in a recent dispute between two parties camped close together on Beaver lake, and is connected with a recent item in the Examiner regarding two claims for one deer.

James Grant, Albert Ball and Russell Ball of Smith, composed one party and James, Harry and Fred Jopling, Dr. B. Kelly, Chas. Forsythe, Will Tedford, Leonard Dobson and Zeek Knott, guide, were the members of the original Beaver Lake party.

Albert Ball dropped a deer on the first day of the run on a runway near Sucker Lake, on which the other party had watches, and on return to the camp, stated that a Beaver Lake dog had run it down. Later on he said one of his party's dogs arrived at the tail of the hunt. Now, in law, a deer belongs to the man who shoots it, but the unwritten law of the world gives a deer to the owner of the dog that drives it in. When parties camp close together there are usually some arrangements made as to the rules upon which the hunting shall be carried on. This had not been made by the members of these camps, and it was not until the first deer was shot that a discussion arose as to its ownership. Members of the Beaver Lake party considered that they had some claim to it according to the unwritten rules of hunters. An argument followed and the members of the Grant party walked away apparently abandoning the deer. Some of the Beaver Lake hunters toted it two miles to camp, and at the end of the hunt when they arrived back in Bridgenorth, they were surprised to find awaiting them a letter from Mr. W. H. Moore of Peterborough, in which notice was given that the deer would have to be returned or legal proceedings would be undertaken by Mr. Ball.

The Beaver Lake party willingly handed it over rather than continue the dispute as they had the most successful hunt in their history.

The other party got two deer, Russel Ball shooting the second, and admitting that this deer was chased in by dogs belonging to the Jopling party.

The second deer was beyond the reach of the second party, but the latter thought that the fact of their dogs being on its trail would entirely clear up the first discussion.

The Beaver Lake party sold their deer this morning to Gordon-Davies Co. They were fine animals and netted the party $96.00.

Schmidt Says He Is Sane

NEW YORK, N.Y., Nov. 20.—Despite his counsel's efforts to work up a defence for him on the score of insanity, Father Hans Schmidt, the priest who confessed to the murder of Anna Aumueller, still declares himself as perfectly sane and insists that "God inspired the deed and he would be insulted if human aid is called in."

FORECASTING FOR CHRISTMAS

Our merchants are away behind with their Christmas announcements.

Notwithstanding the fact that it is against all the traditions of Christmas to undo the wrappings of a Christmas package before the happy day arrives, we find ourselves so much in the holiday spirit that it is quite impossible to refrain from anticipating what the stores are likely to show for Christmas shoppers.

But very little preparation is as yet apparent in many of our stores for the Xmas festival. Why keep early buyers guessing what they will have to select? "Shop early" is a good slogan, but very little use when the displays are delayed.

The city papers are teeming with interesting Christmas announcements, and have been ready for early buyers weeks ago. "Speed up!" See to it that you do not furnish an excuse for shopping out of town.

Professor Drummond said there was no happiness in having, or in getting, but only in Giving.

CONGRATULATIONS.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier is seventy-two years old to-day. Congratulations. He is as fit as possible, wearing jauntily and with dignity the crown of green old age and the flower of a blameless life. He was born at St. Lin, Nov. 20th, 1841. He had a good beginning for a useful and virtuous life. He was an editor in early life. He has been in public life for forty-two years, leader of the Liberal party for twenty-six years and was Premier from 1896 till 1911 and in statesmanship is still premier in the hearts and affections of Canadians, and the premier in high ideals and average influence of statesmanship.

A TEST OF HONESTY.

The by-election in East Middlesex presents an admirable field for "trying out" the sincerity of temperance sentiment. There is presented a square faced issue between temperance and all it represents and the liquor traffic and all it represents. The candidate of the temperance party is the candidate of the Liberal party, approved by the temperance forces. Thus there will be given no chance for the excuse of party prejudice which weak-kneed temperance electors have on other occasions used as an excuse for voting their party ticket in opposition to an avowed temperance candidate — because he was not personally acceptable on account of his personal habits or record. The Conservative candidate is avowedly the champion of the liquor interests. There is no chance for hedging. The professing temperance voter, must either sacrifice his principles or vote against his party. What will he do? If he decides to stand by his party rather than his principles, a blow will have been struck at temperance progress. Temperance professions will be discredited and the voice of him that crieth temperance will fall upon deaf ears; for we shall know that professed advocates of temperance are only giving lip service to a cause they affect to hold dear—but not so dear that the comparatively trumpery triumph of a party candidate in a bye-election whose result as far as numbers go, is insignificant, is greater than the welfare of our citizenship. As remarked, East Middlesex is a good testing ground. Though the Conservative majority at the last election was 539, the temperance majority, as developed in local option votes, is 1,100. Certainly a temperance vote in earnest, will favour a policy for the sweeping away of the bar bodily and altogether, as strongly as they have supported its suppression on the instalment plan; that is if the temperance vote is honest—if words and professions mean anything more than sounding brass and a tinkling cymbal.

TWENTIETH CENTURY PHARISEES.

We have good reason for thinking that the "scribes and Pharisees" of our Blessed Lord's day were married men and had children—for we have their lineal descendants with us to this day. We read in the story of "the things most surely believed amongst us," written by St. Luke to the "most excellent Theopilus," Chapter VI., 9, 10—

Then said Jesus unto them, I will ask you one thing. Is it lawful on the Sabbath day to do good or to do evil, to save life or to destroy it? And looking round about upon them all he said unto the man, stretch forth thy hand. And he did so; and his hand was restored whole as the other. And they were filled with madness—and they (the scribes and Pharisees) went and wrote letters to the newspapers condemning tuberculosis Sunday, warranted, sanctified and approved by the example set by "the Lord of the Sabbath."

On this page is printed a letter from one Christopher West, who, it appears, has his habitat in Toronto. In this letter "tuberculosis Sunday" is condemned, on the same grounds as the "scribes and Pharisees" (hypocrites) condemned our Lord for healing the man of the withered hand on the Sabbath day. There is no need for argument to justify the employment of the pulpit of Christian churches on one Sunday of the year to do the work and help the work that Christ, Himself, performed on the Sabbath, as an example to all ages.

The whole question of the issue raised by Christopher West, and them he speaks for, is summed up in the passage of the Scriptures cited, as his absurd claim for having a Bible Sunday, is elsewhere discountenanced. The Bible is largely superseded—as regards practical application of its teaching, as shewn by our Lord in answer to the question, "which is the great commandment in the law?"

Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul and with all thy mind. This is the first and great commandment. And the second is like unto it: Thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself. On these two commandments hang all the law and the prophets.

These two commandments are reciprocal; in obeying one we are qualified to obey the other. If we break one we break the other. And how can man better obey the command to love his neighbour than by doing kindness to his neighbour, seeking to restore him to health, to do in his poor, weak way what was one of Christ's chief works upon earth—heal the sick—even on the Sabbath day.

With the whole revealed Scriptures reduced to so direct a point, what is the necessity of a Bible Sunday? The divine teaching is to live the Bible—as Christ lived it—not talk it, as did the Scribes and Pharisees. Preachers, if they preach their mission, preach the Bible fifty-two Sundays in the year—if they preach it in their lives they preach it three hundred and sixty-five days in the year. If they devote one Sunday to tuberculosis sermons they preach the whole spirit of the Bible—"thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself—the sum of the whole matter—"on which hangs all the law and the prophets."

TEMPERANCE ISSUE IN EAST MIDDLESEX BY-ELECTION

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, Nov. 19.—Of all the Provincial bye-elections held this year, the present contest in East Middlesex is, perhaps the most interesting. Its result whatever it is, will be important and significant. One week before polling, it looks as if MacFarlane, the Whitney candidate, although he has at his back a Conservative majority of 539, will be hard pressed to retain even a reduced majority. In fact many impartial observers are openly predicting a victory for the Fusionist candidate.

Like John Purroy Mitchell, the successful candidate in the recent New York mayoralty contest, John Laidlaw, in this East Middlesex fight, is the nominee of more than one convention. Liberal candidates in previous contests throughout the Province have frequently been endorsed by the temperance people, but in this case both the Temperance and Liberal conventions regularly and officially nominated the same man.

Prominent Conservatives not only in the Riding but from outside, for example, ex-Alderman Hales and Rev. John Coburn, of Toronto, are appearing on Mr. Laidlaw's platform. Mr. N. W. Rowell has been making a series of fighting speeches and has been scoring the Government not only on the Temperance question, but on what he alleges to be their general apathy and delay in putting through needed reforms.

East Middlesex, although Conservative by 500 is temperance by over 1,100, and with temperance men now thoroughly aroused in favour of the Abolish the Bar candidate, the Liberal-Temperance chances appear to be good.

Bible Sunday Better Than Tuberculosis Sermons?

To the Editor of The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—Press despatches report that the Association for the Study of Tuberculosis are approaching the churches, the schools, the labour organizations, the President and State Governors, etc., asking that on Sunday, Dec. 7th, they will devote themselves to a discussion of tuberculosis.

If this Sunday is to be taken up with the consideration of tuberculosis, why should we not devote another Sunday to cancer, another to diphtheria, another to typhoid fever, and so on for fifty-one Sundays, and then complete the cycle of the year by consecrating the fifty-second as Insanity Sunday?

We understand the Sabbath to have been instituted as a day of devotion to God, as well as a day of release from human toil; and this year, for the first time, the churches of the United States and Canada are beginning to set apart this third Sunday before Christmas (Dec. 7th), as a day on which to call special attention to the Bible as the inspired word of God and I call the literature of the tuberculosis people to witness that if the Word of God were really the guide of the home that disease would cease to exist.

Wherefore let the anti-tuberculosis association cease to persuade the ministers of the Christian religion to degrade this day in such manner, but rather let them join in exalting that Word, which, if faithfully followed, will do away with all diseases.

Yours truly,
Christopher West.

STOPPING THE EARTH.

It Would Generate Heat Enough to Turn Our Globe to Vapour.

The stopping of a projectile always results in thegeneration of heat. The velocity and weight of a projectile being known, the amount of heat developed by its stoppage can be calculated. In the case of large bodies moving rapidly the result of the calculation is something astounding.

For example, the earth weighs 6,000,000,000,000 tons and travels in it orbit at the rate of over eighteen miles a second. Should it strike a target strong enough to stop its motion the heat developed by the shock would be sufficient not merely to fuse the earth, but also to reduce a large portion of it to vapour. It has been calculated that the amount of heat generated by a collision so colossal would equal that obtained from the burning of fourteen globes of coal each equal to the earth in size.

And should the earth after its stoppage fall into the sun, as it certainly would do, the amount of heat that would be developed by its impact on the sun would be equal to that generated by the combustion of 5,000 earths of solid carbon.

British Consular Service And Its Relation To Canadian Trade Expansion

Formed the Subject of an Instructive Address by Mr. J. Joyce Broderick at the Canadian Club Banquet--"The Time is Not Far Distant When the Dominion Will Enter the Trade Arena of the World."

That the British Consular service is ready and willing to place at the disposal of Canada such service and information as may be of value to Canadian expansion, formed the keynote of an address delivered by Mr. J. Joyce Broderick at the Canadian Club banquet on Wednesday evening. Mr. Broderick represents the British Consular service in New York in the capacity of Vice-Consul. He is also designate Consul to Amsterdam, Holland.

The banquet was held in the Y. M. C. A., Mr. G. C. Wainwright, President of the Canadian Club, presided.

In his prefatory remarks Mr. Wainwright urged the members of the Club to lend their support and interest in making the present season one of the most successful in the history of the Club.

Mr. Broderick's Address.

"During the years that I have been connected with the consular service," said Mr. Broderick, "I have been much struck with the number of letters received from Canadian manufacturers, requesting information pertaining to the industrial and commercial status of the country in which they served. In order to achieve this purpose, a number of the consular agents have conceived the idea of visiting a number of important centres in Canada with the object of arousing manufacturers to the advantages of collaboration with the British Consular service in matters pertaining to trade expansion.

A Future Possibility.

"Canadian manufacturers," said Mr. Broderick, "have no need to seek a foreign market as long as the home demand exceeds the supply. Such a condition is likely to prevail in Canada for some years. The output of manufactured products in Canada is valued at eleven hundred and sixty-five million dollars. The total value of Canadian commerce has almost doubled in ten years. Canada's export trade in 1912 amounted to approximately forty-two million dollars. These figures, said the speaker, are sufficiently significant to justify the claim that Canada in the near future, would be mainly a manufacturing country. She could not afford to overlook the foreign market. In a short time the Dominion will enter the arena with other countries of the world.

A Swift Victory.

In speaking of the remarkable development of manufacturing machinery, Mr. Broderick said that the force of competition was so great as to give swift victory to the users of modern methods. Canada's material expansion could be greatly accellerated by the help of the British Consular Service. Consular agents enjoy a privilege which enables them to secure data concerning manufacturers, that could not be obtained by any other means. Consuls cannot take the place of individual representatives of private firms. Neither can they act in the capacity of salesmen. They cannot create trade, but can indicate the manner in which trade might be created. Consular representatives can furnish crop reports and information respecting trade disputes. They can determine the demand for manufactured products and other trade movements. They can save merchants from many exacting complications by furnishing local information concerning the tariff.

Not a Specialist.

A consular agent does not constitute a specialist. It is essential that the service be recruited with men of versatility and commonsense. The consular service is a machine whose efficiency will be greater in proportion to the maximum speed at which it is driven.

"We are all desirous of participating in the wonderful development of Canada," said Mr. Broderick. It has been remarked by a well-known statesman that the twentieth century belongs to Canada, and we feel that in contributing to her development we are performing a service to the Empire. There is no service we like to render bttter than the upbuilding of Canadian trade."

Mr. J. H. Burnham, M.P., congratulated Mr. Broderick for his able address. He avowed that Canada was prepared to make due acknowledgement to the Consular service, with the power and prestige of a nation that sends it forth. "We are all loyal to the Empire," solemnly declared Mr. Burnham.

The meeting concluded with the usual vote of thanks and the rendition of the National Anthem.

City's Safe Unopened.

The London municipal administration is still at the mercy of a refractory safe. The door is formed of alternate plates of hard and soft steel, each an inch in thickness. It required only an hour and a half for the drills to bite their way through the first "soft layer," but as soon as the tempered plate was reached finely tempered steel drills began to screech and break. It was at 2.30 o'clock on Monday afternoon when the three experts from the safe works in Galt started their drills into the "hard" plate, and 48 hours later the drills were still working their way through the same plate.

It will be several days at the earliest before the hole has been completed, and work can be started on "picking the combination. Then after the bonds have been recovered the door will be sent to the factory in Galt, where the hole will be welded up.

Reaches Peak Load.

The simultaneous peak load of the Hydro-Electric system Monday attained a new record since the inauguration of the project when the consumption exceeded the 50,000 horsepower mark.

As a consequence of the expansion of business, which had not been expected at the plant of the Ontario Power Development Company at the Falls, from which the commission purchases its supply, the breakers automatically cut the circuit and there was an interruption of five minutes' duration at about 5.30 p.m. The break affected the entire hydro-electric zone.

The high-water mark has now been reached and a higher adjustment of the breakers was made in order that another interruption may not mark the remarkable expansion of the great scheme.

Incinerator a Money Maker.

The bill for gas in the Walkerville incinerator plant for the month of October amounted to $39.76 During the month 85 tons of garbage were burned, and the cost of burning work out at 34 cents per ton The incinerator has already been a money-saver for the town, as the teams that were employed in hauling garbage to the "dump" are now employed part of the day on the streets.

Dived Head First To Bottom

That is the Theory of the Fate of the Steamer "Leafield"

Special Wire to The Examiner.

PORT ARTHUR, Nov. 20.—That the Algoma Central steamer, Leafield simply dived headfirst to the bottom of Lake Superior through a giant wave when she went down ten days ago without giving the crew a chance to put on life belts or jump, is the theory of the wrecking crews that have searched the lake for a week without discovering traces of her. She was loaded with steel rails. The water probably filled the space between the forward decks. There were twenty-four in the crew, nearly all Canadians.

The Turkey Trot

Joan Sawyer, a New York Teacher of Dances, Describes the Primary Steps

AVOID THE HOP STEP

The general popularity of the new dances is based on the ease with which simple turkey-trotting may be acquired by most people. But, though almost anybody can trot, superiority in the dance is only attained by the observance of certain necessary rules and conditions.

In its general outlines the turkey trot more nearly resembles plain walking than any other dancing form, though it is susceptible to modifications which add to its attractiveness, and, incidentally, the difficulties. But for ballroom purposes it is necessary to know some of the variations, as otherwise the dancing grows stale and monotonous after a few minutes on the floor.

The main thing to avoid in plain turkey-trotting is the hopping step.

The movement should always be a sliding one, and one foot should always be on the floor.

Start with the right foot, slide forward easily and naturally to a distance, say, of two feet forward from the other foot, which should be squarely planted, with the toe pointing outward. hen, with the right foot still on the ground, duplicate this movement with the left foot, bringing it forward to a line about on a level with the now stationary right foot. And continue this alternate movement forward or backward, as the case may be, always remembering that the first foot must be firmly fixed on the floor before the movement of the second one begins.

Care should be used to avoid too short a step, as that has a tendency to create a hopping movement.

In turning, the movement should be on the ball of the foot, with the heel slightly raised, but ready to come down flat-footedly, as soon as an arc is described. In turning to the right, for example, the right foot revolves on its own plane, while the left marks a semi-circle, the movements being repeated indefinitely until a complete revolution or a number of revolutions are made. In reversing, the process is simply the opposite of this. Here the left foot would be the one that moves least, etc.

In the earliest stages of the trot a habit of shrugging the shoulders was developed, but this tendency has been overcome by good dancers and every effort should be made to avoid it. Keep the shoulders well back, with the head poised easily, and allow all that portion of the body which is above the waist-line to be as rigid as possible. Balance and sure-footedness, the most important general essentials for graceful dancing, will be thus acquired. Moreover, the effect will be apparent in your walking, which will become easier and more graceful. In fact, if turkey-trotting continues to be general the stoop-shouldered men and women will find themselves a considerable minority in the population. And if trotting had no other merits in its favour, that would be enough to commend it as a good and useful exercise.

Stop, Look, Listen, Review Court's Tip

"Stop, Look, Listen." — In these three words of the well-known American railway slogan might be summarized a tip handed out to the general public by Their Lordships of the Court of Review, in disposing of a level-crossing case yesterday. In fact, the whole judgment might be condensed into these three words, in so far as the ruling dealt with the responsibility of the victim of the particular accident under consideration.

"It is certain that if the victim had looked he would have seen the train coming. It is certain that if he had listened, he would have heard the train, whether it had whistled or not; and, if he had looked and listened, he would have seen and heard and he would have stopped," said Mr. Jstice Greenshields, who was the spokesman for his colleagues of the Court in confirming the finding of the lower Court and dismissing plaintiff's action with costs.

The case arose over an accident which occurred at a Papineauville crossing when Joseph Boyer was run down and killed by the Montreal-Ottawa train. The victim was driving a team of horses and an empty rig down a steep hill leading up to the tracks. There was nothing to obstruct his view, as at a distance of 55 feet from the track, he could see for a space of about 1,200 to 1,250 feet up and down the right of way. The train was the regular express, with whose scheduled movements the victim must have been familiar. He did not notice the train until he was on the track and until the locomotive was only a few feet away. The inevitable happened. He was mangled. The widow sued.

Dealing with the various points raised by the Plaintiff, the Court found that there was no statutory obligation on the company to maintain gates at the crossing in question; nor was there any proof that the crossing was so dangerous, either from its situation or from surrounding buildings, as to impose a common law obligation on defendant to erect and maintain gates. The Court also found against the plaintiff on the question of fact, as to whether the proximity of houses was such as to preclude a clear view of the track.

His Lordship's ruling regarding the duties incumbent upon persons making use of level crossings might be summarized as follows: A person approaching a railway crossing, knowing it to be such, must know, at the same time, that he is confronted by an ever present possibility of a train passing; he must furthermore know that such train has a right to pass such crossing—possibly as good or even a better right than he has to cross; he must know that the crossing of the train may be fraught with danger to himself; in the presence of this possible danger, common prudence, not to say common sense, render it incumbent upon that person to take every precaution; if he fail to do this and if he run into the train—instead of having the train run into him—well, then, so much the worse for the person; he alone is responsible for what occurs.

"I am convinced that the deceased was paying not the slightest attention, but when he reached the track he saw and heard the train for the first time when it was just upon him, then he made an effort to hasten the speed of his horses, but unfortunately he was unsuccessful."

Disheartening Effect of Piles

It is not only the itching and stinging of piles that is to be dreaded but also the depressing and debilitating effect on the whole system. The victim of pils cannot do efficient work. There is an uneasiness and discomfort by day and at night the distress from the itching prevents sleep and rest, and undermines the general health.

From almost the first application of Dr. Chase's Ointment you get relief from the annoying itching and burning, and gradually the ulcers are healed up and the disease thoroughly cured. Do not make the mistake of discontinuing treatment as soon as relief is obtained. Dr. Chase's Ointment is a proved cure but it depends on you to apply it persistently until a cure is effected.

Even the most severe cases of long standing yield to the soothing, healing influence of Dr. Chase's Ointment. Surgical operations are no longer necessary(for, as a matter of fact, Dr. Chase's Ointment has cured cases that were not cured by operations. No sufferer from piles can afford to delay the use of Dr. Chase's Ointment.

MAYOR CARTER, OF GUELPH WAS THE CHIEF SPEAKER

Gave an Address at the Social of the Peterborough Co-operative Society in the Woodmen's Hall Last Night.

AN ENJOYABLE EVENING

The concert which was held in the Woodmen of the World Hall last night, under the auspices of the Co-operative Society, which received its inception about a year ago, was so well patronized, that the maangement found it a difficult matter to cope with the demand upon the space available. The following programme was exceptionally well rendered by several young co-operators, who have handed together and formed an orchestra, which provided the music at last evening's function, the same young men being responsible also for the following vocal programme:

Selection—Remick's Hits— Orchestra.

Song, 'The Admiral's Broom'—Mr. Sparrow.

Song, 'Just a Wearying For You'—Mr. Hill.

Song, 'Roses'—Miss F. Lee.

Song, 'Love Song'—Mr. Bartley.

Song, 'Come Into the Garden, Maud'—Mr. Lee.

Banjo solo (selected)—Mr. Jamieson.

Duet, 'The Moon Hath Raised Her Lamp on High—Messrs. Bartley and Henshaw.

Song, 'My Dreams'—Mr. Bartley.

Song, 'A Jovial Monk'— Mr. Bartley.

Selection, 'Faust'—Orchestra.

Song, 'Good-night Beloved'— Mr. Lee.

Mr. J. Begley acted as chairman.

Refreshments were served by Mr. C. Coleman.

Mr. Sam Carter, Mayor of Guelph, was the special speaker of the evening, and the following reference to him was made by the chairman, prior to his introduction to the assembly.

"We have with us to-night, M. Sam Carter, Mayor of Guelph. Although, perhaps, not many of us know Mr. Carter personally, we have heard a great deal about him through the medium of the papers, as being a most hard and consistent worker in the course of the co-oerative movement. Not only is Mr. Carter a staunch supporter of the measure, but his father was before him. We have here a man who would not hesitate a minute to put his hand in his pocket to help on the movement. He is a man of principle, and the man to whom, to a great extent, the success of the coo-perative movement in Canada is a great success." Mr. Carter here intervened with the retort that the speake was stretching it too far, so with a few remarks on the genealities of the business meetings in connection with the local society, Mr. Begley introduced, "The Mayor of Guelph." Mr. Carter took the platform, and the following are extracts from his address on co-opeation:

MR. SAM CARTER.

"I am glad to be here," was his opening remark. "We are jumping into big projects in Guelph. It is surprising what a few men, when they are organized, can do. It is not their extraordinary smartness, but their settled ideas.

"Why should I like to come to Peterobrough? You may not know. Well, one reason is, I am interested in one of your factories, as I have some interest in it. The other reason is that I am here also in the interests of the Co-operative Society. It is my belief that it is better for the whole of the people to have benefits, rather than go to the extremes of education and wealth. I would like to see, he continued, the rich on the top brought down to medium, and the bottom elevated a little.

If a workingman's wages were cut off for 6 or 8 weeks he would be starved to death if someone did not come to his rescue, and man of the workingmen have little children and with matters as they are at present, cost of living so high and clothing so dear, it is a wonder how they are clothed and educated. Your high men and City Council men are not a patch on the women who have to handle the money. Those women are heroines.

The speaker remarked that he would rather live on herrings and oatmeal than drop his principle and borrow.

The Miners' Fight.

The best demonstration of organized labour since the world started was co-operation of the miners in England last year at the time of the great strike. In this strike the Co-operative Society helped them greatly. These hard-working miners, had thousands and thousands of dollars stored away in the society and when they wanted it in time of need it was there for them to have. The sturdy men co-operated and resolved to make known their power, and so they held out against the claims of their masters. They made England tremble, with the result that in a short time they were begged to return to their work and were given a minimum wage and an eight-hour day. That could not have been had it not been for the co-operative stores, and when the struggle came, it saved them, and they won out.

"If there is any place in which I would have loved to have been born it is either in my own native village in the Old Land, or right here in Ontario. Here the children are better educated, better cared fo and better taken care of in the schools."

"Next to our love for the Creator, and the wife and children, manhood should band together for the purpose of co-operation. The men controlling the Retail Merchants', are making thousands a year, and are trying to boycott you."

"If co-operation succeeds, it is the ladies who will make it go. Why, co-operation in England beats Rockefeller, and our own wholesale in England beats Shaughnessy, as far as getting money is concerned. The wholesale makes somewhere in the neighbourhood of 150 million dollars, while the C.P.R., who will take you all around the world, realize something like 110 to 112 million."

"The price of foodstuffs in Canada has increased during the last 4 or 5 years, 50p. c. This is an authorized statement contained in a blue book compiled by a British Government official. The increase in the cost of living in England is 13 p.c. for a corresponding period, and this fact is accounted for by the existence of co-operative stores."

"If I never got a cent of dividend, I would join with them who help themselves, and use religion in a right sense. Any man who wants to get a cent unfairly is not a co-operator."

"A certain sales manager has said, he believes that inside of ten years, there would be a co-operative store in every city, town and country village in Canada."

The Dublin Strike.

"Look at the strike in Dublin which has been going on, and is going on while we are in this room to-night. Men are sticking up for their rights there and the women, with their children in their arms, are slowly starving. The Co-operative Society, recognizing the terrible state into which these people were thrown, at once sent a relief ship, which arrived at the Dublin quay amid the cheers of the strikers, its contents being received with deepest gratitude by the starved dependants upon the shore. This was done within three days of when it was first known of the seriousness of the situation, and there was not another concern that could do it in the time."

The Hydro.

Mayor Carter then proceeded to elucidate as to the progress of the city of which he is civic head, and explained that negotiations were in progress for the installation of a Hydro railway from Guelph to Georgian Bay. Many of the public works in Guelph are owned by the electorate who are deriving great benefit from it.

Breaks His Heart.

"It breaks my heart," continued the speaker, "to have to turn men away from my factory, when they come to me for work. There must of necessity be something radically wrong, and some fundamentals want altering vastly, but I do not mean in any way to be revolutionary by saying that. What it wants is for the people to get a bit of "ginger" and things could not help but materialize satisfactorily.

Might be a Fool.

"I've been in Canada 30 years, and I may have been taken for a fool, but they made me mayor, anyway." was one of the speaker's concluding remarks.

A hearty vote of thanks was accorded to him, andt he singing of the National Anthem concluded the evening's programme.

A Tense Moment in the Memorial Meeting at Massey Hall, Toronto.—At the large memorial service at Massey Hall, Toronto, in honour of those who perished in the Great Lakes storm, Mr. J. S. Potter, who was a passenger on one of the doomed ships, described the scene.

HIS SPEECH CAUSED A SENSATION

Special to the Examiner.

REGINA, SASK., Nov. 20.—Talk of impeachment and parliamentary contempt of court and various other serious proceedings are rampant this morning following a vigorous attack last night by Cameon Lougheed, Liberal member for Gull Lake, on Chief Justice Haultain, formerly Conservative leader, in connection with the Cumberland election case. Lougheed said Haultain violated the ethics of judicial practice by giving judgment in this case.

SOCIAL GATHERING AT MARK STREET CHURCH

Men of the Congregation Gathered in Sunday School Room Last Night

A social gathering of the men of the Mark Street Church was held in the Sunday School room, last night. There were over fifty men present, and a jovial evening was spent. The affair took the form of a social, and was held with the object of giving the members of the Church an opportunity to become better acquainted.

Solos were given by Mr. F. Pratt and Mr. J. Iredale, and a splendid quartette rendition by Messrs. Speer, Iredale, Howson and Rightmeyer.

A short address on the financial policy of the Church was given by Dr. J. E. Middleton.

Refreshments, prepared and served by the ladies of the congregation, were highly appreciated.

Special Services In Knox Church

The meetings are manifestly engaging the thought and interest of an increasing number of people and the attendance last evening was considered very satisfactory. To-night the Brotherhood class will assist with the singing and according to reports there will be some rousing singing in the song service. The story of the Prodigal Son was listened to last night with very close attention. Many new features were suggested, but the familiar Bible story made its old appeal to all present. The services to-night and to-morrow night will close the series.

Partridge Flew Into Baggage Car

While the G. T. R. fast train No. 10 was drawing near Keene, on Tuesday morning, a beautiful large partridge flew in the open door of the baggage car, either distracted by the speed of the train, or knowing the genial conductor, Mr. Wm. Crozier, who is a great sportsman. The bird is alive and thriving in captivity, and is being cared for by the conductor and his crew.

Thought Lost Turns Up Safe

Special Wire to The Examiner.

LONDON, ONT., Nov. 20.—Charles Ferguson, of Bayfield, whose body was supposed to be one of those cast up on the shore of Lake Huron yesterday, wired home to-day that he is safe on the steamer Charles Weston. The body, which was positively identified by relatives as that of Ferguson, is being sent to Goderich.

Music & Drama

THE DREAM MAIDEN.

"The Dream Maiden" at the Grand Opera House last night proved a disappointing performance. In the first place the leading lady, Audrey Maple, was conspicuous by her absence, and her substitute was evidently not very conversant with the part, and in the second place there was little in either the lines or the score that was above the mediocre. The company has lost several important members of the cast in the past few days.

CITY WILL NEED BIG, NEW VAULT.

To Accommodate Documents That Hydro Management Will Bring.

City Engineer Parson has had for several weeks a number of men employed in going over the City's sidewalks removing rough spots caused by heaving at the joints or by other conditions. These slight obstructions have been sufficient to trip citizens and have thereby been quite a nuisance.

Need a City Vault.

With the undertaking of the Hydro-Electric management, a new vault will have to be provided for the City buildings. By the way, the City Hall will soon be an imposing structure, although no material change will be made in its appearance. But the Hydro office will add another section to the building, and it is probable that within a year or two the entire building will be devoted to civic purposes.

TURNBULL CORNER MUST BE CLEARED FOR PEDESTRIANS

Board of Works Says It Is an Inconvenience to Merchants Nearby —Other Business Done

MORE TELEPHONE POLES

There was something of the spirit of approaching elections manifested by the Willing Works at their regular mid-weekly conference on Wednesday night. Ald. Buller presided and those present were Aldermen Johnston, Duffus and Anderson.

Mr. James Hanrahan told the Board that the water is deep on the west side of Aylmer Street near the rink and asked that something be done to drain it way. Engineer Parsons was asked to attend to it.

Wants Coal Room.

Mr. Wm. Langford wrote, asking permission to build a coal room under the concrete walk on Simcoe Street. This was included in the plans for the new Turnbull store.

Mr. Parsons said he understood they wanted to put an elevator in the sidewalk. The Board has recently shown tendencies to keep the walks as free as possible from obstructions or anything that might cause an accident and they want to see what the plans call for. The request was handed to the Engineer for further particulars.

Sidewalk For R. C. Braund.

A temporary sidewalk will be laid on the west side of Park Street, south of Chamberlain, in front of a row of new houses erected by Mr. R. C. Braund. The Board propose to fill in the old drain next year and lay a concrete walk.

Will Get Gravel.

Ald. Buller said he had been offered the earth and gravel from a contractor who expects to receive the contract for several houses. It could be used to fill in Elias Avenue, not far from the proposed houses, and the contractor would pay for the work, the City to return him the money next year. The Board's teams would do the removing. The financial arrangement is the result of the appropriations being almost at rock bottom.

Prevent Flood of Water.

Mr. Parsons reported that the water flooding the property of Mr. Morrison, 599 Bolivar Street, comes down Sherbrooke Street from the Township to Monaghan Road, then flows across the roadway, then across the property north of Sherbrooke Street. A ditch on the west side of the Monaghan Road would keep it from crossing the street, so it would go under the culvert on the south side of Bolivar, then down Bolivar 100 feet, then southerly across the private property on Sherbrooke Street. A more distinct route would be straight down Sherbrooke to the Edison drain. The latter would require a pipe down Sherbrooke and across the Monaghan road, costing $100. Part of this would be in the township.

Ald. Duffus and Ald. Johnston inquired if something could not be done this year, but the Engineer said it was practically impossible to do anything until spring.

Simcoe Street Corner.

Regarding the sidewalks on George and Simcoe Streets around the Turnbull building, Mr. Parsons reported that Mr. Wm. Langford said it was his intention to construct a cover over the walk on George Street, making the passageway wider than it is at present. On Simcoe Street it is his intention to raise the present plank walk so that it would be out of the mud and slush, and to protect it by a covering. He figures on putting his concrete mixer on the present concrete walk and using the passage between the plank and concrete walks for hauling concrete material. More than one-third of the street is now being used and the fence will be moved back 2 1-2 feet. It will still be necessary to have the plank walk on the outside. The concrete mixer will be left on Simcoe Street for about ten days.

More Poles Up.

The Bell Telephone Company's request for permission to place three poles on the north side of Edinburgh Street, two west of Aylmer Street and one east of it, sounded close to Ald. Johnston's sodded bank, upon which he spends many a summer evening with roller, hose, shears and overalls.

Mr. Parsons dug up the particulars and it was found that the first pole was 114 feet west of Aylmer, and on motion of Ald. Anderson and Ald. Johnston, the request was granted.

Deputation Visit Council

A deputation from Otonabee waited upon the County Council at their meeting yesterday afternoon, for the purpose of urging the construction of a bridge to cross the Otonabee river at the end of the street car line. The matter was referred to the Committee on Roads and Bridges.

The deputation comprised the following: Messrs. Matchess, Wilson, Handbidge, and Huston.

Mr. William Toohey will address the Council this evening. "Good Roads" will form the subject of his remarks. Illustrated views depicting public highways in various stages of repair and disrepair will be used in connection with the address. Those who are interested in the good roads question are invited to attend.

Strong Feeling Against White Slave Agents

Examiner Special:

CHARLESTOWN, W. Va., Nov. 20.—Dying from bichloride of mercury poisoning administered to her while being held in a resort, Ruth Steele was carried into court on a cot to-day to give evidence against George Jordan and Rebecca Robinson, who are charged with white slavery. The feeling is running strong against both prisoners, and a special police guard is necessary to prevent a double lynching.

SEATTLE, WASH., Nov. 20.— The re-election here to-day of Samuel Gompers as President of the American Federation of Labour, is conceded; also that of Frank Morrison, who is a Canadian. There will be a big fight for the vice-presidency.

HAW:

"Well, did you discover anything in Stump's past life that we can use against him?"

Detective—Not a thing. All he ever did before he came here was to sell awnings.

Election Agent—Why, that's just what we want. We'll say that he has been mixed up in some decidedly shady transactions.

SOUTH BEACH PURCHASED BY MR. W. E. BROOKS

The Property Embraces About 250 Acres With a Mile And a Half of Lake Shore Front

SOUTH BEACH HOTEL

The Examiner has learned on the best of authority that Mr. W. E. Brooks of Young's Point, has purchased the attractive summer resort known as "South Beach," on Clear Lake. Mr. Brooks has held the lease of this property for a number of years past, and has popularized it as a summer resort, attracting tourists from all parts of Canada and the United States. The purchase was made through the Union Trusts Company of Toronto, acting on behalf of the executors of the estate of the late Major G. M. Bellasis, former owner of the property.

The purchase embraces nearly 250 acres of the township of Douro, including the well known South Beach hotel and all the cottages and dwelling houses situated as far west as the lake shore, and north to the well known point called "Fiddlers Bay."

It is understood that this important deal will lead to the opening up of the beautiful western shore of Clear Lake for building lots for summer cottages. Many enquiries have recently been made by parties desirous of securing lots in this section; and it will be interesting to know that Mr. Brooks intends surveying the property and placing the lots on the market as soon as the preliminaries can be arranged.

BENEDICTS ENTERTAINED BY BACHELORS

The result of the football game last Saturday between the Bachelors and Benedicts was that the Benedicts partook of a good supper on Monday evening at the expense of the Bachelors. The supper was prepared by Coleman Bros.

Mr. H. Smith, manager of the Benedicts, was the chairman of the evening, and made a good job of it. He went over the past season's football and also gave some good ideas for the year. His plan is to form one club, and that one run all the football in the City. Mr. Smith's plan was supported by all those present, and a meeting will be called in the near future to form the club.

Mr. Hotston, captain of the Bachelors, was next called upon to explain how his team was beaten so badly, and he said his team was over trained and that the Benedicts were a little too fast for him.

Captain Paggett, of the Benedicts, was the next speaker, and said the score should have been ten to nothing instead of four to nil, but the Benedicts took pity on those poor Bachelors and let them down with four goals to nothing. Mr. Paggett thought it would be a good thing for football to form the Church League again.

Mr. Day, the referee, said the best team won, but why would he not side in with the Benedicts because he is a Benedict himself.

Mr. Moffatt said that the Benedicts had all the luck in the game, and then the Bachelors thought it was best to give the Benedicts a good feed at their expense, because the Bachelors say the Benedicts do not get a chance to have the good things that a Bachelor has. He also said that the Bachelors turned out a weak team so as not to put the expense on the poor old Benedicts, where if the Bachelors had put on Perry, Gamble, Robinson, Follis and Williams there would not have been a look in for the Benedicts.

As Billie Milburn left the City on Tuesday for the West, the football boys took this chance to present him with a beautiful watch fob. Mr. Moffatt spoke on behalf of the football boys, and said that the boys would greatly miss Mr. Milburn, who had done so much for football in Peterborough, and every one of us wish you the best of luck in the West. Mr. Paggett then gave the watch fob to Mr. Milburn, amid great cheers from the boys.

Mr. Milburn made a suitable reply, and thanked the boys very much for the present, and said he would always remember the good times he had in the City of Peterborough with the football boys.

Many songs were sung, and the banquet broke up at 11 p.m. with "God Save the King."

THE SAD STORY OF A COUNTRY'S CORRUPTION

The story of the corruption in the Chateauguay bye-election has never been fully told. The charge has been made that the county was bought. The details of the transaction will not be made known until the hearing of the election protest. Chateauguay knows what occurred and on the morning of election day the Liberal workers were asked by leading men, not only of the Liberal, but also of the Conservative, party, to institute proceedings against many men who were known to have practiced corruption without endeavouring to disguise it. But the Liberals said nothing and waited. Since that time evidence has been gathered, the case has been prepared and now the exposure is to be made.

Swarming With "Heelers."

The county was flooded with Conservative heelers. From almost every constituency in Quebec, men who were known as corruptionists, came flocking into the different villages, some of them on the pretence of buying cattle, some making other excuses for their presence, and a few, chiefly from Brombe, acknowledging frankly that they were there "to beat Fisher."

The Liberal party was prepared to fight them. Knowing that every effort was to be made, they brought in private detectives, and when the nominations were held the entire Conservative organization was honeycombed by Liberal workers. If a waggon load of whiskey was driven from Valleyfield to Ormstown, the Liberals knew of it. Their men were present at the orgies that were held in the back townships, they were even given money to pass by the Conservatives to voters in order to "beat Fisher."

Bribes to Stay Away.

Ormstown and Chateauguay parishes were the centres of the efforts of the Conservatives. In the former district between Howick and Ormstown, scores of farmers were approached with offers of money by the heelers of the Conservative party. In some cases the bribe was to stay away from the poll. In others, it was to mark the ballot for Morris.

Then on the night before the election, panic struck the district. Quite early in the evening a man who was known to have accepted a bribe, was approached by the Liberal workers of Ormstown. He confessed, handed over the money, the very bills which had been given him, and then in an affidavit told where, how, when, and by whom, he had been bribed.

The two Liberal workers then went to a meeting that was being held in the district, told what had occurred, and showed the money. The rumour spread that they were aware of all who had taken money, and were going to prosecute.

How Panic Broke Out.

Then came the panic. From lonely farm house to farm house these two workers motored, gathering in the money, and collecting affidavits. Respectable farmers had sold their votes for a paltry sum. And they were afraid, and very much ashamed.

One of these Liberal workers was Mr. Neil Sangster. At 4 a.m., they reached his home and prepared to snatch some sleep. Just as they were about to retire the telephone rang. A farmer called them to come at once. "There's a man here wants to give you some money," he said.

And so in the early morning they drove away down to this other farm house. There they heard a strange story. It seems that a neighbour of the man who had called them, had come to the house about half-past three that morning. In the parlour he had drawn from his pocket a roll of bills and throwing them on the floor, had cried: "I can't sleep! I can't do anything, while I have this bribe money. I don't want it. I should not have taken it."

This is what happened in the neighbourhood of Ormstown. The Conservative agents with their little grips were all over the country.

Whiskey on Election Day.

That is how the money was used to buy the county. How the whiskey was used to corrupt it was seen on election day itself.

A report came into the Liberal committee at Ormstown that Conservative workers were taking voters into a house near one of the polls in the district nearby, before driving them to the polls. Some of the Liberal workers motored out to investigate. An old Irish woman answered the door at the suspicious house. She stated that it was her home, and she was warned that the practices which she was countenancing would not be tolerated. She denied that anything wrong had taken place, at first.

Then from the rear of the house came a well known election worker for the Conservative party, from Shefford. He also denied that anything had occurred that was an infraction of the Corrupt Practices Act.

A few moments later from across the road came a rig being furiously driven by a customs officer from Valleyfield. The man from Shefford rushed into the suspicious house, came out with a suit case and endeavoured to throw it in the rig. The customs officer was so anxious to get away that the grip missed the first time. The second attempt succeeded and the rig went rushing down the road.

Later, the old Irish woman admitted that the grip contained what was left of the whiskey, which they had been serving to voters all day.

Similar occurrences were taking place in every corner of the county. Before the court which hears the protest, the story will be told. It will be interesting.

IN THE WORLD OF SPORT

SWINDON'S FORWARD WHO STUDIED FOR THE CLERGY

Harold Fleming Became a Professional Footballer Merely by Accident---Medical Advice Caused Him to Take Up an Outdoor Life and He Chose That of a Pigskin Chaser---A Clean Dribbler.

In these enlighted days there is precious little left of the old foolish prejudice that existed against professional footballers years ago in the Old Country. The ancient prejudices which depicted them as so many hired gladiators with little or nothing of the true sporting spirit in their mental make-up is, thank goodness, but an ugly memory fast disappearing on the sands of time and enlightenment. Those who know, frankly recognize that the average league professional is a very decent fellow indeed, who, with all his little fads and foibles, is a credit to himself and the noble old game of football. Dozens of names readily go to refute the theory—if it still needs refutation—that the paid player, while clever as an exponent of football, is not—well, not quite "nice." And of all the names, not one has qualified for a more honourednche in the annals of "soccer" than the name of Harold Fleming, of Swindon.

An Adornment to the Game.

Here is a professional who adorns the game he plays, adorns it not only by his football, but by his personality; a personality which is frank, fair and sportsmanlike. In the stir and throb of a strenuous game he has yet to forget himself and besmirch the fair fame of the sport, and that is saying much. I say, without any reservation at all, that during his long connection with the game, Fleming has not once committed a deliberate foul, and, what is more, those who know him best, regard it as inconceivable that he should do so. Can one exaggerate the influence for good that must be exercised by such a player, who first and last is a gentleman on and off the field?

It is remarkable to reflect that the famous forward came into the game more by accident than design.

Studied for the Clergy.

Fleming is a player of very considerable intellectual attainments, and a few years ago he had a strong bent towards the church. It is an open secret that it was because of medical advice that he decided to adopt an open air life, and the church's loss has decidedly been football's gain. Fleming, with an absence of false modesty, which did his good sense infinite credit, went over to the ranks of the professionals because he believed he was justified in doing so, and he has never had cause to regret his decision. Some have maintained that his move was a foolish one, but ask those who weekly witness this great forward in action as to what their opinions are, and you will be told very strongly that a better decision could never have been made by anybody.

Fleming's Originality.

And now, what of Fleming as a player? The position for which he is chiefly adapted is that of inside right, but as a matter of fact he is almost equally admirable in any of the three inside berths. Always he is a real live forward. To see Fleming play football which satisfies his own high standard, is to see a player to whom the term "wizard" may not inaptly be applied.

His sinuous runs are executed with dazzling artistry, and he has a very original conception of what to do and how to do it. Always he gets away from the stereotyped, and that counts for much in these days, when originality is not exactly a common trait of forwards. He is a law to himself in much that he does, and at times those who like their games invariably played according to Cocker are apt to look askance at his methods.

A Clever Dribbler.

First and foremost Fleming is an exceedingly clever dribbler, certainly one of the first half dozen exponents of the art in the Old Country. He is never afraid to attempt a dash through on his own, but his methods of going through the defence are entirely different from the methods of other individualistic forwards. He is subtle where Hampton is direct, or to make another comparison, he uses the rapier rather than the bludgeon. A great forward this, who, when his retirement comes, means leaving a breach behind almost impossible to fill. May that retirement be long deferred.

Football Notes.

There is some talk of the two Nottingham clubs amalgamating. It would not be a bad idea. One good team is appreciated more than two second-class ones.

Purcell of Queen's Park is considered the best left-back the Club has had since the days of Bob Smellie

Little Walden, the outside right of Tottenham Hotspur, is fairly amusing the Londoners by his great, magnificent play. He is only 5 feet 2 inches in height, but he has a big heart.

Paterson, who is at present taking the place of Alec Smith in Glasgow Rangers' team, is displaying phenomenal form, and his local admirers regreat that owing to birth qualifications he is ineligible to play for Scotland.

When first started, the Sunderland F.C. funds were very low, and to keep it from disbanding one of the members decided to raffle a canary. This brought in $10, and proved the turning point in the club's career. Since then they have never looked back.

Sheffield Wednesday directors, it is said, are more determined than ever that David McLean will play for no other League club but their own.

Newcastle United have been reluctantly compelled to refuse to give Will McCracken permission to play in the Alec Raisbeck benefit match. His services will be required by the St. James' Park Club. Billy Meredith and Robert Walker, and Meredith and Steve Bloomer will form the right wing—at different times, of course—in the match. A treat is in store for Firhill patrons. The flying Welshman and the great Scottish and English International inside forwards have never been paired before.

Derby County beat Sunderland in the race for Moore, the clever, speedy, sharp-shooting Glossop inside-forward. Moore's transfer was $7,500. A week ago the Roker Park people were told his price was $5,000 more. Leeds City were also bidders for the player.

HOCKEY

The Boston Exploits will again be on the ice this winter. A meeting at the Boston Cafe last night decided to appoint the following officers.

President—Mr. Bill Coros.
Manager—Mr. Peter Gettas.
Secretary—Mr. Bill Ryder.

The secretary is trying to make arrangements to play in other towns, and hopes to fix up some good attractions. The uniforms have been ordered, and the team will be all ready at the first sign of ice.

GREAT INTEREST SHOWN IN MONDAY'S BOUTS

TOMMY PAPPAS—"The Fighting Greek," who will meet Artie Simmons, of Detroit, here on Monday night next.

Great interest is being taken in the big programme of boxing bouts at Brock St. Rink on Monday night, the main event of which is the clash between Tommy Pappas, "the Fighting Greek," and Artie Simmons, of Detroit. Pappas has recently defeated Young Colcson in seven rounds, and fought eight-round draws with Young Kilbane and Spike Kelly. His opponent has a good record, and the bout between the two should be a lively go. There is a fine programme of preliminary bouts, including one between two local boys. Mr. Geo. N. Graham will be the referee. Mr. Geo. Ayres is manager of the bouts which will commence at 8:15 o'clock and which promise to be the classiest programme of the kind seen here in a long time.

Convict Legally Dead.

NEW YORK, Nov. 20.—A man serving an indeterminate sentence in prison is civilly dead, and his wife may remarry without divorce or annulment proceedings, according to an opinion handed down by Supreme Court Justice Maddox in Brooklyn yesterday.

In so deciding he issued a writ of mandamus directing the marriage license bureau to grant a license to Mrs. Mary Gargan, a school teacher. Her husband, John, was sent to Sing Sing for second degree murder with a maximum sentence of life. She will now marry William Weisheimer, a lithographer.

The court held that even though Gargan were pardoned his marital rights would not be restored.

Gen. Weyler Resigns Governorship.

MADRID, Nov. 20.—Capt. Valeriano Weyler of Cuban fame, yesterday resigned the governorship of the Province of Catalonia on the ground that he was a Liberal in politics and disagreed with the policy of the present Conservative Spanish Government.

The general is very popular in Catalonia and attempts were made to induce him to withdraw his resignation, but without success.

Insuring Government Employes.

OTTAWA, Nov. 20.—The Government has decided to take out industrial accident policies for its employes in the grain elevators at Port Arthur.

Saving, Though Millionaire's Son.

BOSTON, Nov. 20.—Walter Scott Hughes, student at "Tech" and son of Wm. H. Hughes, a millionaire importer, of Milton, is setting an example of economy. He walks seven miles from his home to college. Recently he bought at a five and ten cent store pans and pots to cook his own lunches. Hughes gives away, however, more money to student philanthropies and lends more to friends than any other student.

Farmer Hangs Himself.

ST. MARY'S, Nov. 20.—George Gray, aged 60, who resided for a number of years in the 6th concession of London Township, hanged himself in his barn with a piece of rope. He is thought to have been mentally afflicted.

CANADA AT LAND SHOW IN CHICAGO

As never before Canada's natural resources will be exploited at the Land Show in Chicago.

The largest mountain lion ever caught—6 ft. 2 in. long, which crowns the huge pyramid, which is the central pivot of the magnificent exhibit made by the C.P.R. and B.C. Government, was a central figure in an almost tragedy a few years ago. The huge cat was lying outside a natural cave, in which it is supposed were her young, and spying two men creeping upon her, she disappeared quietly into the blackness of the cave-mouth. They decided to venture closer. Even then no sign was seen of the huge animal, and throwing caution to the winds the men boldly walked to the mouth of the cave. The great cat bounded from the interior full on the chest of one of the men, throwing him to the ground. She then proceeded to make an end of the unfortunate man, which would have been done in a very short time, had not his friend drawn his revolver, and shot her through the head.

Henry Holmes, who followed Seager Wheeler, of Saskatchewan, and wrested the laurels in wheat growing from him, has a splendid exhibit of Marquis variety, and other grains and grasses are shown in the seed. At each side of the huge pyramid above spoken of, are displayed samples of B.C. ore and refined minerals including gold, silver, copper, lead, mica, and zinc.

In front of the pyramid is shown a huge model of the railways irrigation project, which has cost many millions of dollars, and which serves water to over one million acres in a three million block. In addition to this model is a working farm model, which shows water running through the ditches, and reaching the trees, the main line of the C.P.R. with its train passing through the irrigation block, the irrigation offices, farm buildings, farm machinery, etc., true in every particular of life.

The natural resources of Eastern Canada are not being neglected, for splendid displays of minerals from Ontario, Quebec and the Maritime Provinces, as well as a magnificent collection of fish caught in the waters of the east are shown.

DUTCH BELTED CATTLE.

Once Nearly Exterminated, They Are Now Bred by the Nobility.

Dutch belted cattle originated in Holland several hundred years ago. At the time of the great Holland wars they were nearly exterminated by the invading armies, and the few that remained became the property of the nobility, who have bred them pure ever since, but do not willingly part with them. They are known in Holland as Veldlargers, whicah means "wrapped around with a sheet."

In colour they are black, with a band of pure white entirely around the body. They may also have white fore feet, white hind feet and legs up to the gambreis and a white switch. The "belt" varies in width. On some it is but a few inches wide. On others it reaches back to the hips and forward on the shoulders. Usually it covers the body from just in front of the hips nearly to the shoulders.

They have the prominent eyes, thin neck, silky hair, soft skin, elevated flanks, broad hips, long, slim tails, shapely, well placed udders, prominent milk veins, and so-called milk form, which make up the dairy type of cow. They are very tame and docile, hardy and vigorous.

And speaking about the n. s., one's idea of cleverness in a woman nowadays, is her ability (or do we mean agility?) to climb street car steps without tearing hers.

ARRANGING FOR PARCEL POST

Examiner Special:

OTTAWA, Ont., Nov. 20.—Railway officials are in conference with Hon. L. P. Pelletier and the officials of the Post Office Department to-day in connection with inauguration of the parcel post system for Canada. At present the mail cars, especially on the through trains, are taxed to their capacity with the great volume of mail bags. This is especially true in the Christmas season.

Stock Markets

A. H. Stratton & Co., Brokers, report the following:

Chas. Barring reports that the stock market was again very inactive and failed to get to yesterday's high prices. I hope those who worried themselves unnecessarily about a further advance, which never did and probably never will, take place, have recovered their peace of mind, as the action of the market so far has certainly not given them any just cause for worry, and I can only repeat what I told you a week ago to-day, viz., that the active issues will be from four to eight points lower before selling any higher than they were last Friday, and the chances are that they won't go any higher than they were yesterday before having a good drop. Just kep in tuoch with us, so that we can tell you what to buy when the time comes. This may happen almost any day now.

American stocks in London quiet and steady.

Bank of England rate unchanged.

HIS MEMORY POOR

J. W. Moyes Has Forgotten About Construction Company

DIRECTORS NOT NOTIFIED

TORONTO, Nov. 21.—Mr. John W. Moyes, erstwhile President of the Ontario & West Shore Railway Co. came before the Ontario Railway and Municipal Board yesterday to tell what he knew of the construction of the road and the proceedings by which the work had been abandoned and four municipalities have now to pay interest on $384,000 of bonds issued under their guarantee. The inquiry was instituted early in the year, but Mr. Moyes' absence from the city, and the later death of Mr. S. C. Smoke, has permitted only preliminary hearings being held up to the present time. Mr. Moyes was the only witness yesterday, and his examination will continue to-day. He was unable to throw much light on the affairs of the railway company, and declined to commit himself in the absence of documents.

Mr. Wm. Proudfoot, K.C., M.P.P., appeared for the town of Goderich and the Township of Ashfield, and Mr. P. A. Malcolmson for Kincardine and the Township of Hurta.

The principal fact elicited by the inquiry was that the portion of the railway now constructed was built by the Huron Construction Co., under an agreement with the Ontario & West Shore Railway Co. Mr. Moyes did not know the proprietors of the Huron Construction Co., he had no copy of the contract agreement, and could not tell where the figures were upon which certificates were issued upon the funds held by the Toronto General Trusts Corporation from the sale of the guaranteed bonds. At the same time, Mr. Moyes held a power of attorney from the Huron Construction Co. to sign and endorse checks, drafts, bills of exchange, etc.

It also came out that Mr. Moyes and Mr. Roberts, an engineer associated with him, had the purchasing of the right of way, steel and other supplies. Mr. McIntyre then tersely remarked, "Then did this ghostly company ever materialize?"

By the contract the Huron Construction Co. was to receive all the bonds of the railway company and a substantial proportion of the stock. The guaranteed bonds amounted to $400,000, and the construction company was to hand over a completed road from Goderich to Kincardine. At this time all the funds from the guaranteed bonds have been paid out, and construction has ceased.

Money was paid out by checks signed by himself or Mr. Roberts by authority of the agreement, and Mr. Roberts' salary, although he was primarily engaged by the railway company, was paid by the construction company under the agreement.

An important point developed was that the mayors, reeves, or wardens of the different municipalities were ex-officio on the board of directors of the railway company, but they never appeared to have been notified of any meetings.

In these words did Arthur Hawkes confirm the report that he would be a Parliamentary candidate in the forthcoming bye-election in South Lanark. Mr. Hawkes' policy is "Canada First, and Common-Sense Politics," thus representing his appearing in the field as an Independent. Ten thousand addresses are being distributed. They are of two grades, one for minors, one for voters. Mr. Hawkes speaks at Smith's Falls on Monday night.

TO OPPOSE ULSTER.

Irish Nationalists Are Now Recruiting a Citizen Army.

NEW YORK, Nov. 21.—A cable from Dublin to The Tribune says:—The world will soon see the formation of an Irish National volunteer movement, which will have for its object the organization of a citizen force ready to uphold the authority of the crown and government in Ireland. This is the natural development of the situation in Ulster, where Unionists have been drilling and organizing themselves to resist oppression and attacks upon their liberties, and the example thus afforded is to be followed by the Nationalists in other parts of the country. They also have determined to put themselves in a position to be able to resist oppression and attacks upon their liberties.

Like many other Irish movements of a national character, this one has taken its origin among Ulster Protestants. Its two leaders are Sir Roger Casement and Capt. James Robert White, both of whom took part in the Ulster Protestant home rule meeting some days ago. Capt. White is a son of the late Field Marshal Sir George White. It is his intention to make common cause with the men now on strike in Dublin.

Split In Cabinet?

LONDON, Nov. 21.—Premier Asquith's compromise offer to the Opposition leaders on the home rule bill is being delayed, according to The London Daily Mail yesterday morning, by serious dissension within the Cabinet regarding the solution of the question. Winston Spencer Churchill, Lloyd George, Sir Edward Grey, and Viscount Haldane, The Daily Mail says, favor the exclusion of Ulster from the bill. Augustine Birrell, Reginald McKenna, and Walter Runciman, would make Ulster accept Home Rule.

Verdict Against Clairvoyants.

CHICAGO, Nov. 21.—A verdict of guilty against James Ryan and C. P. Bertsche, leaders of the "clairvoyant ring," was returned in Judge Walker's court here yesterday. They were charged with swindling Mrs. Hope L. McEldowney of New Salem, Wis., out of $15,500.

In the aggregate the profits of the "ring" were more than a million dollars.

EUROPE PROTESTS

Treatment of Russian Prisoners Arouses Indignation

BARBARITIES IN THE JAILS

LONDON, Nov. 21.—This morning there is being published throughout Europe a protest against the alleged ill-treatment of political prisoners in Russia, and which bears the signatures of politicians, artists and men of letters of European repute. It says that since the Czar's manifesto in October, 1905, promising liberty to the people of Russia, over 40,000 persons have been sentenced for political offences. Of these over 3,000 were executed and more than 10,000 were thrown into horrible "katrogs hard labor prisons."

The tercentenary of the Romanoffs has scarcely affected the political prisoners, their terrible sufferings have not been mitigated, the prisons are overcrowded to such an extent that it is impossible for them to rest even on the bare floor, absolute starvation and the most barbarous treatment are their daily portion, and they have become victims of all kinds of epidemics. Very often the prisons have become the centre of infection for the surrounding district. Those sentenced for long terms of imprisonment, chiefly politicians, are in actual fact confined to a cruel form of slow death.

A veritable epidemic of suicides has developed amongst the prisoners, says the protest. The unhappy prisoners see in suicide the only way of escape from the most tragic fate of those tens of thousands of political exiles, of whom most are departed to Siberia without a trial, but simply by the arbitrary action of the Administration. Most of them are sent to the frozen waste, where they are unable to obtain the necessary food, clothing and housing, and they perish.

Among the signatories of the protest who join together to gather and publish the facts so that the world may know the trend of opinion are the following: Lord Lytton, J. W. Edgewood, M.P., Ramsay Macdonald, M.P., Sir Conan Doyle, H. G. Wells, Jerome K. Jerome, Prof. Gilbert Murray, Prof. J. B. Bury, Laurence Irving, Sir Victor Morley and Maurice Hewlett.

Danish Expedition Sets Out.

COPENHAGEN, Nov. 21.—A Danish scientific expedition headed by Dr. Mortensen started from here yesterday on a deep sea exploration and biological and zoological investigations. The expedition will first visit the Philippines, and from there will proceed to Japan, Australia, New Zealand, Hawaii, Vancouver and the Gulf of Panama, and will return by way of the United States. It will occupy two and a half years in the work.

Left His Money To Animals.

BOSTON, Nov. 21.—Charles F. Wright, wealthy banker, left $70,000 in trust to his brother, the income of which is to be applied to the care for his horses and dogs while they are alive and for monuments to them when they are dead.

"Better Off Dead."

CHICAGO, Nov. 21—Albert Zinkie, 44 years old, shot and killed his mother and himself yesterday. A note found by the police said that the deed was committed because Zinkie and his mother were "hard up and better off dead."

GARDENERS IN SESSION.

Horticultural Association Opens Convention in Toronto.

TORONTO, Nov. 21.—Hon. W. H. Hearst gave a hearty welcome yesterday afternoon to the delegates to the eighth annual convention of the Ontario Horticultural Association at the Parliament Buildings. He pointed out the great scope for interesting experimentation along horticultural lines afforded by the settlement of northern Ontario.

At the morning session, the president, Rev. A. P. Scott, Perth, said that there were evidences on every hand throughout Ontario of increasing interest in gardening, and especially with respect to the culture of flowering plants.

Other phases of horticulture were described by F. E. Brick of Ottawa, R. B. Potts of Hamilton, Park Commissioner Chambers of Toronto, Morley Pettit of Guelph, H. J. Moore of Niagara Falls and C. W. Nash of Toronto.

Mother's Heroic Feat.

CHARLOTTETOWN, P.E.I., Nov. 21.—The three-year-old child of W. A. Macdonald, Grand Tracadie, fell down a forty-foot well. The mother lowered herself down by the rope and rescued the little one, both being drawn safely to the surface by Mr. Macdonald. The water in the well was eight feet deep.

AFTER COUGHING TWO YEARS

Waycross, Ga., Woman Found Relief in Vinol.

Did you ever cough for a week? Then just think how distressing it must be to have a cough hang on for two years.

Mrs. D. A. McGee, Waycross, Ga., says "I had a very heavy cold which settled into a chronic cough which kept me awake night for fully two years, and felt tired all the time. The effect of taking your cod liver and iron remedy, Vinol, is that my cough is gone. I can now get a good night's rest and I feel much stronger in every way. I am 74 years old."

It is the combined action of the medicinal elements of the cods' livers aided by the blood-making and strength-creating properties of tonic iron which makes Vinol so efficient for chronic coughs, colds and bronchitis—at the same time building up the weakened, run-down system.

Try a bottle of Vinol with the understanding that your money will be returned if it does not help you. McDermid & Jury, druggists, corner George and Charlotte Streets; also Payne's drug store, corner George and Simcoe Streets.

Gen. Huerta Reads Presidential Message to Congress

HE CONVEYS A WARNING

MEXICO CITY, Nov. 21.—His face showing none of that whimsical humor which sometimes characterizes him, President Huerta last evening appeared before the new Mexican Congress and read his message. Few Mexican Presidents have read at the formal opening sessions of Congress shorter messages, and few have confined themselves so entirely to one subject. It was nothing more than a terse explanation of his motives for dissolving the old Congress, most of the members of which are now in the penitentiary accused of sedition.

The Senate and Chamber of Deputies met in joint session, and Congress was formally declared convened at 5.30 o'clock in the evening. President Huerta came to the Congress through lines of troops, and the small crowds which gathered were not demonstrative.

There were no extraneous frills to the session. It was more in the nature of a little business meeting of the President and the men converted into lawmakers during the recent so-called elections. The message Gen. Huerta bore to them was, in its essence, an admonition. The incident he related to them of the previous Congress was one by which it was intimated they might be guided in their conduct as Congressmen.

Acknowledging the plaudits and vivas on the Congressmen and spectators, as he moved down the aisle, by a series of military salutes, Gen. Huerta looked a stern figure. Like the Congressmen, he was in evening clothes, the only touch of rank being the tri-color across his breast. In a half circle behind him on the platform, sat his staff, resplendent in gold lace and full dress uniform, and grouped just below on the floor of the House, were members of the Cabinet.

It was a carefully selected audience. Tickets were necessary to pass into the building, and a fair part of the space was occupied by police and plainclothesmen. There were few empty chairs. In the entire audience there were perhaps ten women, but none representative of the city's fashionable element.

A technical violation of the law created comment. Gen. Huerta's staff filed in wearing sidearms. The swords in evidence at the sides of the members of Gen. Huerta's staff appeared to emphasize the fact that his is a military administration.

Outside the building throughout the session a strong force of soldiers guarded all the approaches; patrols rode the street for several blocks around, and still other troops were stationed in small detachments further out. None of these, however, had trouble with the crowds.

Japanese Cruiser Sails.

YOKOSUKA, Japan, Nov. 21.—There was a popular demonstration of farewell at the departure of the Japanese cruiser Idumo for Mexican waters. In spite of a raging storm a steamer accompanied her to the mouth of the bay and a band played national airs. Among those on board were several distinguished naval officers headed by Admiral Baron Minoro Saito, Minister of Marine.

The captain in command of the cruiser, Capt. Keizaburo Moriyama, is regarded as one of the most able officers of the Japanese navy. He is said to be very tactful and capable of handling any international question which may possibly arise. He speaks English and French. The cruiser will proceed by way of Honolulu to Manzanillo.

Heresy Hunters Still Busy.

LONDON, Nov. 21.—(C. A. P. Cable.)—Rev. W. Spiers of Hayfields Heath, Sussex, informs the Canadian Associated Press that he has been overwhelmed with correspondence regarding the formation of a union of protest against Rev. George Jackson's Fernley lecture. Many prominent Canadian Wesleyans are associating themselves with the protest.

Latest Weapon of White Slavers.

NEW YORK, Nov. 21.—The hypodermic needle as a white slaver's weapon was revealed to the police yesterday in the complaint of Miss Louise G. Freeland, head of the Girls' Friendly Society of St. George's parish, that one of her charges had been drugged in this manner in a moving picture show.

Waxes Poetic Over Big Ditch.

MILAN, Italy, Nov. 21.—A special correspondent which the newspaper Il Corriere Della Sera sent to the Panama Canal zone describes the building of the canal as a work worthy of all praise and admiration. He adds: 'It astonishes and inspires, arousing emotion by its overwhelming greatness."

Public Ownership of Power.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 21. — Monopolistic control of water-power in private hands was denounced, with a declaration that no water-power rights owned by the public ever should be removed from public ownership, by the national conservation congress, which adjourned here last yesterday.

TIMBER BLOWN DOWN.

Heavy Loss Occasioned In Forests by Recent Gale.

THESSALON, Ont., Nov. 21.—Woodsmen and hunters now coming out of the timber country in and adjacent to the Mississauga forest reserve report that a vast amount of damage had been caused by the recent great storm to the standing timber. While there is a difference of opinion as to the extent of the damage done, all who have been in the back townships admit that it is tremendous. One man estimates the amount of fallen timber at not less than forty per cent.

Not only will the loss from fallen timber be great, but it greatly increases the danger from fire during the next season and for summers to come unless steps are taken to prevent it. Lumbermen in the limits bordering on the reserve will have much extra work in clearing roads, which have been badly obstructed. One lumberman reports that seventy per cent. of his particular limit is now down. The Ontario Government will do well by taking immediate steps to investigate the extent of damage and decide what should be done to eliminate as far as possible the fire risk, he declares.

Woman Escapes Gallows.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 21.—Pennsylvania to-day stands cleared of its "Bessie Wakefield" case. The board of pardons, acting at Harrisburg, commuted to life imprisonment the sentence of death imposed upon Mrs. Frieda Hartman Trost on Dec. 14, 1912, for poisoning her second husband.

URIC ACID SUFFERING
Uric acid is an accumulation of poison which finds lodgment in the system when the kidneys fail to remove it from the blood. In the kidneys and bladder it forms stones, in the joints and muscles it causes rheumatism. In any case the pain and suffering is almost beyond human endurance. Uric acid is promptly removed from the system when the kidneys are kept healthy and active by using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

Kryptok Lenses

The man who invented Kryptok Invisible Bifocals came very near discovering an equivalent to the Fountain of Youth.

It is the Eyes that make a healthy person feel old, nothing else.

If you wear distant glasses and lower your eyes to read, the page is blurred. If you are wearing reading glasses and raise the eyes to look around, everything is blurred.

You meet a friend who tells you he is wearing bifocal glasses at that moment but to all appearance they are plain glasses. He reads through the reading part and sees his car two blocks through the distant part with equal facility. He is wearing Fowler's Kryptok Invisible Bifocal Glasses.

The Pride of the Nation.

S. S. Shubert, the theatrical manager, was praising the American chorus girl.

"She is not only prettier," said Mr. Shubert, "than her British or French or Italian sisters, but she is also brighter, gayer, and wittier. It's a pleasure to hear her talk.

"Two chorus girls were lunching near me the other day. Their skirts were slashed and they wore those smart new-fangled shoes that fasten with ribbon—narrow ribbon running in criss-cross in their long, slim, silken ankles.

"'I've got no use for your rah-rah college boy,' said the first chorus girl, swinging her shapely foot in and out of her slashed skirt. 'He reminds me of a china doll.'

"'Why?' asked the other girl. 'Because he's so pink and pretty?'

"'No,' said the first chorus girl. 'Because he gets broke so soon.'"

"That Affair Next Door"

By ANNA KATHARINE GREEN

"And threw the sweepings away, of course?"

"Of course; would you have me keep them for treasures?"

"It might have been well if you had," muttered the Coroner. "The combings from the lady's hair might have been very useful in establishing her identity."

The porter who has charge of the lady's entrance was the last witness from this house. He had been on duty on the evening in question and had noticed this couple leaving. They both carried packages, and had attracted his attention first, by the long, old-fashioned duster which the gentleman wore, and secondly, by the pains they both took not to be observed by any one. The woman was veiled, as had already been said, and the man held his package in such a way as to shield his face entirely from observation.

"So that you would not know him if you saw him again?" asked the Coroner.

"Exactly, sir," was the uncomprising answer.

As he sat down, the Coroner observed: "You will note from this testimony, gentlemen, that this couple, signing themselves Mr. and Mrs. James Pope of Philadelphia, left this house dressed each in a long garment eminently fitted for purposes of concealment,—he in a linen duster, and she in a gossamer. Let us now follow this couple a little farther and see what became of these disguising articles of apparel. Is Seth Brown here?"

A man, who was so evidently a hackman that it seemed superfluous to ask him what his occupation was, shuffled forward at this.

It was in his hack that this couple had left the D——. He remembered them very well as he had good reason to. First, because the man paid him before entering the carriage, saying that he was to let them out at the northwest corner of Madison Square, and secondly— But here the Coroner interrupted him to ask if he had seen the gentleman's face when he paid him. The answer was as might have been expected. No. It was dark, and he had not turned his head.

"Didn't you think it queer to be paid before you reached your destination?"

"Yes, but the rest was queerer. After I had taken the money—I never refuses money, sir—and was expecting him to get into the hack, he steps up to me again and says in a lower tone than before: 'My wife is very nervous. Drive slow, if you please, and when you reach the place I have named, watch your horses carefully, for if they should move while she is getting out, the shock would throw her into a spasm.' As she had looked very pert and lively, I thought this mighty queer, and I tried to get a peep at his face, but he was too smart for me, and was in the carriage before I could clap my eye on him."

"But you were more fortunate when they got out? You surely saw one or both of them then?"

"No, sir, I didn't. I had to watch the horses' heads, you know. I shouldnt like to be the cause of a young lady having a spasm."

"Do you know in what direction they went?"

"East, I should say. I heard them laughing long after I had whipped up my horses. A queer couple, sir, that puzzled me some, though I should not have thought of them twice, if I had not found next day——"

"Well?"

"The gentleman's linen duster and the neat brown gossamer which the lady had worn, lying folded under the two hack cushions of my hack; a present for which I was very much obliged to them, but which I was not long allowed to enjoy, for yesterday the police——"

"Well, well, no matter about that. Here is a duster and here is a brown gossamer. Are these the articles you found under the cushions?"

"If you will examine the neck of the lady's gossamer, you can soon tell, sir. There was a small hole in the one I found, as if something had been snipped out of it; the owner's name, most likely."

"Or the name of the place where it was bought," suggested the Coroner, holding the garment up to view so as to reveal a square hole under the collar.

"That's it!" cried the hackman. "That's the very one. Shame, I say, to spoil a new garment that way."

"Why do you call it new?" asked the Coroner.

"Because it hasnt a mud spot or even a mark of dust upon it. We looked it all over, my wife and I, and decided it had not been long off the shelf. A pretty good haul for a poor man like me, and if the police——"

But here he was cut short again by an important question:

"There is a clock but a short distance from the place where you stopped. Did you notice what time it was when you drove away?"

"Yes, sir. I don't know why I remember it, but I do. As I turned to go back to the hotel, I looked up at this clock. It was half-past eleven."

XII.

The Keyes.

We were also by this time greatly interested in the proceedings; and when another hackman was called we recognized at once that an effort was about to be made to connect this couple with the one who had alighted at Mr. Van Burnam's door.

The witness, who was a melancholy chap, kept his stand on the east side of the Square. At about twenty minutes to twelve, he was awakened from a nap he had been taking on the top of his coach, by a sharp rap on his whip arm, and looking down, he saw a lady and gentleman standing at the door of his vehicle.

"We want to go to Gramercy Park," said the lady. "Drive us there at once."

"I nodded, for what was the use of wasting words when it can be avoided; and they stepped at once into the coach."

"Can you describe them — tell us how they looked?"

"I never notice people; besides, it was dark; but he had a swell air, and she was pert and merry, for she laughed as she closed the door."

"Can't you remember how they were dressed?"

"No sir; she had on something that flapped about her shoulders, and he had a dark hat on his head, but that was all I saw."

"Didn't you see his face?"

"Not a bit of it; he kept it turned away. He didn't want nobody looking at him. She did all the business."

"Then you saw her face?"

"Yes, for a minute. But I wouldn't know it again. She was young and purty, and her hand which dropped the money into mine was small, but I couldn't say no more, not if you was to give me the town."

Did you know that the house you stopped at was Mr. Van Burnam's, and that it was supposed to be empty?"

"No, sir, I'm not one of the swell ones. My acquaintances live in another part of the town."

"But you noticed that the house was dark?"

"I may have. I don't know."

"And that is all you have to tell us about them?"

"No, sir; the next morning, which was yesterday, sir, as I was a-dusting out the coach I found under the cushions a large blue veil, folded and lying very flat. But it had been slit with a knife and could not be worn."

This was strange, too, and while more than one person about me ventured an pinion, I muttered to myself, "James Pope, his mark!" astonished at a coincidence which so completely connected the occupants of the two coaches.

But the Coroner was able to produce a witness whose evdence carried the matter on still farther. A policeman in full uniform testified next, and after explaining that his beat led him from Madison Avenue to Third or Twenty-Seventh street, went on to say that as he was coming up this street on Tuesday evening some few minutes before midnight, he encountered, somewhere between Lexington Avenue and Third, a man and woman walking rapidly towards the latter avenue, each carrying a parcel of some dimensions; that he noted them because they seemed so merry, but would have thought nothing of it, if he had not presently perceived them coming back without the parcels. They were chatting more gaily than ever. The lady wore a short cape, and the gentleman a dark coat, but he could give no other description of their appearance, for they went by rapidly, and he was more interested in wondering what they had done with such large parcels in such a short time at that hour of night, than in noting how they looked or whither they were going. He did observe, however, that they proceeded towards Madison Square, and remembers now that he heard a carriage suddenly drive away from that direction.

The Coroner asked him but one question:

"Had the lady no parcel when you saw her last?"

"I saw none."

"Could she not have carried one under her cape?"

"Perhaps, if it was small enough."

"As small as a lady's hat, say?"

"Well, it would have to be smaller than some of them are now, sir."

And so terminated this portion of the inquiry.

A short delay followed the withdrawal of this witness. The Coroner, who was a somewhat portly man, and who had felt the heat of the day very much, leaned back and looked anxious, while the jury, always restless, moved in their seats like a nest of school boys and seemed to long for the hour of adjournment, notwithstanding the interest which everybody but themselves semed to tak in this exciting investigation.

Finally an officer, who had been sent into the adjoining room, came back with a gentleman, who was no sooner recognized as Mr. Franklin Van Burnam than a great change took place in the countenances of all present. The Coroner sat forward and dropped the large palm-leaf fan he had been industriously using for the last few minutes, the jury settled down, and the whispering of the many curious ones about me grew less audible and finally ceased altogether. A gentleman of the family was about to be interrogated, and such a gentleman!

I have purposely refrained from describing this best known and best reputed member of the Van Burnam family, foreseeing this hour when he would attract the attention of a hundred eyes and when his appearance would require our special notice. I will therefore endeavour to picture him to you as he looked on this memorable morning, with just the simple warning that you must not expect me to see with the eyes of a young girl or even with those of a fashionable society woman. I know a man when I see him, and I had always regarded Mr. Franklin as an exceptionally fine-looking and prepossessing gentleman, but I shall not go into raptures, as I heard a girl behind me doing, nor do I feel like acknowledging him as a paragon of all the virtues—as Mrs. Cunningham did that evening in my parlour.

He is a medium-sized man, with a shape not unlike his brother's. His hair is dark and so are his eyes, but his moustache is brown and his complexion quite fair. He carries himself with distinction, and though his countenance in repose has a precise air that is not perfectly agreeable, it has, when he speaks or smiles, an expression at once keen and amiable.

On this occasion he failed to smile and though his elegance was sufficiently apparent, his worth was not so much so. Yet the impression generally made was favourable, as one could perceive from the air of respect with which his testimony was received.

He was asked many questions. Some were germane to the matter in hand and some seemed to stride wide of all mark. He answered them all courteously, showing a manly composure in doing so, that served to calm the fever-heat into which many had been thrown by the stories of the two hackmen. But as his evidence up to this point related merely to minor concerns, this was neither strange nor conclusive. The real test began when the Coroner, with a certain bluster, which may have been meant to attract the attention of the jury, now visibly waning, or, as was more likely, may have been the unconscious expression of a secret if hitherto well concealed embarrassment, asked the witness whether the keys to his father's front door had any duplicates.

The answer came in a decidedly changed tone.

"No. The key used by our agent opens the basement door only."

The Coroner showed his satisfaction. "No duplicates," he repeated; "then you will have no difficulty in telling, us where the keys to your fathers front door were kept during the family's absence."

Did the young man hesitate, or was it but imagination on my part—"They were usually in my possession."

"Usually!" There was irony in the tone; evidently the Coroner was getting the better of his embarrassment if h had felt any. "And where were they on the seventeenth of thie month? Were they in your possession then?"

Listless, Backward Children

Made Bright and Active by Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills

Be Kinds When Cure—Not Scolding.

Many a growing boy or girl is set down as constitutionally slow, stupid or lazy when it is really a question of inactive bowels, lazy liver or sluggish kidneys.

The growing child, with a hearty appetite, certainly cannot long remain healthy and bright if the sewers of the body, the bowels and the kidneys, are choked up with impurities that should be thrown off promptly.

The muddy complexion, dragging limbs and dislike for mental or physical effort show plainly that the child needs Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills to stir up the liver and kidneys and regulate the bowels. Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills do this most effectively, cleansing the whole system, purifying the blood, aiding the digestion and giving plenty of life and activity. As upon the education obtained may depend the success in life of your boy or girl—see to it that the general health of the child is such that study is pleasure and not a hardship.

NERVES ARE SORE AND PAINFUL

Neuritis, or inflammation of the nerves, is the most painful of nervous ailments. You may feel the soreness or tenderness throughout the body, or it may be confined to certain nerves. In the head it is called neuralgia; in the hips and legs, sciatica; in the face, tic doloreux, and in the chest, intercostal neuralgia.

The application of dry heat affords relief from the lance-like pains, but the essential thing is to build up the exhausted nervous system by the persistent use of such a restorative as Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. You will have other symptoms to warn you of the depleted condition of the nervous system, and this is your opportunity to restore to the body the energy and vigour of health.

While this great food cure is instilling new vitality into the starved nerve cells it is also forming new, firm flesh and tissue, and, by noting your increase in weight, you can prove beyond doubt the benefit being obtained by its use. This is Nature's way of curing diseases of the nerves, and it is the only way to obtain lasting benefit.

The Vatican Library.

The Vatican library probably is the most sumptuously housed in the world. The collection contains some of the most precious manuscripts in existence, including the Biblical "Codex Vaticanus" of the fourth century, the fifth century Vergil and the palimpsest "De Republica" of Cicero.

The printed books include more than 2,500 fifteenth century editions, many of them vellum copies. The total library has been estimated to comprise more than 220,000 volumes and 30,000 manuscripts, but it has never been adequately catalogued.—Pall Mall Gazette.

Bear Baiting in Olden Days.

So popular was bull baiting in olden days in England that riots followed the attempt to suppress it in the large towns. Bear baiting was more popular still, if that could be. In various places, Liverpool, especially, it made part of the festivities at the election of the mayor, being held before his worship started for church. Ladies commonly attended in great numbers. There was a famous bear at Liverpool which showed such grand sport in 1782 that certain fair admirers presented it with a garland, decked it with ribbons and carried it to the theater, where a special entertainment had been "commanded," which bruin sat out in the front of their box. But of gossip about bull and bear baiting there is no end. Enthusiastic lovers of Shakespeare read with interest the petition of the royal bear warden, addressed to Queen Elizabeth in 1595 complaining that his licensed performances had been neglected of late because every one went to the theater.

Power of a Song.

Mme. Marchesi, speaking of the power of song, said: "I was singing at Edinburgh, where I have very good friends in the head master of a big public school and his wife, and it was arranged that I should have supper with them after the concert. One of my songs was Landon Ronald's 'Peace and Rest,' the idea of which is two lovers not separated by death, but lying together in the same tomb. When I came to supper with my friends my host said to me: 'Ah, Mme. Marchesi, that song you sang, "Peace and Rest," had a great effect upon me. I never thought before of my wife and I being separated by death'—I did not wonder at this, for he is a most happy man, full of joy of life—'but since I heard you sing that song I have been thinking hard, and tomorrow I am going to buy a family vault.' I scarcely knew whether to laugh or to cry, but in the end we all laughed. And surely this would be hard to beat for an example of 'what a song can do'"

SMILE!

—x—

Smiling, you know, is not to be confounded with smirking, nor laughing with giggling. Put your smile and laugh to the test. With your mirror before you, start the smile by pursing the lips just the merest trifle. Then let all the movement to ripple along to the corners of the mouth, at the same time permitting the eyes to express sympathy. Never forget that a smile is the expression rather than actual movement of the lips.

As for the laugh, that, too, requires observation. As one grows older unless great care is taken to keep the voice even and soft, the tones become short and harsh, and then the laugh is unpleasant. If you are a close observer, let your own ears be critis of your laugh, just as the mirror criticises your smile.

Anyone will tell you how a sweet, properly pitched voice charms, and no doubt you have often felt such charm yourself.

Some women, even after they have passed middle age, have a sweet child-like ring to their voices, and a softness of tone that is delightful.

WHY FISHES LEAP

Usually They Have a Good Reason—Not Done in Play

If an angler were asked point-blank why he calls salmon and trout "game fishes" rather than carp and roach, I imagine that he would quote their habit of jumping out of the water when hooked as one of the reasons for which, affording finer sport, they are more game than the coarse fish, writes F. G. Aflalo, in The London Morning Post. It cannot be merely the fact of their taking an artificial fly, for the dace is also commonly caught on it. No, the power of leaping clear of the service, adding, as it does to the glorious uncertainty of bringing them to book, undoubtedly sets these members of the salmon family higher in the sportsman's estimation than the ground-hugging carp tribe. If this be definitely accepted, then the salt water fisherman has a wider purview of game fishes, since the mighty tarpon, the fierce swordfish, the delicate little ladyfish, and many other denizens of seas fulfill the conditions and give far more exciting sport on the rod than those which merely bore or sulk.

There are two possible reasons why fishes jump out of water. They certainly do not do so, like lambs in a meadow, for sheer joy of life. If you see small fry jumping in a lake, as likely as not some old pike or trout is on their track. Such larger fishes as salmon the angler do not jump to escape their enemies, but are either jumping after flies or some other natural food, or shaking off parasites. The solution, to the best of my belief, hangs on which of these two. If it will jump every time the rod is jerked after it, fishers insist, five fish that "rose" the most striking displays of leaping in the Gulf of Mexico in the gigantic whipray, and its object is quite obvious, for I have seen these great fish fling off three or four remoras in the leaping. The remora, or sucking-fish, is frequently found adhering to sharks and rays, and to carry a number of these about must be heavy work. And so the whipray jumps to shake off its remoras, as a dog mightily shakes himself after a roll in the sea.

Many small fish both salmon and trout are known to jump into boats. In one case I knew of, a fifteen-pound salmon jumped clean into the lap of a lady fishing in the Duke of Richmond's water on the Spey. Porpoises are also notorious acrobats, jumping more continuously than any fish, and one of these marine mammals once jumped into the skiff of a sportsman and knocked him overboard. The only fish known deliberately to charge its captor's boat when hooked is the tremendous swordfish, caught on the rod on both sides of America, and the effect of a swordfish careering along, as it were, on its tail, seemingly erect, is alarming to anyone unaccustomed to such demonstrations. The others, tarpon and the rest, come in collision with the boat only by accident, and the reality with which such accidents occur must often have struck those of us who have watched huge tarpon repeatedly fall back in the water within a foot or so of the gunwale.

CREDIT FOR FARMERS

What a Western Man Learned by Trip to Europe

The Canadian farmer suffers the greatest handicap in the world in the matter of facilities for borrowing money, said Mr. J. H. Haslam, of Regina, Sask., who went to Europe as chairman of a commission to investigate agricultural credits. While the Canadian farmer (presumably, the Western farmer) pays anywhere from eight per cent. up to 50 per cent. for advances, the European farmer with less land and a smaller investment can secure "almost any amount he may ask for" at from two to six per cent.

In France money is at the ready disposal of the farmer at a rate of interest ranging from two and a half to three per cent. In Germany he pays from three and a half to five per cent., in Italy from four to six per cent., in Belgium and Holland from three to four per cent., in Austria-Hungary four and a half per cent., and in Russia from four and a half to six per cent. In nearly every country the farmer obtains money as cheaply as or more cheaply than the banks.

CURIOUS RACES

A farmer in Westphalia laid a wager that twelve bees of his, released at a distance of three miles from their hives, would travel as rapidly as a like number of pigeons on the same course. The first bee, properly powdered for purposes of identification, did, as a matter of fact, arrive at its hive a quarter of a minute before the coming of the first pigeon to its cote; and there were three other bees that came in before the second pigeon arrived.

A curious form of race is sometimes indulged in in India—the Noah's ark race. At one that was run near Calcutta a goat proved the victor over an elephant and a horse, the latter being a bad third.

The slowest races in the world are the snail contests held in certain parts of Germany at "county fairs." The winners are much esteemed, and frequently fetch high prices.

An ox-race is held every year in some parts of Germany. Each ox must be ridden by its owner, and ridden bareback. No whip, spur, yoke, harness or any means of guiding the animal is allowed. The rider must depend entirely upon his voice to accomplish the end he has in view, and as the oxen do not race on a track, but across a large open field, the training of the animals and the skill of their riders undergo a severe test. Speed is a secondary consideration in this race, for the rider who can induce his steed to go in a straight line is sure to win. It often happens that an hour has passed before one of the oxen passes "under the wire."

There was a novel cycling race at Saint Cloud, Paris. The course was laid down a very steep hill, and the contestant who came in last was declared the winner. Brakes were prohibited, and riders were not permitted to set foot on the ground or to "tack" across the course.

Barrel racing is a favorite amusement among the workmen in the suburbs of Paris. In a double barreled race, the men engaged are obliged to push before them two empty barrels instead of one.

GOT RID OF BRONCHITIS

The worst feature of bronchitis is the tendency to return year after year until the system is worn out and gives way to consumption, or other disease.

Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine owes much of its great popularity to the fact that it positively cures bronchitis, and this is about as severe a test as can be made of a medicine of this kind.

Mr. W. H. Walker, Calmar, Alta., writes: "I am pleased to say that Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine has done much good to myself, wife and children. My eldest girl, seven years, had bronchitis, and the doctor who attended her did not seem to do much good. We got Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linsed and Turpentine for her, and she soon got well. We always keep this medicine in the house now ready for use, and find that it soon cures coughs and colds."

In fighting diseases of the throat and lungs half the battle is in having Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine at hand to be used promptly. This is why many people prefer to buy the large family size bottle.

THE GREAT PYRAMID

The Great Pyramid originally occupied an area almost equal to thirteen and a half acres. The original perpendicular height was 285 feet, and the total contents of solid masonry equal to 89,418,806 cubic feet, weighing 6,878,369 tons. Taking the masonry at only 25c per cubic foot an almost ridiculously low figure for materials, carriage, and workmanship, the cost of the structure would be $22,254,700. The masonry of the Great Pyramid would be sufficient for the erection of 1,120 columns, each 20 feet square and of the height of the London Museum, which is 202 feet. Again, if cut into paving stones 4 inches in thickness, they would cover a space equal to 6,158 acres.

Cross a Real Mystery

Leach Cross is one of the mysteries of the ring, says Jim Corbett. There is no denying he can fight when he cares to. Nearly all his battles have been over the ten-round course right in New York. At times his showing has been of a high order, and at others he has looked like a preliminary scrapper. Cross likes to meet the rushing, slam-bang fellows. He has a wallop, second to none, and knows how to use it on the fellows who tear in. Long experience has taught him that. But every time that Leach has boxed a clever man, his showing has been very ordinary, and that is the reason why he so frequently enters the ring at a good price in the betting.

Light Sovereigns

Whenever the Bank of England gets $1,500,000 worth of gold coins the money is sent in a batch to be weighed at the Mint. Since the order for the exchange of light gold coins came into force—in 1892—over a hundred million sovereigns and half-sovereigns to the value of many millions have been taken out of circulation. The average depreciation in the value of light coins is about 5c. The loss to the Mint by waste and sweepings, which, by the by, are sold by auction, is sometimes close to $5,000 a year. When some furnaces at the Mint were pulled down one year, 20.917 ounces of gold and 21.33 ounces of silver were recovered from the sweepings and the old bricks. In the sweepings from other portions of the building were found 52.95 ounces of gold and 370 ounces of silver.

Much Tattooing

Perhaps the most extraordinary tattooing idea ever carried out was that of a coachman who, at the time of the Dreyfus trial, had his body and legs covered with no fewer than 120 illustrations of the case, including portraits of the leading personages. The work occupied nearly two years.

Entertained Working Men

King George gave proof of the interest he takes in the industrial classes by inviting all the men who were working on the renovation of Buckingham Palace to dinner on the completion of their task. The company numbered about 400.

BROWN AS A FINANCIER.

The president of the health insurance company was displeased, not to say ruffled. He considered himself a down bird, a sharp eyed spectator, and a knowing card. The principal business of his company was to insure people against illness. That is, for the payment of a certain amount annually they could collect an indemnity for all the time they were ill.

The prize writer of this insurance stood before the president and bowed his head to the storm of reproach which was cast upon him.

"What did you mean by insuring this fellow, Brown?" shouted the President.

"Sir," said the prize writer, "he had never been sick for a day up to the time we insured him."

"But can't you be reasonable," burst forth the President.

"Well, I admit he has been sick a good deal since he took out his policy," admitted the man who was being bawled out.

"Sick a good deal!" thundered the president. "As well as I can make out, as soon as he got this insurance he gave up his apartment and hired a cot in the hospital."

BIG SUMS IN CHANCERY

Some Facts Regarding This Great Legal Institution of England

There are millions—hundreds of millions—in Chancery; but the proportion of this vast sum that is unclaimed is comparatively small. Ownerless accounts, the records relating to which do not go back farther than 1720, aggregate a little more than $5,000,000, and are, for the most part, relatively small in value.

Substantial sums, however, are frequently recovered from Chancery, in some cases after the lapse of a very long period. In 1893 a claim was successfully made to a fund which had been in court since 1753. There was another curious case in 1909 when Chancery yielded up a fund it had held for 126 years. The amount—$2,500—represented the estate of a lady who was married in 1784, and who disappeared on her wedding day.

In addition to money, many other things go in Chancery; and there has not been a time for centuries when it did not hold land and buildings.

Never, perhaps, did real estate pass into its keeping in stranger circumstances than in a case which happened about a dozen years ago. In consequence of losing a law suit, a Hampshire landowner abandoned his farm in a fit of pique, and for long afterwards it was, with the exception of one field, which was cultivated by the vicar for his tithe, a melancholy waste.

Even human beings frequently go in Chancery. Persons who undergo this operation are minors "interested" in property, and the court has absolute control over the appointment and removal of guardians, and has also full power to see that wards are properly maintained and educated.

WALKING FEATS

Some British Postman Trod a Long Road Before Retiring

It is a great feat to walk a distance of 25,000 miles and not know it. This has happened frequently in the cases of postmen and messengers who have spent their lives in such occupations. In England there was a postman who when he retired from active service had covered on his rounds a distance of 440,000 miles.

Another postman in Scotland who had been carrying mail for thirty-four years had travelled a distance of 110,000 miles on foot. Still another postman who travelled over the roads of Yorkshire completed a journey of 125,000 miles when he had retired after more than twenty-five years of service.

It is astonishing what distances can be covered by men, whose vocations do not necessarily call for foot travelling. The organist of a church in a small town in England had walked 50,000 miles to play his organ every Sunday. He left a record for punctuality, never once being late in fifty-one years of service.

Troubled With Weak Back and Kidneys For 10 Years.

Many people fail to understand the significance of a lame, weak, sore or aching back.

When the back aches or becomes weak it is a warning that the kidneys are affected in some way.

Take notice to the warning and cure the backache on the first sign, for if you don't do this, serious complications are sure to arise and perhaps develop into Dropsy, Diabetes or Bright's Disease, the three most deadly forms of kidney trouble.

Doan's Kidney Pills will strengthen the weak back, and prevent any form of kidney trouble entering the system.

Mrs. Ed. Boyer, Nokomis, Sask., writes:—"I have been troubled with weak back and kidneys. I had terrible dizzy headaches, and could not sleep at night. In this way I suffered for ten years, until I read about Doan's Kidney Pills. I purchased two boxes, and as they helped me, I sent for two more; they put me on my feet, and I have been able to work ever since."

Doan's Kidney Pills are 50 cents a box, or 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

CHAMPION WALKER AND HIS METHODS

English "Pedestrian" With Marvellous Record Tells Some of the Rules He Follows

The wonderful pedestrian powers of Mr. T. E. Hammond, hon. secretary of the Surrey Walking Club and a member of the Stock Exchange Club, are well known in England, but perhaps not generally known in Canada. He it was who, a few years ago, set up fresh figures for a twenty-four hours' walk, reaching 131 miles 880 yards in the allowed time, while he is also the holder of the London to Brighton and back record and the London to Oxford record. While making his 24-hours' walk Mr. Hammond lost nine pounds in weight.

Some people may have the idea that it is necessary to lead a Spartan life in order to become a champion walker. Mr. Hammond confesses, however, that he is neither a teetotaller nor a non-smoker, but he is always most abstemious, and, as regards smoking, he seldom departs from the pipe, which he fills, say, three or four times a day only.

In training for a walking race, Mr. Hammond does not recommend walking long distances at a slow rate, as they make one lose speed. When a novice has acquired a good style of walking—and this is most important, as bad faults are more easily acquired than eradicated—he should commence walking in order to obtain speed. A good plan is to begin with a quarter of a mile at top speed. "As soon as he can accomplish this in anything under two minutes," says Mr. Hammond, he may gradually increase the distance from day to day, but must be particularly careful not to continue long distances if the watch indicates that he is at all affected in his speed."

Putting the Feet Down

Referring to style in walking, the champion says that fair walking is generally called "toe and heel," and one foot should always be on the ground. The steps are taken as much as possible from heel to heel, which part of the foot must touch the ground first and be firmly dug into it. The ball and toe of the foot should not be on the ground for any perceptible space of time. If they are dwelt on the walker loses a certain amount of time in each stride, besides causing the knee to bend by bringing the weight of the body on the toes, which are unable to bear it.

"At each stride the loin and hips corresponding to the leg which is put forward should be twisted well round, the right loin and hip towards the left, and the left loin and hip towards the right. By this means the walker is enabled to put his feet down in a geometrical straight line, one in front of the other, and thereby gains additional length of stride.

"As regards the upper part of the body, the arms must be kept well up and inclined outwards from the chest, with the elbows slightly bent; since in fast walking the arms perform almost as important functions as the legs.

Watch the Arms

Each arm must be swung across the chest and the shoulders well lifted at the same time, in unison with each alternate stride. The object of this motion is to raise the weight of the body off the heels, and thereby enable the legs to take a quicker stride. Some walkers keep the arms close to the body, move them much less, and more towards the nostrils. This method, however, is only suitable to men very slightly built about the chest and trunk.

"They can walk with a very quick and rapid stride, being enabled to move their legs much faster from having no weight to carry. Above all things, the shoulders must be kept well back, the chest out, the whole body as upright as possible, and the knees quite straight. Nothing tends so much to 'lifting' as stooping forward with the body or bending the knees."

MIDNIGHT HARVESTING

For Divers Reasons People Have Gathered in Crops at Night

Unusual circumstances are apt to occasion queer happenings at harvest time. One very wet season a Herefordshire farmer advantageously turned night into day. He had a large field of particularly fine wheat, which he was most anxious to save from the ravages of the elements.

A fine night following on a dry day, he took advantage of it, putting several teams, in the field at ten o'clock. By five next morning the last sheaf had been garnered, and the men were given a whole day's rest, as well as a rare spread. But for that night's work the wet which followed would have spoiled this field of wheat.

It was a very different reason which prompted some midnight harvesting in the county of Worcester. As the result of a dispute between a couple of farmers who had been in partnership, a field of wheat was cut and carried off by one of them while the other slept.

The sympathies of neighboring farmers must have been with the wide-awake one; for, with the rising of the moon, he was able to put four reaping machines in the field. These made short work of the golden grain, which, as it was cut and thrown out in sheaves, was loaded on wagons and borne silently away.

At the Sheaf House Farm, Blockley, Worcestershire, a loaf of bread was made in thirty minutes from the time when the wheat was standing in the field uncut. It was exhibited in Mark Lane, London.

At half-past eight in the morning cutting commenced, and as fast as the sheaves appeared they were carried to the granary, and there threshed and winnowed. These operations occupied six and a half minutes, the wheat being then taken to a neighboring mill, where it was ground and dressed in five and a half minutes.

At an adjacent bakehouse the flour was made into dough, and moulded into cakes and loaves. At nine o'clock, exactly half an hour from the time the wheat was standing uncut, seven small cakes and two loaves, properly baked, were taken from the oven.

Ladies! Look Young Darken Grey Hair

Use the Old-time Sage Tea and Sulphur and Nobody Will Know

Grey hair, however handsome, denotes advancing age. We all know the advantages of a youthful appearance. Your hair is your charm. It makes or mars the face. When it fades, turns grey and looks dry, wispy and scraggly, just a few applications of Sage Tea and Sulphur enhances its appearance a hundred-fold.

Don't stay grey! Look younger! Either prepare the tonic at home or get from any drug store a 50 cent bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Remedy." Thousands of folks recommend this ready-to-use preparation, because it darkens the hair beautifully and removes dandruff, stops scalp itching and falling hair; besides, no one can possibly tell, as it darkens so naturally and evenly. You moisten a sponge or soft brush with it, drawing this through the hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning the grey hair disappears; after another application or two, its natural colour is restored and it becomes thick, glossy and lustrous, and you appear years younger.

SERGEANTS' MESS

Every Member is Forced to be Present at the Monthly Meeting

A sergeants' mess in the Army is a little, self-governed, social community, of which the sergeant-major is the head. There may be members of it—such as bandmasters and schoolmasters—senior to him in rank, but the sergeant-major takes the "chair." Under his control there is a monthly mess meeting, at which every member is compelled by military law to be present, when accounts are read, proposals for dances, concerts, or sports heard and debated, and an auction of the ensuing months' mess periodicals held.

A committee of three carry on all mess management and expenditure, being elected quarterly; but any exceptional outlay requires the sanction of the commanding officer.

Then there is a senior member, who acts as treasurer and ensures monthly settlement of individual bills, while another under him does all the catering, dry and "wet," liquid-consumption being checked by the keeping of a scheduled record of each members' drinks, which the commanding officer inspects. The cost of extra messing must not exceed 25 cents a day; and the entrance fee is three days' pay.

WIZARDS THRIVE IN RURAL RUSSIA

Ignorant Peasants Easily Gulled by Wretched Impostors Who Charm Away Evil Spirits

Russia is a land in which the witch and the wizard openly ply their trade among folks who use modern harvesting machinery, ride to market in electric street cars and visit moving picture shows.

The znakhar—"The One Who Knows All"—and, further east, the shaman, loom very large in the affairs of almost every village community.

The career of a znakhar is simplicity itself to embark upon. An old woman, keeping her mouth shut and her eyes and ears open, learns many things about her neighbors. Thus she can readily surprise simple peasant clients with details of their life and affairs that they believed to be utter secrets, and a glib tongue to explain away failures soon establish her in her role.

Russia is a fertile field for the witch and the wizard. The znakhar is often quite an unremarkable person to gaze upon, but the shaman dresses the part. A shaman is generally not a pure Russian. He is one of the numerous semi-Mongol tribesmen who have wandered westward.

The shaman is a noisy wizard. His specialty is "casting out evil spirits" and a big rumpus he makes over it.

A RUSSIAN "SHAMAN"

A severe attack of hiccoughs is regarded by peasantry as evidence of evil spirits, and it is always a case for this strenuous sorcerer.

The shaman wears a smock to which are sewn innumerable pieces of iron the size and shape of a knife blade. When called he seats himself, cross-legged, near the person to be exorcised and sings a doleful ditty, accompanying himself on the tambourine. In the midst of this proceedings he drops his instrument, springs up and begins to leap and hop and fling his body about, roaring, screaming and making hideous distortions of face and body. This is terminated by plunging a knife into his breast—but it is only one of those cunningly contrived daggers the blade of which slides up the hilt on a spring. After withdrawing the knife and proudly waving it before the eyes of his marveling audience, he announces that the evil spirit will capitulate if he—the shaman—be presented with a fine mare, a cow or many sacks of grain!

By using 10 boxes of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food I have been cured of many of my old complaints and gained 26 pounds in weight."

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

Wedding Bells For Ananias

The Story of His "Deep Trouble"

By EDITH L. WINSTON

It was several months after Ananias Sline went to board with the Widow Rowell that I journeyed down to Quince Harbor to spend golden October days in the cozy home of Captain Barnabas Fish and his good wife Maria, nee Weeks.

"And how is your friend Ananias Sline?" I asked the jovial captain as we sat around the supper table the night of my arrival.

"Ananias? Miss Telham, ma'am," said the captain gravely, "Ananias Sline is in deep trouble."

"Now, Barnabas Fish," protested Maria, but a smile crinkled around her merry eyes.

"Trouble?" I echoed. "Not trouble at the bank?" for Ananias occupied the dignified and responsible position of porter and man of all work in the First bank of Quince Harbor.

"Dear me, no—matrimonial trouble," responded the captain.

"I did not know that Ananias was married," said I.

"He isn't, but the knot's to be tied—when, Maria?"

"Hettie says next Wednesday."

"Aye," chuckled the captain. "Hettie Rowell says the knot's to be tied next Wednesday in the First Methodist church, but Ananias, he says, never!"

"So it's the Widow Rowell who has captured the affections of Ananias Sline?" I mused.

"She's captured him, all right, but he's swearing he'll cast off and steer a course for China. I've been through three tantrums with him this week, and he says he'd rather be a corpse—a dead corpse—than a bridegroom. He came to me in great distress six weeks ago, and says he: 'Cap'n, I'm going to slip my cable, and you're the only one that'll know the truth. The Widder Rowell's bound I shall marry her, and I'd rather be a dead corpse.'

"'She can't marry you if you never asked her,' I says to him, and he screamed at me: 'She can't, eh? You don't know her then.'

"Then I up and asked him if he did ask her to marry him, and he says he never did, never thought of it, didn't want to and would be confounded if he would."

There was a knock at the door. Maria opened it to admit a rather round shouldered, elderly woman, whose weazened face was set in a perpetual smile that showed even rows of false teeth. Her gray hair was drawn up into a knot on top of her head, and a pink bow was pinned coquettishly over one ear.

"Well, Mrs. Rowell," greeted the captain as she entered the sitting room and shook hands with me, "how goes everything?"

"Beautifully!" exclaimed the bride to be, her smile widening. "I came over to ask Maria's advice. I suppose they have told you, Miss Telham?" she simpered.

"Yes, and you must allow me to wish you happiness," I said.

"Thank you, dearie," she said sweetly. "Ananias is certainly a rare man."

"He is indeed," I replied.

"But shy," went on the widow thoughtfully, fixing one of her little dark eyes on me while the other squinted obliquely at Captain Barnabas. "Why, he says, says he: 'Dear Hettie, I'd rather be walking to my own funeral than to be going up the aisle of the church to my wedding,' says he. 'It affects me that way.'"

"He will recover his nerve at the last moment," I cheered her.

"He's got to get over it," she said, with such deadly sweetness in her tone that I began to feel rather sorry for Ananias.

Maria came into the room fresh and tidy from her dishwashing. She picked up some knitting, and her needles clicked busily.

"What you going to wear, Hettie?" asked Maria practically.

"White," replied Mrs. Rowell calmly. "I've thought it all out, Maria. I wore white for my first bridal when I married Jasper Jones. Then, being a widow, I wore gray when I married Henry Rowell. Now I feel like I've swung back to first place again, and so I've concluded I'll wear white.

"And now, captain, how about you smiling up with Ananias at the wedding?" She smiled playfully at him.

From nowhere in particular came a hollow voice that answered the widow's question.

"Pallbearer!" was its ominous suggestion.

The Widow Rowell screamed and closed her eyes. The captain glanced wildly around, and I confess that I was startled. Only Maria knitted on calmly, unconcernedly.

"Why, what was that?" I asked.

"What was what?" asked Maria in a surprised sort of way.

Mrs. Rowell sat up, and sparks flashed from her eyes in all directions. Her rather hooked nose almost appeared to meet her sharp upcurving chin.

"I thought I heard something," she said, still smiling.

"I heard a tree toad outside in the block bush, ma'am," said the captain innocently.

"Go on with your story, Hettie," urged Maria.

"I'm rather upset," confessed the widow, after a moment's hesitation. "I kinder thought it sounded like the warning voice of Henry Rowell. Henry was a very jealous husband, though he had no cause to be," she added hastily.

"Most husbands are jealous of their handsome wives," said the captain gallantly.

The widow simpered sweetly at him. "You are a case, Barnabas Fish!" she chided archly. "I was asking you if you would stand up with Ananias Wednesday, be his best man?"

"Pallbearer!" croaked the hollow voice.

"Will you?" persisted the widow, but her face was pale.

"Of course," said the captain in a hearty voice. "I'll stand by the bridegroom."

"Corpse!" rattled the hollow voice.

But the widow was undaunted as yet. She had set her heart on surprising Quince Harbor by her unexpected wedding to the porter in the bank, and she was not to be frightened out of it by the spiritual warnings of a dead and gone spouse or a tree toad, but the widow had leanings toward spiritualism. It was a cult that attracted her romantic nature.

"We will drive around after you and Maria," went on the widow doggedly. "We're going to have Al Murray's hack"—

"Hearse!" interpolated the hollow voice.

"And I've bought the wedding ring"—

"Casket!" came the interruption.

"Ah-h-h-h-h-h-h!" screeched the Widow Rowell, and she went at once into violent hysterics.

Maria and I flew around, applying remedies to her nose, while the captain tiptoed out to the kitchen stairway that led to the loft overhead, and I heard his deep voice rumbling. Sometimes it was broken by chuckles and again by another voice disagreeably high pitched.

At last the widow came to, looking yellower than ever, but there was a new light in her shifty eyes. They blazed with excitement, and her toil worn hands trembled.

"Maria," said she solemnly, "I've had a warning. I shan't marry Ananias—not yet, maybe not at all. I'll wait, and you'll bear in mind that when it happens you and Barnabas 'll stand up with us just the same"—

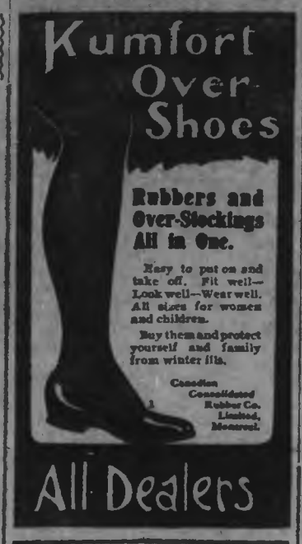
"Pallbearers!" came in a hoarse whisper.

Mrs. Rowell trembled, but her wide smile did not relax. It was fixed as though painted there.

"You see, Maria and Barnabas and Miss Telham," she said almost pathetically, including all three in a swift zigzag glance, "I'm considerable shook up now, and I want to study up on this spirit business before I go ahead."

"Cheer up, Hettie," said the captain grasping her hand warmly. "By next June you and Ananias will be signing papers and setting sail on a pleasant sea of—er—matrimony!"

"Maybe!" The widow's tone was enigmatic. As she opened the door to depart she added in her customary manner: "I'm glad I didn't announce it to any one else, and I guess I'll go home and stir up some cornmeal griddle cakes for Mr. Sline's breakfast. I've got to do something to make up to him for his disappointment."



"AH-H-H!" SCREECHED THE WIDOW ROWELL.

BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS

CURED A BAD ATTACK OF ECZEMA.

All skin diseases such as Eczema, Salt Rheum, Tetter, Rash, Boils, Pimples, and Itching Skin Eruptions, are always caused from the blood being in a bad condition, and it is impossible to eradicate them from the system unless you put your blood into good shape. This you can very easily do without the slightest trouble by using Burdock Blood Bitters.

It drives out all the humor from the blood, and makes it pure and rich, and not only are the unsightly diseases removed, and a bright clean complexion produced, but the entire system is renovated and invigorated at the same time.

Mrs. G. A. Day, Somerville, N.B., writes:—"Last spring I had a bad attack of Eczema. I tried several patent medicines as well as the medicine of a physician, but they seemed to make the disease worse. I was advised to try Burdock Blood Bitters, and I did so with the result that in two weeks time the sores began to disappear. I continued to take it until I had taken three bottles and they worked a complete cure."

"And a man's heart being by way of his stomach, why, you're taking the right track," approved Maria.

When we were alone Maria fixed her bright eyes on her husband's twinkling blue ones.

"How long has Ananias been up in the kitchen loft?" she asked.

"Since before dinner," answered the captain. "He came all a-tremble, saying he'd hang himself if he wasn't saved, and I didn't know what to do about it. It so happened the widow came in tonight, and I guess Ananias' feelings got the best of him, and he jest naturally figured out a course for himself and sailed into a safe harbor. He's gone back to the widder's now, feeling pretty secure that she won't marry him yet awhile.

"By the way, Maria," he added, "Ananias says he found a punkin pie and a pitcher of lemonade up in the loft, and he et 'em up. I wonder how they came up there?"

"I took 'em up myself after dinner," smiled Maria triumphantly, and I did not blame Captain Barnabas when he kissed her warmly.

Practical.

"That's the instructor in cookery."

"Practical? Well, I guess!—She could cook in a hotel if she chose. Why, she knows twenty-four distinct names for bread pudding."

A Serious Loss.

One of the party was telling how he had lost a grip on a railroad train the other evening when Congressman David E. Finley, of South Carolina, generously smiled. He said that it reminded him of the serious loss recently sustained by a citizen of his own state.

The aforesaid friend had occasion to go or quite a railroad journey, and when he reached his destination the brotherly party who met him at the station noticed that he seemed considerably depressed.

"What in the world is the matter with you, Jake?" he asked. "You look as cast-down as a defeated candidate.

"I have been up against a bunch of hard luck," answered Jake. "I lost the best part of my baggage coming down here."

"You don't really mean it!" sympathetically responded the other. "Did you misplace it, or was it stolen?"

"Neither," was the sad rejoinder of the cast-down Jake; "the cork came out!"

W. H. M'LAREN DIES.

Hamiltonian Seemed To Have Recovered From Operation.

HAMILTON, Nov. 21.—This city sustained a distinct loss yesterday afternoon in the death of W. H. McLaren, president of McLaren's, Ltd. The end came at the City Hospital about five o'clock yesterday afternoon and was a shock to his relatives and friends, for they had been assured by bulletin just an hour before death that he had successfully passed through an operation for a certain serious liver complaint.

Mr. McLaren, who was in his 59th year, was born in Liverpool, Eng., of Scotch parents and came to this country with his family when he was but a lad of about ten years. The family settled at Goderich, but in a few years moved to this city. W. H. McLaren had been a resident here for the last forty years.

During the last quarter century he was well known in the local business circles as president of McLaren's, Limited, in which firm he was associated with his brothers for the past twenty-six years.

The deceased was a prominent Scottish Rite Mason and a past president of St. Andrew's Society. He was a staunch, life-long Liberal, and a Presbyterian.

NEW YORK, Nov. 21.—Efforts yesterday failed to bring about a settlement of the strike of 400 cloth spongers and examiners, which threatens enforced idleness for 300,000 workers in the clothing and cloak industry. The strike began on Monday last, and no cloth has been sponged or examined since that time.

It does not matter whether you have but slight symptoms or a chronic, aggravated case, it is practically impossible to take Croxone without results.

An original package of Croxone costs but a trifle, and all druggists are authorized to return the purchase price if you are not entirely satisfied the very first time you use it.

MANAGING DIRECTOR

BOYCOTTING ONTARIO.

Fruit Man Says American Syndicate Controls Western Trade.

TORONTO, Nov. 21. — A direct charge that many of the wholesale jobbers of western Canada are in league to boycott Canadian, and particularly Ontario-grown, fruit was made at yesterday's session of the fruit growers' convention by Mr. Robert Thompson, managed of the St. Catharines Cold Storage & Forwarding Co. Mr. Thompson declared that "most of the jobbers there are controlled by an American syndicate, which is not in sympathy with Canadian growers, and which wishes to corner the market for fruit shipped in from the United States. We are, to a great extent, at the mercy of this syndicate, for even now they buy Canadian fruit, re-label it, and sel it as American in order to build up the trade in United States stuff."

This adverse combination was, in the opinion of the speaker, quite as much the cause of the loss of the western trade to the Ontario grower as was the careless packing with which the latter is charged. The packing done in Ontario orchards was vastly improved, he said, and the three hundred box lots in the Transportation building would compare favorably with boxes packed anywhere in the world. He took issue with the pessimistic tone of the presidential address, and prophesied that the Canadian market would continue indefinitely to absorb all the fruit produced in Ontario, provided common sense is used in the distribution. Mr. Thompson warned the growers against spasmodic production, according to the whims of the market. "The man who gives up when prices are low, and plants and produces heavily when prices are high, will always be the under dog," he declared.

THEORY OF DISASTER.

Shipping Man Thinks Steamer Went Down Head First.

PORT ARTHUR, Nov. 21.—The explanation of the disappearance of the Algoma Central steamer Leafield, as offered by a local shipping man, is that when she climbed a huge wave and went over the summit, the space between the forward decks became filled with water. Already loaded heavily with steel rails, she continued head first after going down the other side of the wave and dived straight to the bottom of Lake Superior without any of the crew even having a chance to put on lifebelts.

Although the tug Arbutus left yesterday for a week's search, practically no hope is entertained for the boat or any of the crew now missing eleven days.

No Tenere in Liverpool.

LONDON, Nov. 21.—(C. A. P. Cable.)—Liverpool, which has an unenviable reputation for sectarian animosity, is agitated just now over a case where the ne temere decree is alleged to have been held over the heads of a young newly married couple. The man is a Roman Catholic, but for some years has attended a Protestant church. His wife is a Protestant. The case has aroused considerable interest, and legal proceedings are threatened if the young couple are interfered with or openly aspersed.

Canada Is Exhibiting.

CHICAGO, Nov. 21.—The annual land show opened here yesterday with exhibits showing products of every agricultural section of the United States and Canada. The display included dry land farming, reclamation of desert lands and road building. President Wilson pressed the button in the White House, opening the show.

Do You Pay For It Afterward?

If You Do, Just Carry a Little Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablet in Your Vest Pocket and a Big Meal Will Be Easily Laid Away.

Get away from the foreboding that every time you enjoy yourself heartily and eat a full meal, that you will pay for it afterward. There is no sense in your not enjoying every meal to the utmost. And you can do so without danger from a protesting stomach if you take the precaution always to have Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets with you. Then if you overeat, or eat something that disagrees with you as the most careful person will sometimes, one or two of these tablets will restore normal conditions in your stomach in a very few minutes.

"I Am Going to Enjoy This Meal For I Have a Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablet in My Vest Pocket."

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are nothing more than a concentrated form of the natural secretions which the stomach employs in digesting food. And Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets merely step in when the stomach is too tired or too sluggish to perform its functions properly and supply a sufficient quantity of these digestive ferments to digest completely all food, under either acid or alkaline conditions, in the stomach.

It has long been known that the various digestive ferments could be produced as perfectly in the laboratory as in the stomach, but Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are the first attempt outside of certain hospitals, to utilize these discoveries for the benefit of sufferers from indigestion and kindred complaints.

The perfect freedom to eat what you please and as much as you please which Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets gives, has won it thousands of friends who make it a constant, vest pocket companion. Join to-day the vast army of people who have declared their independence of stomach worries. You can get a 50c box of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets from any druggist.

MEPHISTOPHELES.

No Satisfactory Proof as to the Origin of the Name Exists.

There has been much discussion concerning the origin of the word Mephistopheles in the past, which has, moreover, as yet ended in no very satisfactory conclusion. Some very bizarre explanations had been propounded before the time of Goethe, who was himself forced to own to the musician Zelter in a letter of Nov. 20, 1829. "I cannot give any definite answer to the question, 'Whence comes the name Mephistopheles?'"

According to one theory it was a hybrid Greco-Hebraic formation of mephis and tophel (the liar); according to another its etymology was entirely Greek—very dubious Greek—mephostophilos, "he who does not love the light." Though this derivation is hardly acceptable, it appears that this was the original form of the name, the second vowel being replaced by i at first in England, whence it was taken into the popular German mysteries.

In the "Goethe Jahrbuch" Herr Oelhke gives an entirely novel derivation which, if farfetched, has at least the merit of originality. It is based on two names found in chapters 4 and 15 of the second book of Samuel, Pephiboscheth and Architophel. He reminds us that it was customary in the middle ages when giving names to evil spirits to refer to the Old Testament; hence the combination "Mephistopheles."

The explanation is not perceptibly more absurd than others. Goethe himself had a trick of using the abbreviated form Mephisto when it suited the exigencies of his meter. It may be remembered that this particularly irritated Schopenhauer, who wrote in his pamphlet "On the Murder (Verbunzung) of the German Language." "The foolish desire for brevity goes so far as to cut off even the devil's tail by writing 'Mephisto for Mephistopheles.'" Westminster Gazette.

Musical Epigrams.

Walter Damrosch, the noted musician, answered at a luncheon a toast in music. Mr. Damrosch was in good vein, and the following are by no means the best of the epigrams that illuminated his remarks:

"Some pianists play from note, some from ear and some from spite.

"A drinking song need not necessarily have a rest in every bar.

"Composers are musicians with memories."

Women and Love.

Women for the most part do not love us. They do not choose a man because they love him, but because it pleases them to be loved by him They love love of all things in the world, but there are very few men whom they love personally.—Alphonse Kerr.

No Bargain.

On former occasions when guests had been invited to dinner young William had proved to be very talkative. Later when another guest was expected he was given a dime as the price of his silence during the meal. He kept his part of the agreement perfectly until his favorite dessert was being served, when he could no longer restrain his enthusiasm. Drawing the coin from his pocket, he looked at it longingly for a moment, then, rolling it across the table, exclaimed:

"Here's your dime, ma. I'd rather talk."

Doubtless the most unique spot in Europe is the little village of Altenberg, on whose border three countries meet. It is ruled by no monarch, has no soldiers, no police and no taxes. Its inhabitants speak a curious jargon of French and German combined and spend their days in cultivating the land or working in the valuable calamine mine of which the village boasts.

A WONDERFUL CASE

Three Months in Hospital And Out Uncured.

Zam-Buk Cured Him in Few Weeks.

Mr. Fred Mason, the well-known upholsterer and mattress manufacturer of St. Andrews, N. B., says:

"I had eczema on my knee, which caused me terrible pain and inconvenience. The sore parts would itch and burn and tingle, and then when rubbed or scratched, would become very painful. When the knee got warm, it burned worse, and the itching and burning and smarting were almost unbearable. I tried various remedies, but got no better, so I decided to go to Montreal and take special treatment. I received treatment at the Montreal General Hospital for thirteen weeks, but at the end of that time I was not cured, and almost gave in. A friend advised me to give Zam-Buk a trial.

"Almost as soon as applied Zam-Buk stopped the itching and the irritation. I persevered with the balm, and it was soon evident that it would do me good. Each day the pain was reduced, the sore spots began to heal, and by the time I had used a few boxes of Zam-Buk I was quite cured.

"Since then Zam-Buk has cured blood-poison in my finger, and at a time when my finger was in such a terrible condition that I feared it would have to be amputated."

For eczema, blood-poisoning, piles, ulcers, sores, abscesses, varicose ulcers, bad leg, cold sores, chapped hand, cuts, burns bruises and all skin injuries and diseases, Zam-Buk is without equal."

THE MARKETS

LIVERPOOL, Nov. 20.—Wheat— The steady American cables and the strength in Winnipeg yesterday caused few offers here at the opening and values were ¼ higher. Following the opening there was a further advance of ¼ on the scarcity of first-hand Manitoba offers, strength in spot here, forecast of light Russian shipments this week and a continued good continental demand for cargoes. There is a growing firmness in European new crop offers, with the weather generally unfavorable and marketing lighter. The continued favorable weather in Argentina checked the advance, and as a result prices reacted ⅛ from the high, with prices at 1.30 p.m., ⅝ to ¾ higher than yesterday.

Corn—Opened unchanged to ⅛ higher, and later advanced ⅜ to ¾, with heavy covering in January as a result of Argentina shorts excited. The forecast is for lighter Argentina shipments this week. Spot market here is strong, and Danubian offers are firmly held. Later there was realising with the market excited, with a decline of ¼ to ⅜ on the mild weather in the United Kingdom, reducing consumption and favorable European crop advices. At 1.30 p.m. prices were ¼ up from yesterday.

MEAT CAUSE OF KIDNEY TROUBLE

Take Salts to flush Kidneys if Back hurts or Bladder bothers

If you have your meat every day, eat it, but flush your kidneys with salts occasionally, says a noted authority who tells us that meat forms uric acid which almost paralyzes the kidneys in their efforts to expel it from the blood. They become sluggish and weaken, then you suffer with a dull misery in the kidney region, sharp pains in the back or sick headache, dizziness, your stomach sours, tongue is coated and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine gets cloudy, full of sediment, the channels often get sore and irritated, obliging you to seek relief two or three times during the night.

To neutralize these irritating acids, to cleanse the kidneys and flush off the body's urinous waste get four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy here; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate sluggish kidneys, also to neutralize the acids in urine, so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure, and makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink.

NOTHING COULD SAVE VESSEL FROM BEING DRIVEN ON ROCKS IN STORM

Captain of the "Turret Chief" Testifies Before the Dominion Wreck Commissioner as to the Loss of His Ship.

INVESTIGATION OPENS

Special to the "Examiner."

KINGSTON, Nov. 21.—On behalf of the Dominion Government, Capt. Lindsay, Wreck Commissioner, today opened the first official inquiry into the wrecks on the Lakes. It took the form of investigation into the stranding of the steamer Turret Chief, five miles east of Copper Harbour, in Lake Superior, at 4 a.m. on November 9th.

Captain Paddington of Fort Colborne was the first witness. He said he was appointed to the command of the Turret Chief last Spring. He had a Captain's certificate, issued at Ottawa, after examinations passed in St. Catharines in 1909. Paddington told a thrilling story of how after the Turret Chief had been buffeted around for twenty-four hours, she ran on the rocks near Copper Harbour. His crew and himself landed over the giant waves with the aid of a cable and made their way to Copper Harbour through the bush. His companions and nautical equipment were right. The vessel's engines were good, but nothing could save the vessel from being driven on the rocks in that terrible storm.

Capt. Paddington said he did not see the storm signals displayed at either Sault Ste Marie or White Fish Point as he passed westbound the night before the wreck. He could not see a light anywhere after the storm struck them, owing to the driving snow.

Smith Township Farmer Suffers Loss of Twenty Turkeys

Mr. H. J. Baptie of Smith Township is mourning the loss of twenty turkeys. Assuming that the birds were in possession of a neighbour, the original owner had a search warrant issued by County Police Magistrate Edmison. This was executed yesterday by High County Constable Cochrane, who was of the opinion that he had located the missing birds.

The machinery of the law is clogged by the fact that the turkeys could not be identified. In all probability the case will be dropped. Turkeys are a valuable commodity at the present time and it is estimated that Mr. Baptie's flock would be worth approximately one hundred dollars at the present market value. FORECASTING FOR CHRISTMAS

Our merchants are away behind with their Christmas announcements.

Notwithstanding the fact that it is against all the traditions of Christmas to undo the wrappings of a Christmas package before the happy day arrives, The Examiner feels so much in the holiday spirit that it is quite impossible to refrain from anticipating what the stores are likely to show for Christmas shoppers.

But very little preparation is as yet apparent in many of our stores for the Xmas festival. Why keep early buyers guessing what they will have to select? "Shop early" is a good slogan, but very little use when the displays are delayed.

Other city papers are teeming with interesting Christmas announcements, and have been ready for early buyers weeks ago. "Speed up!" See to it that you do not furnish an excuse for shopping out of town.

MRS. ALICE STEBBINS WELLS ASSERTS THAT PETERBOROUGH'S POLICE FORCE IS INADEQUATE

"The Force Should be Strengthened by More Men and Women" Says California's First Policeman---Predicts an Outbreak of Public Indignation--Capacity Audience Listen to an Instructive Address by a Woman Police Officer---World is Getting Better.

The basic law of self-preservation compels us to recognize prevention, with particular emphasis upon prevention.

I have been a policewoman for over three years and am as much a police officer as any man on the Los Angeles police force.

The world is getting better. There will be more progress made along the lines of moral reform in the next twenty-five years than there was in the past twenty-five centuries.

The people all over the land are feeding the problem of the cities, when they permit their children to stray cityward.

Law enforcement is in proportion to the vigilance of the people. The people must stand back of the police department not only with abstract sentiment but with a concrete purpose.

In ten years moderate drinking will be regarded in the same light as excessive drinking is to-day.

The abolition of the saloon will do much to reduce the gaol population.

The number of desertions is appalling. We will have to find a better way of keeping families together if we have to sit up at nights to think it out.

Our whole country is littered with institutions for the care of human wreckage. Sixty per cent. of the women patients in the hospitals are treated for the sins of others.

These are some of the aphorisms launched by Mrs. Alice Stebbins Wells, policewoman of Los Angeles, at a public meeting which was held in the Assembly Hall of the Collegiate Institute on Thursday evening. The Hall was crowded to capacity when His Worship Mayor Bradburn introduced to the audience one of Los Angeles' "finest." The meeting was held under the auspices of the Local Council of Women.

The speaker is credited with being one of America's first policewomen, a position which she fills with a grace and dignity becoming to her vocation. She is a practical student of moral reform, and is of the opinion that many of the social evils, common to the present age, could be rectified if parents would take better and more consistent care of their children.

Mrs. Wells was in her best vein, and practical and instructive comments on moral reform sparkled through an eminently forceful address delivered in that convincing way for which she is noted. It is this manner that has earned for Mrs. Wells such gratifying success as a policewomen. She holds that a positive constructive command is worth columns of policenegation and that policewomen are especially fitted for this important and exacting class of work.

Recognize Prevention.

"The public of to-day is composed of men, women, and children," said Mrs. Wells in substantiation of her claim that policewomen were a necessary adjunct to an adequate and well equipped police department. "I have been attached to the Los Angeles Police Department for three years, and my primary duty is to protect the women and children of the city which I serve," said California's first policewoman. "Altogether we have four policewomen, who are employed on the same basis and equality as that of the male members of the force. The basic law of self-preservation compels up to recognize prevention. As policewomen we place considerable emphasis upon this essential question. Very few people ever comprehend the viewpoint of a police officer. He must impartially execute and perform his duty, and he not infrequently finds himself in a position, where he must either jeopardize his reputation or fail in the discharge of the moral obligation which he has sworn to uphold."

Approved of New Law.

Mrs. Wells expressed her approval of the recently enacted law which prohibits children under sixteen years of age, loitering on the streets after nine o'clock in the evening. She instanced a number of cases which tended to show that parents invariably resent the action of police officers who dutifully interfere with the liberty of their children, whose moral welfare is at stake, when they frequent the streets after legitimate hours. "This is where a policewoman can render a valuable service," said the speaker.

When Mrs. Wells assumed the role of P. C. Wells, she was detailed to watch the amusement houses where women and children were wont to frequent. One of the civic ordnances of Los Angeles prohibit children under fourteen years of age, attending moving picture theatres, unaccompanied by a responsible guardian. The law does not prevent the child from attending these places of amusement, but merely places the responsibility upon the parent.

World Is Getting Better.

The speaker was of the opinion that the world was getting better and that the moral standard was steadily rising. "Work is the world's salvation," affirmed Mrs. Wells. "We should aim to keep our children busy, especially during the constructive period of their lives, if we would fortify them against idleness. Every city has a percentage of girls, who are idle, walking up and down the streets. It is a problem to know what to do with them. While many of them drift along unconsciously, there are many who are satisfied to follow the line of least resistance. They lack the inherent determination to work, and consequently fail to take their place in the industrial and social status of the world. The people of the country are contributing to the problem of the city, by permitting their children to drift cityward." Mrs. Wells expressed the hope that Peterborough would remain a medium-sized city, and yet would retain her natural ambition to acquire greatness and expansion in a happy normal way.

Land Adaptation.

"Policewomen are better adapted to cope with delinquent women and children, than policemen," asserted Mrs. Wells. "As a rule policemen find such work distasteful and prefer to concede it to the policewomen, whenever such a course is possible." The speaker related instances of where she visited moving picture theatres and found children unaccompanied, contrary to the civic ordnance referred to. It was a comparatively easy matter to secure sufficient evidence from the unsuspecting children to ensure a conviction being returned against the proprietor. "We are frequently asked whether we make an arrest," remarked Mrs. Wells, with a deprecating gesture. "Policewomen are not expected to work, but to supplement the work of those who are better able and qualified to do such work. Our work is primarily with women and children. In the course of our duty, it sometimes becomes necessary to make an arrest. A considerable number of arrests are made by means of a summons." The speaker recalled a conversation with a veteran police officer of Philadelphia. The latter referred to a time when it was not unusual to drag an offender two miles to the police station. That was prior to the inauguration of the patrol waggon or "Black Maria" as it is commonly known. "I don't know how well you are equipped in Peterborough," said Mrs. Wells, "but judging by the number of policemen that I have seen since my arrival, they will have to do some dragging. Nothing that I have had to do, during three years of police service has been unworthy of any lady in the audience."

Special Policemen.

"The degree of law enforcement is in proportion to the vigilance of the people," observed Mrs. Wells. "A city should not leave all the police work to the police department. In Los Angeles, the Chief of Police has within his jurisdiction, many special policemen, including twenty-five clergymen who wear the familiar star, common to the service. We must stand back of the police department with not only abstract sentiment but with a concrete purpose."

It was here that Mrs. Wells referred to the inadequacy of the local police force. "You have nine policemen besides a chief, and you don't need to flatter yourself that you are so good as to render the employment of more men unnecessary. You have failed to provide your chief with sufficient machinery to work with. But it is evident that he doesn't worry because he doesn't look like it. As a policewoman I know that he does worry. Sometime, something will happen, and an outburst of public in-

IS THIS THE LIGHT THAT FAILED?—In the enquiry by Dominion Wreck Commissioner Lindsay into the cause of the several wrecks on Lake Huron with the loss of nearly three hundred men, the light house and foghorn in the above picture, at Goderich, Ont., on the rocky shores of Lake Huron, will be the subject of comment. It is stated by some that if the lights had been strong enough and the foghorns blown soon enough, at this point, there would have been fewer wrecks on that fatal Sunday.

LOCAL GIRL IS TRYING TO FIND HER RELATIVES

Police Chief Quigley, of Rochester, is Asked to Locate Sisters and Brother of May Phillips

PARTED YEARS AGO

Special Wire to The Examiner.

ROCHESTER, N.Y., Nov. 20.—J. R. Pollock of 244 Autrim Street, Peterborough, Ont., has communicated with Police Chief Quigley of Rochester, relative to assisting him in locating in Rochester two sisters and a brother of one May Phillips, who now resides in Peterborough, Ont., but who formerly lived at 74 Stone Street, Rochester, with her aunt and uncle, whose name was Fitzpatrick, several years ago. Her uncle died six years ago, the communication states, and Miss Phillips went with her aunt to St. Thomas, Ont., in which town the aunt died, and then the girl went to Peterborough, where she has since lived. May Phillips was about 11 years old when she left Rochester, and has been separated from her sisters and brother some time prior to that. Her eldest sister's name was Lucy, but May Phillips does not know the name of her other sister or her brother. If relatives of the young Peterborough woman reside in Rochester, they are asked to communicate with the Rochester police or write to Mr. Pollock at Peterborough, Ontario.

Special Services In Knox Church

There was a marked increase in the attendance at Knox Church last evening and indications point to a large congregation at to-night's closing service. The men in the choir strengthened the service of song. Miss McNab, the soloist, rendered very effectively two selections. At the close of the service a prayer meeting was held in which Rev. Mr. Pogue took part. The subject handled by Mr. Woodside in his usual vivid manner, was "Trying to get away from God." The background of the address was Jonah's experience in trying to get out of going to Nineveh. But in Mr. Woodside's deft manner it was soon turned to local and individual experiences. President Wilson said the kind of a sermon he wanted to hear most of all was the kind that made him ask: "What must I do?" That is true of all Mr. Woodside's addresses. Those who have not heard him should not miss to-night's closing service.

Four Young Men Fined in This Morning's Police Court For a Breach of the Lord's Day Act

They were fined $10 and costs each, amounting in all to $12.60. The offence was a breach of the Lord's Day Act, and the charge was laid as a result of two policemen raiding a local office last Sunday afternoon.

Fred Sullivan was charged with being drunk and disorderly on Charlotte Street. He was fined $2.

COUNTY COUNCIL SAW GOOD ROADS

Stereoptican Views of Modern Rural Roads that Made Councillors Wish for Them.

STORY OF ROAD MAKING.

The members of the County Council listened to an interesting address on Thursday evening when Mr. W. A. Toohey of the Canada Cement Co. spoke on "Good Roads." After long experience with roads that break down under the changing seasons, often almost impassible with mud, the County's representatives were introduced to ideal road beds, views of roads that actually exist, where the question of permanency has received due consideration.

In Belfontain, O., a cement road had been in existence twenty years, and had cost practically nothing for maintenance.

In Minnesota a road 116 miles long had been built in a rural district with eight feet of cement and two six-feet-wide shoulders of macadamized road on either side of it. This road cost $7,280 a mile.

Mr. Toohey, in beginning his address, dealt with the methods employed in road building from the times of early Rome and Carthage. Owing to the traffic demands made upon roads in those days they received the greatest attention, and splendid highways were the result. But railways have distracted attention to a certain extent and it has been only within recent years that interest has been thoroughly awakened in this country. Already many permanent roads have been constructed and the movement is growing rapidly.

The proportions for roadmaking were 1, 1 1-2 and 3 of cement, sand and gravel, respectively.

The cost was practically $1,000 per mile, per foot of width; hence a road 18 feet wide would cost $18,000 per mile.

The members of the Council were impressed with the address and their interest in permanent roads is keener than ever to-day.

Mr. J. H. Garbutt presided at the meeting, which was held in the County Council Chamber.

A vote of thanks was tendered Mr. Toohey.

COMMITTEE'S REPORT

The final meeting of the Peterborough County Council for 1913 is now a matter of history. The flagstaff on the Court House has been divested of the Union Jack, which has been exposed to the November breeze since Friday. The Council will visit Lakefield this afternoon for the purpose of inspecting the House of Refuge.

The session, which closed to-day at noon, was a busy one, and consisted mainly of committee work. The chief interest was centred in the report of the Good Roads Committee, and the subsequent illustrated lecture which was given by a good roads expert. Definite action respecting the proposed adoption of a good roads scheme for Peterborough County was deferred until next year, when additional data will be available for the consideration of the incoming Council.

Those present at the session were: Warden J. H. Garbutt, Smith; A. Breault, Norwood; H. G. Fitzgerald, Lakefield; Dr. Kindred, Havelock; M. Brown, Asphodel; A. A. Wilde, Belmont; W. Tucker, Burleigh; D. S. Campbell, Chandos; R. Ferguson, Dummer; M. Walsh, Douro; S. Killen, Enniskore; C. Coben, Galway; R. Shaw, Harvey; W. G. Howden, Monaghan; W. A. Anderson, Otonabee; E. Deyell, Deputy-Reeve, Otonabee; F. M. McKee, Deputy-Reeve of Smith.

COMPROMISE SUGGESTED

Home Rule for Each of the British Isles

Special Cable to The Examiner.

LONDON, ENG., Nov. 21.—(Special cable).—That the settlement of the Irish Home Rule problem is quite possible by the adoption of compromise in the line of Home Rule all around on federal lines, is quite seriously discussed in many quarters to-day. The Westminster Gazette in a prominent leader to-day, comments on it, and intimates that Premier Asquith is quite prepared to consider it, and Liberals would have pressed it before had they not feared that such radical measures would have resulted in side-tracking Home Rule for Ireland, which is a more immediate necessity. Chamberlain, who is leading the Conservative side, intimates his approval of Home Rule parliaments for all the British Isles, but intimates that such legislature must be subordinate to the Imperial parliament always. Bonar Law is expected to give his opinion of the scheme to-night in a speech in Northampton.

Commissioner Rees Still In Critical Condition

Head of the Salvation Army in Canada Has Not Improved Since Regretable Relapse

Word was received by Adjutant McElhenny to-day, that Commissioner Rees of Toronto, and head of the Salvation Army in Canada, is in a very critical condition.

For the past several weeks Commissioner Rees has been lying at death's door, and a few days ago, when apparently in a fair way toward recovery, he suffered a replase. It was hoped that his condition to-day would be improved, but the intelligence received by Adjt. McElhenny was not of the nature to arouse much good cheer among his force here.

Commissioner Rees is well known throughout the whole of the Dominion, and people of every class and denomination are anxious concerning his illness. A large number of local people will regret to learn that his condition is still critical.

"Peterborough Presents Possibilities Unparalleled."

FRIDAY, NOV. 21, 1913

OUR CITY GOVERNMENT.

The defects in representation of citizens in city councils have their beginning before these bodies are constituted. We practically elect aldermen by the "flip of a penny." We make no selection; we accept and vote for as candidates whoever or whatever chance or an untoward fate may present for our choice. In this we neglect the most rudimentary precautions that rule in the conduct of the simplest concerns of life. A servant girl is wanted; and of course references are required by the employer. The applicant's own estimate of her capacity and reliability is not accepted without consideration. In selecting or accepting—for where there is no discrimination exercised there is no choice—any candidate that offers we fail to appreciate the importance of a careful business-like management of our affairs. A man in business does not accept by preference, an employee, who has been a failure in some other line of business. In providing ourselves with employees to manage our business in the form of aldermen, we would naturally desire those who have shown their business capacity by successful and energetic management of their own business.

Apropos of these considerations it may be mentioned that pressure is being brought to bear upon ex-Alderman Robert Hicks, to induce him to become a candidate for alderman at the ensuing municipal elections. Mr. Hicks is the type of man that would make an excellent civic representative. He has first-rate business ability, as demonstrated by the success he has given his own business. He is a man of ideas and initiative, a man of public spirit who has a large interest in seeing that our civic affairs are efficiently and economically managed. We have large undertakings confronting us, whose successful working out demands heady energetic and alert business capacity. It would perhaps be difficult to name a citizen who would make a better alderman than Mr. Hicks, if he can be induced to become a candidate and be elected. The city would be serving its best interests in having him on the Council Board.

UNPROGRESSIVE AND OBSTRUCTIVE.

Ontario is regarded as the most progressive and energetic of the provinces of the Dominion in the character of her people and in her industrial and commercial achievements. We deserve that reputation and this desert is all the more creditable to us when we consider the unprogressive and static character of our Provincial Government. In all that makes for progress, for encouragement by progressive legislation and alert administration, we are, if not behind all the other provinces, hopelessly and disgustingly slow.

The Whitney Government is evidently a firm believer in the saying that "the race is not to the swift." It trifles with the most momentous interests of the Province. It cannot make up its mind to act—it drifts; it palters with the demands of duty. An exhaustive citation of its short comings, in this regard, would be voluminous. A few instances will suffice to show how our interests are neglected and how necessary and good legislation is held back.

The revision of the Statutes is made every ten years. One revision was due two years after the Whitney Government came into power. It is not completed yet, though more has been already spent upon the work, or neglect of work, than any two previous revisions have cost. The legal profession and all the public interests involved are put to inconvenience and injury by the failure of the Whitney Government to do a simple duty, to perform a bit of routine work; for, as far as its active connection with statute revision is concerned, it is a mere matter of directing the work to be done by somebody capable of doing it. The law for compensation of working men for injuries sustained in their employment, etc., has been thrust upon the attention of the Government for six or seven years. The Government killed proposed legislation to this end on the promise of doing something itself. It was nagged by public opinion into appointing a commission to investigate the matter, and though that Commission reported last year, and even went so far as to furnish the Government with an excellent draft bill, the matter was further postponed. It did not matter that in the meantime thousands of workingmen and widows and orphans of working men suffered injury and had to go without compensation for lack of a law which the Whitney Government had promised to enact and had neglected to enact.

Taxation reform, another pressing matter, has been, and is being, utterly neglected; even the facts of the justice and necessity of improved taxation methods, that strike the brains of any thinking man, impinge in vain upon he archaic mind of the self-sufficient, stolid and obstinate Premier of Ontario.

Public sentiment has demanded temperance reform of an advanced character. The Whitney Government has been a stumbling block. It staved off legislation looking to the abolition of the bar by the promise of anti-treating legislation, and even this, ineffective as it would be in comparison, has not been brought in and passed. The Whitney Government's apologists claim that the policy of local option it has provided is the better way. The Whitney Government not only did not introduce local option, but bedevilled its effectiveness by adoption of the obstructive three-fifths' clause, in the interests of the traffic. In East Middlesex, at the present moment, the issue is between the abolition of the bar and the retention and strengthening of the traffic. In London township license law prevails. In January, 1910, the electors voted for the abolition of the bar by a majority of 380. Yet the three-fifths clause, devised in the interests of the traffic, kept the bars open. In 1913 the same electors voted against the bar by a majority of 291. Yet the three-fifths' clause, devised in the interests of the traffic, kept the bars open, and no sign of even an anti-treating law.

The above are only a few of many instances and conditions that could be cited to show that the Whitney Government is not only unprogressive but obstructive of true progress and in no way represents the progressive spirit of the Province, temporarily under its administrative blight.

UNITED STATES MARKETS.

The agricultural exports of Canada last month were $21,520,000 higher than in October, 1912, thanks partly to good crops and mainly to the lowering of the American tariff wall. Canadian farmers can be no longer humbugged by the cry that the American market is useless. They have arguments to the contrary in their pockets.—London Advertiser.

FORGOTTEN PLANK.

Where is that Halifax platform on which Mr. Borden made once his appeal to the electors of Canada? Where are the snows of yester year?

Sir Wilfrid Laurier complained of that platform that it was composed of India rubber planks that could be stretched to meet any contingency. It was doubtless very elastic, but now instead of being a convenience to Mr. Borden himself, Liberals are willing to stretch it to meet the case of Macdonald, Manitoba. The very planks spring up, now that he is in power, to belabour him.

Take the third clause of the Halifax pronouncement, that relating to electoral corruption:

"More effective provisions to punish bribery and fraud at elections, to insure thorough publicity as to expenditures by political organizations, to prevent the accumulation of campaign funds for corrupt purposes, and to prohibit contributions thereto by corporations, contractors and promoters, to expedite hearing of election petitions and to prevent collusive arrangements for the withdrawal or compromise thereof, to provide for a thorough investigation of corrupt practices and if necessary to appoint an independent prosecuting officer to enforce the laws so amended;"

Mr. Borden has taken not a single step in his two years of office to fulfil the promises here made. On the contrary, he has allowed, in the case of Macdonald, his political partners to commit the most shameful and unheard of rascalities without a word or deed of protest. The seat has been thrown up by the corruptly-elected member in order that these practices should not come to light. Why did not Mr. Borden stretch his electoral corruption plank to meet this case?

It is quite evident that he has no desire to stand on his rubber planks, let alone to stretch or twist them. It is just the same with his talk of electoral reform as with the parade of good intentions in regard to the civil service. Mr. Borden's dreams go by contraries. He has done his share towards the paving of a certain floor.—London Advertiser.

WHO SHALL DECIDE WHEN DOCTORS DISAGREE

Some months ago invitations were sent out from a public school in the city of Baltimore to parents of the attending children, to be present on an occasion when the educational system of the school would be discussed. There were about two hundred present, and after a few preliminary remarks by the principal of the school, the meeting was thrown into an open conference. The length of the lesson and the physical condition of the average child were discussed until it seemed that the school tasks were difficult, and the child a frail creature indeed; that it was doubtful if he could stand the strain.

Then a doctor in the audience arose and said that while they were considering what was good for the child, he should like to suggest that the water in the school be boiled. He added that he was a doctor in good standing in the city, and he had used boiled water in his home for four years and that not one member of his family had had typhoid fever, and that he had had a like result with many patients. Instantly another man was on his feet, claiming that as a physician in equally good standing he would like to state that he had used boiled water at his table for several years, and that every member of his family had had this disease, and that many of his patients who had taken the same precaution had suffered similarly. He was interrupted by a man who said that from his standpoint he could not see that boiling the water both at home and at the school would suffice to insure against disease, as any child might be tempted to take a drink on his way to or from school.

Before the speaker could offer a solution to this dilemna he was vigorously interrupted by a doctor who said that he knew what he was talking about; that he had devoted years of study to the subject, and that he would like to denounce the practice of boiling the water; that in boiling what was objectionable in the water the life-giving properties were destroyed, and that one could not flourish, could not have the proper use of his faculties while he was kept on boiled water. Thus, with much fervour, the discussion continued on the advisability of boiling or not boiling the water. One could hardly imagine how a settlement could be reached when the doctors disagreed.—Florence Weaver.

GZOWSKI MEDAL AWARDED PROMINENT ENGINEER FOR DESCRIPTION OF LIFT LOCK

Mr. Walter J. Francis Has Participated in Many Important Engineering Enterprises--Was Engaged by the Department of Railways and Canals to Design the Sixty-five Foot Hydraulic Lift Lock on the Trent Canal--Is Well Known in Peterborough.

ENGINEERING AS A PROFESION

The appended address, which was delivered by Mr. Walter J. Francis, of Montreal, before the Engineering Society of the University of Toronto, is of local interest. Mr. Francis is well known in Peterborough, having spent considerable time here during the construction of the Lift Lock. The address, which is given in part, appeared in a recent issue of "The Contract Record":

Engineering is so material, so practical, and so engrossing, that it is very difficult to talk about it in the abstract. Moreover, the engineer is known as a man who does things—and one who is doing things is too busy to talk. You will herefore appreciate the greater difficulty experienced by one who is supposed to be an engineer talking in the abstract on such a subject as engineering.

It is much more difficult to define engingering. What is an engineer? I confess I have been trying for twenty-five years to find out—and I am still trying. I remember two boys, now both on the list of graduates of this University, arguing about whether a civil engineer should know all about a locomotive or not. One thought he should. I didn't know. The other fellow is now practising surveying. Once I heard a judge of the Supreme Court of the United States struggle with the definition of an engineer in a brilliant twenty-minute speech, and he wound up by concluding that he didn't know anything definite about engineers exceptng that they were jolly good fellows. In the daily press we often read of engineers, but before we get through the description we are fully aware that the person referred to drove locomotive No. 522 between two given stations at seventy miles an hour, or that he was the man who turned the throttle valve of the engine in the hold of the excursion boat.

The term "engineer" is very much overworked. It is not surprising that the great public gets confused in the multiplicity of engineers that are sometimes referred to. There are engineer, the publicity engineer, th mining engineer, the chemical engineer, the structural engineer, the bridge engineer, the elevator engineer, the harbour engineer, the stationary engineer, the government engineer, the city engineer, the town engineer, the tunnel engineer, the county engineer, the marine engineer, the railway engineer, and the consulting engineer.

Mr. Dunn, President of the American Institute of Electrical Engineers, in Boston, last year, referred to twenty-seven recognized classes of engineers, and I understand that someone of a statistical turn of mind has succeeded in isolating over one hundred and ten separate and distinct varieties of the bacterium, "engineericus universalis." Is it any wonder the public gets confused?

The Engineer in the Background.

Compared with the professional men of law, medicine, and theology, the engineer never comes to the attention of the public as a learned man doing things. Let a man be a member of one of the other professions, and as soon as he begins to accomplish things he will be heard of. Let the geologist make a speech on his chosen subject and the newspapers of the land will blaze forth with startling headlines that Professor Geologus has unlocked the great secrets which Mother Earth has hidden in her bosom for millions of years. Professor Haultain accounts for this by the fact that the geologist takes time to tell the people wha he is doing and what he thinks he has discovered. Let the lawyer defend some celebrity, whether famous or notorious, and before many hours the whole world will know it and will be gazing upon indifferent pictures of that lawyer. I think I am safe in saying that the engineer may devote his life to the service of the world, and die doing his duty, and yet never be heard of during his career, unless he unfortunately makes an error in judgment. I venture to suggest that the Quebec Bridge was more widely known by its failure than it or any other bridge will be in its success. I do not know that the engineer cares particularly about publicity, for he is too busy doing things. I am referring now only to the recognition or non-recognition of his professional existence by the great public. Anyway, he is too busy doing things to stop for the sake of publicity. One of the powers that the engineer underrates is the power of the press. Summing up, it would appear that the public has, at the best, a very hazy idea of what engineering is. Every engine runner of the country is an engineer, no matter whether he operates a locomotive or a threshing engine. Even the plumbers try to play on the title and in our own country succeeded in getting an association incorporated under the name of The Canadian Society of Sanitary Engineers. All respect to the man who can wipe joints and collect his bills of world-famous magnitude, but it looks very much like trespassing on the dignity of the name of the great recognized engineering body of Canada, The Canadian Society of Civil Engineers. It is, indeed, a most fortunate thing that the motorman does not term himself a street car engineer, that the chauffeur does not call himself an automobile engineer, and that the aviator does not wish to be known as a monoplane or biplane engineer. I was just wondering, if the analogy were carried on, what the man would call himself who runs a wheelbarrow.

"Engineering" Defined.

Professor Swain has given, perhaps unconsciously, a definition which, it seems to me, excels all others, where he calls engineering "the application of the laws of nature, the principles of mechanics and materials of construction to the business of the world." It sems to me that in these words we have a definition of engingering in its broadest sense.

This definition brings me right up to the present moment, speaking to you as a body of young men who have entered one of the great engineering schools to learn something of how to apply "the laws of nature, the principles of mechanics, and the materials of construction to the business of the world." You have, I repeat, come to a great institution. Its graduates are to be found everywhere making good. Go from Tyrrell on the north to Laschinger on the south, start with Lash in Java, and encircle the world, and you will find the alumni of Toronto. I myself am proud to be on the same list is Duggan, Stern, Thomson, Wright, Ross, Deacon, Mitchell, Fairbairn, Speller Angus, Chalmers—I should not have started to name them personally, because I want to name them by the hundreds—an honour list of which everyone should be proud. It has been said of Sir Christopher Wren in St. Paul's "If you would see his monument, look around you." I say to you—and I say it with pleasure in his hearing—if you would see the monument of John Galbraith, just look around the world at the engineering alumni of Toronto.

The definition necessarily implies broad-mindedness. You cannot be a good engineer and be narrow-minded. So do not forget that this broad Dominion has other universities, older ones in the Old East and newer ones in the New West. Quen's and McGill are great universities. There are many great universities in the States. Britain his a great number of the highest engineering schools in the world. So has France. Germany was well advanced with engineering training before some of the other countries began to be serious about it.

But your university training will not make you an engineer. It will equip you to become an engineer—if the engineering spirit were born in you. By hard work and the application of the training you will here receive you will, I trust, all become engineers.

Now I have discussed professional standing, and I have discussed engineering, and I have discussed university training. You are now doubtless realizing the difficulties surrounding "engineering as a profession." If you eliminate all those engineers who share in the profits of their labours, you will see that you come down to a comparatively small number of men—small as compared with the number composing the profession of law or medicine. Yet you cannot say that those you have eliminated are not engineres. On the contrary they are engineers in every sense of the word, and they are so recognized by all the great national engineering organizations. Many of the leading shipbuilders, bridgebuilders, and contractors are amongst the best engineers of the world, and they are occupying the topmost positions of honour in the engineering world.

The Engineer a Producer.

As I look at the whole question, there are, in this world, two classes of people: The producer and the non-producer, and you will see before I get through that I am somewhat of an optimist. At the bottom of the non-producers I place the real estate men and the speculators. At the top of the producers I p'ace the agriculturist and the engineer. Between these extremes live all the other callings, and I shall have you, each for himself, to place them according as they may in your judgment be producers or non-producers. Under our present social system the agriculturist must come first, because we must have food and clothing. Next in order in the world's progress is the engineer. The Indian in his native state, the Arab with his caravan—these have no need of the engineer. The farther we get from th primitive the greater the need of those who are able to apply to our use and convenience the great sources of power in nature. The marvellous advance of the last century are engineering advances. The other professions are older than engineering. Art is centuries old, yet it is a question if the art of to-day is on the same plane as that of Greece and Rome centuries ago. The greatest examples of the work of modern architects are based on the ancient orders, and the advances of architecture in modern times are due to the engineer in introducing steel skeletons and reinforced concrete. In surgery wonderful progress has been made within a lifetime, but the skill of noted surgeons was developed only through the medium of the engineer's handiwork in tin instruments and electrical appliances. The physician heals the sick and deals with individuals, while the engineer holds in his hand the health of towns, cities, and nations. The preacher has no particular use for the engineer excepting as illustrations in sermons. The lawyer lives on the engineer's quarrels and on the relations which by its ingenuity he has set up between others. The teacher helps to prepare the embryo engineer for his admission into a cold-blooded world and promptly forgets him in the further pursuit of embryology.

It is the engineer who harnesses the Niagaras of the world to transform the night of our cities into noonday and turn the wheels of commerce. It is the engineer who develops the mining and furnishes the metal with which he builds machines that by their ingenuity compel us to stand in awe and admiration. It is the engineer who produces the steel that forms a network of highways over our continents and that makes possible the myriads of floating palaces on our oceans. It is the engineer who has abolished famine and pestilence. It is the engineer who has annihilated distance with his telegraph and his telephone. It is the engineer who has made possible the conquest of the air. It is the engineer who places in the hand of the president of a nation the power whereby he is able with a touch to remove from a point thousands of miles away a barrier of nature separating two oceans. It is the engineer who furnishes the worker in the golden west with the machines whereby millions of bushels of wheat are each year made ready to enter the hopper that the engineer has constructed. It is the engineer who has made the Canad of to-day what she is.

An Extensive Record.

Mr. Walter J. Francis, C.E., Montreal, was born at Toronto in 1869, and is an honour graduate of the School of Practical Science. One of the earliest positions that he held was assistant engineer in charge of the design and construction of the Toronto Union Station, which cost seven million dollars. He was engaged by the Department of Railways and Canals to design the 65-foot hydraulic Lift Lock on the Trent Canal at Peterborough, a position which developed into that of principal assistant to the chief engineer of the Canal and included the design and construction of the Kirkfield lift locks. For a description of the hydraulic Lift Locks Mr. Francis was awarded, in 1906, the Gzowski medal of the Canadian Society of Civil Engineers. In 1907, after carrying out many important enterprises, Mr. Francis went into consulting practice. Since then he has been identified with many important works throughout the country. In 1908 he was engineer to the Royal Commission of inquiry into the Quebec Bridge disaster. In 1909, among other things he made a report on a two-million-dollar Hydro-Electric proposition on the North Saskatchewan River, near Edmonton. In 1910 he reported on the public utilities of the city of Edmonton, Alta., and made examinations and reports in connection with the Herald Building disaster (Montreal) and other important matters. One of his most recent undertakings is the Moose Jaw water supply. He has been engaged on the water supply problems of the city of Winnipeg and has made an exhaustive report on Hydro-Electric development on the Ottawa River. He represented the Canadian Society of Civil Engineers on the committee which undertook the revision of the Montreal building code. Mr. Francis is a member of The Canadian Society of Civil Engineers, The Institution of Civil Engineers (England), and other professional bodies.

AN ANGLICAN'S APPRECIATION OF LATE REV. DR. ROSS

To the Editor of The Globe: The lamentable death of Dr. Ross of London has not only removed a prince and a great man in the Israel of Presbyterianism, but taken from the religious life of Canada one of its outstanding leaders. As the pastor of St. Andrew's Church Dr. Ross was ever a commanding figure, but his breadth of charity, his forceful scholarship, and his practical altruism gave him an influence in the community and the country far wider than that of a mere denominationalist. It would be possible to relate many instances of his kindly and influential character from the standpoint of a neighbour-minister, but one rises before my mind in a never-to-be-forgotten scene. It was when our General Synod met in London about two years ago, and a deputation from the Presbyterian Church with friendly greetings, was received upon the floor of the House. The Archbishops and Bishops, in their robes of office came in upon the platform and seated themselves before the Synod in expectation. Presently the door opened, and three men, two Presbyterian clergymen and a Presbyterian layman, appeared. The whole assembly instantly rose to its feet, and the Archbishops and Bishops and representative clergy and laymen of the Church of England stood while Dr. Ross and his fellow Presbyterians came forward to the dais. The Primate, in dignified and kindly manner, received them with evident sincerity of fraternal recognition, and then on behalf of the Church he represented Dr. Ross addressed the Synod. It was a really remarkable piece of religious eloquence; deliberate, dignified, quivering with intensity of emotion, and almost perfect in its gravity of matter, and compactness of style. The tone of charity and the longing for Christian unity was conspicuous throughout, and evoked from the Primate-Archbishop a reply that was instinct with the spirit of Christ: "We are being drawn together," said he, "not by external influences, but by the Spirit of God."

A new generation is rising fast, One by one the older men are being promoted, and pass on to the higher ranks. The Cavens, have left their work to be carried on by younger men. And now Dr. Doss has gone. With him, we are sure, sudden death was sudden glory, and our hope is that his example of Christian charity and kindly sympathy and earnest longings for the unity of all God's people will be an inspiration to all who believe in the desire of Him who prayed "That they all may be one; as Thou, Father, art in Me, and I in Thee, that they also may be one in us."

THE ART OF BAKING

THE ART OF BAKING.

The cost of living has not increased at a more rapid rate than the cost of the materials used in the manufacture of first-class cakes, pastry, and all goods handled in an up-to-date Confectionery Store. This high cost of materials makes it unprofitable for the manager of a home to bake for a small or even a large family.

And as a consequence very little baking is done at home. This is where Coleman Bros., Confectioners, solve the problem of providing this class of food for the table. They use the best of ingredients and carry a fresh and varied stock at all times, wide awake to new ideas in their line, and always eager to serve their patrons well.

You will save time, money and worry if you buy at Coleman's.

SOME QUICK TURN-OVERS IN REAL ESTATE

A client of Mr. H. J. McCannon, real estate dealer, listed a lot with him on Saturday morning, with the proviso that the figure to sell at was only good until 9 o'clock that night. Mr. McCannon found a purchaser and had the deal all completed for the sale the same day. He had also had a property on Sherbrooke Street listed with him at 10 o'clock in the morning. He had an offer for it during the afternoon, sent a night letter to his client in Edmonton and had his reply the following afternoon accepting the offer. These are a few examples of quick business done by Mr. McCannon, who has turned over 22 houses and a number of lots this fall. List your properties with me for good quick service. H. J. McCannon.

SATURDAY RECITAL

A Splendid Programme is arranged for the Recital in the Music Hall of The Greene Music Co. Ltd., Charlotte St., To-morrow, at 3.30 p.m. A pleasing feature will be a Duet from "Madame Butterfly", song by Farrar and Homer. It is Free to all. You are invited.

Eat Onions If You Want To Live Long

This is Part of Mrs. Hetty Green's Recipe for Long Life

Special Wire to Examiner:

NEW YORK, N.Y., Nov. 21.—This was the seventy-eighth birthday of Mrs. Hetty Green, the richest woman in the world, and she was at work in her office as usual with a baked onion in front of her on the desk. She received scores of mailed and telegraphed birthday congratulations. Asked for a recipe for long life she said: "Eat onions, regularly, fear God, do right with everybody and get one hundred cents out of every dollar you handle."

BEATING THE LAW.

"You are charged with going 40 miles an hour," said the rural justice "and you are fined $40."

"Judge," said the motorist, "I have only got $2."

"Well, you've got a nerve going forty miles an hour on a reserve of $2. Hand me the money."

LOCAL W. O. W. HELD "AT HOME"

Spent Evening at Progressive Euchre and Music

A pleasant social evening was spent by about thirty Woodmen of the World, and their friends, in the W.O. W. Hall on George street last night.

The occasion was an "At Home," given by the Sherwood Forest Camp, and all of the guests had a thoroughly enjoyable time.

The evening was spent in progressive euchre, and a number of splendid selections were rendered by the Woodmen's orchestra.

Dr. Hamon, of Toronto, Head Council Commander, who was expected to deliver an address, was unable to be present.

Refreshments were served after the progressive euchre games.

BUYS BIG TRACT OF ENGLISH LAND

Special Cable to The Examiner:

LONDON, Nov. 21.—It is reported that the Duke of Sutherland has sold a great tract of land including his deer forest and sheep farm at Inverkirk to Jno. William Stewart, a Vancouver millionaire, who some time ago bought extensive property from the late Duke of Sutherland.

BRIDGENORTH

BRIDGENORTH, Nov. 20. — The Bridgenorth hunters returned on Tuesday night with their complement of deer and one for the other fellow. James Grant, one of the party had an experience with his dog. It looks like if his dog got tired of running in deer for the party, so it took off with a deer and run it in up at Samp Lake for a party from Kinmount and they got it. It then commenced to return but stopped on the way back and run in some deer for another party. Jim had come to the conclusion that it had fallen in with Billy Morris' dog and that they had stopped running deer and commenced to hunt for moose, for some of the party had seen the foot prints of a moose on the shore of Beaver Lake. But, however Jim's conclusion was wrong, for on his way coming out he found his dog running for another party, but instead of running one deer it had two so the opinion of the party is that this dog will only run in deer by the pair.

BIGGEST CARGO ON RECORD ON "THE LAUGHLIN"

Examiner Special:

FORT WILLIAM, Ont., Nov. 21.—The freighter Laughlin sailed today with the biggest cargo ever shipped on one boat from any port on the Great Lakes, namely 589,104 bushels of oats. The South Murphy Co. were the sole owners of the cargo, which is bound for Buffalo.

MAY TAKE UNKNOWN MAN'S BODY

HAMILTON, Ont., Nov. 21.—The body of the unknown man, mourned by the Thompson family, John street north, as a son drowned in the great gale on the lakes, until the real John turned up Wednesday night will probably be taken charge of by the Canadian Marine Association.

Yesterday Thompson's mother and sisters, who all purchased black clothes, returned most of the mourning to the merchants and got their money back. A lot had been purchased in a cemetery and a grave dug. The family, who are in rather poor circumstances, now want the money back.

Thompson's fourteen-year-old sister is almost stone blind. A benefit concert, which had been arranged for her, the funds to be devoted to a last effort in trying to restore her sight, was cancelled when news of Thompson's death was received. It will be held as arranged.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON QUESTIONS

Sunday School Lesson (Friday) Nov. 23, 1913.

(Copyright, 1912, by Rev. T. S. Linscott, D.D.)

Joshua, the New Leader. Josh. i:1-9.

Golden Text—Be strong and of good courage. Josh. 1: 9.

(1.) Verses 1-2—What qualities did Joshua have to fit him to be the successor of such a distinguished leader as Moses?

(2.) Would you say or not, and why, that God speaks with the same certainty to all really Christian rulers to-day as he did to Joshua?

(3.) Why is it that Christian men and women to-day very rarely testify of God speaking to them?

(4.) When God selects a man by his providence, or by his spirit, to fill an important position, what are the motives which govern him in the selection? Give your reasons.

(5.) If we fit ourselves for a certain sphere, what are the chances of God calling us to it?

(6) Does the work of God ever depend upon any certain man to carry it on?

(7). Verses 3-4—What and to whom did God first promise Canaan to the Hebrew people?

(8.) How many years did it take for God's promise to be actually realized?

(9.) Was it God's original intention for so long a time to intervene before the Israelites would enter the promised land, and if not, what delayed them?

(10.) What Bible promise or promises are there, if any, that have not been fulfilled?

(11). Verse 5—What reason is there to believe that every man has the ability and the opportunity to accomplish well and truly all the work which God has given him to do?

(12.) Would you say or not, and why, that a man is immortal until his work is done?

(13). Every true man is doubtless in the position to which God has called him, may he therefore depend with certainty that God will neither 'fail' nor 'forsake' him, but enable him to be a success? Why?

(14). Verses 6-7—Are courage and moral strength under our own control? Why?

(15). What faculties must we use and what conditions must we comply with in order to be strong and courageous?

(16). Are dread, fear, anxious care, and other forms of cowardice, actually sinful or not, and why?

(17.) What are the arguments for and against the proposition that the land belongs to all the people and that no person has any private rights not shared by the rest?

(18). In how many respects do we need to be strong and courageous, if we would enter into possession of the good things that God has promised us?

(19). Does God expect everybody to be prosperous? Give your reasons.

(20). Verses 8-9—If we are devoted students of God's laws so that we understand and do them, can any power prevent our success? Why?

(21). What effect does the prayerful and continuous study of the Bible have upon prosperity?

(22) Is it possible for every man to always have an actual realization of the presence of God, and if so how may it be done?

Lesson for Sunday, Nov. 30, 1913. Crossing the Jordan. Josh. iii:1-17; Ps. cxiv.

WILL BE DEPORTED.

Tuberculosis Is Reason Given for This Man's Removal.

An order for the deportation of Thos. A. Howe has been received at the local emmigration office. He arrived in this country on August 3, 1913, with Peterborough as his destination. Tuberculosis is the cause of his deportation. The address of his wife is 4 Dodnor Corner, Sunnyhill, Newport, Isle of Wight.

Mrs. Alice Stebbins Wells Asserts, etc.

dignation will sweep over the city. The force should be strengthened by more men and women. The latter would help to protect your children. There will be more progress made along moral lines in the next twenty-five years than was made in the last twenty-five centuries."

The Saloon Evil.

Mrs. Wells also referred to the saloon evil and the number of desertions. She advocated the publication of marriage banns. The speaker in commenting upon the failure of parents to instruct their children on matters pertaining to life, characterized life as the most wonderful of all things. "We soil and mar the child's beautiful conception of life or alienate it from early and necessary tuition and thereby create a chasm that grows with years. The child will obtain that knowledge sooner or later unless it be an idiot. You have said that it must not know, and consequently have robbed it of a foundation that is essential to its success in the world.

At the conclusion, Police Magistrate Dumble, who was in the audience, arose to his feet, and suggested that the City Council be requested to secure more parks, which the children of the City could make use of as playgrounds. This, he asserted, would be the means of keeping the children off the streets. He asserted that prehistoric City Councils had been delinquent in the matter of acquiring parks, lands, when the latter could have been purchased at a comparatively reasonable figure.

New Winter Coats for Women at a Fraction Over Half Price

Perhaps the biggest and best thing to be seen in the store on Saturday is this fine collection of Misses' and Women's coats.

By taking a large number of them, we secured so great a reduction in the wholesale cost, that we present to every women who needs a coat, some very fine values at about half their regular price.

Those at $9.75

In this assortment the Johnny coat occupies a prominent place.

And there is also the general utility coat and the storm coat, the materials being heavy checks, Tweeds, etc., some of the styles having trimmed backs, others the belted effect.

There are many with fancy collars, many with the convertible collar, and a choice is given between straight or cutaway fronts.

From $15 to $18 is the actual regular price of this line.

The $14.75 Coats

They are made of splendid Tweeds, Zebelines, Chinchillas, Boucles and Brocaded Matelasse, in a pleasing range of colours which includes Greys, Browns, Blues, Black and Green Mixtures.

Nothing short of $22 and $25 would purchase the degree of perfection in style and workmanship, one finds in these coats, some of them having smart collars and facings of velvet, others the modish cutaway front, kimono sleeves and convertible collars. This line is of exceptional merit.

The Coats Priced $19.75

Beauty of design and workmanship are combined in these superior garments, with the best of seasonable materials.

There are those of reversible Golf Cloths, the thick, warm Tweeds, and Rich Boucles with a glossy curl.

They are mostly half lined with satin, and are cut upon the very latest and most popular lines.

The splendid value is better understood by the fact that some of these Coats are worth $35.00, while none would sell for less than $25.00 in the usual way.

TOWN HAS TO PAY DAMAGES.

T. Forsythe Awarded Judgment of $30 and Costs.

At the Division Court proceedings on Thursday, Judge Huycke awarded Thos. Forsythe $30.00 and costs in his suit for $50 damages to his lot. When the case came up it appeared that the damage suit was brought for destruction of vegetables in Forsythe's garden, caused by cows that obtained access owing to the town labourers neglecting to put up a fence they had removed when engaged at work on the plaintiff's King Street lot. It was also proved in court that the Council had actually agreed with Forsythe to hand him over a street and sidewalk if he would deed the lot in question to the town. Forsythe carried out his part of the contract but the Council backed down when they realized the indignation of the ratepayers at their fool scheme to provide the plaintiff with a street and sidewalk at the town's expense. F. D. Kerr of Peterborough, appeared for the town, and Mr. Goodwill, of Peterborough, for Mr. Forsythe. The case will probably cost the town $60.00, in all, and it should be a lesson to all councils to keep within the law in their dealings with the people's money.

Dr. Kindred was awarded judgment for $42.35 against John Buck on an account.

Thos. Adley was nonsuited in an action against Hely Chase for damages resulting from a collision of vehicles. "Hely" was not the proper person to sue, and the judge threw the case out.—Havelock Standard.

Detectives Said To Be Incapable

Interesting Evidence Promised in Connection With Norwood Case

The alleged offence is said to have taken place on Fair Day. It is stated that the two Provincial detectives who laid the information were incapable of performing their duty. The defendant has entered a plea of not guilty to the charge.

A RESIDENT OF BYERSVILLE IS NOT SATISFIED

Letter Upon the Points Dealt With in Recent Article in The Examiner.

IMPROVEMENTS NEEDED

Browntown, North Monaghan, Nov. 20, 1913.

To the Editor of The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—Judging by your article on North Monaghan affairs in your issue of the 19th inst., it would appear as if you were under the impression that everybody residing there were satisfied with the present conditions That is not so. There are quite number who I think would willingly join the City or co-operate with any other scheme that had for its goal the improvement of the locality.

Time changes conditions. It was not so bad a few years ago when houses were few and far between. I am speaking of the Byersville and Browntown section in particular.

Look at it to-day! New houses in all directions with a consequent filling up of vacant spaces. It is only reasonable to expect that with its close proximity to factories and street cars, this section will continue to expand each year.

What is being done in the shape of improvements to meet this increasing population? Practically nothing. We are still paddling along in the backwoods fashion, drinking polluted water, breathing odours from shops and closets and wading through acres of mud. Our taxes this year were increased about 20 per cent., but I fail to see what benefit this section has received for it.

I contend that it is better to pay a little more and have some real improvements such as sidewalks, sewer and water. The increase in property values that would arise from such improvements would more than compensate for the additional outlay in taxes. Then think of the appearance and comfort we should have. It is annoying to see the ladies trying to avoid the mud which appears after every rain, when, for a few extra dollars in taxes we could have such improvements.

Conditions as they are at present have been tolerated long enough. Let us get together, fellow residents, and see if we can improve matters, even if we have to join the City to do it. Perhaps some other interested residents will give their views on the matter. I remain,

Yours truly,
IMPROVEMENT.

"Every one has some secret sorrow," says a philosophizing friend. "Even the fattest and jolliest of us has a skeleton in his midst."

ARTIE SIMMONS HAS HAD A GOOD RING RECORD

ARTIE SIMMONS—The Detroit Boy, who will box Tommy Pappas here on Monday night.

Artie Simmons, the Detroit boy who meets Tommy Pappas, the fighting Greek in a ten round bout at the Brock Street Rink on Monday night, is a clever two-handed fighter, with a number of good performances to his credit, including a ten-round draw with Tommy Daly and wins over Young Coleson, Joe Kelly and other good boys. Among the other bouts of the evening are a clash between Harry Westerby of Toronto and Kid Ryan of Toronto, who fought an eleven round draw here some time ago, and will get a chance to settle their differences. Young Pierce of Chicago, and Fighting Jackson of New England will box four rounds and Knockout Bradley of England, will meet Jack Williams of Winnipeg.

In addition there will be a bout between two local boys, Geo. N. Graham will be referee. Geo. Ayres is manager of the bouts.

NOTHING NEW IN MEXICAN SITUATION

Special Wire to The Examiner.

BAD LOGIC

By RUTH CAMERON

"And she took those stockings out and looked evey one of them over before she would give me the exchange slip," said the lady across the way indignantly. "As if I would try to change a pair of stockings I had worn! I think it was an insult!"

The viewpoint of the lady across the way is as childish as it is common.

To resent rules that are made not for you but for the kind of people who require such restraint is unthinking and unreasonable.

Of course the lady across the way is incapable of such a cheap trick as trying to exchange an article she had worn. But there are plenty of people who will stoop to such meanness and it is for them that the rules are made that all articles returned shall be carefully examined before acceptance.

Another woman whom I know was much insulted because a certain shop would not accept her check for a purchase. The manager explained it was a rule of the company but the lady refused to be pacified. That might all be very well when dealing with crooks, she admitted, bue she was an honest woman and expected to be treated as such, and she would never enter that shop again.

"But couldn't they tell by my face that I was honest?" she demanded, when on hearing the tale I ventured to suggest that such safeguards were necessary because of dishonest people. And it was all in vain that I tried to point out to her that there are plenty of crooks who know how to look and act honest, and that the firm has to make its rules with reference to such people. She persisted in thinking that even if there had to be such rules she should have been made the exception.

Nor is it the illogical sex alone that insists upon regarding a general rule as in individual insult. I know a man who was most indignant because the gas company required a five-dollar deposit before they would turn on the gas in his home. "That's all right for those flat-dwellers who move every year or so," he fumed, "but for me who has been a householder in this town for forty years, is absurd, it's an outrage!"

A chain is only as strong as its weakest link. It is the dishonest man who must be considered when rules are made; and that the honest have to obey such rules is no reflection on their character. It is merely an inevitable consequence of living in a world where there are dishonest people. And to regard this enforced obedience as a personal insult is simply to show one's lack of ressonableness and logic.

TURNBULL'S

IN THE WORLD OF SPORT

BLACKBURN ROVERS WILL ENTERTAIN SHEFFIELD WEDNESDAY

On Saturday---Interesting Game is Promised--Notts County is Up Against a Tough Proposition--Fixtures For To-morrow.

The usual full list of interesting games are scheduled in the four big British leagues on Saturday.

The leaders, Blackburn Rovers, will entertain Sheffield Wednesday, and as the "Rovers" fell last Saturday and the "Wednesday' need all the points they can get, an interesting game should result. Manchester United should also be out to avenge their reverse of last Saturday, even if it is at the expense of Sheffield United. Manchester City has a good chance of making two more points, as they entertain the "Pensioners" at Hyde Road. The "Villans" should have no difficulty in disposing of Preston, now that their team has been strengthened.

Notts to Meet the "Tigers."

Notts County are up against a tough proposition, as they journey to Hull to meet the "Tigers." Still I think that the County should just about pull through. The "Peacocks" who have been doing so well lately, are scheduled to meet Blackpool in the seaside grounds, and the result is a foregone conclusion, if Leeds only stick up to their form of the last four weeks, Fulham have a defeat to last week to avenge, and it should be an easy matter for them to trim Grimsby Town.

Swindon Play at Home.

The doughty Swindon team, who were humbled for the first time last Saturday, have another hard game on this week. Their appearance will be in Brighton and Hove, who are only third down in the league standing. Southend United, who ebat the leaders last week, should annex another two points this week at the expense of Bristol Rovers. The "Palace" are up against their old-time rivals, the "Rangers," and though the latter have fallen on bad times, they can be relied upon to put up a strong fight on the famous enclosure.

SAYS PETERBOROUGH HAS EARNED A PERMANENT BERTH IN THE LEAGUE

Manager Shaughnessy, of Ottawa, Favours a Six Team Organization For the Canadian League Next Season.

A BOOST FOR THE PETES

OTTAWA, Nov. 19.—If the Ottawa Baseball Club has its way there will be a six-club circuit in the Canadian League for next season. Manager Frank Shaughnessy stated yesterday that such a series embracing Ottawa, Hamilton, London, St. Thomas, Brantford and Peterborough, would just be his ideal. He likes the idea of Erie and other towns in New York state, but doubts if they will be ready in time. Erie has been given until Jan. 1 in which to organize, and the Canadian League's composition will not be known until after that date. "Shag" thinks that St. Thomas, Brantford and Peterborough can be developed into first-class baseball towns, and is also of the opinion that it would be a good move to drop both Guelph and Berlin. The question will be threshed out at the annual meeting, which is to be held next month at Toronto. With a six-club circuit, as suggested by the Ottawas, the clubs would probably be far better off. It would mean additional visits to the capital of the strong teams like London and Hamilton, and the others could also strengthen. It would be a better financial proposition as well, as Guelph and Berlin have not only been poor drawing cards on the road, but they seldom draw crowds of any proportions when at home. St. Thomas and Brantford, with good teams, would do exceptionally well, and Peterborough has already shown its qualifications for a permanent berth in the league. Peterborough really had the best-balanced club in the league last year, and with proper management they would have won the pennant. They had a first-class pitching staff and some of the hardest hitters in the Canadian. Next year Peterborough will certainly be heard from.

SUGGESTS MEDALS FOR THE GROUP WINNERS

Mr. R. M. Glover, Peterborough's Representative on O. H. A. Executive Proposes This Plan to the Governing Body.

FAVOURABLY RECEIVED

At the meeting of the O.H.A. Executive on Saturday, Mr. R. M. Glover, the Peterborough member of the executive, made a novel suggestion that met with the approval of other members and that will likely be carried out. It was to the effect that the O.H.A. should recognize the group winners by presenting the players of the winning teams with medals. Mr. Glover believes that such a step would lead to keener competitions and interest in each district, would benefit the game generally, and would fittingly recognize the merits of the feat of winning the district. He points out that there are many teams in the O.H.A. jurisdiction who have never won a championship, and although they have frequently made a good showing they have had in the past nothing to show for the gallant attempt they made. Under his plan the members of each team winning a district would receive a souvenir of the season in the form of a medal. Some 250 models would be required to reward the group winners in the three series. The O. H. A. has a big surplus on hand which is accumulating year by year, and Mr. Glover thinks that his plan would be a worthy manner in which to utilize the funds.

New Players For Ottawa

Shag is After Several of Connie Mack's Youngsters

OTTAWA, Nov. 20. — Manager Frank Shaughnessy, of the Ottawa Canadian League champions, will leave next week for Philadelphia, where he will witness the Army-Navy football game on Thanksgiving Day. The main object of Shag's visit, however, is to secure three or four ball players from Connie Mack, of the Philadelphia Athletics.

The Ottawa manager realizes he needs two new infielders, an outfielder and a couple of pitchers for his 1914 team. Ned Crowder will not be back, leaving the short field open. Frank Smejkal will hardly be able to get away from his studies at the University of Illinois, till June, in which case he would be of little service to the team. Shag would hate to lose Smejkal, but it is impossible to leave a team weak in one position for two months to wait on one man who would require another three weeks to work in smoothly with the rest of the infield.

Ottawa's pitching staff will see big changes next year. Tom Kane will probably be the only regular in line. Lefty Rogers will not be asked to work on the rubber next season. Renfer has gone to Nashville. Donovan will have to show an awful lot of improvement in practice season to stick. Frank Kubat will hardly be back, though he is still on the reserve list. Joe Lill is still Ottawa's property and will work out at Fort Wayne in April. His experience with Brantford should bring him down to earth. Last year he dabbled too much in aeronautics. He has everything and may some day be a great pitcher.

It will therefore be seen, two new pitchers at least will be needed. Shaughnessy is also working the wires at Detroit and Fort Wayne for a shortstop.

Red Rowe is seeking his release from Brantford as he wants to play down south next summer.

Dick Tasker, the former Brantford pitcher, is coaching a Brantford school football team.

The Canadian League annual meet will be held in Toronto the first week in December.

Alerts Ready For The Season

The Alerts form a new hockey team for the coming winter. This team has ordered new sweaters of purple and yellow, with a plain A. in the centre of the breasts. The members of the Alerts are all under 18 years of age, and will play any team under that age. Wm. Prindible, who managed the Strathconas last winter with success, will manage the Alerts this winter. The line-up will be as follows:

Legros—Goal.
Armstrong—Point.
Galvin—Cover-point.
Bartley—Right Wing.
Sharpe—Left Wing.
Hendrick—Rover.
Phillips (Capt.)—Centre.

HOCKEY

Russell Stevenson, who played with Saskatoon last winter, is living in the city, and has consented to turn out with T. A. and A. A.

The annual meeting of the Intercollegiate Hockey Union will be held early next week. It is now practically decided that R. M. C. will play senior this winter.

Kingston will have a senior O.H.A. team, two junior O.H.A. sevens, two senior Intercollegiate, one Intermediate College, and four junior College teams.

London Advertiser — About thirty men turned out at the London hockey practice, among them being Alf. Hall, who played cover-point for Collingwood last year; Harry Macateer, of Cornwall, the fast little left wing, who is going to make the intermediate team this year, and several others who are well known in hockey circles.

The Alberta Amateur Hockey Association is of the opinion that a commission should handle the simon-pure game throughout the Dominion.

The St. Mary's Hockey Club have elected the following officers: Honorary president, Dr. M. Steele, M.P.; president, Mr. Harry Tuer; vice-president, Dr. J. R. Stanley; treasurer, Vernon Drescher; secretary, R. M. Northgrave; management committee, Messrs. W. Lavelle, Dr. P. T. Coupland, J. Peebles, and H. L. Stewart. The club has decided to enter an intermediate team in the O.H.A. for the coming season.

"Brick" Gordon, last year with St. Michael's seniors, and formerly of the Argonauts, is now located in the West. He will be greatly missed by the local teams this winter, as both "St. Mikes" and Argos were counting on his services.

The sturdy defence player Morrow, last year with Peterborough juniors, was moved by his bank to Kingston this summer. Cavanagh, the "Bear Cats'" other defence man, is attending Woodstock College, where he will play this season.—Toronto Star.

The Frontenacs, of Kingston, expect to present stronger teams in both the junior and senior series of the O.H.A. this year over last winter. The addition of Brouse and Boyer will greatly strengthen the seniors, while several of last year's K.C.I. juniors, including Stewart, have announced their intention of playing with Frontenacs.

The Peterborough seniors suffered another loss since last winter in Arthur Armstrong, who formerly played with Trenton. Armstrong is supposed to be in Cleveland.—Toronto Star.

STAGE STRUCK IN FIRST GAME

Even the Great Muggsy Knows What Nerves Mean to a Young Player

Muggsy McGraw made his initial appearance in professional baseball under conditions that were far from encouraging. He was given the first tryout by the Olean club of the old New York state league, and was assigned to the third bag. McGraw was then a youngster in his teens. He made his debut April 1, 1890, an ominous date for John, as on that auspicious occasion he proved to be the biggest kind of an April fool package.

McGraw was so small it was impossible to find a suit to come anywhere near his measure. It seemed to McGraw, as he has told it, as if all the world was in attendance on the day he appeared at Olean. To his eyes it seemed as if he had never before seen so many people. This, of course, was due to the fact that the little third baseman was nervous and that his mind multiplied the actual number of spectators. The noises made by the crowd also worried him. It sounded like the prolonged roaring of a mighty sea.

When the first ball was knocked down to him he says the noise of the crowd ceased as if by magic, and the ball, which happened to be a slow grounder, appeared to McGraw as if it would never reach him. Finally, after what seemed to be an age, he found himself with the ball in his grasp, and he turned to throw it over to first base, where there was a player who was the tallest in the league.

The distance to first now appeared to McGraw to be fully a mile away, and his heart sank within him as he suddenly thought to himself that he could never throw the ball that far. Yet he nerved himself, and not only did he get the ball over, but he put it several feet over the first baseman's head. Every succeeding time the ball was knocked down to McGraw during the rest of the game he managed to throw higher and higher over the head of the man on first.

After the game the manager came up to McGraw and patting him on the head, told him that he was a nice boy, and so on, but as a ball player he was a joke. McGraw left Olean that night and went over to Wellsville, where he finished the season. He did so well that at the end of that year he was the recipient of eighteen different offers from managers who were willing to pay well for his services.

BOXER'S BIG SALARY

The Thrifty Frenchman Finds the Ring Stepping Stone to Fortune

Georges Carpentier, the French pugilistic champion, is very fond of stage life which his success enabled him to take up; also he is proud of his ability to make a huge income by his ring and theatrical engagements.

"It is very strange to be making so much money in such a pleasant way," said Carpentier. "When my manager discovered me I was 15½ years old, and I was earning only a franc a day in a coal mine. When he wished me to go in for training my parents were unwilling to lose even that amount of money, but he said he himself would pay the franc a day.

"In my first year I made $160, in the next $750, in the third $5,000, in the fourth $35,000, and now I am making about $50,000 a year. My parents, to whom I gave my first $5,000, rejoice very much in my success, and, indeed, I think there are few who at my age make as much money as I have been able to."

FROM MAID TO MISTRESS

MONTREAL, Nov. 20.—From housemaid to mistress of one of the most beautiful homes in Chicago, is in brief the story of a romance which has just culminated in Montreal.

About a year ago a bright eyed, rosy cheeked Scottish girl of 22 years of age, emigrated to Canada after having read the alluring literature published by a Dundee agency and landed in this city, where she obtained employment in the home of one of our most prominent millionaires, who resides on Sherbrooke Street. During the time she was in service at this house as a housemaid, a gentleman from Chicago was a visitor at the home.

He saw the pretty little Scottish girl, and promptly fell in love with her.

He subsequently proopsed to his hostess's housemaid and was accepted, and they were maried, so to-day Nan Nurison, the little mill girl of Dundee, drives about the streets of Chicago, in her limousine and has at her disposal all the other advantages and luxuries which great wealth can provide.

When Nan was old enough to work in her native Scotland, she went to work at the jute mills, later working in the Bradford linen works, of Aberdeen, Scotland. She lived with her parents who were in very humble circumstances on Gerrard Street. Her mother died and shortly afterwards she lost her father, and was therefore left alone in the world in 1907. She went to live at a home for girls, continuing her work in the linen mills. Later she secured employment as a domestic in a home in Perth, and it was while there that she saw the advertisement which caused her to come to Canada.

NEW CONVENIENT TRAIN TO WINNIPEG.

CANADIAN PACIFIC

The popularity of Canadian Pacific service, and the excellence of that road's equipment, has ben so greatly appreciated by the travelling public that it has been found necessary to put into service an entirely new Through Standard Express Train between Toronto and Winnipeg.

Commencing Sunday, October 26th, the "Gate City Express" will leave Toronto at 2.30 p.m., and will run daily thereafter, arirving Winnipeg at 8.25 a.m. second morning. The train will consist of the highest-class modern equipment; Observation Compartment Car, Standard Sleeping Cars, Tourist Sleeping Car, Dining Car, First-class Coach and Colonist Car. This will be found the most convenient and best train between Toronto and Winnipeg on account of the daylight departure from Toronto at an hour when the Union Station is not badly congested, and also on account of the early hour of arrival at Winnipeg.

The present "Vancouver Express" will continue to leave Toronto at 10.20 p.m. daily and will consist of the same equipment as the "Gate City Express." This train is the best to take for points west of Winnipeg, but for Winnipeg and east the "Gate City Express" is the right train to travel by.

BAD THING FOR THE RACE

LONDON, Nov. 20.—Dr. T. C. Shaw, a noted authority on medico-psychological problems, lecturing Tuesday night on "The nervous factor in woman's health," said that the excessive physical development which women of to-day are seeking is a bad thing for the race.

He said it produced women of harder features, more wrinkles and more independence. The woman of to-day, he went on, has lesser reverence for authority than her mother, and has fewer home interests.

"Sport," he added, "is bad for the marriage market. The sporting girl becomes too manlike. She shows her character too much to man and assumes a bucolic look."

Dr. Shaw assumed that the prevailing mode of short and tight skirts, showing the figure, is due to a desire on the part of the women to be what men are, and to do what men do. He considers that a mistake, as it does away with the mystery in woman, and wonders how women allow it, as it is against their own interests. He said there is danger of a new kind of woman arising with whom men will have no sympathy. Taking the suffragette as an example, he said: "For years men have endowed women with all the virtues and never thought of the other side of the picture. They know women can be just as obstinate, spiteful and devilish as men."

WASHINGTON, D.C., Nov. 21.—There has been an average of two hundred letters a day for three days at the White House asking for pieces of Miss Jessie Wilson's wedding cake, which fact has caused Miss Wilson this morning to issue the announcement that the wedding cake will be a most modest affair, just big enough for the families of the contracting parties.

WEDDING BELLS

LANGTON—NESBITT.

A pretty wedding took place this afternoon at half-past 2 o'clock, at the home of Mr. Jas. Mr. Howard Nesbitt was groomsman.

The groom's gift to the bride was a set of black furs, to the bridesmaid a string of pearls, to the best man a pair of pearl cuff links.

Stock Markets

A. H. Stratton & Co., Brokers, report the following:

To-morrow will probably see an irregular market. The list remains in a trading area. Professionals of the best class now seem to be selling industrials on the trade conditions and buying good rails. The former are sold on firm spots and the latter bought for turns on weakness after recessions. The Friday market was subjected to considerable selling because of further steel price cutting, and reports of strike settlements in copper mines. This latter has of course pointed to increase of copper metal and peace for the time being, while general business declines.

The reaction in business in this country has been steadily going on for some months, many plants showing a reduction in operations of from 25 to 50 per cent. in that space of time. Money is beginning to float from trade centres to New York, on account of the lack of demand for business purposes. This will of course result in an increase of the investment demand and provides a supply of funds such as will make it an easy matter for the large interests to support the security list. Liquidation in U.P., S.P., I.O., N.P., St. Paul, B.O., is going on.

Industrial stocks like A.C.P., Steel and Smelters, are being hammered by the professionals.

It is still a waiting market.

LINDSAY HAS NEW MAGNETITE LAMPS.

The first one of the new Magnetite light standards was equipped and installed this morning near T. J. Brady's grocery store on Kent Street. The light in a white ground glass globe is placed on fluted iron column about sixteen feet high. The height is necessary on account of the unusual width of Kent Street so that every part of the street will be well lighted up. Sixteen lights have been placed on Kent Street between Lindsay and Cambridge Streets.

Two others will be placed west of Cambridge Street, one of them in front of the Town Hall and the other in front of the Library. It is expected by the Lighting Company that the lights will be in operation inside of two weeks.—Lindsay Post.
